He tells us: "As a mother comforts her child so will I comfort thee."

Oh, the unfathomable love of God! greater than a mother's love. He says: "A mother may forget her child, yet will I not forget thee."

What a sad contrast to the words of our Lord: "My people have forgotten me days without number."

WORLD FELLOWSHIP OF FAITHS

In two ways the World Fellowship of Faiths, which is to be held this Summer, during the Chicago World's Fair, is to differ from the original Parliament of Religions held at Chicago's first World's Fair in 1893. First; instead of a competitive parade of rival religions, all faiths will seek together for solutions to such problems as Poverty-Amidst-Plenty, Unemployment, Racial and Religious Persecution, Fear, Prejudice, Disarmament, War.

Second; Not only all religions but all faiths, will be invited to take part. "Faiths" are interpreted to mean all types of culture or conviction which are shaping the actual lives of significant human groups. Social, industrial, political, educational, and philanthropic faiths will thus be included. There will be no censorship, no exclusion of any group's ideals for a new world order. Rather, it is a definite purpose of the World Fellowship of Faiths "To help mankind to develop a new spiritual dynamic competent to master and reform the world."

Raja Jai Prithvi Bahadur Singh, wrote from India that: "This World Fellowship of Faiths will be the most outstanding event of the Country." From London, England, H. Dennis Bradley wrote: "I believe the Fellowship of Faiths will do more than all the Parliaments of the world to combat the evil menace of war." From Japan, Labrador, France, Switzerland, Germany, Africa and other countries, representatives of many creeds have written saying: "For forty years there has been nothing like this Fellowship of Faiths. Now, while racial and religious prejudice are aflame in Germany, Alabama and elsewhere, while war rages in Manchuria and South America and threatens everywhere, this World Fellowship, is urgently needed."

Miss Jane Addams of Chicago is Honorary President of the World Fellowship of Faiths, with Newton D. Baker, Chester H. Rowell and Miss Mary E. Woolley as Vice-Presidents. Bishop Francis J. McConnell is the National Chairman, with Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Patrick Henry Callahan and Professor E. R. A. Seligman as Vice-Chairmen. The Executive Committee Chairmen are: William H. Short, New York; Professor Charles S. Braden, Chicago; Sir Francis Younghusband, London, England; Vidya-Vibhushana Pandit, Dr. Shayama

Keeping the Advocate Saved

There are still more than 350 charges who, if and when they forward the results of the special March 15-June 1 Advocate Circulation Campaign, have it in their power to do just what the above head implies, "Keep the Advocate Saved."

Brother Pastor, won't you see that your charge reports the results of the Campaign without further delay so that we may prepare a report to the Publishing Committee outlining the financial status of the Conference Organ?

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

GENERAL CONFERENCE is less than a year away and to be held right here among us, at Jackson, Mississippi. Do we of these two states have anything to suggest as to what should be done by this 1934 General Conference? Are we going to let it meet right here among us and furnish none of the major suggestions as to changes and improvements that should be made? Are we going to leave our thinking unbaked? Surely we shall not let such an opportunity pass when this great Conference is, for the first time, meeting in the great state of the princely Galloway.

At least, as a starter, we can take note of the fact that our General Conference has never met at a time more universally critical. The church faces the necessity of merciless self-examination as it measures itself against the issues of our day. The World has the Church "on the spot." We cannot afford to be complacent and indifferent. At points along the long line once so steadily held there is convincing evidence of breaking. Can we hold the line?

Do you believe that, notwithstanding the fact that some of our bishops will be retired automatically, there should be none elected at this Conference? Do you think a bishop should live within his district and that he should have more time for intimate contacts with the work of his area?

Do you believe the presiding eldership should be abolished, improved, or left as it is?

Do you believe that we should reconceive and reorganize much of our machinery, presenting a much more unified, simplified and defensible system of financing?

Is our Christian Education legislation subject to change and improvement?

Should this Conference admit women to ordination as regular preachers?

Do you believe that the qualifications for the ministry of our church, both as to education and efficiency, should be changed and raised? Should the period of "trial" be lengthened? Should the "two-thirds rule" be abolished?

Regardless of what may be proposed or done as to organization or teaching, is it not time for our church to reaffirm its original genius of personal religious experience, and front the whole complex situation of our times with a sacrifice and prophetic daring in keeping with the needs of our day?

$100,000 DOES NOT BUY Salvation Army stock, according to a recent report from the moral front up where it stretches across New York. Would you like to know about it?

"Evangeline Booth spoke at a luncheon of the Salvation Army's united appeal in New York City, and said that she had recently talked to a gentleman who might reasonably be expected to donate $100,000 to the army's appeal for a million dollars, but who said that he would contribute nothing if the army took a stand against liquor and its legalization."

Can you imagine how the Salvation Army is going to be able, without that man's money, to take care of the bums and down-and-outs that the liquor business will send to the park benches this winter? Why should the Army be so squeamish in their budget with the understanding that all such cases be removed as quickly as possible from public places and sobered up.

YOU NEVER KNOW what a lady member of the President's Cabinet may stir up, but Mary Perkins, Secretary of Labor, did not wait long to get us Southerners on the war-path.

It seems that the estimable lady in seeking to open new markets, relieving congestion of products, and to ameliorate conditions generally, suggested that the South was a potential market of rather extensive importance for shoes, hinting, it appears, that we Southerners have not been using our due share of shoes. She is quoted as saying that "the whole South of this country is an untapped market for shoes." That is, of course, a rather long way of saying that we are a "barefooted" set. Furthermore she says, "A social revolution will take place if you put shoes on the people of the South."

Of course such statements as these cannot go unchallenged even though we are Solid Democrats, for we do not propose for even Democrats to charge or even hint that we are the great "unshod."

Some say that Miss Perkins, regardless of this high official post she now occupies as a pioneer, just does not know her South. Already some of our section are reported to have gathered up quite an assortment of already worn shoes and shipped them to the lady as evidence of our shoe-wearing proclivities. Senator Bailey of North Carolina fervidly responded, "Even the mules in the south wear shoes." Fred Sullins, editor of the Jackson, Miss., Evening News, makes a strong case for us, closing with the words of a famous spiritual that must have been born in the South: "I got shoes, you got shoes; all God's chillun got shoes. When I get to heb'n, gwina put on my shoes; gwina walk all over God's heb'n."

Such replies as these make it unnecessary for this editor to join the fray except for the fact that he is foreordained for verbal battle in behalf of the South. But I cannot feel that Miss Perkins doesn't know anything about the South. If she is that ignorant, of course, she should not be in the Cabinet. I think she just wanted to have fun at the expense of us Southerners. She had heard a joke of some unwashed-up Northerner. Why one of them, a preacher from up there "above the line," in my very presence explained to interested by-standers that this editor's country in Mississippi had its own peculiar, unique and original method for executing criminals. Pressing up close to the speaker they

GATES OF HEAVEN

By Alice Gorton Wynn

Each gate of Heaven's one priceless pearl
Set in a wall of jasper stone,
Through which God's light all crystal clear
Eternal shines without eclipse—
(So recorded by Saint John
In the Apocalypse).

It's not their sheen enthalls me so,
But the location of those gates
At north, south, east, west;
Beacons fair—a guiding ray—
Across each dangerous road—lest
Some should lose their way.

An Eskimo from lone igloo
Takes direct course to a shining door—
The Eastern mystic looks straight through
And sees the Heavenly radiance pour—
Southern tribesmen, poor, benighted,
Find another portal, glory-lighted.

Encouraged by this proof of grace,
My timid soul may hope to see
One friendly gate swing wide for me.

—The World Outlook.

and Puritanical as to erect such a barrier between itself and that much-needed money?

Speaking further about the matter Evangeline Booth showed how the Army "has made a steady, unbroken attack on what it feels to be the greatest curse ever to have come into the world."

Then she said, "And if I can assure you that the Salvation Army never will change its stand on liquor, I can also assure you that the Army will never change its policy of helping everyone who needs help, regardless of color, race or creed, and whether he be 'wet' or 'dry'."

That statement of the brave little Commander contains the positive and negative hemispheres of complete moral assertion. We stand at salute as she passes by.

If liquor men do not wish their products in the way of blear-eyed and bloated men once more to blast their business they would better include the Salvation Army

THE PLACE OF WOMAN IN THE ORIENT

By Dr. E. Stanley Jones

(We are indebted to Mrs. R. H. Wynn for typewritten copies of the addresses of Dr. E. Stanley Jones. Having heard them she wished to share them with her friends who are readers of the Advocate.—Editor).

Part II

I was in a women's meeting some time ago. They have sufficiently trusted me to invite me to speak to women alone. In charge of the meeting was the President of the Legislative Council of Madras, a very fine Hindu woman, deeply saturated with Christian ideas but a Hindu still. After I had finished speaking she looked up to me and said, "It is the men who have written our sacred books of Hinduism and they have read into the sacred books their superiorities and our inferiorities. I suggest that we women have no more men priests; we ought to have women priests after this." Of course, I was the only man there and I was a kind of a priest and they looked at me and laughed. She saw my discomfort and said, "Of course, we shall have a priest like Dr. Stanley Jones." I felt she was just pouring oil into my wounds. There is a tremendous urge going through the womanhood of the East and we feel that one of the greatest moments has now come. No longer do I have meetings for men only. The women are there and when I open my meetings for questions, the first one who hops up will be a woman and she asks intelligent questions.

They find difficulty in keeping old organizations going. There is not the heaven necessary. It reminds me of a scene I was privileged to look into. There were two ladies on the platform in one of these women's meetings and each was bidding for power and each wanted to be president. (I suppose that never happens in America). They were jealous of one another, each afraid the other would get the upper hand. One of the women moved her seat out a little and the other lifted her seat and made them equal. The first one would move her's more and so the other, until they had moved out almost to the edge of the platform in the endeavor to show that they were great. It may not manifest itself in the way of pushing one's self to the front, but in the beautiful things of India, woman is coming to the front, amazingly so, and we feel you have a very great part in the shaping of that future.

In South India there is a paper published, called "Revolt," the organ of the Self-Respect League among the outcasts of South India, non-Brahmans, revolting against the Brahmans. They refuse to buy of the white man or to kow-tow to the Brahman. When the census was taken they filled in the blank of the census of the caste, by putting the word "man." This word REVOLT is written in red letters, a small "R," "E" larger, "T" huge, in red, flaming letters. "What does this mean," I said; "a small 'R' and huge 'T'?" Is it the little spark that goes into a big conflagration? That is exactly what is meant—the worthwhileness of human personality. That begins to spread and gives us the Self-Respect movement. Underneath all these things is the Christian ideal of the worthwhileness of human personality, and revolt against bondage is everywhere. I told them I thought they ought to revolt, rebuild constructively, but build with their faces toward the new.

In one place in South India the wives of certain wealthy Hindus all decided they wanted to become Christians but they said, "If we tell our husbands, they will not let us!" So these fifty women decided they were going to become Christians and tell their husbands afterwards. So one morning, when all the men had gone off to their work, these fifty women came from all directions to the church and were baptized and went home and announced to their husbands that they were Christians. Unless you know the structure of Hindu society, it is hard to recognize what we have in a case of that kind. Immediately there was an explosion because under such conditions she becomes an outcast, untouchable. The men discussed the matter and said, "What can we do?" "The fact of the matter is, I don't think we can do anything, because it is already done," said one. "They are still our wives and the best thing to do is to say nothing about it," and then they said nothing about it. Women are wonderful. These women could not take the attitude that they would not say anything about it. They began to work on their husbands and they began to share what they had found with their husbands and the first thing we knew one of the wealthiest men of the caste had decided to become Christian under the influence of his wife. Well, it was bad enough to begin with the women, but to commence on the men was tragedy. So they had another meeting. They decided they would wipe out the whole thing. So they dragged the women to the temple, rubbed sacred ashes on their foreheads and wrote a letter to the Bishop, saying, "Please take our names off the Christian record because we are no longer Christians." But another letter went out, which said, "Please don't pay any attention to the first letter because we are still Christians."

The men took the women's Bibles and publicly burned them in the public market place to show that they were going to stamp out the whole thing. As the man who burned the Bibles walked about and into the door, he cried out, "O Jesus, you struck me with your sword, O Jesus!" And he kept crying that out. They tried to pacify him, to suppress his cries because they were afraid if the Christians heard this after the burning of the Bibles, they would say, "Yes, that is what happens." To keep him quiet, they gave him something and gave him an overdose of it and then the fire spread among the Hindus—"The man who burned the Bibles is stricken!" We would not say that he was stricken and that a curse came upon him, but the biggest sword that can strike some people is womanhood, touching the people's determination. That is piercing deeply into the soul of the race.

You then have at present the greatest opportunity you have ever had. I was talking to the President of China, General Chiang Kai Shek. They told me how he became a Christian. There were three great influences. He was President at the time. It was the influence of a Negro Evangelist who had prayed for somebody in the Soong home and the person was healed. It created a tremendous influence and I am very glad it was a Negro. The second was the mother of Chiang Kai Shek's wife, Mrs. Soong. She was one of the Empress Dowagers and yet a Christian, a great soul filled with Christian character and influence. The third was the influence of a doctor who, with his hospital, was injured by some soldiers, the hospital ruined. This doctor followed on behind the soldiers and attended to their wounded and sick. He turned to his wife and said, "What in the world makes that doctor follow behind those soldiers who looted his hospital, and attend their sick?" His wife, who is a Christian, the product of one of the universities of your Southern Methodist Church, said, "It is Christianity that makes him do it." "Men," he said, "I have got to be a Christian." I sat down and talked to the General and his wife and he told me how he was Christianized, when the wife said, "You must remember that he is only a spiritual babe." I opened my eyes. Here was a Chinese woman who respects her husband as her lord, he the President of China too, saying, "He is only a spiritual babe." It shows there is a spiritual freedom and a spiritual mastery. I shall call it growing up with the Christian influence and the Christian ideal.

A TOBOGGAN SLIDE IN BOTH PUBLIC AND PRIVATE MORALITY!

By Georgia Robertson

A toboggan slide in morals is on in full force both in public and private life. Everything standing in the way of money-getting to balance the budget is being swept aside. Human weaknesses and vices are to be pandered to produce revenue for the Government!

Beer has been legalized though it is unconstitutional and is sold in Washington—the capital of the nation—in hotels, restaurants, drug and grocery stores all over the city and even in the Capital building itself. One congresswoman advocated making beer drinking fashionable for young women and girls as well as boys!

Pressure is being brought in questionable ways to force the voters to sign on the dotted line for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment without even trying to provide means to prevent return of the 'alco' with all its old-time horrors.

Our Government receives revenue from cigarettes which are destroying our boys, girls and future mothers at frightful rate, blighting our unborn babies, and costing our Government millions of dollars in forest fires, and in decreased efficiency of its employees, as well as in time wasted by their smoking during business hours. Did it ever occur to you that some of these losses come out of your pocket in unseen ways?

Gambling, whose foundation stone is getting something for nothing, or next to nothing, which always fascinates people and leads them on to ruin, is already being encouraged by some state Governments! The laws against it are being broken down! Even little children of the poor use their pennies to bet in the "number games!" What will the end be? In the present day atmosphere of lowered moral standards Commercialized prostitution will surely worm its way in for its share of profits.

The public has become indifferent to the most horrible filth on the stage, screen, and in literature. Even the radio is used to demoralize our youth by cigarette and beer advertising, and stories of crime, forcing itself into the sacred precincts of the home. The moral standards of our people have been so lowered and undermined that we submit with little protest to all these evils.

Man having invented modern wonders—the telephone, radio, movies, mechanical refrigeration, and a host of other inventions, even the airplane—he felt all-sufficient unto himself, that he could cast God and His commands to the discard, forgetting that all these inventions were made possible only after years of study to discover God's laws governing the universe and then working in harmony with them to produce these inventions.

Man has defied God's command to keep His Sabbath day holy and has turned it into a day of pleasure and commercialism, forsaking the worship of God.

How can we pray "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven" and then vote for repeal which will restore the "Hell of iniquity on earth?" We have gone mad with thirst for pleasure and wealth. Shall we have to drink still deeper from the wells of suffering before we "turn about face," acknowledge our sins and seek forgiveness, casting off the slime and filth in which we have been and still are wallowing?

You know legalizing beer and other intoxicants and making them easily available will increase drinking, drunkenness, poverty, misery, sickness and suffering of multitudes of our people and destroy their immortal souls as well. Do you want a part in bringing this about? Then do nothing to help save the Eighteenth Amendment! Or, sign on the dotted line for repeal and thus help cause all this sin and misery!

To aid in the fight against these evils "Buy Dry." Patronize only stores that do not sell beer, also tell them you appreciate the dry stand they have taken. Let the wet places know why you no longer patronize them.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS—AN APPRECIATION

By Rev. C. A. Bowen, D.D.

It would not be true to the impressive modesty of Brother John Chambers for his friends to indulge in fulsome rhetoric in the effort to express their high opinion of his life. But there are some things which those of us who love him must say. Facts can always be told. There are aspects of the career of this sainted man of God which should be brought to our attention in order that holiness and high character may receive their proper tribute at the end of a glorious life.

Rest has come to one whose labors for the cause of Christ have been tireless. We cherished him as a brother beloved. We were bound to him as a comrade in a great enterprise. His passing has only heightened our esteem and deepened our sense of comradeship.

It was easy to associate this man with the crucial phases of the work of God. Within the area of his labors it was hard to think of this man and not recall at the same time the calls of his church and the needs of his fellowman. John Chambers and the needs of our children; John Chambers and the problems of our churches; John Chambers and the difficulties of teachers and officers; John Chambers and the enterprises of young people. So we might go on in tracing the almost inevitable association of this man with the ministry of Brotherly service. Thus he "went about doing good," carried by a sensitive heart where his fellow workers seemed to need him most. Influential in the councils of the entire church, he seemed to be most sensitive of all in the presence of the underprivileged situations of his own Conference.

When has there been among us such a fascinatingly honest man? How has despised the flatterer or the pedant. What pleasure he derived from puncturing our iridescent hubbles and making us face the facts of a given situation. What a service he rendered in upsetting us in some moment of sanctimonious posing. We find ourselves in his debt for keeping us close to reality and the claims of common sense.

This story of personal self-effacement in the Christian enterprise, of loyalty which reached the heights of immolation, of financial sagacity in planning and operating the slender budget of a Conference Board, of open-mindedness which encompassed the worth of the bitterest opponent, of wide sympathy which swept aside narrow sectional interests, of impressive manhood towering almost in loneliness at times, of a golden heart going out in fine appreciation for his fellow workers and exquisite tenderness for those dearly loved, of a radiant home life, of thoughts that ran along the lines of loftiness and purity, of strong creative faith which thrilled at the challenge of the present and never doubted the ability of God to master the perplexities of a new day, and of an intimate comradeship with Christ has been dramatized before our very eyes in one whose flesh seemed to incarnate the ideals of the world's Savior. Such a life reminds us that God can still work miracles in the world when given an adequate chance with some life. John Chambers gave him such a chance.

Hero of the cross, well done! You have lived too deathlessly to die. Those who love you realize full well that a mere grave cannot impose itself upon the eternal processes of your existence. Your goading example impels your fellow workers to higher devotion. You have shared with us that strength and radiance which you were so prodigal in handling. Removed for awhile, we find your presence abiding to lead us toward that shining goal which you have so gloriously attained.

SPIRITUAL MINISTRY FOR FORESTRY CAMPS

In connection with the plan for mobilizing 275,000 workmen in 1200 Civilian Conservation Camps, the Committee has offered its services in helping to provide a religious ministry for the men. In response to inquiries as to services that might be rendered, the Secretary of War replied: "The War Department is deeply concerned with the religious welfare of the members of this Corps and the Welfare Regulations already approved for the Corps contemplate the use of Reserve Chaplains on duty with this Corps and of volunteer civilian clergymen in the vicinity of the various camps." The Chief of Army Chaplains has been in frequent conference with members of the Committee. In addition to the service that will be rendered by Reserve Chaplains, it is expected that much volunteer service will be needed by ministers and churches situated near these camps. The regulations for this service are as follows: "The gratuitous service of volunteer clergymen and religious agencies will be accepted for the camps as the requirements of such religious faiths not otherwise provided for may arise. Since no appropriation is available for this purpose, these will serve without remuneration, except that transportation to and from camp, and board and lodging while at camps, will be provided. All proffers of gratuitous service should be made either to Corps Area Headquarters of the Area in which the volunteers are located, or to the district Chaplains." The General Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains hopes that clergymen near the camps will take the initiative in offering their services. Information concerning the location of the camps in a State and the name of the Commander in charge of the Area can be secured by writing the Committee, 815 Woodward Building, Washington, D. C.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Columbus District Conference held its sixty-third session in Noxapater, Miss., on June 9-10. The work of the conference was ably directed by Dr. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder, who occupied the chair. Mr. A. T. Callahan, Mayor of the city, in a happily worded address welcomed the guests to Noxapater.

The Word of God was helpfully expounded in messages brought by Reverends W. B. Baker, A. T. McIlwain and T. M. Bradley.

The following institutional representatives were in attendance: Rev. A. Y. Brown, Conference Director of Golden Cross; Dr. D. M. Key, President of Millsaps College; Rev. J. E. Stephens, President of Conference Board of Christian Education; Rev. R. G. Lord, Executive Secretary, Board of Christian Education; Mr. Fred McDonald, Superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage, Jackson, Miss.

Rev. A. P. Stephens was recommended to the Annual Conference for local Deacons Orders. Mr. J. H. McKinnon was re-elected District Lay Leader. W. S. McAllilly and N. C. Oakes were re-elected Associate Lay Leaders.

Delegates to the Annual Conference were elected as follows: J. H. McKinnon, Mrs. S. J. Hopkins, F. A. Howell, N. C. Oakes, Mrs. J. T. Lee, Mrs. J. C. McElroy, T. B. Fatheree, F. S. Jackson, Rev. A. P. Stephens, Dr. N. D. Guerry, Mrs. R. P. Neblett, Miss Elsie Moore, Mrs. J. A. George, J. W. Overstreet, W. S. Allily, Mrs. B. M. Howorth.

Aekerman was selected as the conference city for 1934.

The conference came to a close after expressing its deepest appreciation to its genial pastor-host, Rev. W. W. Milligan and to all who so generously entertained us.

C. L. ROGERS, Secretary.

GREENWOOD DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Greenwood District Conference held its thirteenth annual session in the Methodist church, Itta Bena, Miss., May 23-24, 1933. Rev. W. N. Duncan, presiding elder, prepared in advance a complete program of our work, and the conference was able to dispatch its business in a business-like way. Our presiding elder presided with his usual dignity and brotherly interest. Every item of business was given careful consideration. Harmony, good-fellowship and brotherly love prevailed.

Rev. E. S. Lewis conducted the devotional services at the beginning of each session, to the delight and inspiration of the conference.

Dr. D. B. Raulins, editor of the Advocate, did all the preaching and did it well. Our hearts were warmed and encouraged by his messages. The pastor-host, Rev. R. G. Moore, and his committees, made ample provision for our entertainment and we soon felt at home in the hospitable little city of Itta Bena.

Every pastor was present and made report of his work. The conference was also well attended by the laymen. A large portion of this district has been greatly handicapped in its work due to high water, levee breaks, etc., but in spite of these things a spirit of optimism and determination was evident in our meetings.

Our conference committees worked over-time and brought in some of the best reports that it has been our privilege to hear.

The following brethren represented our Conference and Church-wide interests: New Orleans Advocate, Dr. D. B. Raulins; Conference Board of Christian Education, Rev. R. G. Lord; Golden Cross, Rev. A. Y. Brown; Superannuate Endowment, Dr. A. T. McIlwain; Grenada College, Dr. J. R. Countiss; Conference Board of Missions, Rev. J. D. Wroten; Woman's Missionary Society, Mrs. J. H. Holloman.

Rev. Melville Johnson, Cleveland, and Rev. James H. Felts, Grenada, were welcome visitors during the conference.

Delegates to the Annual Conference were elected as follows: Mrs. R. G. Moore, P. L. DeLoach, Mrs. J. H. Holloman, T. C. Sledge, W. L. Jordan, Mrs. W. N. Duncan, Judge M. F. Pierce, Mrs. B. P. Brooks, J. B. Streater, J. R. Brinson, B. P. Brooks, W. C. Baker.

Ruleville will entertain our next district conference. Space will not permit a fuller report of what the writer and many others regard one of the best district conferences ever attended.

I am grateful to Rev. Jeff Cunningham for his faithful services as assistant secretary.

WOMEN AND PROHIBITION

Resolutions Anent the Eighteenth Amendment, Adopted by the Woman's Missionary Society, at Fifth Street Methodist Church, Meridian, Mississippi

Whereas, Strenuous and persistent efforts are being made by the Anti-Prohibition forces to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution, and

Whereas, We are persuaded that no greater curse could be visited upon our fair country than the return of the open saloon, or the legalized sale of intoxicants through any medium, therefore be it

Resolved; First: That we, the members of the Meridian District Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Annual Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in session at Fifth Street Church, in Meridian, Mississippi, June 8, 1933, representing 750 members of the Woman's Missionary Society, and a total church membership of 13,500, do hereby reaffirm our belief in, and loyalty to the Eighteenth Amendment, and pledge continuous effort to prevent repeal of said Amendment, and the legalized sale of beer and whiskey in Mississippi.

Resolved; Second: That we respectfully, and urgently request our Governor, the Honorable Sennett Mike Conner, not to call a special session of the Legislature at this time, or any future time for the sole purpose of enacting legislation to authorize a referendum election, as the holding of the special session of the Legislature, and the election, would entail heavy, and unnecessary expense on the citizens of Mississippi who are already overburdened with tax, and, while we believe that the salutary influence of the noble work done by the Rev. J. B. Gambrell, D. D., Bishop Charles Betts Galloway, D. D., Honorable C. H. Alexander, and a host of others of sacred memory, in the interest of Prohibition abides in the hearts of the voters of Mississippi to the extent that would prevent the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment at a referendum election, we are persuaded that if the people are given more time for sober reflection, and recovery from the present-day restlessness, and quasi-hysteria caused by the current depression, the sentiment against the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment will be much stronger than it is at present.

Resolved; Third: That a copy of these resolutions be furnished to the Meridian Star, a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a copy mailed to Governor Conner.

Signed by: Mrs. P. M. Caraway, Mrs. J. B. Kennedy, Mrs. W. H. Saunders, Mrs. H. McMullen, Mrs. C. B. Lipscomb, Miss Ella Wayne Ormond.

These resolutions were unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

MRS. D. L. ST. JOHN, President.
MRS. FLOYD PRICE, Secretary.

BOOK REVIEWS

"VENTURES IN SIMPLER LIVING," by D. J. Fleming, published by The International Missionary Council, New York. Price $1.00.

This is a new kind of missionary study. Instead of being an inspirational appeal for missionary endeavor, it takes the missionary and the people of the mission field and undertakes to find a solution for some of the problems which arise out of the contacts of two wholly different social and economic conditions of living. The study is based upon shop notes from several fields and from varying types of missionary enterprise. These notes deal with the approach of the missionary to the natives as affected by alien standards of living and the maintenance of a home utterly foreign in its every appointment. The experimentation on various fields makes it clear that the contrast between the standard of missionary living and the social and economic implications of the message may raise serious problems and greatly hinder missionary success. The book does not insist that the missionary shall descend to the social and subsistence plane of the native, but that there may be a simplifying of the life of the missionary to relieve his presence of the appearance of an alien invasion, and a lifting of the standards of the national to a point consistent with the implications of the gospel message. That is no easy goal; but we venture to believe that it does offer food for serious and even profitable reflection. The print, a reproduction of the manuscript page, is not very satisfactory.

"THE FIRST FRIENDS OF THE FINEST FRIENDS," by Charles E. Guice, published by Morrilton Democrat, Morrilton, Arkansas. Price $1.00.

The opening sentence of the "Foreword" of this book is calculated to embarrass adverse criticism, though not intended to do so. On the whole, we would say that this study of the twelve apostles is a series of thoroughly wholesome and helpful messages which are less dependent upon the particular disciple being considered, than the chapter subjects would indicate. The introduction of numerous impossible legends does not advantage the book, we think, and in cases of the rather obscure members of the group there is rather more surprising than should be. The book does not add anything new to the interpretation of these "friends" of Jesus, but it does present through them some very helpful thoughts regarding the privileges and responsibilities of discipleship today. The chapters on Philip, Thomas, John and Peter are very good; and, while the study of Thaddaeus ambles along at the beginning, it is probably the strongest chapter on the book. These studies constitute a series of gripping appeals for the wholesome virtues and practices of true discipleship.

were amazed to hear him say that it was not hanging, poisoning, shooting nor electrocution. Feeling that this exhausted the list of a civilized country, wide-eyed they asked, "How do they do it?" Quietly, with attention to spare, he said, "They put a pair of shoes on them, and they buck themselves to death."

Come on South, Miss Perkins. We are ready to put on our "Sunday" shoes and help you straighten out the big problems of your department.

"BIBLES." That is the big and only word on the sign-board that sticks out over the sidewalk where I go by. There are many other signs, big and little, electric and moving; each telling about something in the house over which they are suspended. Some want you to come in and eat, some to buy a car, some to take lodging, and rest, some to buy a typewriter or desk, and so on.

"Bibles." That is different. As I hurry by I see the gray-haired Bible-Man. There he sits among his Bibles. Often he is reading one of them. What is he finding on those pages that have caught the eyes and hearts of the ages? A placard nearby tells in how many languages and dialects the Bible speaks to the world. And there is an eloquent hint that it also speaks all the languages of the soul. It scales all the steepes and plumbs all the depths of human experience. It outlives materialism and atheism, and sings on after the raucous shouts of "things" have ceased to echo.

"Bibles." And the Bible-Man. Why, he does not seem to want you to buy a Bible if your clothes are thin and you have been sleeping in the park and your stomach is crying for food and your soul is longing for an honest job. But he wants you to have a Bible. So he picks out one and gives it to you, and tells you some places to read. And then he will inquire if you know the road that leads to life. And he may go down the street agait with you and buy you coffee or breakfast.

"Bibles." Sometimes I slow down and turn in under that sign. And the Bible-Man takes down some of his Bibles from the shelves. He shows me the big Pulpit-Bible and the little vest-pocket Bible. He lets me look at the pages and print, big and clear, that speaks to old people whose eyes cannot pick out the little words and letters any more. He lets me look at them and feel them and smell them. "Overlapping edges," "red-under-gold," "silk-sewed," "Bibles."

"Bibles." I go down the street wondering what it means to stay in a Bible store all day, walled in on three sides by Bibles and on the fourth side by the endless line of your fellowman passing by. I went into the florist's shop just for a short moment on a hot day to live that moment walled in by flowers. Some people live in the Bible as if it were a beautiful garden. The Bible-Man's life is beautiful like his Bibles. "Bibles." On a page of one of them I saw this: "And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us."

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. J. W. Lee, our pastor at Collins, La., is reported to have suffered a slight stroke recently, but is improving.

We send thanks to all those who have participated in the Advocate campaign. Some declined the commission offered. To these we offer special thanks.

Chaplain A. F. Vaughan, stationed in the Philippine Islands, was recently ordered to San Francisco, Calif., for an operation. We trust that Chaplain Vaughan is improving.

Dr. J. L. Neill, pastor at First Church, Gulfport, Miss., recently spoke before the Kiwanis Club of Brookhaven. The occasion was the anniversary of the birth of Jefferson Davis.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

Dr. A. M. Serex, pastor at New Iberia, La., is conducting a revival service at First Church, Crowley, La. A great meeting is anticipated. Dr. Serex is a strong student and an able preacher.

Rev. H. N. McKibben, pastor of Buena Vista charge, has made effective use of the laymen in surrounding towns to assist him in putting on "Laymen's Day" in his churches.

Whitworth College has been asked to participate in a pageant at the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago. The pageant is to set forth A Century of Progress in the education of women.

Rev. Basil E. Moore, Amory, Miss., has been appointed supply pastor on the Horn Lake charge, to fill out the year, where Rev. W. F. Rogers was pastor.

Mrs. R. J. Wilson of Shreveport was recently a member of the congregation at First Church, Lake Charles. Mrs. Wilson, for a number of years, has been greatly interested in Miss Julia Reid and her work in Cuba.

Who is going to minister to the 275,000 men who are gathering in the 1200 Conservation Camps of our country? Is there a camp near you? Are you going to take this opportunity? Look on another page for article on the subject.

Will you preachers send us the names of parsonage sons and daughters graduating from college this year in the states of Louisiana and Mississippi? We should like to publish the list in the Advocate.

Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., is offering for the school year 1933-34 scholarships of $100 each to the two students of highest scholastic standing in the 1933 graduating class of any accredited high school.

Dr. Wm. J. Young, for the past nineteen years professor of Missions in the School of Theology of Emory University, retires this month and becomes Emeritus Professor of Missions for life. He retains his position as Director of the Correspondence School.

Prof. R. R. Haynes, assistant Professor of History and Education in Millsaps College since 1930, becomes head of the Department of Education, succeeding Prof. Frank C. Jenkins, who becomes director of Teacher Training with the State Department of Education.

Miss Julia Reid, Lake Charles, La., missionary to Cuba, is to return shortly to her field of work. The church at Lake Charles had her as Honor Guest at the Fellowship Hour on last Sunday evening. Along with Miss Reid new members of the church were guests.

We deeply sympathize with our Baptist friends in the going of Dr. W. J. McGlothlin, President of Furman University. He was the victim of a tragic automobile accident which occurred on May 15 in North Carolina. Dr. McGlothlin was a great man and one of the leading educators of his denomination.

James Lipscomb, son of the late Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of North Mississippi Conference, is a student at Bob Jones College, College Point, Fla. This young man plans to give his life to God through the ministry. The Lipscomb family of Columbus, Miss., have had a large part in the making of Methodism in North Mississippi.

Mrs. H. T. Carley, wife of the presiding elder of the Monroe district, Dr. H. T. Carley, recently underwent a very serious operation in Monroe. Dr. Jno. G. Snelling, Jr., is the splendid young surgeon who did such an admirable and efficient piece of work that no ill effects have followed the operation.

Laymen, if you plan to take a vacation this summer, make it Junaluska, N. C., July 19-23. This is the occasion of what Dr. G. L. Morelock promises to be "the best laymen's conference yet." Here is a peep at the program: Spiritual life, Temperance, Economic Conditions, World Peace, Education, Missions, Church Attendance and Church Finance. How can you resist it?

Do you know about "Parsonettes?" Now this is no new breakfast food nor tooth paste. It is not even on the radio yet. It is the name of a new organization in the city of New Orleans made up of the wives of the Methodist preachers. Last Monday at noon at First Church this promising enterprise celebrated an early triumph in its history by serving lunch to the preachers following their regular weekly meeting.

Miss Sarah Louise Williams, daughter of Rev. Jno. L. Williams, pastors of Louisiana Avenue Church, New Orleans, was among the graduates of the Sophie B. Wright High School this year. Miss Sarah Louise is the youngest of a family of eight, five of whom have taken their college degrees. Thus our pastors continue their larger ministry to the life of the communities in which they live.

A young people's revival will be conducted in our church at Gueydan, La., Rev. E. V. Duplantis, pastor. Rev. James V. Reid, successful young people's worker, has been secured to conduct the services which will run for twelve days, from June 28 through Sunday, July 9. Brother Duplantis has issued an invitation to all pastors within reach of Gueydan to join in the services and bring as many of the young people as is possible.

The following accompanied a list of renewals recently sent in by Rev. L. T. Nelson, our efficient pastor at Georgetown, Miss.: "We are going to continue to hammer away for the Advocate. I hope and pray that you can go back to a sixteen-page paper before the year is out. We need that much good substantial spiritual food each week in addition to our present diet." With all working and praying to this end this could easily be accomplished.

The program of the Eighteenth Annual Convocation of Southern Methodist University indicates that Sunday, June 4, was a great day in the history of the institution. McFarlin Auditorium was the scene of the commencement sermon and service, our Order of Worship being followed throughout. Dr. J. N. R. Score was the preacher. A great organ recital was the feature of the afternoon, and the day was closed with Senior Vespers on the steps of Dallas Hall.

The Young People's Assembly at Brookhaven, Miss., enjoyed a great enrollment and a great program. Notwithstanding the fact that the death of Rev. Jno. C. Chambers, Executive Secretary of the Board of Christian Education of the Mississippi Conference, on the morning of the opening of the assembly, cast a shadow over the gathering, it was a great assembly. The line and able corps of workers, both adult and young people, were wide awake to the opportunities of the occasion.

Rev. J. A. George conducted a revival at Prairie, Miss., where Rev. W. C. Galceran, Jr., is pastor, the week of June 11. Brother George has been unusually successful in revival work all during his pastorate. Graduating from the University of Mississippi in 1915, receiving Master of Arts degree and Law degree. He practiced law for a while, then answered the urgent call to preach. He has cultivated the evangelistic spirit and his brethren make use of his talents in their revivals.

Centenary College of Louisiana recently closed its regular session by conferring degrees upon forty-seven graduates of the regular term. Others are to be graduated at the close of the summer session which is already under way. Dr. King Vivion, president of Southwestern University, Georgetown, Texas, delivered the class address. The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon the following members of the Louisiana Conference: Rev. A. M. Shaw, Virton; Rev. R. W. Vaughan, superintendent of the Ruston Orphanage; and Rev. D. B. Raulins, New Orleans.

Stop! Before reading further, turn to the address label on page one and see if the date thereon reads June 1933 or prior thereto. If so, that means your subscription has expired. If you are one of the 2,000 of our friends who have overlooked mailing in their renewals, won't you attend to this little matter right now before it slips your attention again? It is only a matter of $1.50 to you, for which you will receive each week for the next twelve months a copy of your official Church paper, but it is a matter of $3,000 to the manager that will greatly assist him in meeting current obligations and keeping the presses going.

On "Mother's Day," Sunday afternoon, May 14, the Jefferson Street Methodist Church, Natchez, Miss., where she had lived for many years, was filled with people who loved Mrs. Pauline Chapman Bowman, and mingled their tears with the members of the sorrowing family. Rev. O. S. Lewis, her former pastor, conducted the service, paying a beautiful tribute to her life and character. She was the widow of F. E. Bowman, who died in 1920, a lifelong Methodist. She was a native of Clinton, La. Her brother, Dr. M. B. Chapman, was, for years, a leader of our church. Many floral tributes, from distant states as well as from home people, were in the church.

Four more names that shine with unwaning splendor in the sky of our missionary history were recently added to the ten that already occupied places in Scarritt College's Hall of Fame. Can you read them without tears of gratitude and a soul-surge of prophetic hope? Dr. Young J. Allen, Missionary in China 1860-1907; Rev. J. W. Lambuth, father of the late Bishop Lambuth and pioneer missionary in China and Japan 1854-1892; Mrs. S. C. Trueheart, pioneer in the movement to train women for missionary service; and Dr. George Williams Walker, who rendered distinctive service in the field of interracial co-operation and one of the founders and president of Paine College.

Just as we were closing our forms to go to press with this issue of the Advocate, we learned of the tragic death, by drowning, of Mrs. Coulter Prescott, wife of Mr. C. B. Prescott, faithful steward of Parker Memorial Church, this city, and daughter-in-law of Mr. E. H. Prescott, prominent Methodist layman of New Orleans, and their little son, on Monday evening, June 19, about seven miles from St. Francisville, La. Funeral services of mother and son will be conducted from the Church on Thursday of this week. May God comfort those who are most grieved over the tragic loss we have all sustained.

CENTENARY COLLEGE INSTALLS NEW PRESIDENT

At the close of the commencement exercises of Centenary College, June 7, Dr. W. Angie Smith, president for the past session, introduced his successor, Prof. Pierce Cline.

Prof. Cline has been head of the Department of History in the college for the past thirteen years and shares the confidence of his associates and patrons of the school.

The Methodists of Louisiana are greatly indebted to Dr. W. Angie Smith for his excellent handling of the affairs of the college during the past year. He now gives his entire attention to his pastorate of First Church, Shreveport, which church also is due our thanks for sharing with the college for the past year the services of Dr. Smith.

BISHOP DOBBS MEETS PRESIDING ELDERS

On the morning of June 8, at First Church, Shreveport, Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs stood before the presiding elders of the Louisiana and Arkansas Conferences, all of whom were present.

The meeting had been called for the consideration of urgent matters of this Episcopal District and to initiate Bishop Dobbs' new year in this area.

As an invited guest of the meeting Dr. T. D. Ellis, General Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, appeared before the meeting, delivering a most timely and convincing address on the affairs of the Church. Fully recognizing the difficulties to be faced he spoke with confidence-building conviction as to the abiding spiritual resources of the Church with which to meet all the problems of the day.

Discussing the way out Dr. Ellis emphasized the importance of a sympathetic and appreciating approach to our people, an improved financial system, increased liberality, and personal religious experience.

Drs. Millar and Raulins, editors of the Arkansas Methodist and the New Orleans Christian Advocate respectively, invited guests of the meeting, made statements concerning the two Conference Organs.

Following the meeting the presiding elders, with invited guests, including the pastors of the churches of Shreveport, were guests of Bishop and Mrs. Dobbs at luncheon in the basement of the church.

LOUISIANA LAW AND TEMPERANCE

No. 40 of 1888

To provide for the study of scientific temperance or of the nature of alcoholic drinks and narcotics, and of their effects upon the human system, in connection with the several divisions of the subject of relative physiology and hygiene, by the pupils in the public schools in Louisiana.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana, That in addition to the branches, in which instruction is now given in the public schools, instruction shall also be given as to the nature of alcoholic drinks and narcotics, and special instruction as to their effects upon the human system in connection with the several divisions of the subject of relative physiology and hygiene, and such subjects shall be taught as regularly as other branches are taught in said schools. Such instruction shall be given orally from a text book in the hand of the teacher, to pupils who are not able to read, and shall be given by the use of text books in the hands of the pupils in the case of those who are able to read, and such instruction shall be given as aforesaid to all pupils in all public schools in the State, to all the grades until completed in the high school.

Section 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That the text books used for the instruction required to be given by the preceding section, shall give at least one-fourth of their space to the consideration of the nature and effects of alcoholic drinks and narcotics; and the books used in the highest grade of graded schools shall contain at least twenty pages of matter relating to this subject. Text books on physiology in use in the schools or at the time this act takes effect, which are not in accordance with the requirements of this section, shall be changed for books satisfying the requirements of this section, except when previous contracts as to such text books now in force.

Section 3. Be it further enacted etc., That no certificate shall be granted hereafter to any new applicant to teach in the public schools of Louisiana who has not passed a satisfactory examination in the study of the nature of alcoholic drinks and narcotics, and of their effects upon the human system, in connection with the several divisions of the subject of relative physiology and hygiene.

Section 4. Be it further enacted, etc., That each teacher of any school in the State supported wholly or in part from public money, shall, before receiving any remuneration for services rendered in said capacity, file a certificate with the person by whom such payments are authorized to be made, to the effect that such teacher has faithfully complied with all the provisions of this act during the entire period for which such payment is sought and in the manner specified in this act, and no money shall be paid to any such teacher who has not filed such a certificate.

Section 5. Be it further enacted, etc., That this act shall take effect from and after its passage; provided, that section 3, referring to examination of teachers, and section 4, to the payment of teachers, shall not take effect until on and after October 1, 1890.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES

(Wherein the "Sage of the Pelican Pines" tears a song book).

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D. D.

Bishop H. M. Dobbs preached the "commencement sermon" for Centenary College. The service was held in the Municipal Auditorium in Shreveport, and the paper reported that there was at least 2,000 people present. They sang the beautiful song, "Faith of our Fathers," and every one of them, the Bishop included, sang a falsehood. There is a big difference between a lie and a falsehood. A lie is a statement intended to deceive; but a falsehood is a statement that is not true, but may be innocent of any purpose to deceive. The second verse of this hymn states a falsehood. It says:

"Our fathers, chained in prisons dark,
Were still in heart and conscience free;
How sweet would be their children's fate,
If they, like them, could die for thee."

Faber, the author of the hymn, was speaking of the martyrs, many of whom died cruel deaths. Now not one of the 2,000 who sang that hymn believed that. The Bishop doesn't believe it. I don't believe it. I hope I would be willing to die for my faith if necessary; but I certainly wouldn't think it a "sweet fate." It shows how little we think of what we are singing.

There's a dead fly in the Cokesbury Hymnal, a book designed to be used by our young people. It is on page 278, I think. I tore the leaf out of my copy. It is the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," one of the finest war lyrics in our literature; but a hymn breathing the fiercest hatred of the South. Where is the consistency of denouncing war and singing a hymn that promotes the spirit of war?

But the most absurd of all these musical falsehoods is for the people of Louisiana to sing "My country 'tis of thee . . . Land of the Pilgrim's pride!" At the time that hymn was thrilling every patriotic assembly in New England, she was threatening to secede if Louisiana was admitted into the Union!

Alas—IGNORANCE!

Still in the rolling chair.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI

The Conferent Standard Training School was held at Grenada College, June 5-10. It was accounted to be one of the very best schools that we have ever had in the Conference. The enrollment was about the same as that of last year, however. More people were in the dormitories this year than last. The spirit of the school was excellent, the fellowship the finest, and the class work done by both the students and the instructors was of the highest order. The platform work done by O. E. Goddard made a very large contribution to the school and community.

The Conference Young People's Assembly is in session this week at the college here. The attendance is larger than last year. Over 150 young people, from 16 to 23 years of age, are enrolled in the classes of the assembly. They are a very fine group and the spirit of the assembly is the best ever seen.

A Christian Adventure Camp has been planned at Castalian Springs, near Durant, for July 3-7. This meeting is for all young people of the Conference of the ages 12-15. Adult counselor is provided for every 10 young people. The program of activities will be of the highest Christian order. The cost will be $5.25 for all the time. If you are interested, write Rev. J. K. Stephens, Lexington, Miss., camp commander.

Instructors are available for Cokesbury Classes this summer. You may have a class at very low expense. In some cases without expense except for text books, which is very little. If you are interested in having a class this summer write me at once.

Have you observed Sunday School Day this year? If so, have you sent in your offering? A large number of churches are responding to this need, but many have not done so yet. You may have the programs free by writing me. In case you cannot put on this campaign, will you not give some sort of emphasis to this work in your church, take an offering and send it to me? When every church on a charge has sent in the offering, that charge is placed on the honor roll. When any church sends an offering equal to 10 cents per active member of the Sunday school, that church is placed on the honor roll of individual churches. Will you not join with the many other churches in observing this day?

Do the best you can with what you have, but be sure and do your best. When we have done our best prayerfully God will do the rest.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

The Christian Adventure Assembly opened Tuesday, June 13, with a registration of over 150, which attendance is both surprising and gratifying. Shreveport district had the largest attendance with 46 delegates, Monroe second with 27, Minden and Ruston with 21 each, Alexander 18, Baton Rouge 9, New Orleans 6, Lake Charles 1.

The spirit of the assembly is unusually fine. This is true, although a large proportion of the delegates have never attended before. The leaders are very much pleased with the way in which these intermediates have entered into things, responded to the program which is planned for them, etc. A large part of the success of this assembly is due to the untiring work of its Dean, Miss Anna Pharr Turner, who has carefully planned its every feature, and supervised the carrying out of the program. Each member of the assembly staff has co-operated to the fullest extent. A full report of activities will appear next week. Only the coronation has taken place at this writing, and the first day's classes.

Miss Anna Lois Holstead and Mr. Rufus Lindsey were crowned ruling queen and chieftain of the 1933 Christian Adventure Assembly, in a most impressive ceremony on the lawn, Tuesday evening. The legend of the white cord was woven throughout this ceremony, and very beautiful and appropriate Indian music was furnished by the Mansfield Young People's Choir.

The Young People's Assembly will be in full swing as you read this issue. We are expecting some 200 or more to register for this assembly. We will tell you more of this assembly later.

MARY SEARLES,
Conference Director.

FROM MINDEN, LA.

Many things have happened this year to interfere with our work. In addition to the general depression, we had in the beginning of the year, a severe form of flu that closed our schools for a month, a disastrous fire that swept a great part of the business houses away, the general bank closing followed by the failure of one of our strongest banks, to be climaxed with a terrific cyclone that killed 35 people, wounded over 200 and destroyed upwards to 400 homes.

In spite of these things, we have carried out the full program of the church, observed all the special days of the church calendar, had gracious pre-Easter services with twelve accessions, and conducted a daily vacation Bible school with 124 enrolled and delivering 107 credits.

The Young People's Revival conducted by Lay Evangelist Van Carter, was a great success. The crowds were large and the singing was inspirational. Many were led to a definite decision for Christ. Some joined the church, and others were developed into leadership in the church. A definite program of work was laid out for the young people this summer under the leadership of Miss Thera Stovall as worker among the young people.

The preaching of Van Carter gripped the young people with its clear cut exposition of the Word of God. He is a magnetic leader of the youth and ought to be used largely in our great field in Louisiana. The new day is upon us and the youth movement is here to stay. We already have a flourishing Junior congregation, an active World's Friend Club and two Epworth Leagues.

The Local Church Board of Christian Education functions beautifully in every one of the departments. Our new building, Webb Hall, which is a gift from Mr. Sam G. Webb has relieved our congestion and opened the way for our enlargement. There is still plenty of work to be done.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE AND SOCIAL SERVICE, JACKSON DISTRICT

Whereas alcohol is a habit forming narcotic drug which poisons the system, injures the brain and nerves, and impairs the integrity of life; and

Whereas the traffic in alcohol is an incorrigible enemy of society and social welfare, providing disturbance of the peace, breeding crime, and producing sickness, poverty, broken homes, and blighted lives; and

Whereas the United States Congress, by a two-thirds majority vote of each house, has submitted the Blaine resolution to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, a resolution calling for naked repeal without a substitute and sprung on the country in a time of deep depression, making a fair referendum on the question impossible; and

Whereas the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment would open the floodgates of liquor into dry states, and the next logical step after repeal of the federal prohibition will be an attempt to repeal state prohibition laws in the states that have them, reproducing the riot and ruin of the old saloon era; therefore be it

Resolved, that we are unalterably opposed to repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. We deeply regret the recent action of the United States Congress in legalizing beer of 3.2 per cent alcoholic content, which we believe is intoxicating in fact, and therefore, unconstitutional. We are opposed to the legalizing of 3.2 per cent beer in Mississippi.

Resolved, that we call upon all the

Underweight Children

Need More Iron in Their Blood!

Children who are thin and pale and who lack appetite are usually suffering from a deficiency of iron. When the blood lacks iron it becomes thin and poor and fails to nourish. Then a child loses appetite and becomes still thinner and weaker—and easy prey to disease!

To build up your child, give him Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. It contains iron which makes for rich, red blood. It also contains tasteless quinine which tends to purify the blood. These two effects make it an exceptional medicine for young and old. A few days on Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic will work wonders in your child. It will sharpen his appetite, improve his color and build up his pep and energy and increase his resistance to disease. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is pleasant to take. Children like it and it's absolutely safe for them. Contains nothing harmful. All stores sell Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. Get a bottle today and see how your child will benefit from it.

CONFERENCE NEWS

Mississippi Conference

The Meridian district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, convened in Fifth Street Methodist Church in Meridian, Miss., June 8, with Mrs. D. L. St. John, district secretary, presiding and Mrs. Floyd Price acting secretary. Rev. A. M. Broadfoot led the devotional, after which "Take Time To Be Holy" was sung by the congregation and a duet, "It Pays to Serve Jesus," sung by Mesdames Floyd Price and Eric Vance.

Greetings from Mrs. H. M. Ivy, former district secretary were read. She expressed gratitude for cooperation in carrying on the work and Mrs. St. John asked that the same cooperation be given her. She also urged that we press forward, making sure that God's will is ours.

Mrs. Cottrell, conference president brought a helpful message in which she thanked every one for cooperation in the past year and asked that it be continued. She spoke on the various phases of the work and urged the cultivation of each. She said the slogan for this year is, Believe, endure and dare.

A report by Miss Wayne Ormand was then given, telling of the increase in membership and organization of 13 new auxiliaries. Miss Ormand stated that the amount of the pledge was not announced at Council meeting because Mrs. Fulton is hoping and praying that it will be increased. In the absence of Mrs. Friller, superintendent of children's work, Mrs. Arrington of Magee presented this phase of the work in an interesting way. She said that as we pray for world peace we must plant the seed in the hearts of our children. She made a plea for leadership, saying that sixty-two per cent of our children are without religious training.

Miss Anne Trawick, head resident of Meridian Wesley House, presented her work. She told how good God has been through the year, said about seven hundred employees would soon be put to work in the cotton mills. She made a request for good books to be sent to the Wesley House library.

Miss Betty Hughes, first missionary to China from Mississippi Conference, spoke on the spiritual side of missions and gave beautiful illustrations of the dependableness of God. After a prayer by Mrs. B. J. Nelson the meeting adjourned for lunch, which was served in the basement of the church and a rising vote of thanks was given for the lovely meal.

The afternoon session was opened by singing "The Kingdom Is Coming." Rev. Mr. Saunders led the prayer and Rev. T. J. O'Neil read and commented on the 16th chapter of Acts. Mrs. John then sang an impressive solo, "Others."

Mrs. Alma Riley spoke in the interest of the Orphanage, stressing the value of Octagon soap wrappers.

A roll call showed fifteen auxiliaries represented.

Mrs. Mary Claire Lipscomb presented the W. C. T. U. work in an able manner. Mrs. H. McMullan presented her work as editor of Woman's Page, superintendent of Publicity and superintendent of "World Outlook." Mrs. Cottrell spoke on our finances. Christian Social Relations and Mission Study.

Miss Ormand announced "Fellowship Luncheon" as a means of securing new members. Mrs. Dobson announced the "Treasure Hunt." Resolutions concerning the Eighteenth Amendment were read and adopted. A birthday gift of $4.50 was given. Miss Betty Hughes as a token of love. After a prayer the meeting adjourned.

A RETREAT IN THE NORTH CAROLINA MOUNTAINS

A retreat this year will be held at Brevard Institute, Brevard, North Carolina. The date is July 14-16. The invitation is general and limited to one hundred. Price of entertainment at Brevard will be three dollars per person if as many as fifty attend. If less than fifty attend, fifty cents a day will be added. Each guest is asked to bring sheets for single beds, other liners furnished. There will be a registration fee of one dollar. The reservation and registration fee should be sent as soon as possible to Miss Daisy Davies, 1066 Spring St. N. W., Atlanta, Georgia.

Let this announcement of the retreat be a call to prayer. These are days when the spiritual note, the note of life in Christ should be sounded everywhere with special clearness and charm; where men and women everywhere should be helped to see the meaning of God in their lives and

SOLOMAN SHERMAN

On May 21 the soul of Brother Sherman went to meet his Lord. He was seventy-five years of age and had always been a faithful member of the Methodist church. He was a good man and was ready to go when the Lord called him. In 1881 he was married to Miss Klithanna Cooley. His wife went to her reward several years ago. The sons and daughters who survive are: H. D. Sherman, E. L. Sherman, Mrs. J. J. Lightsey, and Mrs. W. E. Lightsey of Silverena, Miss.; Mrs. C. R. Rogers and Mrs. W. E. Rogers of Taylorsville, Miss.; and Mrs. G. W. Smith of Montrose, Miss. Burial took place at Clear Creek Church with Rev. J. W. Thompson officiating.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, In his passing a devoted husband and father, an ideal citizen, an earnest and devout member of the ministry, a truly great leader in the cause of Christ has gone to his reward; thereby, causing an irreparable loss to his family, to the church and the community. His life and death bring to mind the words of the poet:

"Lives of great men remind us
We can make our lives sublime;
And departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time;"

Greatness is goodness. Rev. Mr. Hayes was great, as he was good; and he did leave behind him footprints—footprints on the sands of our hearts that neither wind nor rain nor sun shall erase, until we, like him, shall meet our Saviour face to face; therefore be it

Resolved, that we, the official members of the second quarterly conference of the Jefferson Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Natchez, Miss., do hereby extend to his devoted wife, son and daughter, our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement; and pray that God will sustain and comfort them in the days to come; be it further

Resolved that a copy of these resolutions be sent his wife and daughter, one to his son, one to the Natchez Democrat, one to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and one recorded in the minutes of this meeting.

Brother-in-Christ, Rev. William A. Hayes; and

Whereas, in his passing a beloved husband and father, an upright and outstanding citizen, a devout and earnest member of the ministry, and one of the followers of the Saviour who exemplified the Great Teacher and Leader in his life from day to day, has been called to his Heavenly reward.

In the removal of Brother Hayes by death, our church has suffered a loss that is and should be a challenge to every member of the church as well as the ministry to strive in every way possible to carry on the work of the church in a more efficient and Christ-like manner; so that all may know that the work of our teacher who has gone beyond the river has not been in vain; thereby encouraging those who are now, and who will labor in the future that "Thy Kingdom may come. Thy Will may be done on earth as it is in Heaven." Be it therefore

Resolved, that we, the Board of Stewards of the Jefferson Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in official session do hereby extend our sincere and heartfelt sympathy to his wife, his son and daughter, and other loved ones in their bereavement, and pray that God will sustain them and guide them as he has always sustained and guided those who loved and trusted him; be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to Mrs. Wm. A. Hayes and daughter, Mrs. Massey, Ralph Hayes, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and one be placed in the official minutes of the Board.

INCREASE IN CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

During the current depression people have turned back to the church, and church membership in the United States has reached by far the largest total in its history, according to the Christian Herald Annual Report of Church Statistics, prepared by Dr. George Linn Kieffer, appearing in the July issue of that magazine.

In 1932, churches and religious bodies showed a total net gain of 929,252 members thirteen years of age or over—one of the largest annual gains ever recorded; and the total membership, thirteen years or more of age, reached the record figure of 50,037,209. The 25 largest Protestant bodies, taken as a separate unit, showed a gain for the year of 921,941.

Growth in church membership in the U. S. has steadily outstripped growth in the country's population, according to the Christian Herald report. From 1900 to 1933, covering approximately a single generation, church membership increased from 27,383,000 to 50,037,209, or 82%; while the population increase in the same period was 65.8%.

The Baptists, with an increase of 347,353 in the year, again lead all denominations. Others showing large gains are the Eastern Catholics, with a gain of 222,237; the Methodists, with a gain of 94,607; and the Lutherans, with a gain of 58,523. All the principal denominations show increases.

In the matter of finances, the showing of the churches is better than that of most secular enterprises. Contributions for all purposes were $19.02 per capita in 1932, compared with $22.62 in 1931; and the per capita contributions for benevolences were $3.12 in 1932, compared with $3.71 in 1931. It is also significant that, since the depression began, one out of every six banks has failed, one out of every 45 hospitals has closed, one out of every 22 business and industrial concerns has become bankrupt; but only one out of every 2,344 churches has closed its doors.

The Christian Herald report confirms the assertion that the country is turning back to the church, and that the church is still the nation's greatest "going concern."

HOW'S YOUR DIGESTION?

A lecturing and gesturing robot with a transparent body showing the processes of digestion going on inside him, gives a talk on the chemistry of food in the Hall of Science at A Century of Progress—the Chicago World's Fair of 1933.

The robot is ten feet tall. His sport shirt is translucent, and through it is seen his alimentary canal, stomach and intestines. You see the food being digested and he explains what is going on. He stops occasionally to point to exhibits of different kinds of food and to pictures of children and animals illustrating disease from wrong diet.

The stomach and intestines shown through the transparent shirt are those of a dog, chosen because the dog's digestive apparatus closely resembles that of a human being and it is possible without cruelty to the animal to make a moving picture of its digestive tract in action.

After an illustrated talk on proteins, vitamins and mineral elements in diet the robot starts his own demonstration:

"Now, ladies and gentlemen, I shall swallow," he says, pointing to his throat. "You see the swallow of food forced down to my stomach by the contraction of the esophagus. Now the front door of my stomach opens

INCREASING MEETINGS AND DIMINISHING HOSPITALITY

BY BISHOP WARREN A. CANDLER, D.D., LL.D.

Hospitality, according to the Scriptures, is a Christian grace, and certainly it is a very beautiful grace. Far back in history Abraham, the father of the faithful, is showing hospitality to strangers, not knowing how great were the persons whom he entertained. Referring to this beautiful act of the patriarch the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews says, "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unaware." (Hebrews 13:2).

St. Paul enjoined hospitality in his letter to the Romans, in which he exhorts the Christians of that city to be "given to hospitality." (Romans 12:13). Writing to Timothy he again commends hospitality, and especially enjoins Bishops that they "be given to hospitality." (Timothy 3:2).

St. Peter exhorts the primitive Christians to "Use hospitality one to another without grudging." (1 Peter 4:9).

But in the face of all these Scriptural teachings, hospitality seems to be diminishing in our country.

In former days hospitality was especially observed and honored in the South, so that "Southern Hospitality" became proverbial for its generosity and unfailing nature.

But in recent years the observance of this beautiful Christian grace has suffered somewhat, especially with reference to entertaining the members of religious bodies. In former times, if a religious assembly was set to meet in any place, the people there opened widely their doors to the coming of the delegates, and gave them most cordial welcome and charming entertainment; but now this custom is falling somewhat into disuse. Members of any Christian assembly must make their meeting brief, or they will have no invitations to meet in this place or that. The members of many Christian assemblies go to hotels at their own expense rather than accept a grudging hospitality.

All this neglect of hospitality is working harm to both those who should be hosts and those who should be guests. The host and the guest bring to each other mutual benefits when they are brought together under religious motives and for religious purposes. But delegates living in hotels create conditions not unlike those of political conventions. They are not affected by family worship day by day, nor softened by Christian courtesies. Untold harm has already come by this decline of Christian hospitality in the land.

But how shall we account for this decrease of hospitality? What has moved the people to pay less attention to the entertainment of religious bodies, and to close their doors in many places?

It is not the poverty of the people; for following the devastating Civil War, when their poverty was far deeper than it is now, the Southern people were glad to open their homes to the coming of delegates to Christian assemblies. Now, in times of plenty, this hospitable spirit seems to be withering away to a degree.

The explanation of the matter is probably found in the multiplication of meetings. All sorts of bodies have been organized, and their representatives must have annual gatherings, until the people have grown weary of these needless assemblies.

The American people seem to be falling under the delusion of defying organizations, multiplying meetings, and relying on the passage of resolutions for the accomplishment of all good.

The newspapers reported some time ago that there has been organized a "National Association of Hay Fever Sufferers." Of course they must have an annual convention, and it is probable that they will issue an official organ, and we may assume that it will be called "The Proboscis Press," or "The Nasal News."

The churches have fallen under this delusion of multiplied meetings quite as much as the men and women of the secular world. There are far too many meetings appointed by the churches, which meetings achieve nothing worth the expenditure put forth for their organization and support. Of course, good men and women who love to hear themselves talk are pleased by appointments for addresses in these multiplied meetings; but their addresses amount to but little. We cannot even say that they "go in one ear and come out the other," but they do not so much as go in at the ears of the majority of their hearers. Certainly they do not instruct the minds of those who listen to them or edify their hearts.

So many societies and bodies are not needed for the prosecution of the work of the churches. Indeed, if any additional society is urgently called for now, it is a society to destroy the majority of organizations that are already existing, that are holding meetings, hearing jejune addresses, and passing futile resolutions.

All this may serve a good end with reference to the railroads, in that these numerous gatherings call for railway tickets from point to point. But if nobler interests were served by fewer meetings it is not unlikely that even the prosperity of the railroads would be more promoted than they now are by multiplied and multiplying assemblies.

The homes of the country are suffering for want of a proper Christian hospitality. Parents and children fail of invaluable benefits for lack of entertaining proper visitors in their homes. Christian hospitality is worth far more than it costs.

Some would tell us that the matter of domestic servants has diminished hospitality in the land; but this cannot be true. Hospitality is not a matter dependent upon the abundance of servants. It has prevailed heretofore in the homes of the poor as well as in the residences of the rich. It is dying in the hearts as it is passing away from the homes.

It would be a strange thing if Christianity enjoined hospitality upon the wealthy and well-to-do only, and denied it to those who had not servants and plenty in their homes.

Shakespeare speaks of "small cheer and great welcome," whereby "a merry feast is made."

The want of hospitality tends to encoarsen manners and narrow the mind. Sir Francis Bacon has said: "If a man be gracious to strangers, it follows that he is a citizen of the world; and his heart is no island cut off from other islands, but a continent that joins them."

A greater than Bacon has revealed to us the principles prevailing in the last judgment, and here are some of his words with respect to that final consumption of all things: "Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: Naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me." (Matthew 25:34-35).

It is not the splendor of entertainment but the warmth of love to men which our Lord applauds and rewards. He says, "Whosoever shall give me drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you he shall in no wise lose his reward." (Matthew 10:42).

He himself was blessed by hospitality, and the home of Mary and Martha and Lazarus in Bethany, where he was so often entertained, is famous in history as no palace of kings and princes has ever been renowned.

It was hospitality that gave our Lord the place for the establishment of the Sacramental Supper, the record of which hospitality is set forth in the Gospel as follows:

"And he sent Peter and John, saying, Go and prepare us the passover, that we may eat. And they said unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare? And he said unto them, Behold, when ye are entered into the city, there shall a man meet

A LETTER FROM BISHOP DOBBS

My Dear Brethren:

On Thursday morning, June 8, 1933, the twenty-four presiding elders of Arkansas and Louisiana met at my invitation at the First Methodist Church in the city of Shreveport for the purpose of considering ways and means for the further advancement of our cause in these two great states.

I send you this letter of greeting, appreciation, and congratulation, with the belief that you will welcome it, and that you will be glad to do me the very great kindness to read it in the hearing of all your people at their hours of public worship.

The response to the appeal for Kingdom Extension has been highly gratifying, and in a great many instances it reveals substantial and sacrificial giving expressive of vital and continued interest in the cause of Christ at home and abroad. In all this we rejoice, thank God and His people, and take renewed courage.

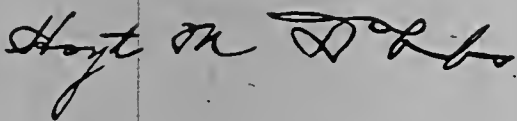

More than one-half of the Conference year is behind us. We must turn to other phases of the Church's program for the remainder of the year. It will require united and prayerful effort for us to sustain other great causes committed to our care. May I not urge upon you the wisdom and the necessity for prompt and decisive steps, if not already taken, in the careful organization of all our forces in the congregation and in the community? We greatly need to keep our revival fires burning. Our young people and all the others must be intelligently enlisted in the plan and work of the Church. Our Conference Claims, which support at the base-line all our practical activities, must be raised to a point beyond that of last year, if we are to continue to advance.

Life is highly significant today. Never before has it meant so much to live. It means even more to be a faithful and effective member of the Church of the living God. During the trying period from which we are beginning to emerge the Church has not faltered. Church membership in these United States increases today more rapidly than our national population. During the past year it is indeed worthy of note that the Churches of our country have had a net gain in membership of almost one million. In all this you and your noble people have had and do now have a great and active part. Truly we have not labored in vain in the Lord.

I ask, therefore, that we go again to our knees with thanksgiving in our hearts, and with prayers upon our lips that God may hear us even as He heard His servants in other years, and that He may mightily touch the heart of this nation and bring this generation to a larger knowledge of His truth and power.

And now may God bless you and all the Churches, and grant unto us power from on high with which to accomplish the purposes of His Kingdom upon the earth.

Faithfully yours,

STANLEY JONES' CATECHISM

(Answers to questions addressed to Dr. Jones)

1. Where are the areas of your problem? What would be the effect of the Laymen's Report on Foreign Missions? Would it affect it and if so, which way?

We feel the laymen have done a very remarkable piece of work. If they had picked over the laymen of America they could not have gotten a higher type of men, and they had one fine representative woman of America. We feel that they brought to it a very high intelligence and fine objectives. We think they are doing a wonderful bit of service and that this movement is one and must be met as one, and no single denomination is capable of facing the movement, but must face it as a unified whole. A good contribution that was made is the insistence that we base this thing not on the degradations, but on the finest things in the East, their culture and religion. There is one fact that many people would think we would be sore about, the statement that the missionaries are not quite up to the mark. We would say, as missionaries, that this is the portion of the report that has given us the least concern. We knew it was quite true. We knew we were at a task far bigger than we could handle. No man can stay in the East with any superiority complexes and if you think you are degrading yourself by coming to the East, then please don't come. We guarantee to send you back, if you do come, in five years, minus your complex. It will take all you have got and then some, and we say to the whole Church, if you have anything better than we have, in Heaven's name, give it to us, for we see the task is too big for us.

There certainly are things in which we have a duty and a right to disagree with the report. We feel when the matter comes to the giving of the positive message of Jesus Christ, the reason is weak. It lacks that distinctiveness which we find as a note running through the pages of the New Testament, and so we take what we can that is good from the Report, but we would also seriously object to the motive that is put out as the motive of missions. We do not think the missionary cause could be sustained on the motives that they give. We think that it takes a deeper and a more definite motive than they give, though I dare say it could be read into the Report, but when you come to the New Testament you don't have to read it in; it is there, standing out and confronting you in the redemption of Christ as a positive thing.

We believe the sum total of missions will be better off, far better to have this inquiry than stagnation. Anything is better than dead calm. We have come at last to the point where we still intelligently discuss it and go to the bottom of it as a core of living reality. It may fail here and there, but running through it all is a glorious success and we feel in the end, if the Christian Church takes hold of it and does not let it degenerate into a controversy (we don't want controversy—we want contributions) it will do us good. I do not believe anybody could expose himself to the missionary enterprise without getting something. I challenge you to open your spirit to the missionary enterprise and then be indifferent to it. I know how I was caught. The people who got me were very wise. They did not say "Won't you be a missionary?" I was studying to be a minister. They said, "Won't you give a talk on missions?" I began to study about it and the more I studied, the more upset I got. When the time came to make my speech, I paced up and down in an adjoining room and prayed, "O God, I can't go to the meeting, can't leave this room without the consciousness that somebody is going." I shut the door and walked in. "According to your faith shall it be done unto you." I said, "I believe somebody is going to the missionary field from this meeting." I found that I had prayed myself into India—I was the one. We therefore feel that in exposing the soul of America in a new, frank way, the movement will be cleansed and increased and we shall have a finer, closer adjustment.

2. What about the liquor question?

India would have prohibition to-morrow if she had self-government. Britain has done many fine things for India. One of the things she did that was wrong was when she gave over to India certain reserve subjects which were transferred from British control, excise and education. Britain said the tax on liquor had to pay for education; so they transferred these two things together. You therefore could not do away with liquor without doing away with education. It was not a fair thing to do. The fact of the matter is if she had her own say about it, she would have prohibition and I believe that when India gets self-government, she will have it. I am sorry she will not have America's example to help her. Up to this time, we have been pulling it out from under her and I think we shall regret it.

3. Bishop Kern and you tell us that the highest objective is character. Why is it that in our country we are so inferior to this splendid purity of the home? We would like them to send the message to us, to attain that high degree which we all recognize is the unit of civilization.

That is a new note. I have not been used to this kind of a note coming out of an American audience. I think it is rather a healthy note, provided it does not go too far. It is a heart note. We are beginning to recognize the realities in the case. We cannot present our civilization in America as Christian; there are groups who have caught the spirit but in the great mass we still have to Christianize our civilization. We have never brought our collective life under the sway of Christ. The people in Southern India of whom I spoke have been the inheritors of Christian culture for two thousand years. I do not want us to get a superiority or an inferiority complex. There was a time when we had a superiority complex very often. We have been hit very hard in this matter today and we are now liable to say, "We are all bad." The fact of the matter is that there is something that is working at the heart of our civilization that is redeeming it and that living something is the power of Christ and if you will give me a cross section of the Christian manhood and womanhood of America and let me confine it to the Christian elements who really and seriously follow Christ, I match it against any character in the ages. There are pagan elements in our civilization, but I would say this to you, we should have neither superiority nor inferiority complex, but realize that Christ is doing something for our civilization and redeeming it and when we go to the East, thank God, we do not make our civilization the message nor preach Americanism. I would not Americanize them if I could. I tell them to keep their own soul. I tell them we have something that is infinitely worthwhile in Christ. We all of us need a fresh baptism of the Spirit, the loving Christ, and I am glad that you are feeling it at home and the question is from a broken heart and I am glad our sister feels it. It is a good thing.

4. What should be the appeal to young people in America, in view of the cuts that have come? What are you going to do with the youth?

It is a tragedy that under the Board I represent, we had two thousand missionaries a few years ago, while today we have only 900, about 1,200 recalled, at the period when we were most deeply needing them. It is not a tragedy for every one of the missionaries to go home. In many cases they should have had to go home. It is a tragedy to cut it that way, though. If America feels that this is the best she can do, then our sister's problem is unsolvable. I don't think the heart of America has spoken the last word on the subject. I do not believe that you have really seen it as a whole and what it means, for when you really see it, you will think in terms far deeper than you have thought, and when it comes to a choice between whether you shall get that latest luxury or help to contribute to that latest lie, you will decide in terms of the life and let the luxury go. I think your Christianity will mean that. I trust that it will. No longer do we want men to go out to the East to become leaders. We have trained up young people to become leaders and that is what Jesus told us not to do. Be ye not called leaders. The attitude is, "I lead and you follow." Jesus said not to take that attitude. "Be ye called servants." The servant renounces and finds his realization through the renunciation. There never was such room for service as in the East, men and women who are not to boss the souls of women but to serve with a deep pain. The door was never so wide open as at the present time and the needs were never greater than now.

5. Is Gandhi Christian?

In many things he is more Christian than many Christians but at the heart Gandhi is a Hindu and not a Christian. He is seeking for God but not through Christ, but through Brahma and Vishnu and Veda. He calls himself Hindu and we must accept what he says. I think the greatest things in his character are the Christian things and the things that have really made him great, are Christian, but there is still a thing that Gandhi has missed. One day I wrote him a letter—one of those letters one writes once in a lifetime. I said, "You know my love for you. I have tried to interpret you and your movement to the West, but I am deeply disappointed. I think you have missed the heart of Christianity. I thought you had got hold of it. I think you have gotten hold of certain principles which have made you great, but you have missed the person. Won't you penetrate to the Person and come back and tell us what you have got? This is not propaganda, but because we need you." He wrote back, "I appreciate the love and kind thought for my welfare, but my difficulty is of long standing. Others have pointed it out to me before now. I cannot grasp the position of the intellect. Saul became Paul not by intellectual effort, but by something touching his heart. I want to find truth, to see God face to face. I have no axe to grind. Do please come to the Ashram when you have time." That is so like the soul of Gandhi. He saw he was missing something which could not be gained by an intelligent effort, but by something touching his heart. He has gained a great deal through Christ. I think he lacks the essential inner revelation of Christ to him as Lord and Saviour and therefore he is a Hindu who needs to be Christianized.

An evidence that a number of people in Poland, many more than have actually united with the church, have been touched by Methodism is the wide circulation of the Methodist monthly paper, "The Polish Pilgrim," which is acclaimed by unbiased readers as the best religious periodical published in Poland.

MY IMPRESSIONS OF THE LEADERSHIP SCHOOL AT MT. SEQUOYAH, ARKANSAS

After anticipating for several years the spending of two weeks at the Leadership School on Mt. Sequoyah, Ark., I at last, in July of 1932, found myself driving up the mountain. On top the grounds had been arranged like a large park with buildings here and there. Outstanding is the large dormitory building given by the women of the missionary auxiliary of Arkansas. It is most comfortable and convenient in every way. The hostess was most cordial, doing every thing possible to make one feel at home. Not far away is the cafeteria with a group of cottages on edges of the grounds. Beautiful winding roads lie between. On the other side of the Women's building are the Epworth building where classes meet and the registration building. Everything seemed waiting and in readiness for the large body of students and others who were constantly coming in.

Strolling around the edges of the grounds, and out to the decline of the mountain sides I looked upon a vast and wonderful vista of mountains and valleys, spread around, the Ozarks and the foothills reaching far to the skyline. The little city of Fayetteville lay directly below. Great trees of many kinds and wild flowers were everywhere while the bright ribbon of the river wound in the distance. It was a scene to make one think of God and the wonder of His creation. It made one feel His power as the "Creator of All" and His wonderful goodness as the "giver of all good gifts." As the sun began to set, people from all over the ground began to gather with one accord on the west side of the mountain, the Fayetteville side, that they might drink in the glorious scene. Mountains, and hills lifted their crests to the sky as far as the eye could see and over all was spread the many bright colors of the spectrum as the sinking sun finally changed all to fire and gold, then sank lower until the myriad tops were in twilight and the glorious colors had faded to a dull bluish hue. Here again was God in all His majesty and glory. In this worshipful atmosphere vesper services were held. Hymns of praise were sung and spiritual talks given by different ones of the leaders each evening as the crowd always gathered there at sun set.

The classes for various groups were held in the morning. One class was on, "Teaching Children," conducted by Miss Milton. Here lovers of children and those who worked with children gathered and discussed their problems and were inspired and helped to better work. There were classes on Bible Study and classes on Missions, conducted by some of the churches leading teachers. There were two classes especially for our Missionary women. One was taught by Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb and the other by Miss Estelle Haskin. Miss Haskin taught the class on, "Leadership of Mission Study Groups." She taught first the "Principles of Teaching," using as a base the text, "How Shall I Learn to Preach Religion?" by Carrier. She applied this to the teaching of the Mission Study book, "Living Issues in China." About forty missionary women took the course. Some of them were officers in the various Conferences. They went home to teach the book at district and zone meetings for Mission Study much as it was taught to them. They were teaching large groups all over their respective Conferences. Thus the work of training leaders was spread so that the books might be taught in a more vital and helpful way in the local auxiliaries. Miss Haskin is scheduled to do this again for the class of 1933. As I am Conference Superintendent of Mission and Bible Study and also am constantly teaching the Mission and Bible Study books, I know how very valuable Miss Haskin's course is to our women, so I am urging all of those who deal with this phase of Woman's work to go, if possible.

There are still other values in the school. Each evening the services at the tabernacle are very helpful and inspirational. There are conferences of many kinds, each group of workers of similar interests getting together for conferences in which they help each other.

There is the Christian Fellowship, the fine friendships formed and for those who do not care for much study there is the peace and rest from every-day cares with enough going on to keep one interested.

MRS. B. M. HOWORTH.

RESOLUTION

Temperance and Social Service Committee, Baton Rouge District Conference, of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Baton Rouge, La., May 31, 1933.

Whereas, The license sale of intoxicants for beverage purposes is morally wrong, we the members of and friends of the Baton Rouge District Conference of the Louisiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, do hereby go on record as refusing the sanction of the sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes in the United States of America or in any of the political subdivisions thereof.

Furthermore, be it resolved, That we here and now desire to express clearly and in the most forceable manner possible our opposition to the return of the old saloon, and

Furthermore, We hereby call upon every citizen to join us in our fight to prevent the ratification of the twenty-first amendment to the Federal Constitution, the sole purpose of which is to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, thus bringing back the old saloon.

Furthermore, We would impress most emphatically upon the minds of our people that if the Eighteenth Amendment should be repealed there is no legislation nor any proposed legislation to prevent the return of the old saloon with all of its evils.

Whereas, The Act Number Forty of the Louisiana Legislature of 1888 provides for teaching in our public schools the evil effects of alcohol on the system, a copy of which is hereby attached.

Be it resolved by the Baton Rouge District Conference, in regular session in Baton Rouge, La., this the thirty-first day of May, 1933, that we respectfully but earnestly request the State Board of Education, and the Superintendent of Public Education in Louisiana, and other school authorities in the parishes and cities of Louisiana, to provide the school teachers with the necessary equipment and require them that in so far as practicable that the provisions of said Act Number Forty of the Louisiana Legislature of 1888 shall be carried out by said teachers, and further, we call upon the parents in Louisiana and all Parent-Teachers Associations to join in our effort to have these important facts brought to the attention of and impressed upon the children who attend the public schools of Louisiana.

We further wish to go on record as endorsing the recent utterances of our College of Bishops relative to the position our great Church has always taken in regard to intoxicating beverages, and

Furthermore, We most heartily endorse the clear and definite stand taken by the Northern and Southern Baptist Conventions, recently convened in Washington, D. C., regarding alcoholic beverages.

Signed: C. C. MILLER, Chairman;
W. S. HOLMES,
J. R. ABELS,
D. F. ANDERS,
G. W. DAWSON, Sec.

IS RELIGION DYING IN THE WORLD?

By James W. Barrett
In Cosmopolitan Magazine, May, 1933

"Before the advent of radio, a common newspaper story was the one about the empty pews and the slim collections. . . .

"That was the general situation when the churches began to experiment with radio. The results were miraculous. The radio not only reached millions who never went to church, but it helped the churches. It changed their policies; pastors found that the first rule of broadcasting is, 'Be natural'; the second, 'Be human'; the third, 'Be kind'; the fourth, 'Be fair'; the fifth, 'Be accurate'; and the sixth and greatest of these, 'Be brief.' . . .

"The National Broadcasting Company received so many requests from churches that it adopted the plan of giving free time to the national agencies of the three great faiths—Protestant, Catholic and Jewish. Eighty-three stations cooperated in the hook-ups and rebroadcast 716,000 services to just about every nook of the country.

"Why all this time to religion? Let Vice-President Elwood answer: 'We don't guess we know that the people of the United States want religion. Otherwise no religious broadcasts.'"

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. George Tucker, General Evangelist, is engaged in a revival at Booneville, Miss.

Two hundred and forty candidates received degrees at Southern Methodist University at the recent annual convocation.

Mrs. Mary H. Golden, 3440 Amherst, Dallas, Texas, with words of commendation, renews her subscription to the Advocate.

Mrs. W. B. Bailey, Winnfield, La., writes in strong and appreciative terms of the work of Rev. and Mrs. Ellis Smith on that good charge.

Mrs. Roy Blalock, West Point, Miss., died on June 20. She was the wife of Mr. Roy Blalock, a faithful steward of our church at that place.

We are glad to know that Mrs. E. C. Driskell, Lambert, Miss., is much improved after a very serious operation at the Methodist Hospital, Memphis.

Rev. B. D. Benson, Toccoola, Miss., in renewing his subscription adds somewhat to the price required and hints that he will send more subscriptions.

Dr. W. W. Drake, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, has been confined to his bed for several days. Here's hoping that he will be out shortly.

We regret to learn that Mrs. J. J. Garner, wife of our pastor at Crawford, Miss., has been under treatment at the Memphis Methodist Hospital. She is much improved at this time.

Results of evangelistic work on the Matsuyama district of the Japan Mission last year were 218 baptisms and 431 probationers. The Rev. I. L. Shaver is district superintendent.

"We are in a revival here this week with Rev. P. M. Caraway doing the preaching and Rev. Frank Dement leading the singing. A fine start has been made. J. M. Thompson, Bay Springs, Miss."

The Amory, Miss., church is planning a Standard Training School for July. This church has made considerable progress in training leaders for the work of a progressive Christian education program.

Rev. W. F. Howell is in his second year at Bellefontaine. This fine young man is working hard in this his second year on trial. This extensive rural territory affords many opportunities for serving the people.

With the opening of the 1933-34 session Millsaps College will resume its radio broadcasts. A number of interesting and informing papers were presented last year. Additional features will be added this session. Listen in on these. Keep up with your school.

On May 31, Dr. C. C. Seecman, president of Southern Methodist University, delivered the annual address to the graduating class of Baylor University at Waco, Texas. At the same time he was honored with the LL.D. degree. Baylor is the great Baptist University of Texas.

We have good reports from the revival being conducted at Winnsboro, La., where Rev. L. W. Cain is pastor. The meeting is being led by Rev. Jerome Cain, son of the pastor. Young Brother Cain is pastor of the Claiborne Avenue Church in Shreveport. He is a senior in Centenary College.

Rev. L. H. Floyd, our pastor at Alzona, Miss., is supplying this year for the first time in a number of years. He joined the North Mississippi Conference in 1917, but later located on account of trouble with his eyes. His brethren are glad to have him able to do some work in the Conference.

A medical missionary from the Congo writes: "There are on the Mission a few natives of such beautiful, Christ-like character that the life of any one of them might justify our entire mission work, and some of them serve as inspiration to the missionaries to live more literally the teachings of the Master."

MILLSAPS BEER

That the liquor trade will fill magazines, newspapers and radio with unprincipled and insidious propaganda for the drinking of alcohol, when, as, and if legalized, is glaringly illustrated by a recent display ad. in the New Orleans papers in which the names of Millsaps College and of Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference Lay Leader, and militant champion of temperance, are used to broadcast the intoxicating virtues of a New Orleans brand of beer. Such an insolent and illegal attempt to use names revered as symbolizing devout leadership of youth in paths of sobriety and integrity will cause disgust and indignation to thousands of the friends and former students of Dr. Sullivan and of Millsaps College. This ad is only an advance warning of the deliberate attempt that will be made and is already being made to "sell" liquor drinking to the students of America. In the school session of 1933-34 beer will be sold in every college community except those protected by state prohibition laws. It will be advertised in the local press, over the radio in students' rooms, and probably in the college papers. If a Mississippi parent does not want his son exposed to these influences, he should keep him in Mississippi which is still "dry," and preferably put him in a Mississippi Church college.

D. M. KEY, President
Millsaps College.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs was the guest speaker on the first day of the Mansfield Assembly. The subject of his address, which deserves a large place in the memory and practice of each delegate, he called "The Growth of the Soul." On that day a number of presiding elders and pastors were the guests of the Assembly.

Miss Mary Carnathan, in writing to renew the subscription of her mother, Mrs. L. A. Carnathan, Durant, Miss., has the following to say concerning the Advocate: "We have had the paper in our home so long it wouldn't seem right to be without it. We can keep up with our faith through its columns." Thank you, Miss Carnathan.

"Closed for the Summer" was the theme of the editorial in the Postal Service of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans. Do not misunderstand. The complete statement was, "Closed for the Summer is not the sign you see on the Rayne Memorial Church." There was word about the summer work of the church. Dr. W. W. Holmes is pastor.

Rev. J. V. Stewart is leading his people at Smithville, Miss., to work for an annex to their church. They have a good sum of money in hand to start with even now, but they want to keep as far out of debt as they are able. Brother Stewart is active in leading his people in every phase of church life. He has made plans for active revival work in every church.

At the third quarterly conference on the Amory circuit, Rev. L. B. Wimberly, pastor, every department of the church work was reported. This fine charge has four live churches in the heart of Monroe County. Recently when a half-district educational institute was held at one of the points each church prepared a worship program. The pastor has plans for good revivals in every church this year.

We call your attention to the statement from Dr. D. M. Key, President of Millsaps College, captioned "Millsaps Beer," which we are carrying in the center of page four of this issue. This is just one of the many unprincipled and false statements the brewers and their wet allies are resorting to in their effort to mislead the youth of our land who lack first-hand information of the evils of the old time saloon.

"We are making quite an improvement on church and parsonage property. Our Sunday school growth has been such as to require additional room. We held a fine revival with Brother O. C. Hull doing the preaching. Everything is moving along nicely. It is a pleasure to serve with people who are willing to work." Thus writes Rev. W. H. Lane, pastor of our Seventh Avenue Church, Meridian, Miss.

Some years ago Rev. J. W. Raper was given the superannuate relation, yet he continues to be very effective with his people on the Paris circuit, North Mississippi Conference, where he has been preaching for several years. The Conference has had few better pastors and certainly not many have been able to deliver the message of truth from the pulpit with more force and effect than this soldier of the cross.

During the first quarter of 1933 at the Woman's Christian Hospital in Korea there was an increase over the previous year of 35.2 per cent in the number of dispensary patients, 27.7 in the number of hospital patients, and 35.2 per cent in the income derived from patients. Dr. E. W. Demaree, superintendent of Woman's Hospital, declares it is a pleasure to speak of increases just at this time when the whole world is talking of decreases.

Dr. C. C. Seecman, in his address, "Human Progress," addressed to the graduating class of Baylor University said, "There is yet far to go and much to be accomplished. The golden rule must be made the basis of human society and the principles of the Sermon on the Mount are to be woven into industry and trade. We have not arrived. The upward way is still open, and voices are calling us to come up higher."

From Marksville, La., come good reports of the work of Rev. A. J. Martin, pastor. Doing his own preaching and leading in the singing, Brother Martin is meeting with a great response. He has six other meetings scheduled on his charge to be held during the summer months. A hundred French people met him at one point last Sunday where work was recently opened. In the Simmesport meeting other churches besides the Methodist were participating.

On the evening of Saturday, June 24, at the Methodist parsonage, Lake Charles, La., Rev. Leon I. McCain and Mrs. Judith Scott were quietly united in marriage, Rev. Elmer C. Gunn officiating. Brother McCain is a superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference and is well known and loved throughout the Conference, having served successfully a number of important appointments before ill health forced him to ask for the Superannuate Relation. Congratulations and best wishes.

Once more we appeal to our readers to check up on the expiration dates appearing on the address label of the Advocate. This is important, as we will be forced to cut off a number of delinquent subscribers on July 1. If your label bears the expiration date of July 1933 or prior thereto, your subscription has expired and should be renewed promptly so as to insure against a break in the regular visits of your Conference organ. $1.50 renews your Church paper for twelve months—surely we cannot afford to be without this important medium of expression. Forward your renewal today—tomorrow you may forget it.

"Rev. Harry S. Allen and his singer came to our church and held a very helpful meeting. It was well attended and the interest was good throughout. We received twenty-nine on profession of faith and nine by certificate. We note an increase in the various activities of the church which causes us to feel that there are many continued values from the services. We have a splendid young people's department and the attendance upon the regular services on the part of the adults and young people has increased one hundred per cent during the last twelve months." This encouraging word comes from Rev. R. M. Bentley, Gordon Avenue, Monroe, La.

The Bonne Idee Church, Mer Rouge Charge.

Louisiana, was re-dedicated on Sunday, May 7. Dr. R. W. Vaughan, Superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, organizer and first pastor of the church, preached the re-dedication sermon, followed by addresses by Rev. Jas. B. Grambling, pastor, and Rev. W. R. Harvell, Bishop. After the service, the congregation assembled under the spreading oaks and enjoyed an old-fashioned "dinner on the ground." The pastor announced that the only expense connected with the building was for materials as all the labor had been contributed, and a free-will offering netted a sum sufficient to care for a large percentage of the cost. Thus marks another great day in the advancement of God's Kingdom.

The Rev. Charles W. Turner, Ph.D., member of the Newark Conference and for the past year pastor of the Cedar Cliff Methodist Episcopal Church of Paterson, N. J., sailed on May 27 to assume the position of assistant secretary of the Brazil agency of the American Bible Society. Dr. Turner will be associated with the Rev. Hugh C. Tucker, D.D., agency secretary for Brazil since 1887 and will have his offices in the new nine-story Bible House recently erected and dedicated by the American Bible Society in Rio de Janeiro. Dr. Turner was born in Buenos Aires and is a son of Methodist missionaries. He is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University and recently received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from Drew University where for four years he was instructor in Spanish language and literature.

One of the "lost arts" of this modern age, or at least the age just past, is that of building churches, school houses and public buildings in which people can hear. What a pleasure it is to sit in a building when the voice of the speaker comes to you clearly. How it does help the speaker. The old rectangular auditorium, low ceiling and few angles, gave the best results. Many of our new churches will have to be corrected by modern acoustical correctives. More than fifty per cent of the people over fifty years of age are hard of hearing. Why punish these faithful people with miserable, rattling reverberating auditoriums? Christian preaching is defined as "communication of Christian truth through personality." The auditoriums in the old churches at Holly Springs, Grenada and Iuka are a joy to the people and the speaker.

you, bearing a pitcher of water; follow him into the house where he entereth in. And ye shall say unto the good man of the house, The Master saith unto thee, Where is the guest chamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples? And he shall show you a large upper room furnished; there make ready. And they went, and found as he had said unto them; and they made ready the passover." (Luke 22:8-13).

That little observed feast in the upper room of the hospitable citizen of Jerusalem is now celebrated in every part of the world. One would wish that the name of the man who furnished the room might be known to us, but his name is written in heaven.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE YOUNG PEOPLE'S ASSEMBLY

The Twelfth Annual Assembly and the Thirty-first Annual Conference of the Mississippi Methodist Young People met at Whitworth College, June 5-9, 1933. Approximately two hundred and fifty persons registered in the different classes and in addition to the Young People a dozen or more officers and teachers were present. This number was somewhat larger this year than last and this was largely due to the co-operation and kindness of the Mississippi Central and Illinois Central Railroads.

The first assembly was held at Whitworth College in 1922, and every assembly with one exception since that time was held at the same place. The use of the campus and buildings was very graciously given to the Young People by Dr. Winfield as they had been by his predecessors Dr. Cooper and Rev. H. G. Hawkins.

The death of Rev. John C. Chambers, Executive Secretary of the Board of Christian Education, on the opening day, came as a distinct loss to the Young People. It cast a spirit of sadness over the entire service. A memorial service was held on Tuesday evening and an appropriate resolution of appreciation of his help and service to the young people and sympathy for his family was passed by standing vote.

The dean of the Assembly, W. D. Hawkins, who has served in that position since 1925, and who before that time served twenty-five years as president of the conference and assembly, carried much of the responsibility of the assembly for this year, ably assisted by the president, Rev. J. Willard Leggett, Jr. Rev. J. B. Cain, Conference Director of Young People's Work, served during the assembly, as acting executive secretary.

One interesting feature of the assembly was the presence of three former presidents—Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Mr. J. H. Weems, who served from 1925 to 1928, and Mr. S. Truman Lewis, from 1928 to 1931.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

Mr. R. L. Hunt, editor of the Epworth Highroad, son of Doctor Rolfe Hunt of Lauderdale and a brother of Rev. B. M. Hunt of McComb. Mr. Hunt taught a class in "Planning the Department Program," and substituted for Brother Chambers in the class of "Life Problems."

The classes were taught as follows: "The Bible," Rev. V. R. Landrum; "Jesus' Teachings," Rev. R. H. Clegg; "Leisure Time," Rev. O. S. Lewis; "Life Problems," R. L. Hunt; "Alcohol," Rev. J. M. Lewis; "World Peace," Rev. L. H. Sells; "Missions," Rev. P. M. Caraway.

In the field of program and organization the classes were taught by the following: "Planning and Promoting the Program," R. L. Hunt; "Organizing the Department," Rev. J. L. Carter; "Worship," Rev. V. G. Clifford; "Evangelism and Church Relations," Rev. J. B. Cain; "Missions and World Friendship," Rev. E. E. McKeithen; "Citizenship and Community Service," Rev. J. L. Neill; "Recreation and Personal Development," Mr. John Campbell.

The Morning Watch was held in the auditorium, and the following subjects were carried out in a beautiful and spiritual way: "What the Coming of God's Kingdom Means to Me," "In Church Work," leader, William Fulgham; "In My Attitude to Others," leader, Mary Norton; "In Private Devotions," leader, Shelby Roberts.

The Vespers were held in the Magic Garden and the subjects and speakers were: "What the Coming of God's Kingdom Means to Us," "In Private Devotions," Mary Humes; "In Good Times," Virginia Hare; "In Daily Affairs," Mary Everett; "In My Attitude to Others," Charles Schultz; "What Can We Do to Bring in the Kingdom?" Ann Lewis.

The afternoons were given over to directed recreation and games. Some confusion was present at first over the change of the district lines, but this was quickly adjusted. Hattiesburg District won the Athletic Cup which has been won by Jackson, Newton and Meridian Districts—no one district having won it more than one time.

The Meridian District, with the largest attendance and the best records of organized activity for the past year, won the Wintona Cup for the fourth successive year.

Stunts were given by each district on Friday afternoon at five o'clock in which representatives of the former Newton District were awarded first place. First place among the six present districts was given to Jackson District.

Rev. D. B. Raulins, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate gave two able platform addresses on Monday and Tuesday nights. On Wednesday night Mr. R. L. Landis, representing the Christian Education forces in the Presbyterian Churches and Mr. J. E. Byrd in charge of Sunday School Work for the Baptists, addressed the Assembly at the Platform Hour. All addresses were helpful and inspirational and the Assembly voiced expressions of appreciation for the presence and addresses of these representatives of our sister denominations in Mississippi. Dr. Raulins' boyhood home was only an hour's drive from Brookhaven and a number of his friends joined the Leaguers in extending him a cordial welcome.

A high point in the Assembly was reached on Thursday night in the Consecration Service led by Mr. Hawkins, who has always conducted this service. Talks were given by Jennie Youngblood, Mary Everett, Floyd Lewis, and Jay Cross, after which in response to the earnest appeal, practically every young person present re-consecrated their lives to the Master's service. Many of them gave glowing testimonies of their faith in Jesus Christ and told of moral and spiritual victories during the past year.

Harvey T. Newell, Jr., of Jackson, was elected president for the coming year, succeeding Willard Leggett, who retired under the age limit, after two years of efficient service. Harry Weems, of Meridian, was elected Vice-President in place of Ann Stephens Lewis, who was transferred to the important position of Life Service Superintendent. Paul Ramsey, of Fannin, was chosen Treasurer in place of Harvey Newell and John C. Chambers, Jr., was elected Secretary, succeeding Ruth Ware, who has served two years in the most effective manner. Louise Green, of Hattiesburg, was elected Publicity Superintendent, taking the place held by Hubertus Evans.

The following district directors were appointed: Brookhaven—Jessie Campbell, Norfield; Hattiesburg—Charles Schultz, Court Street; Jackson—William Fulgham, Galloway Memorial; Meridian—Lilybee Phillips of Fifth Street; Seashore—Josephine Lewis, Moss Point; Vicksburg—Chesley Hagan of Crawford Street.

The list of the assistant directors has not yet been entirely completed.

Miss Grace Gaddis, director of the former Newton district, reported much progress in the Young People's work during the past year in that territory.

The absence of Mrs. W. D. Hawkins, Dean of Women, due to illness, was a matter that we regret.

All in all, the Assembly of 1933 was a great success. LOUISE GREEN,

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CHRISTIAN ADVENTURE CAMP

Pastors and workers with intermediates of the Brookhaven District and surrounding territory will be glad to know that the plans are complete for the Christian Adventure Camp to be held at Topisaw Campground, nine miles east of Summit, July 17-21. This camp is planned for the district, but intermediates from any points in the Conference will be welcome.

The ages are 12-15 inclusive. Please do not send those who are under or above these ages.

The total cost of the camp is $4.00.

The program and instructors are approved by the Young People's Division of the General Board of Christian Education. We have a fine group of teachers, recreation leaders and chaperons to care for a large attendance.

This is the first camp of its type in the Mississippi Conference. Let us make it a success.

Programs will reach each pastor in the district in a few days.

For further information, apply to Miss Jessie Campbell, at Norfield, Miss., or to the writer.

ATTENTION, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE YOUNG PEOPLE

May I, as Conference Director of Young People's Work for the Mississippi Conference, ask the cooperation of every young people's group in the Conference in the matter of publicity? Whatever news items you have in regard to your local work, the meeting of your Unions, or district meetings of any sort, please send it promptly to Miss Green and she will immediately forward it to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. We are especially anxious to have the lists of union officers, the frequency of their meetings, and other facts about them. A number of camps for intermediates will be held this summer and each camp is asked to send a report of its doings. Don't forget the name and address:

Miss Louise Green, 966 Main Street, Hattiesburg, Miss. If for any reason you prefer to send your report direct to the Advocate, then send it there, but by all means send it. Let every group of young people in our Conference adopt this slogan: Tell Louise and see your name in print.

REVIVAL AT BERWICK, LA.

Dear Brother Raulins:

Just a line to report the results of our meetings to date. We closed a meeting at Berwick some two weeks ago, in which we were assisted by our very dear friend Brother C. C. Wier. We have never had any one who rendered better or more helpful service and we have learned to appreciate the sweet spirit of our neighboring pastor very much. Brother Wier says he had "the time of his life," but of course the pleasure we are now having is always the best, however, I do believe he enjoyed meeting with his old friends here, and I think he enjoyed preaching also. This meeting resulted in thirteen accessions to the church.

Last Sunday I closed a meeting out on the missions, in which I did my own preaching. We had fine congregations and received twenty-seven members. Have some ten or twelve others to receive who could not be present when the group were received. This reminds me that we have received only $1.50 on the boat since the last report and lumber is climbing so fast that the income does not keep up.

We are planning a revival at Morgan City as soon as conditions will permit and hope to have a better report to make later.

Sincerely,
SPENCER J. McLEAN, P.C.
Morgan City, La.

FROM GREENWOOD AND BETH-ANY CHARGE, LOUISIANA

Dear Advocate:

We have just closed a revival in Greenwood. It was designed to celebrate the raising of $2,500, thereby cutting our church debt in half. Mrs. Judge Thigpen, of Shreveport, to whom we owed $4,500 generously gave $800 on the debt. Our own Prof. E. S. Moncrief gave $600, then we raised $900 among ourselves, and refinanced the debt making another loan for $2,500, thus getting it within our limits for future handling. I do not know any other place where this could be done except with the good people of Greenwood.

Our meeting began June 4, and it was turned into a Home Coming and revival for young people. The good ladies prepared a supper on Tuesday night June 6, and the young preachers who had gone out from Greenwood, Revs. Alton Lawton and F. A. Matthews, and Mrs. A. S. Lutz (who is a Greenwood lady) and Rev. Albert A. Collins whose parents live here, were the specially invited guests, after which Rev. Alton Lawton preached a wonderful sermon. Brothers Matthews and Collins remained over, each preaching fine sermons following each other the next two nights. Then on Thursday, Revs. George Fox, Jr., and Fred Edgan, of Centenary College, arrived to continue the revival for the young people, and for a week gave us wonderful services. Rev. George Fox, Sr., was with us on the Sunday night of the commencement of the meeting, and Dr. Brownlee of Shreveport was with us on the Monday night preceding the celebration of Tuesday night. Dr. A. S. Lutz preached the closing sermon with great effectiveness.

There were seventeen accessions, and I feel that the Greenwood church has been saved. Dr. Sexton, our presiding elder, gave us valuable aid in all these negotiations looking to the refinancing on the church debt. If all the elders are like Drs. Carley and Sexton, I say: Continue the eldership. We praise God and take courage.

YOU CAN'T BE NEUTRAL

"To be neutral is to be willing to let the liquor business alone. That is exactly what it wants and all that it wants. It is as good for the liquor business as partisan support. In effect, therefore, all who are not against the liquor business are for it. All that it asks of you, personally, is that you be indifferent enough to let it carry on its business as it likes. If you, personally, are willing that it should, you are, personally, its ally. . . The question is, what is your plan (for curbing it)? Straight repeal is no plan. It is all that the drink trade asks. . . If you are against that trade, and not for it, don't play into its hands."—Dr. Thos. N. Carter, Harvard University.

NINE REASONS FOR GOING TO CHURCH

(From Methodist Layman)

1. In this actual world, a churchless community, a community where men have abandoned and scoffed at or ignored their religious needs, is a community on the rapid down grade.
2. Church work and church attendance mean the cultivation of the habit of feeling some responsibility for others.
3. There are enough holidays for most of us. Sundays differ from other holidays in the fact that there are fifty-two of them every year. Therefore on Sundays go to church.
4. Yes, I know all the excuses. I know that one can worship the Creator in a grove of trees, or by a running brook or in a man's own house just as well as in church. But I also know as a matter of cold fact the average man does not thus worship.

5. He may not hear a good sermon at church. He will hear a sermon by a good man who, with his good wife, is engaged all the week in making hard lives a little easier.

6. He will listen to and take part in reading some beautiful passages from the Bible. And if he is not familiar with the Bible, he has suffered a loss.

7. He will take part in singing some good hymns.

8. He will meet and nod or speak to good quiet neighbors. He will come away feeling a little more charitable toward all the world, even toward those excessively foolish young men who regard church-going as a soft performance.

9. I advocate a man's joining in church work for the sake of showing his faith by his work.

CONFERENCE NEWS

Mississippi Conference

A zone meeting was held at Benton, Vicksburg district, Miss., May 4. Mrs. W. G. Smith is leader for this zone and had prepared a most interesting program. There were sixty-nine present and eight auxiliaries represented.

The Vicksburg district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society was held at Louise Methodist Church, June 1. The following auxiliaries were represented: Benton, Eder, Hollybluff, Löluse, Mt. Olivet, Rolling Fork, Silver City and Yazoo City.

Mrs. Will Hegman, district secretary, presided. The meeting was spiritual and full of information for our Woman's Work. A delightful lunch was served in the dining room of the lovely little church, and as the guests gathered around the table the district song was sung and toasts were given to mission work and the advancement of The Kingdom. Mrs. Cottrell brought the closing message.

Tuesday afternoon, May 30, a zone meeting was held at Columbiana church, with Mrs. Everett presiding. The meeting was opened by singing "Oward Christian Soldiers," and Rev. Mr. Henry leading a prayer. The zone chairman read and gave helpful comment on the 9th chapter of Matthew. Mrs. Ernest Holmes sweetly sang "Pass It On." An interesting paper, "What The Missionary Society Means To The Church and Pastor," was read by Mrs. Perkins. Little Miss Veronica Holmes read, "I Will Try and Help, Will You?" "Conference Report On Extension of Work" was well told by Mrs. Dilworth. Mission and Bible study was excellently presented by Mrs. W. A. Moore. Solo, "Remember

Her Double Chin Is Vanishing

Shape Growing Normal

"Why am I taking Kruschen Salts? Because I was getting so broad across the hips I was ashamed of myself. I've been taking Kruschen about 2 months and they certainly are bringing my shape down to a normal condition and what is nice about them (to my way of thinking) is they haven't taken flesh from my cheeks but to my surprise my double chin is vanishing for which anyone should be glad." Mrs. P. E. Gardner, Worcester, Mass. (Jan. 3, 1933).

To lose fat and at the same time gain in physical attractiveness and feel spirited and youthful take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning.

A jar that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle at any drugstore in the world but be sure and get Kruschen Salts the SAFE way to reduce wide hips, prominent front and double chin and again feel the joy of living—money back if dissatisfied after the first jar.

Me," was beautifully rendered by Mrs. Bartlett. Mrs. L. A. Blackston, gave in her usual pleasing manner, the Conference Report on Children's Work. Mrs. J. B. Harman very ably presented an article on "Literature and Publicity." A playlet, "Aunt Elizabeth's Missionary Tea," was effectively given by the Columbiana auxiliary. There was a good attendance from the following auxiliaries: Winona, Kilmichael, Vaiden and Columbiara and each gave a good report.

The next meeting will be with Kilmichael auxiliary.

The women of the Moss Point auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society enjoyed a most unusual meeting on Monday, June 5. They were privileged to have with them Mrs. Cottrell, conference president; Miss Ella Wayne Ormand, conference corresponding secretary and Mrs. Paul Arrington of Magee, a substitute for the conference superintendent of Children's Work. The Eccatawpa and Pascagoula auxiliaries called off their regular meetings to be present with the Moss Point women. A large crowd greeted these conference officers who presented a great deal of Missionary information and threw out a challenge to the women. That evening the Moss Point church enjoyed a moving picture of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, presented by Mrs. Alma Riley, a representative of the home.

Circles two and three of the Brookhaven auxiliary have turned back the years for a few decades by taking up the pleasures and pastimes of their grandmothers. Early Thursday morning, June 8, with well filled lunch baskets, they gathered in the spacious, cheery living room of their leader, Mrs. John W. Boone, intent on "getting out" a quilt they had pieced for our Orphan's Home in Jackson. Quilting was a brand new occupation to most of them, but soon needles and tongues were busily engaged and before night the quilt was finished and ready for use when cold weather comes. It was indeed a day of delightful association and a unanimous decision was reached to continue the good work.

In our auxiliary a spirited contest has been in progress for three months in gathering in Octogan coupons for the benefit of the Orphan's Home, with a great deal of interest shown. The losing circles are to be hostesses at an entertainment for the other circles. When the coupons were counted we were pleased to find that more than five thousand had been secured, and that circles two and three would give the entertainment. All were delighted with the result of the contest and decided to work again for another three months as the needs of Our Home are great.

WHAT WILL YOU GAIN BY REPEAL?

If a merchant, repeal will injure your trade. Money spent for liquor cannot go for shoes, groceries or clothing.

If a manufacturer, it will definitely and progressively lessen the buying power of thousands of the ultimate consumers of your products. This means decreased income and output of your factory and will thereby cut down your profits.

If a dairyman, or ice cream wholesaler, the consumption of milk by many families and in restaurants will be steadily reduced—perhaps 50 per cent, estimated by some,—and it means ruin to some of these dealers. If a workingman, it means lowered efficiency, less wages, and if you drink, the risk of losing your job, less comforts and even fewer necessities for your home and family.

If a farmer, it means a great reduction in fruit, vegetable and dairy outputs, less demand for meat products and no help in the grain market.—National News Bulletin.

In Memoriam

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for, at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, it has come to our attention that Brother John C. Chambers has recently died, and

Whereas, we remember Brother Chambers as a pastor of our church, a citizen of our town, and a worker in general for the Sunday schools of our church all over the State, and love him as a brother and are greatly grieved on account of his death and realize that his passing has taken from the ranks of our church one of its most valued laborers for the promotion of the Kingdom of God on earth.

Therefore be it resolved by the Ellisville Sunday School of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, that as a Sunday school, both collectively and individually, we all feel grieved and are terribly distressed on account of the death of our beloved brother, that we realize the great value of the services, his beautiful Christian life, his happy smiling disposition and his consecration to our Church and especially to the work of the Sunday school. Be it further

Resolved, that we extend to Brother Chambers' mother, widow, children, his brothers and sisters our deep sympathy and condolence in this great hour of their sorrow. Be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to Brother Chambers' mother, and one to his widow and that a copy be sent to the Christian Advocate with a request that it be published in that paper.

MRS. R. L. HALES was born November 3, 1877, and departed this life June 3, 1933. She was born in Bauchitto, Miss., and has lived in Monroe, La., since 1912. While we are citizens of this world we must share its clouds and sunbeams. One of the inevitable visitors of this abode is death. Jesus said it is like a thief, "it comes at an hour when we think not." Our dear friend magnified this exhortation, "Be ye therefore ready." Her heart was a fountain of prayer and she was ever going about doing good. She was clothed in the wedding garment and was ready. In the departure of Mrs. Hales there remains with us not a mere vacancy, but her works continue. Around the choice flowers of the garden the bees gather to partake of the nectar. About this noble Christian characted were encircled many friends and loved ones who learned to share the blessings of a life that thought in terms of others. In the capacity of service she excelled. Her home was a garden of inspiration for many. Her husband and children, "Call her blessed." Like a brave soldier she was in the act of service when the summons came. Her church with tears miss her but Heaven with joy and singing receives her. She paused but a moment as she passed from the cross to the crown.

GUTENBERG BIBLE ON DISPLAY AT A CENTURY OF PROGRESS

An exact replica of the original Gutenberg press, together with original samples of Gutenberg's work including a Gutenberg Bible valued at $15,000 are among interesting displays in the Graphic Arts Section of the General Exhibits Group at A Century of Progress Exposition—the Chicago World's Fair.

Type-casting devices in every detail the same as Gutenberg himself used are in the exhibit. Type-casters in the original Gutenberg plant, existing records show, could turn out from 40 to 50 letters an hour. Modern type-casting machines of the rotary type can turn out 60,000.

How printing has been speeded up is indicated by another comparison in the exhibit. Gutenberg's hand press, operated by two men, could turn out from 3,600 to 3,800 printed pages in a 15-hour day which was a common working period at that time. Modern rotary presses can make 60,000 impressions an hour.

Examination of Gutenberg's type-casting equipment and the type it makes shows that Gutenberg established the measurement for type generally spoken of in the printing trade today as "type-high." His type can be used in any modern press with practically no adjustment whatever.

Gutenberg also used the "nick" in the side of the type, used to this day to help the printer in "sticking" the type right side up without stopping to look at it. Another surprising fact about the master printer of the fifteenth century is that the type case he used has been handed down from Gutenberg practically without change.

MISSIONARY BRIEFLETS

The students of Fraser Institute, Methodist night school at Hiroshima, Japan, are made up of young men from business offices, banks, and stores, as well as students from the city high school, colleges and universities near at hand. In addition to the regular school work, these students get a Christian message every night in the week, and learn Christian hymns. A number of them attend the Bible class conducted on Sunday mornings by Dr. T. W. B. Demares.

Missionaries in the Congo had been praying for a revival and one day the fire fell. A Congo missionary writes: "I know some people think such things are out of date, but somehow or other the Spirit fell upon some of my native preachers and convinced them of sin so that they felt like dead men. One fellow shouted himself hoarse and went so far as to go up and down the village calling people to repentance, and the only way I could control the situation was to hold services right there and there—it was ten o'clock at night—and give the people a chance to pray through. The way things have happened here makes us think that God is still on His throne and has not given up the idea of saving the world."

Last year in the South Brazil Conference many of the national preachers came up to the Conference, with assessments paid in full, but with big deficits in their own salaries, many of them being salaries that did not run over $600 a year. That means real sacrifices, but it also means that the Brazilian Church, no matter what misfortunes may befall it, is here to stay.

The new building for the University department of Kwansei Gakuin, in Japan, is being erected with funds raised entirely in Japan. It will cost 121,500 yen, of which yen 59,000 is already in hand. This is considered a remarkable achievement, considering the fact that the great depression is being keenly felt in Japan.—General Board of Missions.

Keeping the Advocate Saved

Responses to the special March 15-June 15 Campaign, while they have never been such as to cause undue excitement, seem to have slowed up considerably.

The following are lists of new and renewal subscriptions received since our last report and include all received through Monday, June 26.

The statement carried immediately below the list is a complete summary of the campaign, and reveals the fact that 75 per cent of our pastors thus far have failed to communicate the results of the canvass on their charges to our office.

This is no time to pass lightly over the claims of the Conference organ. With all doing their share, the success of the Advocate would be assured.

MORAL SHELL-SHOCK

All wars, whether military or economic, leave behind their casualties, the broken fragments of the bodies and minds of men. When one visits the great government hospitals and meets the men housed there he is made to wonder which is better off, those who died on the fields of battle with bodies torn to shreds by shrapnel and bloated with poison gas, or those remnants of men, physical and mental, who suffer the long years through in these hospitals.

The wreckage of the World War moved us because we are better able to see the tragic ruin of it all written ineradicably in the bodies of men. A soldier who went forth to war, a fine and unblemished specimen of manhood, was being returned from the front, so mangled in form and figure that he was transported in a basket. Arms, legs and much of his face were gone. He begged his comrades to kill him as he did not wish his mother to see him in this dreadful and unrecognizable condition. We can see this, and it moves us deeply. But it takes more imagination and insight to see and be constructively moved by the vast wreckage of the great economic conflict which has reached its soul-searing climax in recent years with the major part of the wealth of the country assembled in a few hands and stark poverty at the other end of the line, and with a line of unemployed men that would reach many miles.

During the World War, after hostilities had been under way for some time, army physicians began to observe peculiar symptoms in those men who had been long under fire in the front line trenches. These war-weary men, having stood under a rain of shells for hours on end without food and sleep, continually subjected to the most grilling strain to body and mind, came back from those lines in a condition so limp and dazed that it easily developed into a loss of mental balance. This condition came to be called "shell-shock." At first it was thought that the condition, quite clearly mental and nervous, was due to the explosion of heavy shells at close range even though the victims were untouched by any flying fragments. The repercussion was sufficient to produce the effects observed.

Later in the war physicians observed two distinct types of the condition and classified them as commotional and emotional cases, the former being those who bore some outward signs of injury, the latter those who, though as visibly affected, showed no outward signs of injury. These latter were the emotional cases and came to be more difficult to handle.

The term "shell-shock" finally came to be applied to all cases of mental-nervous victims in the army. The emotional instability had been caused by the long, tense and unrelieved exposure to the grilling horrors of war. Numbers of ex-soldiers are still pointed out as victims of shell-shock.

In our country today, among the vast number of unemployed and those who have suffered most from the recent economic pressure, there has developed what we may call moral or spiritual shell-shock. This moral and spiritual condition is due to the long and terrific strain of enforced idleness accompanied by the fears that stalk

THINGS TO DO IN CONNECTION WITH THE PRESENT PROHIBITION CRISIS

Intelligent and concerted action on the part of Christian people is needed in connection with the present prohibition crisis. Individuals and groups can help preserve the results of temperance education and reform of the past hundred years and also help to build for the future in the following ways:

1. Take the necessary steps to qualify as a voter. Requirements vary in different states.
2. Attend gatherings where the question is discussed; attend and vote in precinct conventions where delegates to state conventions are to be elected; encourage other friends of prohibition to vote against repeal; vote and assist at the polls when the repeal amendment is submitted.
3. Offer your services to local leaders for addresses or participation in prohibition meetings.
4. Write your state representatives and senators to let them know how you feel on this question.
5. Express appreciation to your state legislators and congressmen who have voted against repeal.
6. Make protest to your local radio station against advertising of beer or of repeal propaganda. Let the National Committee on Education by Radio, 1201 Sixteenth St., N.W., Washington, D. C., know that you wish to co-operate with them in keeping the advertising of beer and other intoxicating drinks off the radio.
7. Let your local newspapers know how you feel.
8. Give preference in commercial dealings to business institutions where beer is not sold.
9. Keep on hand up-to-date literature on the effect of alcohol on individuals and society and distribute when and where it will be most effective.
10. Be informed on the whole question so as to help people who are sincerely puzzled as to the right thing to do.—General Board of Christian Education.

the victim day and night. Some of the marks of the malady are easily observable.

First of all, there is what may be called a generally weakened and debilitated moral condition. Along with lack and scarcity of physical nourishment there has developed a spiritual emaciation. This too is an emotional condition rendering the victim incapable of normal response to the world in which he lives.

The long and continued strain of enforced idleness has gradually eaten away self respect and has made fearful inroads upon initiative. Think of the numbers who, heretofore, not only had some work by which they were able to live and take care of their families and dependents, but were able to lay up some little store for the inevitable "rainy day." Some had bought life insurance and some had contracted for the erection of the little home. All this they have been compelled, bit by bit, to surrender. From one point to another in the economic scale they have been gradually driven back, back to the point of poverty where their backs are against the wall. The job has gone. Then there followed the anxious and feverish effort to find work. Day after day with continually diminishing hope they have tramped the roads and streets. They forgot, for awhile, their own misery in remembrance of that of the family in some far away place. The light company severs the connection at the meter because of unpaid bills, and the gas company follows suit. Finally, this noble fellow who has always been able to care for his own family becomes the object of charity and the light in his soul, along with that in his eyes, goes out. Then there comes the arrangement, after a lot of embarrassing questions, for a few days work each week with the relief organization. Some have refused to accept the classification that the answers to the questions entails.

Some have gone out to beg from door to door. Automatically he places himself in a class or group commonly regarded by the public as hoboes and dead-beats. No longer is he able to hold up his head and make out his case. He is already prejudged.

So the great essential of personality and character, self-respect, breaks down; and his initiative, so necessary to personal progress, disappears. He finds himself in the bread-line and lives from day to day in expectation of the hand-out of the public or support of relatives.

Criminal tendencies develop. A hungry man who wishes to make an honest living, but is refused the opportunity, grows desperate and decides that society owes him a living. He will take it by stealing and violence.

What has been done by the government thus far to relieve this condition lacks a great deal. Many of the jobs provided, it seems, are so trifling in value that the man doing them is injured by them.

One group of men is sent out to plant trees along the highway while men elsewhere may be destroying by fire the lovely trees already growing by the roadside.

Is there no remedy for moral shell-shock? Of all the agencies that may make

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN A GREAT BOARD MEETS

By Rev. William Hamilton Nelson, D.D.,
Editor, Pacific Methodist Advocate, San Francisco

When a fellow lives out on the edge of the Pacific Ocean for over twenty years, and at the jumping off place, San Francisco, he knows just how a missionary feels. A good many years ago, when a minister in Virginia was coming to San Francisco, Bishop E. E. Hoss said to him, "So you are going to San Francisco? Well, you'll need an overcoat for your body in the summertime, and an overcoat for your soul all the year 'round." For out here it's a long way to Tippecanoe and lots of things happen in our Church life that we don't know anything about.

Besides that, it does a Californian lots of good to go East. Sometimes we get a notion out here, especially after attending a "state-picnic" in Los Angeles, that the East is just about depopulated; and so it adds to the gay surprises of life to go back East and find there are lots of folks still there. And how they do things in the East—in spite of the climate! Sometimes I am almost tempted to think, what amounts to a heresy in California, that in California we have the climate, and back East they have the brains.

Though I have been preaching for over thirty years I had never attended a meeting of the General Board of Missions until this May. You can never know what a thrill it was for me to be at the meeting. How those folks do things! I always had a good opinion of this Board, and now I have a better one than ever. Undoubtedly one of the most efficient Boards of our Church, both as to Secretaries and members. When you consider that every Bishop of the Church is a member, and attends every meeting, you can see that the personnel of the Board cannot be surpassed by any similar organization.

Big Jobs Carefully Done

The past year has been a very trying one on every department of Church work, as we all know to our sorrow, but it has been especially hard on the missionary cause. When a Board of the Church operates in China, Japan, Korea, Africa, Cuba, Mexico, Brazil, Belgium, Czechoslovakia and Poland, really representing the whole Church in these fields, and then ramifies all over this country, it has a good deal more to worry about and take care of than a Board which operates in this country alone.

I don't suppose that it would be possible for any corporation to go into its affairs more thoroughly than this Board does. The Secretaries and the Executive Committee discuss in detail every department of the work each month. Before the meeting of the General Board every section had a committee meeting; therefore when Dr. W. G. Cram read his comprehensive and illuminating report at the beginning of the open session on the morning of May 9, the meetings, under the Presidency of Bishop Sam R. Hay, a highly efficient presiding officer, proceeded without delay. There was a whole-hearted unanimity on all major questions brought up, and, as a result, the meetings were highly inspirational, despite the fact that, due to depleted finance, curtailment was very necessary.

During the year 1932 we had an income in the General Section of $742,466, exclusive of bequests, amounting to $126,543, making a decrease of $218,165 for 1931. The income of the Woman's Section was $959,040, a decrease of $144,448 for that period. Since 1929 the income of the General Section has fallen $66,253, and that of the Woman's Section, $151,187. It was necessary in the General Section to reduce the budget by more than a half million dollars, and there was a reduction of $554,250, and in the Woman's Section a decrease of $175,308, the most drastic reductions ever made in one year.

Drastic Cuts Made

Speaking of reductions, the first reductions were made at home, and in the offices of the General Secretaries. Not once, but twice, were the salaries cut, and now a third time. Every effort was made to keep the missionaries on the field, and if it had been possible this would have been done. Of course, there had to be some deep cutting into the appropriations made for foreign and home missions also.

We are facing a serious situation, not only abroad but at home, and it is the irony of fate that there are more chances than ever to enter open doors, and do a tremendous work. Think of our income being cut one-half or more, and our calls and opportunities doubled.

And it isn't all in the fact that we are going through trying times financially. We have had our backs to the wall before, but we had religion and consecration enough to fight our way out. Compared to our fathers in the days following the un-Civil War we are nabobs. They were not only busted, but they were utterly ruined financially; in many cases their homes burned to ashes, and the land, in the hands of the aliens. But they didn't sit down and whine about it. They kept close to God, and that put something into their fiber that nothing else could. Our fathers and mothers were men and women of faith and vision and consecration, and they gave a heritage to our Church which is as precious as fine gold. It gave us something that more favored Churches never knew. May we be just as faithful and religious.

The failure of our people to do their utmost in the past year thrust upon the Board of Missions a very vital problem—that of retrenchment at home and abroad. You can't reduce the missionary budget by a twist of the wrist. Something as far-reaching as that requires time, a knowledge of the field, wise planning, and a detailed information as to where to apply these reductions. Unskilled hands would have completely disrupted the work; but, thanks to the sacrificial spirit of the missionaries involved, and the wise cooperation of Bishops Darlington, Kern, and Tarbox, the Board was able to make the necessary adjustments, and yet save our mission work from ruin.

It is remarkable also that they were able to keep from increasing their debt in the proportion that might have been expected as compared to their depleted income. This comes under the head of white magic to me, for if you cut a man's income in two you naturally expect his debts to increase about fifty per cent when the obligation for that year are bound upon him.

Wise Financial Management

Speaking of wise financial management, take this for instance; some years ago the Board of Missions bought the Doctors Building in Nashville for three-quarters of a million dollars, though it was valued at a million. In the past fiscal year the net earnings of the Doctors' Building was $68,196, a net return of 6.8 per cent on a million dollars. In eight years this property has made a total net profit of $487,977, or more than 50 per cent on the actual investment. It takes financial skill to do a thing like that! The invested funds of the General Section returned 5.1 per cent during the year; those of the Woman's Section 5½ per cent.

We said something of the calls that come in from the home field, but these are as nothing as compared to the loud and insistent calls that come from abroad. No one who knows the situation ever questions the necessity of our Church on the foreign field. There are more doors open today than ever before.

It has been demonstrated beyond peradventure that nothing can take the place of the gospel of Christ in meeting human needs. China, torn by internecine war, and by a foreign invasion and by red Communism, calls louder than ever for the Gospel. In spite of the drunk-with-power militarism of Japan the demand there is greater than ever. In spite of depression and terrible, grinding poverty in Korea, this land is prolific in return for the preaching of the Word. Perhaps no spot in the world is more hospitable to evangelism.

Our Work In Europe

What a tremendous field there is in Europe. Before I went to Europe in 1931 I questioned the mission of our Church there; but after going over our work in parts of Belgium and Czechoslovakia; and visiting a dozen European countries, I am convinced that anybody has a right to preach the Gospel in Europe. Europe has plenty of churches, but not so much Gospel preaching. Thousands of people over there never go to any church, and in many cases there is a deep seated revolt against the dominant Church which has led many men into Atheism and Communism. I am convinced that the only thing that can save the world from these unheavenly twins, that have become one flesh in Russia, is the preaching of the pure Gospel of Jesus Christ. Read the story of John Hus, and the Hussite Wars, and the story of the Moravians who awakened John Wesley spiritually, get an insight into what has happened in Czechoslovakia since 1918, and then ask if we have a right to preach the Gospel to people who loved the principles of Protestantism for 500 years, and were kept from it only by the sword. With meager resources we were able to gather in ten thousand members and adherents in ten years.

What a thrill it was to hear Bishop Darlington speak of Europe. Bishop Kern and returned missionaries speak of the advance and the tremendous opportunities in the Orient, and to hear Frank Onderdonk tell of the sacrifice of our Mexican converts! If the spirit of loyalty and sacrifice in the home church could but equal that of our converts we wouldn't have any trouble giving the Gospel to the whole world.

The Revolutionary War is very significant in tracing the relation between economic insufficiency and defeat. While Washington and his men were sacrificing even unto blood, the Commissary and the quarter-master's Departments were tragically indifferent in making provision for the army which was doing the fighting. This was one reason why the soldiers walked around at Valley Forge without shoes, and left the blood from their feet reddening the whiteness of the blinding snow. Washington's prayer at Valley Forge was no accident. It was about the only thing left for him to do. The naked truth is that if Robert Morris and others who had means had not made a great financial sacrifice to match in a measure the physical sacrifice and the heroism of Washington and his soldiers the cause of human freedom would have been lost on these shores.

The same thing is happening today with the glorious cause of Missions. No Church can be true to its Lord and true to itself that refuses to fight to the last ditch for the high privilege of living up the command of our Lord, and preaching the Gospel to every creature. Our Church has been doing the work of missions for 87 years, and our leaders are just as efficient and just as zealous and just as religious as ever.

Let us, in the spirit of our sainted fathers, exhibit the loyalty and devotion and sacrifice which saved us in every desperate situation through the years, and which has given us such a glorious heritage. We have a work to do as a Church which cannot be done for us.

A LETTER FROM KOREA

To the Members of the North Mississippi Conference

Dear Friends: From our standpoint here on the field it is rather a privilege to write you concerning the work, and I trust that in these brief paragraphs there may be reflected some of our happiness in the work and something of the fundamental value of the work.

We are nearing the end of our first term and are now really getting into the work, because so much time and effort must be devoted to language study when one first comes out. Consequently, we are still new enough to remember first impressions of this land. Before coming to the field we wondered what the people were like and what kind of churches and houses they had. Doubtless these and many like questions are in your minds when you give thought to this distant land.

The other day I ran across an old leaflet, upon the back of which I had noted some reflections that passed through my mind as I sat in a little Korean country church waiting for the quarterly conference to start one year ago. It was in a village far from the railroad and hemmed in by mountains that are everywhere in Korea. The church is a point on a circuit where there are nine other points.

Having boiled some water (we find it best to boil our drinking water almost everywhere we go) and eaten supper from my food box, I had arrived early at the church. Some little boys were scurrying about getting a fire started in a small sheet-iron stove, and the room was full of smoke, but this was being thinned by the air from the open windows and I sat down to wait for the crowd to assemble. You would not consider it a large church, for it is only about eighteen by twenty feet, but it is sufficient for the needs of Koo Koal. In fact, it is the largest building there. I have before me the notes which I jotted down at the time and I would like to share these reflections with you:

"The stove is still smoking a bit but the windows are shut and it is warming up some. The light is rather dim. Two kerosene lamps and these turned down. The little boys, having finished the stove and swept up rather sketchily, are peering over my shoulder as I write. We would think it discourteous but it is not so regarded here.

"In this tiny church room twenty-one little boys and thirteen little girls get all the education that they will probably ever get. Truly it is not much, but until their parents can provide a better school this little room is hallowed by the endeavors of this teacher and these children to gain knowledge.

"The light is so dim that I cannot see what I am writing, but now that the meeting is about to begin they are turning the lamps up some. They want the oil to last through the meeting and it bids fair to be a long one, for we have a worship service beginning a revival and after that the quarterly conference. More little boys are peering over my shoulder.

"Christianity is certainly a light in this village. Here come some little boys and girls to bow before they take seats on the floor, and here are their elders waiting to exchange greetings. 'Do you abide in peace?'"

"Now they are taking their seats on the clean, smooth-worn floor. The shoes make quite a pile just outside the door. Some have found places on the rough straw mat but it is now full. How dignified these old men are with their beards! And just a few years ago those boys, whose hair is cropped so closely, would have been wearing a braid.

The walls of this small church are of mud and outside they are sheathed with small stone, just as houses here have been from time immemorial, but the roof is rather a modern innovation, for it is corrugated galvanized iron. Inside the church are two small blackboards, a small platform perhaps six feet square, and a modest pulpit made of rough boards. I am seated on a wooden box that originally came from America with Standard Oil kerosene, two five-gallon cans in it. That is what most of the seats in this little church school are made of, and there are not many of them. Most of the children have to sit on the floor.

"The church bell is pealing. It is a farm bell from Montgomery Ward's, bought during the Centenary.

"The church is pretty well filled now, but more will crowd in. The first song is being announced and the service is starting.

"The preacher preached for an even hour. I was awfully drowsy. When the children left before the quarterly conference the doors were opened, and then I realized the staleness of the air had caused my drowsiness, so I opened a window. But soon a good Korean brother discovered it and closed it."

I hope the above paragraphs have enabled you to look in on one of the functions of the Church in a distant land. As you know, the Korean Methodist Church is now an autonomous sister Church to the Methodisms in America. This new status is simply a recognition of the growth toward which the missionaries, your fellow-workers in Korea, have been laboring for many years. The work of the missionary here is far from being done. It is more accurate to say that missions here are passing from temporary functions to permanent ones.

There are problems here in plenty, but there are hopes that abound even more. We are most delighted to have a share in this work as friends and associates of the Korean brethren. We should be greatly encouraged by the assurance that you think of us and our work in your prayers.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN. M. NORRIS.

AN INTERESTING EXPERIENCE

By Rev. Rorney Hutchinson, D.D.

Learning some weeks ago that Mr. T. V. Soong, Minister of Finance of China, would be in the city, along with other official representatives of the nations, for conference with our President, and knowing him to be a member of the Southern Methodist Church in China, I wrote inviting him to attend the services of our church and allow us to show him any possible courtesies while he was in the city. Mr. Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, and a steward in our church, meeting him officially, also invited him to attend the church and have luncheon in his home after the morning service. Mr. Soong gladly accepted the invitation and was with us at the morning service on Mother's Day. At the close of the service I invited him forward, introduced him to the congregation and asked him for a word of greeting from the church in China. In a very fine way he spoke briefly but beautifully concerning the influence on his life of his own Christian mother and the Southern Methodist Church in China. Helen Lee, a little Chinese girl whom I had received into the church by baptism on Easter Sunday, and who has grown up in our Sunday school and was sitting on the front seat, at my suggestion came forward and gave her great fellow-countryman the right hand of fellowship on behalf of our congregation. It was an inspiring and touching scene.

It was my pleasure to lunch in the Roper home after the service along with Mr. Soong and Mr. Sze, the Chinese minister, and other friends. Altogether, it was a very inspiring experience and I felt that if all the money we had spent and the work we had done in China had done nothing more than win the Soong family to the Christian faith, both had been well expended. In other words, on behalf of the Southern Methodist Church, I sat behind Mr. Soong and clipped coupons while he testified. Personally, I more than got my money's worth.

I thought this story might be of interest to the whole Church. China is resting today under a great shadow. I believe she will have the prayers and sympathy of our own great nation in the struggle she is making.—Southwestern Christian Advocate.

SOME GREAT INTERCESSORS

By H. H. Smith

There is something about intercessory prayer that lifts it above every other form of prayer. Its utter unselfishness appeals to all. Abraham's intercession for Lot and his family is one of the most impressive incidents in the life of that great patriarch. "Wilt Thou consume the righteous with the wicked? Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right? Wilt Thou not spare the city for fifty righteous men? For forty, for thirty, for twenty? Oh let not the Lord be angry, and I will speak yet but this once: Peradventure ten shall be found there?" And the Lord answered: "I will not destroy it for ten's sake."

From the godly character of Abraham we may be assured that Lot had been warned of his peril when he "pitched his tent toward Sodom." A less generous soul might have assumed an "I-told-you-so" attitude, but no father could have offered a more tender plea for his own children than Abraham offered for Lot.

Abraham believed that the "Lord of all the earth would do right," but that did not excuse him from the duty of interceding for his kinsman. Do we not often fail as intercessors because of an easy-going attitude to the whole subject of prayer? Too often our course is something like this: The Lord is all-wise, all-powerful, all-merciful; why not leave the matter with Him? Such an attitude would make an end of all prayer.

When the children of Israel turned to the worship of the golden calf Moses was greatly distressed. "Ye have sinned a great sin, and now I will go up unto the Lord; peradventure I shall make an atonement for your sin." And Moses returned unto the Lord and said: "Oh, this people have sinned a great sin, and have made them gods of gold. Yet now, if Thou wilt forgive their sin—and, if not, blot me, I pray Thee, out of the book which Thou hast written."

The apostle Paul suffered deep agony of soul when his own countrymen refused to accept Christ as the Son of God, the world's Redeemer. "Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved. . . . I say the truth in Christ, I lie not, my conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost that I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart. For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh."

David Brainard's evangelistic passion made him a mighty intercessor in behalf of the American Indians. "His love for souls amounted to a passion which nothing could cool or conquer," says his biographer. "No miser ever clung to his treasure as he grasped this idea and made it an ever-present and supreme object with him. No matter where he went, or what were his surroundings, the ruling bent of his soul was manifest. In health or in sickness, in his wigwam among the Indians, on his numerous and solitary journeys, his supreme desire was to convert souls. He prayed so fervently for the conversion of the Indians that sometimes his clothing was saturated with perspiration." A paragraph from his diary reads: "Spent two hours in secret duties, and was able to agonize for immortal souls; though it was early in the morning and the sun scarcely shone, yet my body was quite wet with sweat."

All great evangelists have been great intercessors for the lost. Hear William Booth, as he faced the submerged of London's slums: "I stand pledged before heaven and earth and hell to go through with what is right and best for my fellows and my God, and by God's grace I will be faithful to my vows."

Recall what he saw in the slums of the great metropolis, and the opposing forces of evil, and applaud him for his fighting spirit: "While women weep, as they do now, I'll fight; while little children hunger, as they do now, I'll fight; while men go to prison, in and out, in and out, as they do now, I'll fight."

His biographer says: "He groaned over the degradation of men, he agonized over the debasement of women, he wept over the sufferings of children. . . . Sights of wickedness which other people would see and regret, seem to stab him to the heart. Other people saw the drinking; he saw the poverty, the misery, the disease, and the godlessness behind it. The sins of London didn't shock him; they seemed to tear at his heart with claws that drew blood."

And when old age came upon him he did not desist from his labors, but visited three or four countries of Europe one year; when he had passed his four score years. At last he became blind from cataract, and, turning to his son, he said: "Bramwell, I have done what I could for God and for the people with my eyes. Now I shall do what I can for the people without my eyes." And so he did. During the extreme feebleness of his last days, his daughter left him alone for a few minutes and came back to find him restlessly moving about the room. "Now, father," she said, "you promised me that you would sit still until I came back." "Oh, I know," he said, "but how can I? I'm thinking of the suffering women and children, and how can I sit still?"

Is intercessory prayer becoming a lost art with the Church? It is more than a privilege; it is a duty. Samuel said: "God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you." And Paul considered intercession of prime importance: "I exhort, therefore, first of all, that supplications, prayers, intercessions, be made for all men."

MISSION STAFF REDUCED

The Board of Missions at its recent session appointed a committee to study the administrative work of the Board with a view to making such secretarial adjustments as might be possible. This committee, which had power to act for the Board, met in Nashville on June 7 and took action as follows:

1. The resignation of Dr. O. E. Goddard, Foreign Secretary, was accepted, effective July 1. Dr. Goddard had submitted his resignation on May 23.
2. The services of Dr. C. G. Hounshell, Field Secretary, and Rev. G. E. Holley, Superintendent of Goodwill Industries, were discontinued, effective at the next meeting of their Annual Conferences.
3. The services of Mrs. Hume R. Steele, Candidate Secretary, were discontinued, effective October 1.
4. Dr. J. W. Perry, Home Secretary, had signified his willingness to co-operate, and the committee suggested that he return to his Conference for an appointment next fall.
5. A new schedule of salaries was put into effect which reduces administrative expenditures several thousand dollars per year. This is the third salary reduction made by the Board of Missions.
6. Previous to the meeting of the committee, but a part of the same policy of readjustment, combinations of duties had been effected by which the services of three stenographic workers had been dispensed with and one placed on a half-time basis.

During the months of July, August and September salaries in the General Section will be paid only on the basis of thirty per cent of the amount due; more will be paid only if the income makes it possible. The Board receives very little money during the months mentioned. This action is a deferment of payment and not a cancellation.—Nashville Advocate.

REV. J. E. CUNNINGHAM

By Rev. W. R. Lott

Gently his footstep fell as he walked life's way. His heart was ever being touched by the situations of his people whom he loved with all his soul. No man among us shed more kindness and genuine good will than this noble minister of the gospel. A man among men; a man for the heart of a child; a man who saw the joy of life and love in the face of youth. Gentle in disposition yet firm in principle and faith; handsome as a prince, with a countenance which gave forth the evidence of character wrought within by divine hand. Just for him to walk in a room there came a light. The sick who heard his footsteps looked up with joyful anticipation; the discouraged felt the warmth of his healing encouragement. He could take a flower and place it in the hand of young mother and he could also declare the stern rules of righteousness as the gospel truth. Hundreds of young preachers have rested in his counsel and thousands of business men have taken a new hold on life when they knew him. He loved neither money nor fame. His happiness did not rest in either possession of position but in his love for people and his church and his God. He was a man of broad vision. No narrow close-fitting opinions suited his mental outlook. He could see a little boy struggling to make his way in some out of the way country church and could also see the larger organizational issues of his church. He hardly ever lost a friend. Who could forget him? He did not have to step down to any man, neither did his character demand that he step up to any. He was always on a high plane and looked the world straight in the face and called men and women to their best. His like shall not pass our way perhaps again in our generation. Let's bow our heads and thank God for His nobleman.

FROM ONE OF THE LEAST OF THESE

A few weeks ago I told of how God made it possible for me to give twenty dollars to the Kingdom Extension offering, in answer to prayer. And how it must be given in spite of the needs of loved ones, if at all. And now I just must follow it up, even as God concluded that experience for me. In due time, for God's providences are always prompt, all those needs of my loved ones were provided in unexpected ways. What seemed to be a "shower" of material blessings proved to be a "downpour" in the end. And again Jesus says to me in a most concrete way, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you."

To me, that promise carries double assurance. Jesus did not say that I must come to infallible conclusions, in the beginning, as I attempt to conform my life to His teachings; but was most generous in conditioning that promise when He said, "Seek ye."

I hope I do not give the impression that I think that the whole of "seeking the Kingdom" is in the giving of money. For how many there are of us who can testify that the giving of money only seems shallow in comparison to the deep desire in our souls to give to the whole world the wonderful Savior we know. But today when financial means are such a vital necessity to that end, it is most encouraging to know that same Savior who changed water to wine for those of long ago still works even more wonderful miracles for us in changing "impossibilities" into "opportunities."

HOSPITALITY

By Hon. D. W. Heidelberg

Hospitality is a duty expressly commanded by the Bible. It is especially enjoined by Paul, in Chapter 12, Verse 13, where one of the characteristics of a Christian is stated to be "given to hospitality." In 1 Peter, 4th chapter and 9th verse, we are commanded to "use hospitality one to another without grudging." A notable example of hospitality is furnished us by President Roosevelt. He not only practices but enjoys it, and to it is to be ascribed much of his influence over men. A layman should invite his pastor to his home. Without he does so he is prevented from exerting an influence over his children which he would otherwise have.

Neither is the duty of hospitality limited to the layman. It is equally enjoined on the clergyman. A pastor who never invites his laymen to take a meal with him, especially his official board, makes a great mistake, and cripples his influence for good over them.

The writer had for his pastor many years ago a gentleman who later became a presiding elder and one of the most noted members of the Mississippi Conference. He was my pastor one year only. More than once he entertained his board of stewards at his table. It was a delightful occasion both to them and to him. During his short pastorate more members were added to the church than during the ministry of any other pastor before or since. From our church he went to larger and better fields of influence, as he deserved to.

PARSONAGE PRODUCTS

At the request of the editor a number of names of college graduates from Methodist parsonages have recently come in. We wish you to meet them.

We carried in a late issue a statement concerning Miss Audrey Bess Hoffpauir, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Louis Hoffpauir, West Monroe, La., who was graduated this June from Louisiana Tech with great honor, being awarded a lovely gold wrist watch as the "best student citizen." Miss Hoffpauir enjoyed other distinctions during her college days. Her father speaks feelingly his pride, not only in this daughter, but also of Miss Doris, another daughter, who received her college degree with her sister.

Rev. Curtis Nabors, Holcomb, Miss., with a smile that stretches from ear to ear, tells of how his daughter, Miss Lucile, has just graduated from Grenada College; and his fine son, Luther, has received his degree from Lambuth College; Jackson, Tenn.

Then Rev. J. W. Ward, pastor at Greenville, Miss., comes marching forward, hinting that he has not lived in vain. His daughter, Miss Catherine, majoring in mathematics, has just received her M. A. from Columbia University. While a student there she was a member of the International Group.

The editor had received notice that a young lady had been graduated from Teacher's College, Florence, Ala. Her home is in Mansfield, La. While there recently he went down to the home of Mrs. P. O. Lowery, widow of the late Rev. P. O. Lowery, member of the Louisiana Conference. "Yes," said Sister Lowery, "Louise was graduated in June."

DISTRICT-WIDE LAYMEN'S MEET

There will be at Booneville, Miss., on July 9, a District-wide Laymen's Meeting for the Corinth district. Brother G. L. Morelock, General Secretary of the Board of Lay Activities from Nashville, Tenn., will speak at 11 o'clock. And Brother Morelock will conduct an institute in the afternoon. I wish to urge that as many laymen and laywomen as possible attend this meeting. Pastors, too, are invited. I feel sure it will be a program that is worth our while.

Sincerely,

E. D. MERACLE, Dist. Lay Leader,
Corinth Dist., North Miss. Conf.

MOUNT SEQUOYAH DATES

Our Boys' Camp will open July 1 for all boys from 10 to 17, both Scouts and non-scouts, and will close July 12.

Young People's Conference, July 13-25. It looks now as if the attendance at this conference will be very large.

Board meeting, July 26, and we hope all trustees will be present.

The great Standard Training School, with the Mission Board co-operating, will be July 27 to August 10.

Temperance and Social Service Conference, with some very fine speakers on the program, will be August 10-13.

The Pastors' Retreat will be August 16-23. We are expecting the largest attendance at this conference of any we will have during the summer. Many of the outstanding leaders of our Church will be here and take part during this conference.

The Evangelistic Conference, August 23-27. This conference will be a great spiritual uplift to those who attend. Good preaching and singing.

Any leader bringing a group of 20 to any of our conferences will receive free entertainment while here.

SAM YANCEY, Supt.

CONCERNING THE MISSION CHARGES OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

We desire to say to all the pastors in the Conference that your Conference Board of Missions is very anxious to pay the mission pastors the rest of their appropriations not later than the middle of September. At Conference last November we planned to borrow money to do this on the same order as we borrowed to pay the first half of the year. At present it looks to your Board as if this will be hard to do. So it all heads up to this conclusion, that if we preachers, not serving mission charges will push the matter of holding at least one revival and give the proceeds to our Mission Board, then we will likely be able to borrow enough more to finish paying the appropriations.

The Mission pastors have been as patient as any set of men you ever saw. But it is needless to say that all of them are in dire need of the little they will receive even if the rest of their appropriation is paid.

I take this means of asking you boys on the Mission charges just to be patient still until we hear from the August revivals. After that you will be hearing from us again.

Fraternally yours,

J. D. WROTEN.

CHRISTIAN ADVENTURE AND CHRISTIAN CULTURE CAMPS, VANCE CLEAVE AND ADJACENT CHARGES

These camps meet July 10-15 at New Prospect Campground.

I am glad the Brookhaven district and Rev. John L. Carter, as dean, is to have a Christian Adventure Camp, but I am sorry that Brother J. L. Carter made the statement, "This is the first camp of its type in the Mississippi Conference." If he will read the report of Rev. J. C. Chambers in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of about May 27th, he will, I am sure, correct the above statement.

The camps are open to anyone in the age groups of 12-15, 16-23 who will bring the articles of food, as has been listed and sent out, or $2.50.

The programs have been sent to as many as wished them. Eight courses are offered under as fine a corps of teachers as could be gotten together in any locality. Fine recreation directors, officers and chaperons are eagerly waiting to fill the camps with happy character building. The General Board of Christian Education has approved both camps.

The Campground has been put in readiness for a great success.

E. D. SIMPSON, Dean.

NEW ORLEANS PREACHERS EXCHANGE PULPITS

The second and fourth Sunday evenings of August will be the occasions of an interesting experiment. On those evenings the several pastors will occupy neighbor pulpits. In this way opportunity is provided for a very interesting contact with the other congregations. So far no complaints from the congregations have been heard.

The following schedule is to be observed:

Second Sunday: Algiers—Rev. A. T. Law, pastor of Felicity and Chaplain of the Charity Hospital; Carrollton Avenue—R. L. Armstrong, pastor of Second Church; Epworth—F. L. Wells, pastor of First Church; Felicity—J. A. Alford, pastor of St. Mark's; First Church—Martin Hebert, pastor of Epworth; Gentilly—B. F. Rogers, pastor of Carrollton Avenue; Louisiana Avenue—V. D. Morris, pastor of Chalmette-Gentilly; McDonoghville—D. B. Raulins, pastor of Algiers; Parker Memorial—W. W. Holmes, pastor of Rayne Memorial; Rayne Memorial—M. S. Monk, pastor of Parker Memorial; Second Church—J. L. Williams, pastor of Louisiana Avenue; St. Mark's—D. W. Poole, pastor of McDonoghville.

Fourth Sunday: Algiers, J. A. Alford; Carrollton Avenue, D. B. Raulins; Epworth, R. L. Armstrong; Felicity, D. W. Poole; First Church, M. S. Monk; Gentilly, A. T. Law; Louisiana Avenue, F. L. Wells; McDonoghville, W. W. Holmes; Parker Memorial, V. D. Morris; Rayne Memorial, B. F. Rogers; Second Church, Martin Hebert; St. Mark's, J. L. Williams.

Let New Orleans pastors clip this schedule for reference.

some contribution to this end the church stands first. It is its supreme business to rehabilitate the moral wreckage of the community. Let it, for awhile, postpone the building of "mansions in the skies" and try to build a more Christian social order. It was this for which Christ taught us to pray and work: Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

The Bulletin of First Church, Shawnee, Okla., W. L. Broome, pastor, indicates a wide-awake and busy church.

Rev. L. B. Wimberly, pastor, Amory, Miss., circuit, will open his meeting at Paine Memorial church the third Sunday in August. Rev. W. R. Lott is engaged to do the preaching.

We are told that Rev. S. J. McLean, pastor at Morgan City, La., is to undergo an operation for appendicitis. Hadn't we better drop him a rope of prayer to help pull him back to health and his work?

A. W. Wehner, a good layman of First Church, Lake Charles, La., takes time out to renew his subscription and speak a good word for the Advocate and its editor. All this is deeply appreciated.

Rev. W. J. Wood, pastor Booneville Circuit, Miss., reports progress on his work and speaks highly of his good people. Plans for revivals are going forward and prayer for gracious results are being made.

Mrs. Bessie H. Dantzler, writing from Biloxi, Miss., says that she cannot recall when the Advocate was not a regular visitor at her home, both the old home of her mother and her own. She writes a good word to the paper.

Mrs. H. T. Carley, wife of the presiding elder of the Monroe District, is home from a very serious operation, sitting up some each day, and steadily improving. Have you sent a letter, card or flower? They help like medicine. Better see about it.

The Wesley Fellowship group of Gentilly church, New Orleans, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. V. D. Morris, recently conducted an interesting and well attended service. Miss Elizabeth Evans, daughter of Rev. W. G. Evans, was the leader.

Rev. Geo. H. Jones, pastor at Montrose, Miss., tells of a very successful Vacation Bible School which was conducted in co-operation with the Presbyterian and Baptist churches of the community. This was the fifth annual school and the enrollment was more than fifty.

"Concerning Trousers" is the topic of an announcement on the Christian Education page of this number. It may be of interest to delegates to the recent Young People's Assembly at Mansfield, La. Some charity and consideration is requested by the editor inasmuch as he is particularly interested in the person involved.

The quarterly conference of the Prairie and Strong's charge, North Mississippi Conference, has directed the trustees to sell the parsonage located at Strong's and invest the money in a new home to be built at Prairie. A lot adjacent to the church has been donated at Prairie. The trustees have in mind to build a nice modern home at this new location.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

with him in a meeting at Bethany. Good congregations attended. There were two accessions. Brother Johns asks who wrote the poem, "The Bridge Builder." Answer: Will Allen Dromgoole. This was a favorite of the late Rev. R. W. Tucker of the Louisiana Conference.

A fine Cokesbury class in worship was taught at Thompson Memorial church, Aberdeen charge afternoon appointment, in May. Seventeen took credit. This rural church has a very active membership mostly made up of young people. They have an afternoon Sunday school, Sunday night Epworth League of forty and then a mid-week meeting on Tuesday night of each week.

Do you know "Uncle Van?" Well, a great many young people, many of whom have passed that period, do know him, and are bigger, braver and better because of him. He is Van Carter, lay evangelist. Just now his great retreats at Camp Lassa are getting under way. A good letter brings happy and heartening words from him and his work. We hang out our flag for him as he comes by.

These camps for young people are proving exceptionally valuable in training for Christian life and service. You of the Brookhaven District should give your special attention to the Christian Adventure Camp being held at the Topisaw Campground, July 17-21. Rev. J. L. Carter, pastor at Crystal Springs, is the dean. You will find fuller announcement in the June 29 number of the Advocate.

Among the high points at Centenary College Commencement few, if any, were more impressive than the conferring of the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity upon his old Bible teacher of Southwestern University, Rev. H. L. Gray, by the retiring president, Dr. W. Angie Smith. In conferring the degree Dr. Smith said, "No other person has taught me so much about the Bible except my mother."

Wesley's Chapel church, Fulton charge, Rev. W. L. Atkins, pastor, is a new church recently built and dedicated. Rev. T. H. Dorsey, presiding elder, preached the sermon. Much credit for this church is due to Rev. W. R. Hammontree, rural Sunday school worker for Monroe and Itawamba Counties. He not only led the effort to start preaching services in that un-churched area but directed the actual labor during the erection of the building.

The parsonage makes good again. As we sat listening to the names of those young people who received their degrees at Centenary College, June 7, we heard the President call Miss Annie Ruth Brown and follow the announcement of the degree with the words, "Summa cum laude." Of course a lot of us don't speak Latin, but those who know the language say that it means, "with extra high honors." Miss Brown is the daughter of Rev. R. M. Brown, Minden, La. Brother Brown is presiding elder of the Minden district.

A fine program will be given at the Okolona preachers' meeting, July 6. Rev. J. D. Simpson will preach the sermon. Rev. T. H. Dorsey will lead the discussion as to the preachers' attitude to modern-day criticism of the inspiration of the Scriptures. Revs. W. P. Buhrman and H. N. McKibben are to discuss the same view of Christian healing; W. R. Lott is to talk on "How to Visit the Sick." M. E. Scott will speak on our attitude toward our hospitals, and Revs. J. D. Wroten and W. C. Newman will discuss methods of holding children and young people for the preaching services.

An interesting method for raising money was inaugurated by a committee at the Aberdeen church, North Mississippi Conference, to raise some money to pay on a debt on the pipe organ. A miniature pipe organ was made to receive the offering. The church roll was divided into groups of five members, each group given thirty days to raise ten dollars. During the three weeks on Sunday the pastor gave lectures on the history, development and uses of the particular organ in that church (a three manual Geneva organ) to the children and Young People's divisions at Sunday school lesson period. At the eleven o'clock service, June 25, the leaders of each group came down early and put into the little organ on the table seven hundred dollars.

"Fellowship Week." That sounds good. And it was better even than the sound. Under the leadership of Rev. R. T. Ware, pastor, Park Avenue Church, Shreveport, conducted a week under the name given above. The following preachers filled the pulpit during the evenings of the week: Dr. Geo. S. Seaton, presiding elder of the Shreveport District; Dr. R. E. Smith, dean emeritus of Centenary College, head of the Department of Biblical Literature, and instructor of the great Foursquare Bible Class; Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs; Dr. Jasper K. Smith, pastor of First Presbyterian Church and senior pastor of the city; Dr. W. Angie Smith, pastor of First Church. Brother Ware reports sermons of a high order and results most gratifying. Why not let other pastors try this "Church Open House" plan?

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The writer has not forsaken the Advocate for the last few weeks but has been so very busy that we have not had time for the writing.

The first week in June we were busy holding the Conference training school at Grenada College. This was in many ways one of the best schools ever held here. The enrollment was most satisfactory, considering the conditions. We had 90 enrolled in the classes. There were more people boarding in the dormitories that last year. Every class was well attended and every instructor did the work in the finest sort of a way. Dr. O. E. Goddard, in his class in evangelism and through his addresses at the evening hour, lifted the school to the mountain top.

The week following the training school the annual Young People's Assembly was held at the college. No finer group of young people between the age of 16 and 23 could have been found. The entire program went off with high effectiveness. The officers elected for this organization for another year are as follows: President—Sanders Smith, Greenwood; Vice-president—Geo. W. Winter, Houka; Secretary—Miss Martha Wise, Eupora; Treasurer—Miss Edith Lynn Russels, Sardis; Publicity Agent—Hugh Cunningham, Greenwood. The attendance was much larger than last year.

The Pastors' School at the Seashore Campground for the last two weeks was small in numbers but most helpful to those who attended. The class work was of the highest order and the platform addresses by Drs. J. W. Perry, A. W. Martin and M. L. Smith were spiritual feasts. It is the determination of those in charge to continue this school another year.

Recently a group of people who were not near any church gathered in the open and organized a Sunday school near Calhoun City. Mrs. Mae Berryhill has taken the lead in this move. They are securing Methodist literature and will meet throughout the summer. This should be done in many communities of our Conference.

A Standard Training School will be held at Amory, July 16 to 21. The following courses will be offered: "The Teachings of Jesus," R. G. Lord, instructor; "Teaching Children," Miss Maunie D. Ledbetter, instructor; "Building the Program for Seniors and Young People," Miss Virginia Thomas, instructor. Amory has had many schools and there is a fine interest in the training work over there. We are expecting a large school.

Daily Vacation Schools are being held all over the Conference. If you have had such a school and have not made a report of it, write me and I will send you a report blank for the school.

The list of every Sunday school that has observed Sunday School Day will be published next week. If you have not sent in your offering yet, do so at once.

CONCERNING TROUSERS

Considerable excitement was created at the recent Young People's Assembly at Mansfield when one of the faculty members, Raulins by name, announced that he had lost all both pairs of trousers from the building in which he was housed along with several members of the younger generation of Methodist youth. Search was made in all quarters, the quest being extended to the city, but without successful result.

Sympathy was greatly augmented. A cloud seemed to lower over the assembly notwithstanding the predominance of the youth element. Dr. Frank L. Wells, of First Church, New Orleans, proposed that application be made to Mr. Gandhi for membership in his organization that the loss might be sustained with greater grace. This was objected to by Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor Trinity Church, Ruston, who made some impertinent remarks concerning the candidate.

Sadly this faculty member returned to New Orleans, using every spare moment in the preparation of some statement to his wife when finally he should again pass within the portals of her home. When the aforementioned statement was made, the poor man's wife replied with some condescending disdain, "The trousers are here, and have not been to any Assembly."

In view of the extreme emotional strain and the "complex" that may result therefrom, the aforesaid instructor and Thersites of the famous days of the youth battle that was recently waged along the sounding shores of Mansfield, requests that nothing be said of the incident—to him. It is assumed that the application to Mr. Gandhi will be cancelled.

REVIVAL AT TUPELO, MISS.

Dear Editor: We have just closed a three weeks' meeting here. Rev. F. M. Neal, from Amarillo, Texas, did the preaching, and Mr. H. W. Goodpaster, Archer City, Texas, led our singing. Brother Neal is a very direct, plain and powerful preacher. He is very clear in his declarations of the Biblical teachings concerning sin and salvation. Our church was also well pleased with the work of Brother Goodpaster.

We will likely not count many new members, for the messages were directed to the present membership particularly, and there were many signs of a reconsecration. The best service was that on Thursday night of the last week, when more than 70 young people were at the altar. In the last week, countin all in all the services, there were more than 300 responding to calls to the altar. The first prayer meeting after the revival was attended by fully twice the usual number. Encouraged by the signs of deepening interest the pastor is busy with a good deal of follow-up work.

THE FELLOWSHIP SPIRIT AT LOUISE, MISS.

The Spiritual life of the Church and Community at Louise has been greatly quickened within the last eight months. Jesus Christ is the magnetic power bringing about this change. Brotherly love, patience, and forbearance are virtues that are being practiced by a large percentage of the Christian people of our community; hard feelings, old scores, factions, and the like, are being settled in the name of Jesus Christ. More praying people in this little church of less than a hundred members, than any church I have served. They are easily lead when the Spirit of God is leading. John the Baptist said to those who came to arouse jealousy in his heart against Jesus, "He must increase, but I must decrease."—That little word "BUT" has a tremendous significance there. John must fade completely out of the picture, that Christ should be ALL and in ALL. It is absolutely TRUE today. Ere Christ can become the ruling power of a church, selfishness in all the leadership of that Church must die out completely. The Officers and Leaders of the Church must be willing to come under the Power and Guidance of the Holy Spirit in all things and there must be a perfect understanding, harmony, peace, and cooperation between the Leadership of that Church and the pastor whom God has commissioned to have the oversight over them. If anyone desires to know more of this matter, we will take pleasure in referring you to one who will help.

CARRUTH-TURNER

Thirty Seventh Annual Reunion

Beloved Kindred and Friends:

In transition periods through which the world is now passing involving the jeopardy of all the good, wisdom suggests centralizing effort toward salvaging, at least, the best. Cleave to that which is good.

In western pioneer days when a family of our larger connection was escaping from the home menaced by the sudden rise in the nearby stream, gathering effects of greatest necessity, some member seized a prized volume used in family devotions. Subsequent discovery disclosed that the book contained a manuscript copy of family record written by John Carruth II, that is now invaluable.

The spirit prompting such a choice and its incidental unsuspecting value is strikingly significant and pertinent to the generation under going the pressure of present day hectic conditions. In tenaciously adhering to essential spiritual values, highest material good is found.

None are more humbly conscious of personal unworthiness than ourselves; but we do recognize that the standard of noble living exemplified by our revered ancestry impresses a constant incentive for more earnest effort to measure up.

Nothing contributes more effectually toward maintaining inherited ideals than the happy contacts afforded by our accustomed annual gatherings. Evidently the thoughtful originators foresaw this and respect for their wishes should urge the heartiest cooperation to perpetuate the movement.

The ever-recurrent passing of dear ones to join in that glorified reunion adds tenderness to these occasions. They are not lost to us. The cherished memory of their cheerful associations accentuate the wish to join when our places, too, are vacant.

On Friday, July 7, let us again assemble at the delightful shady nook, Dixie Springs, two miles north of Summit, on Highway No. 51, and make each other happy. To lessen the unfair imposition on the good women let plair, wholesome food be majored upon. The unavoidable absence of barbecue enjoyed on former occasions renders necessary a fuller basket supply by those generally interested.

The omission of a set program passes the responsibility for the success of the occasion on to you. Persons suffering the urge to "orate" may send to our treasurer the privilege fee of five dollars (?)

CONFERENCE NEWS

North Mississippi Conference

A District Children's Rally was held in Ackerman, Miss., June 16, with Mrs. B. W. Hichelliffe, presiding. There was 260 present from Artesla, Rocky Hill, Macon, Roxapater, Kosciusko, West Point, Starkville, Cedar Bluff, Eupora and Ackerman. A splendid program was rendered from each society. Reports were good, showing an increase in membership, with fine work being done by all. After lunch, at the park, the afternoon was taken up in singing club songs and the giving of a playlet by Rocky Hill. Mrs. L. H. Roberts of Starkville gave the devotional, which was very inspirational, after which the children entered into games of many kinds.

A Bible Study Class of 17 members with Mrs. Gaston as leader has just completed the book, "The Message Of Jesus." At the close of the study a unique and impressive pageant, "Bearers Of The Light," was given. This was in the form of a jigsaw puzzle, each lady placing one piece and a ray to form a lighted candle.

The daily vacation Bible school was held here May 13-20 with an enrollment of 105. It was sponsored by the Methodist and Presbyterian Churches. For the devotionals Rev. W. L. Graves and Rev. T. B. Thrower gave inspiring messages. The leaders in different departments were very capable and did some splendid work. The activity period was given to learning scripture, such as memory verses, chapters and stories, also making posters, Indian village songs and games. The books studied were Indian and Chinese. Mrs. J. R. Tackett was with us two days and took part in the program. A demonstration was given at the close which was instructive and spiritual.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist Church at Water Valley, held a "Fellowship" meeting in the church auditorium, Monday afternoon, June 12, with Mrs. Marrs as leader. This meeting was the close of the "Treasure Hunt," and the chairman reported a nice collection of gold and silver. There were 1054 soap coupons collected and $12.22 was raised for rural work. Mrs. Berryhill and Mrs. Greer led the devotionals. The leader talked on, "God of the Open Air." Mrs. Johnnie Hammer delighted her hearers with a solo. Papers on, "A Day In The Lives Of The Rural Deaconess and Rural Pastor," were read by Mrs. J. A. Fair and Mrs. E. D. King. The auxiliary president, Mrs. Barry, gave an interesting talk on the work of the Conference. The following questions were discussed: "Reasons for joining the Missionary Society," by Mrs. J. W. Dorman. "Is it worth while to belong to the Missionary Society?" by Mrs. C. J. Williams. "Should young people belong to the Missionary Society?" by Mrs. J. M. Colson. Four new members were enrolled. The meeting adjourned with prayer by Mrs. S. S. Spencer. A social hour and delicious refreshments were enjoyed.

Mississippi Conference

The Woman's Missionary Conference of the Brookhaven district met at the Meadville Methodist Church. Mrs. C. A. Butterworth of McComb, district secretary, presided. The presiding elder, Dr. C. W. Crisler, of the Brookhaven district, conducted the morning devotional. Many other pastors and visitors were introduced. Among the prominent speakers of the day were: Mrs. J. Morgan Stevens, of Jackson, who talked on "Christian Social Relations;" Mrs. Alma Riley of Jackson, who spoke in behalf of the Orphanage; Mrs. J. L. Carter of Crystal Springs, who spoke on "Mission and Bible Study" and Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, president of Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference.

Rev. J. O. Ware, pastor-host, conducted the afternoon devotional and Mrs. Sherrod Towns of Quentin gave three delightful readings. Mr. James Ware rendered several very beautiful cornet selections. At the noon hour, lunch was served to about 110 persons in the dining hall of the A. H. S. Delegates from Auburn were granted their request for the 1934 conference.

More than 150 delegates from 27 of the 38 woman's missionary organizations of the Methodist churches of the Seashore district were in attendance at the annual meeting of the district at Gulfport, First Methodist Church, Tuesday, at the all-day session. The president of women's work in the Mississippi Conference, Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, Fayette; the Conference secretary, Miss Ella Wayne Ormond, Meridian, and a representative of the orphanage at Jackson, Mrs. Alma Riley, were the special speakers of the occasion. Mrs. R. E. Johnson, Mississippi City, district secretary, presided at the meeting which was characterized by those in attendance at reaching almost the proportions of a conference rather than a district meeting. Many of the delegates motored over 100 miles to attend the meeting. The Seashore district extends all along the Coast, north to Hattiesburg, westward to Poplarville and eastward to Lucedale. Mrs. Johnson reported that in the last year ten additional societies had been added to the district, three of which were received from a rearrangement of the boundaries of the Hattiesburg and Newton districts, and seven through organization this year.

Mrs. Cottrell's address was a feature of the meeting. She explained the plans for the year's work among Methodist women. She gave a report of executive board sessions which took the place of the annual conference, explaining that there are few changes in the personnel of Conference officers. Mrs. John Boone, Brookhaven, is the new superintendent of supplies; and Mrs. H. McMullen, Newton, superintendent of publicity. Three new district secretaries have been named: Mrs. Norman Taylor, Jackson; Mrs. D. L. St. John, Meridian, and one is to be named at Hattiesburg. Miss Ormond in her address spoke particularly of specific phases of the women's work in the state, and emphasized the children's work.

The devotional at the opening of the session was led by Mrs. J. L. Neill, Gulfport. Mrs. Arrington of Magee, spoke on Children's Work in the conference, giving an interpretation of the place of training children in the church's program. Mrs. R. E. Johnson awarded several certificates to auxiliaries where the children's divisions, that is, Children's World Circle for primaries, and Boys' and Girls' World Club for juniors were honor roll organizations. Fifteen children of the junior choir of the Moore Community House, Biloxi, appeared on the program under the direction of Miss Sophie Kuntz, singing three numbers.

The afternoon session opened with the song, "I Need Thee Every Hour," Mrs. Alma Riley's talk on the Orphanage and its needs was given. Mrs. Johnson presented council certificates to the following societies: Pascagoula, Kreole, Long Beach, Poplarville and Gulfport.

The meeting voted to send a message of sympathy to Mrs. J. C. Chambers, Jackson, in the death of her husband, Conference head of the religious education department. The meeting closed with prayer.

Columbia was selected as the 1934 meeting place for the Seashore district woman's work session.

Miss Lois Cooper, of the Hiroshima Woman's College, Hiroshima, Japan, returned to the United States for furlough in April.

The work at San Paolo, Italian Methodist Church at Tampa, Florida, is making steady development under Rev. Paul Touchton. Agustin Sineriz, a layman, has been elected Sunday school superintendent and exhorter for the church. He is a Spaniard with an Italian wife and is well and favorably known in the Latin Quarter.

Dr. O. E. Goddard, Foreign Secretary, General Work, says that having to recommend to the Board the recall of half a dozen missionaries for lack of funds to support them was the severest emotional strain of his life.

Missionaries from various fields have either written or cabled the Foreign Secretaries, asking permission to remain on the field, even if salaries are cut again and again.

WORLD'S SMALLEST BIBLE

The World's Smallest Bible, a book with pages of about one-third the size of an ordinary postage stamp, which, when closed, is less than one quarter of an inch thick, is attracting wide attention at A Century of Progress—the Chicago World's Fair. It is on exhibit in the South wing of the Hall of Religion.

The volume, insofar as is known, is not only the smallest Bible, but the smallest book containing a like number of words. It was printed from plates under microscope in Glasgow, in 1895.

Four years were required to make the plates. Shortly after the plates were made, three books were printed. Since that time one of the volumes and the plates were destroyed by fire, a second copy was lost. The one at the Fair is the only one remaining in the world.

The book is about three-quarters of an inch long and a half-inch in width.

DENHAM SPRINGS CHARGE PLANS BIG DAY

The fifth Sunday in July will be observed by the Denham Springs-Live Oak Charge, at Live Oak Church, beginning at ten o'clock a.m., as a special day of worship.

From ten to eleven o'clock will be devoted to singing old familiar songs and short talks by former pastors and sons of former pastors and other interested friends.

At eleven o'clock there will be preaching by one of our own boys, either F. M. Freeman or A. W. Turner. Dinner will be served at 12:30.

In the evening there will be a short program by the Epworth League, then there will be singing, duets, quartettes, and old favorites that have filled our hearts with joy and gladness in days gone by. This is not intended to be a Sunday picnic, but a day of worship and of re-consecration to Almighty God.

The committee of arrangements request each and all to pray that we may have a great spiritual feast, and that we may sit together in heavenly places. All members of the churches, and all friends that are living near enough are requested and expected to bring a well filled basket. Coffee will be served from ten to eleven o'clock, but will not be served during the preaching hour.

W. H. UNDERWOOD,
For general committee of arrangements.

Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

MRS. T. L. PORTER was born November 8, 1878, in Pontotoc County, Mississippi. She was the daughter of R. F. Broome and Sarah McDonald Broome. Her father was Sunday school superintendent in the old home church, Palestine, for many years. She was baptised in infancy and joined the church when she was ten years of age. She never knew anything but the Christian atmosphere and life. She was educated in the schools of her native county, the public schools and the old Chickasaw Female College at Pontotoc.

On December 24, 1902, she was married to T. L. Porter. A few years later he joined the North Mississippi Conference. They came to Oklahoma in 1915. They spent two years, 1924-25, in Missouri while their daughter, Lucille, was in Central College. She died at their parsonage home in Ketchum, Oklahoma, April 15, 1933.

Besides her husband and daughter, Mrs. Roy Patterson, of Broken Arrow, Oklahoma, she leaves her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Broome, of Okmulgee, Oklahoma, and three brothers and two sisters: W. L. Broome, Shawnee, Oklahoma; R. A. Broome, Okmulgee, Oklahoma; C. P. Broome, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; Mrs. C. T. Floyd, Amory, Mississippi; and Mrs. N. T. Peak, Grove, Oklahoma. To these, whom she left behind, she bequeathed a heritage that will become more fragrant and beautiful as the years pass, the heritage of a good life. Her love for her Lord was constraining; her service for her Church was faithful and unselfish; her devotion to and ministrations in her home were sublimely beautiful and her life, therefore, was one of joy and peace unspeakable.

Such were her lovely Christian character, kindly nature, and friendly disposition, that there was everywhere a welcome for her with her preacher-husband. Many homes have been brightened and many hearts cheered by her kindly words and generous deeds. Her body rests in the beautiful cemetery at Grove, Oklahoma, where she lived and labored for a number of years, while her noble soul has gone to the life beyond to be forever with the Lord.

Her brother,
W. L. BROOME.

MRS. ERA ADELLE CRENSHAW ALEXANDER was born November 8, 1882 in Panola County, Texas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Crenshaw. She was married to Mr. B. M. Alexander, of Bethany, La., December 27, 1905, from which marriage three children were born.

Living in great happiness and usefulness, she was suddenly the victim of an automobile accident, April 24, 1933, and died in a sanitarium four weeks later, May 22, 1933, without regaining complete consciousness.

She is survived by her loving husband, Mr. B. M. Alexander, her dear mother, Mrs. I. H. Crenshaw, her three sons, Bernard Martel, Isaac Monroe, and Jack Marvin Alexander, one grandson, Charles Bernard Alexander.

Besides three sisters: Mrs. M. C. Boulware, Bethany, La.; Mrs. J. A. Dunnam, Alden's Bridge, La.; and Mrs. R. B. Vickers, New Brantels, Texas. And two brothers: Mr. C. C. Crenshaw, and Mr. W. H. Crenshaw, both of Bethany, La., and a great host of friends.

Sister Alexander was reared in the lap of piety. Her precious mother being her principal instructor, and assisted by the ministries of the Church. She united with the Bethany Methodist Church after mature deliberation, September 29, 1918, under the pastorate of Rev. Don E. Dulaney, and ever lived and adorned the doctrines of Bible Christianity.

She was ever true to the interests of the Church, and to all good causes, nobly seconding every good and worthy work. She will be sadly missed, and who will do her work? It may be truly said: she lived for others. Her children, her dear precious mother, her grandchild, her family and friends.

What more could she have done?

Sister Alexander was laid to rest in Mt. Zion Cemetery not far from where she was born, Rev. Dr. George S. Sexton, Rev. E. G. Hancock, besides the pastor participating. Dr. Sexton delivered one of the most beautiful sermons on the immortality of the soul, this humble writer has ever heard, and through their tears the great course of people rejoiced in the faith that sustains Christian people.

The grave was heaped with beautiful flowers as a testimony of love and esteem, on that May day of sunshine and hope. May God comfort the weeping ones that remain, and although He buries His workmen, may He carry on His work at dear old Bethany Church!

Faithfully and sincerely,
H. S. JOHNS, Pastor.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

"REPEAL URGED BY BISHOP GAILOR" is the headline of an announcement from Nashville, Tenn. Take a look at it, will you? "Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment is advocated by the Right Reverend Thomas F. Gailor, Memphis, Episcopal bishop of Tennessee and former head of the Episcopal Church of America." It might be observed also that he is descended from Adam.

What we shall say here is not put down in ignorance of certain injunctions as to the respect due a dignitary of the church, but rather in behalf of a great moral issue. When one in high office of church or state steps between me and the target at which I am firing he must either get out of the way quickly or arrange for the bullet I am firing to pass his way.

Observe the new and unheard of argument the good bishop offers in behalf of repeal. Certainly we have a right to expect a leader in a great church to present something original in these dull times.

Bishop Gailor speaks: "I am in favor of repeal because, as a Southern man, I have been taught to believe in states rights, and that no single group of states ought in justice to be permitted to force their peculiar views of manners and morals upon all the states of the Union."

This statement is reported to have been released through the Association for the Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Sounds as if the Association made the statement and the Bishop just signed it.

The Bishop speaks again: "The amendment was adopted without a just and adequate effort to ascertain the mind and will of all the people. As a sumptuary law it ought not to have been imposed upon a respectable minority. I believe that such laws should be passed only by practical unanimity of opinion."

The Bishop speaks once more: "The law has incited and encouraged crime and lawlessness of every kind and has taken revenue from the government and given it to bootleggers and racketeers."

REALLY, NOW, IS THERE anything new or unusual about the Bishop's statement? Have you ever heard it before?

A Southern man and a believer in states rights. Did the South have a monopoly on the doctrine of states rights? And when those states withdrew from the Union did they not immediately form themselves into a Confederacy that said to the world, "We cannot stand alone in our individual rights. For an emergency like the Civil War it becomes necessary, at least expedient, for us to subordinate our individual rights to the general welfare."

And sectionalism has a way of exalting itself above the common good at times, does it not?

Has the Bishop concluded that the Federal Constitution with its regular and orderly procedure in the adoption of amendments should be subordinated to the whims of individual states? Has he forgotten Senator Edward Ward Carmack of his own Tennessee, who died a martyr to the cause of statewide prohibition, and whose assassin was pardoned by a wet governor before he reached the penitentiary to which he had been sentenced by the courts? Says the Bishop, "No single group of states ought in justice to be permitted to force their peculiar views upon all the states." He does not say how big a group, or how small. Would he say that forty-six states should allow two states to have their own ways and let the general welfare suffer?

With the brewers and some others the Bishop says that the Eighteenth Amendment was "slipped over" on us when we were not looking. He hints that an unrespectable majority put it over on a respect-

SABINE PARISH VOTES BAN ON BEER, 1011 TO 733

Many, La., July 6.—Sabine Parish voted 1011 to 733 against sale of beer, official tabulation of the ballot today showed.

The election was held yesterday at the order of the police jury. Following tabulation of the vote, the Parish body adjourned to meet again shortly to enact measures designed to keep beer out of the Parish.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

able minority, and that it just ought not to have been done.

Must we remind the Bishop that this amendment was adopted by about the greatest majority at all after about one hundred years of agitation on the subject? Seems that the whole country, including the Bishop, had time to hear about what was going on. Does he expect informed people to pause for this statement?

Finally, the claim is made that the Eighteenth Amendment has produced all kinds of crime and lawlessness and has robbed the government and divided the spoils with the bootleggers and racketeers. Seems that I have heard that, too.

Do I understand you, Bishop Gailor? The Eighteenth Amendment is a violation of states rights, not the Constitution; that it was forced upon an innocent people; and that it is the source of all kinds of crime?

I take it then that repeal will set us right in the eyes of respectable people, redeem our ancient claims to states rights, and go far toward putting an end to crime. Do you think the repeal of the amendment will take any of the curse out of liquor, or that the revenue to the government will balance the budget of widow's groans and orphan's tears? Will it bring the blossoms to the cheeks of childhood, and will it furnish us a manhood that is sober and steady? Are not your ancient arguments suited only to an age that is passed?

LISTEN! SENATOR MORRIS SHEPPARD is speaking.

"No more profound disaster could befall this nation than the surrender of an ideal, an ideal embodied in its basic law, proclaimed to all the world and demonstrated to be just. From Sinai with its crown of fire came ideals that have remained in human statutes through the centuries despite continuous and wholesale violation. Most of them are prohibitions, including thou shalt not murder and thou shalt not steal. The Eighteenth Amendment repeats those objectives in another form when it says, in effect, thou shalt not give men drink that makes them murder and induces them to steal.

"All that there is worth while in government and in life is the attempt to accomplish what is right and to establish what is just. We can never gain perfection. Give up the effort to ascend and the return to the wallow and the mire will have become inevitable. Run down the flag of prohibition and run up the flag of drink and the saddest transformation that ever marked the struggle of mankind for its own redemption will have been achieved. It will be the first time this nation ever muffled its drums and lowered its standards in retreat from a position once taken and shown to be right.

"Let the movement for repeal be resisted by every element in America that would preserve the essence of our freedom, the meaning of our history, the basis of our advancement, and the character of our most sacred obligations to humanity."

Senator Sheppard, I hear a greater hint of the Holy Scriptures in your words, and more of the Gospel in your recognition of our "sacred obligations to humanity" than I note in the words of the Bishop. I follow you.

UP JUMPS ONE OF these deformed and deluded nondescript specimens who once called himself dry, and in breathless excitement asks me, "Why, would you hold the Eighteenth Amendment with the slender minority of thirteen states? Don't you know that it would mean the complete breakdown of all law and order? Surely you would not be so foolish as to do that?"

Yes, Brother, soberly, I must say that I would hold on to the Eighteenth Amendment with the slender group of thirteen states. Listen, and I'll tell you why.

I still believe that this constitutional ar-

SIGNS OF REVIVAL AMONG STUDENTS

How 100,000 Young People Have Recently Enlisted to Read God's Word Daily and Large Numbers Have Professed Faith in Christ

By George T. B. Davis

"One girl said, 'I will sign here,' and as she did so her eyes shone like stars as she accepted Christ as her Savior. Some boys said, 'We want to come out to your house for a good old-time service.' I did not realize the young people were so eager to get God's Word and read it. I find the young folks are taking the Testaments to school with them."

The above is an extract from one of many letters from ministers telling of the quiet but effective and far-reaching back-to-the-Bible movement that is going forward among young people from coast to coast in the United States and Canada.

Everywhere there is manifested an unexpected eagerness and enthusiasm to read the Word of God. During the past few months more than 100,000 students have made the decision to read God's Word daily, while many hundreds have made the further choice of accepting Christ as their personal Savior.

More than 1,000 ministers are co-operating in this continent-wide movement of Bible reading and soul-winning. Their letters express their glad surprise at the willingness of the young people to receive and read the Word of God. And already letters are coming in telling of the harvest of souls that is being reaped among those that have enlisted as daily readers of the Word of God. Is not this a glorious foretaste of the revival for which we have been longing and praying for these months and years?

A California minister tells of the conversions that are taking place even amidst the ungodly atmosphere of the school. He writes: "We are greatly rejoiced over the results from the Testament distribution. Of the 49 cards returned to me so far 25 are first acceptance of Christ. That makes a trifle over 50 per cent on the whole number. Eight came before the session last Sunday and were received into church membership. Could you send me 200 more Testaments? There are at least 500 unconverted young people in our high school, and the ungodly atmosphere of the student body is quite marked."

A Kentucky pastor says the response is overwhelming and amounts to revival. He writes: "The response to this movement in our high school here is overwhelming. The fifty students who have received Testaments have aroused an interest among their fellow-students that amounts to a revival. Two hundred and seventy-five others have handed me requests, and promised to read a chapter a day."

A minister whose church is in the heart of New York City tells how Jewish students are being influenced by the movement. He says: "Among the recipients were a number of Jews. One of these has since confessed her faith in Jesus Christ and will be received into our church. She is hoping and praying that her brother also will be led to make the great decision. He, too, received a New Testament, but instead of merely reading one chapter a day, with pathetic greediness for the wonderful story, he sat up one night and read the first three gospels clear through."

Another pastor sends this remarkable statement: "One interesting thing, noticed by a teacher, was that every Jewish student requested one of the Testaments."

Reports from widely separated districts indicate that the movement is not a mere flash in the pan, but that the young people are keeping faithful in their daily reading of the Word. One pastor writes: "Have been tremendously gratified by the response here. Send me 75 more of the Testaments if they are still available. The teachers tell me they are all keeping their pledges as to reading, and that they've never seen the students pore over anything as they have these Testaments."

A minister writes that as a result of enlisting 440 students to read God's Word daily and presenting them with Testaments, 50 have been led to a decision for Christ. He says: "It has caused a real revival among my young people."

In Canada as well as in the United States the same enthusiasm for reading of the Word of God is being witnessed. A pastor in Toronto writes: "We received the 100 copies of the New Testament safely, but we will have to have 300 more if we are going to complete our work. The idea is taking hold of the high school students here and going like wild fire. One girl has secured 35 members and all have very prayerfully signed the cards and the Testaments and covenanted to read a chapter a day. In one high school the girls are meeting at the noon hour and reading aloud by turns. All are most enthusiastic."

The news that comes from ministers has been abundantly confirmed by a trip that I have just concluded, during which I spoke to high school students in eight different states. I found the same eagerness and willingness to receive and read the Word of God, and the way in which the students drank in the messages was surely another indication of the working of God's Spirit in their hearts. I shall never forget a meeting in a senior high school. About 1,000 students were seated while some 300 were standing. We had been warned that this crowding might lead to confusion. Instead of disturbance the hush of God was on the young people. A minister who was present declared you could have heard a pin drop. After the address more than 1,100 of the 1,300 or 1,400 present declared in writing their determination to read God's Word day by day.

In another high school 1,537 out of 2,200 students agreed to read God's Word and received Testaments, and at the same time over 100 of them recorded their acceptance of Christ as their personal Savior.

God is working. Hearts are hungry and responsive. Let us keep on praying more earnestly and fervently than ever before. God grant that this turning of young lives back to the Bible and to the Lord may be simply the harbinger of a mighty movement of God's Spirit that will sweep from coast to coast, both through the United States and Canada!

May it not be that no small explanation of this remarkable movement among young people is due to the fact that more than 8,000 people have agreed to spend 15 minutes or more daily in earnest intercession for revival in the United States and Canada? And it is interesting to note that this number of revival intercessors includes over 500 ministers of the gospel.

A pastor in a Southern state writes: "A revival is about to start in our church. A great spirit of prayer has come upon some of our people. They just can't pray enough! Over 80 of our people have signed the 'Praying Through for Revival' cards." He hopes to enlist 120 of his people in the prayer plan.

One denomination, at its recent annual meeting, officially endorsed the "Praying Through for Revival" plan, and steps are now being taken to enlist the membership of the churches in the movement.

Will not those who are longing and praying for revival work earnestly and quickly enlist others in this fellowship of intercession? Send to The Million Testaments Campaign, 1505 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa., for a supply of the "Praying Through for Revival" cards. They will be sent free of cost. When the cards have been signed send them to The Million Testaments Campaign, and Certificates of Membership and some helpful prayer suggestions will be forwarded free of cost to each individual.

Will not each one who reads these lines join with these thousands in this prayer fellowship? Surely revival is the supreme need of our land today. Should not everyone who is a real believer and who is deeply concerned for our land and the salvation of the lost be on our faces day by day like Ezra and Nehemiah of old, confessing our own sins and the sins of the nation, and crying to God for a mighty outpouring of the Spirit, and a sweeping spiritual awakening?

POINTED PARAGRAPHS

By Rev. John W. Ramsey

Recently the editor of the Advocate had somewhat to say about heretics and the Christian method of dealing with them, intimating that Luther, Wesley, and even Jesus, were heretics because they departed from and assailed the traditional and accepted teachings and beliefs of their times. Does such a departure make one a heretic? What is a heretic, anyway? Is it non-conformity to creed? If so, what creed? Is there no such thing as fundamental and ultimate truth, an unchanging standard by which to measure heterodoxy or orthodoxy? I take it that no man is a heretic simply because of a departure from traditional teachings, beliefs, or practices; but I do affirm that there is a body of ultimate truth which, if a man reject, constitutes him a heretic, and that body of ultimate truth is the Apostles'

Creed, which is a brief statement of the essential teachings of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Any man, therefore, who rejects the Apostles' Creed, or any part of it, rejects the gospel and is a heretic, pure and simple. Let him deny that who can. Hence, also, Jesus was no heretic because he taught the principles of the Apostles' Creed; neither were Luther and Wesley heretics because they accepted it.

In the June issue of the Adult Student, in his article on the Sacraments, Robert W. Goodloe, Professor of Church History, Southern Methodist University, says: "There seems little doubt that for two hundred years after Christ baptism was more often performed by immersion than in any other mode." I challenge that statement. It is passing strange that the editors of our Sunday school literature would scatter such stuff over our Church to be read by our people—especially our young people. The truth is that no mode of baptism other than affusion (sprinkling and pouring) was practiced for one hundred years after Christ. Immersion was not practiced till the second century, when superstitions, such as trine immersion and nude immersion; both originating in the erroneous doctrine of baptismal regeneration, began to attach themselves to baptism. The record of that period confirms my statement. The editors of our literature surely do not read some of the contributed articles, otherwise they certainly would not permit such admissions as that of Prof. Goodloe to get by them.

When President Roosevelt inspected the navy yard for the first time since his election, he received a salute of twenty-one guns, costing thousands of dollars. How does that fit in with his program of economy and his heed and wine measure for balancing the budget?

In that part of the Sunday School Day program assigned to the pastor; these words are put into the mouth of the pastor: "It (the Sunday school) should no longer be thought of as a place to memorize Scripture passages and get facts about the Bible." Then, will the author of that program please advise us what the Sunday school is for? If I had my way, I would put the old catechism back into the Sunday school and persuade the sons and daughters of Methodism to memorize all the Scripture passages possible.

The editor of the Advocate is giving us some excellent editorials each week; but don't you wish he would write "finis" at the bottom of page one instead of "continued on page 4," with only one or two inches of reading matter on that page, or else make the editorial long enough to make it worth the trouble of turning to page 4?

In the Church School Magazine for June, commenting on the lesson for June 11, "The Meaning of the Cross," and speaking of the darkness occurring during the crucifixion, Dr. Andrew Sledd has this to say: "This dramatic detail seems to be regarded as a miracle. It could not have been caused by an eclipse, but it may have been due to what we should call some 'natural cause.'" May I respectfully ask him why he did not say it was a miracle instead of "it seems to be regarded as a miracle?" Is there a doubt in his own mind about it? And will he suggest "some natural cause" which could have produced the darkness? If he can and will, perhaps he should clear up the situation and remove the fog from the minds of those of us who have always accepted it as a miracle. Referring also to the rending of the temple veil, he says: "This, too, seems to be miraculous." Again I ask, why the word, "seems?" If one does not believe in the miraculous, why not say so? Why evade? Personally, I accept without qualification or equivocation the miraculous as it is related to the incarnation, the life, crucifixion, death and resurrection of our Lord.

"Believers' baptism" is not taught in the Bible. There is not a single Scripture passage which makes faith the condition of baptism; but the Bible everywhere predicates baptism upon citizenship in the Kingdom. This is the reason Methodists dedicate their children to God in baptism. The only difference between children and adults in this matter is the manner or method by which they become citizens of the Kingdom. Some citizens of the United States are citizens by virtue of having been born in this country, and hence have the right of suffrage; others have become citizens through certain constitutionally prescribed legal processes and also have the right of suffrage. In other words, a man's right of suffrage is not dependent upon the manner by which he becomes a citizen, whether by birth or legal processes, but is conditioned upon his citizenship. He is not asked how he became a citizen, but is he a citizen? That is the question, and if he can answer in the affirmative he has the right of suffrage. In like manner, every citizen of the Kingdom has a right to baptism. An adult becomes a citizen of the Kingdom through faith; the child is born into the world a citizen of the Kingdom by virtue of the atonement made by Jesus Christ on the cross. Both the believing adult and the child are citizens of the Kingdom and as such both have a right to baptism, the badge of citizenship in the Kingdom. The matter of how each became a citizen is not involved in the consideration at all. The only question is, is each a citizen? The conclusion of the whole matter, therefore, is both believing adults and children have a right to baptism. This is sound logic—let him refute it who can. Furthermore, all parents should take their children to church next Sunday and present them to the pastor for baptism. What right have parents to withhold from their children their right to the sign of their citizenship in the Kingdom—a right bought for them through the shed blood of the Son of God? I repeat with all possible emphasis that every child is born into the world already a citizen of the Kingdom by virtue of the atonement of Jesus Christ and has a right to baptism.

ARE CHURCH LETTERS WORTHLESS?

By Rev. B. C. Taylor, Contributing Editor

Stocks and bonds are kept in safety deposit boxes, insurance policies are salted away in bank vaults, lodge memberships are transferred with the utmost care, a man's credit rating is given immediate attention; but a church letter request is treated like a circular letter from a bankrupt concern.

This raises the question, are church letters worthless? If so, let's discover some method of re-instating them to a preferred status. If not, why not treat them as "living recommendations" of Christian worth?

During the last six months I have had occasion to write for a great many church certificates. I have heard from about one-third of them. Among these "silent pastors" is an ex-presiding elder, Page John Wesley. When I lived in New Orleans I was requested to get a church letter from a prominent pastor in a neighboring state (that pastor is now one of our bishops). He never replied to my two communications, but I dare say he now insists that we be careful in preserving the records of the church.

All of this careless neglect in the business world would cost a man his job in short order, but, fortunately, our inefficiency is waved aside with the time-worn platitude, "Well, the preachers are just too busy preaching the gospel."

But what about the guy that keeps that good three-cent stamp?

THE GRASS WIDOW

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

Raulins, you didn't know Bishop Duncan. He was an aristocrat by nature, but as democratic as Patrick Henry himself. When he was a young man and pastor in Petersburg, Va., the native seat of F. E. Vs., he was the special favorite of the poor people of the town. Everybody loved "Brother Duncan," from the baron who traced his descent to Norman blood, to the man who drove the garbage cart. He couldn't preach. His brother, James, could do that to perfection. It was said, and I expect it was partly true, that Duncan was elected Bishop by votes intended for his brother, who had been dead many years. "What ever became of a man named Fitzgerald who used to edit the Advocate?" "Why, they elected him bishop." "Well, there is where I lost sight of him." But there are a legion of candidates turning their eyes toward Jackson, anxious to leap into episcopal oblivion.

While Duncan couldn't preach, he made a good bishop. He suffered greatly with hay fever. At the Missouri Conference one year the reports were very bad. Drought had cut short the crops, and there was much distress. Duncan had a bad case of hay fever. He kept several handkerchiefs in use, and his temper was like Balaam's when his mule backed away from an angel in the road with a drawn sword. He lambasted the preachers for their poor reports. He carried his lectures a little too far. "Brother," he said to one humble circuit rider, "that is a poor report. Don't you know that you can't get along in the Methodist ministry with such reports?" "Bishop, I did the best I could, and my report would not be as good as it is if a well-to-do grass widow living on my circuit had not given us a liberal contribution." Wiping his eyes, he said, "Stop right there. A grass widow. What do you mean by a grass widow? I've been hearing that expression all my life, and I don't know what it means." "I don't know that I can explain it, Bishop, but I think it means a woman whose husband died with the hay fever."

REV. JOHN TILLERY LEWIS

By his brother, Rev. H. P. Lewis

On January 2, 1874, as a little babe, he came to gladden the home of the parents, Rev. and Mrs. H. P. Lewis, at Holmesville, Miss. He was the fifth of nine children that grew to maturity in this home. His parents had the great joy before God called them home of hearing five of their six sons preach the Gospel of Christ, and knowing that one of the three daughters was the wife of a Methodist preacher. Six out of the nine children followed their parents into the life of the itinerancy. The other three members of this family became active workers in the Methodist Church.

John acquired his education from the small rural schools in the bounds of his father's pastorate and from Millsaps College, which he attended five years, graduating in 1899. While in college he was for four years physical director of the gymnasium; became a charter member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity and won the medal in the Senior Oratorical contest.

While still a child, he gave his heart to God and joined the Church. After graduating from college he obtained license to preach and that fall applied for admission into the North Mississippi Conference. He served every grade of appointments from small circuits to the largest stations. For three years he served as presiding elder of the Sardis District. But his main force was in the pastorate. He was a popular pastor, greatly beloved by the people of his charges. He was honored by his Conference by being placed in prominent positions on various boards. When he retired he was a member of the Board of Missions, Committee on Evangelism, and on the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College.

John was a great lover of music. While in college he with J. B. Mitchell, Henry T. Carley and Robert P. Nehlett organized and constituted Millsaps' first quartette. With his brothers, Barney, Henry, James and Osmond, what was known as the Lewis Brothers Quartette was maintained for years. Many revivals were held by these brothers over the state. He was a strong revival preacher and held many meetings. Rev. James A. Bowen, who for a number of years was Conference Evangelist, hoped to see John T. Lewis as his successor in the evangelistic field.

He built up a splendid library during his ministry. While browsing through his library I ran across a long list of books he had made, headed, "Books I need." All these were found in his library. He read extensively and frequently wrote strong, thought-provoking articles to both our Conference and General organs.

On April 26, 1901, he was married to Miss Alberta Addkinson of Jackson, Miss. To this union were born three children, Alberta, now Mrs. J. P. Meaders, John Tillery, Jr., and Henry Barton. His heart was overjoyed when during his last illness his youngest son, Henry Barton, surrendered to the call to preach. He lived to have his son preach for him, and later to deliver to his beloved congregation at Drew, Miss., his last written message.

Soon after John's return to Drew for the second year, he had a complete break down in health, and was not able, after February, to fill his pulpit. But from his sick bed, with the love and loyalty of his members, the assistance of his presiding elder, Rev. W. N. Duncan, and his brethren of the Conference, both preachers and laymen, he carried on the work of his charge till within a month of Conference, at which time he asked for a supernumary relation.

Moving with his family to a little rural home near Hazelhurst, Miss., he spent the last few months of his life in much physical pain and suffering; but with a wonderful spirit of resignation. Knowing that the end was near, he sent word to his loved ones and brethren of his Conference that: "The religion I have been preaching is a reality. When human props begin to give way, then it is the Everlasting Arms are about me! He is truly all I have preached Him to be! The way is bright and glorious for me."

On March 1, just one week before God called him home, he wrote as follows to his relatives: "The only satisfactory life any person can live is a life lived with Christ in God. In a life of that Biblical kind there is no struggle. It is a peaceful life that is soothing to the soul, mind and body. To be crucified with Christ is one of the grandest experiences, if not the grandest, that can come to a human soul. Praise His Holy Name for such an experience!"

He slipped away to heaven at 11 p.m., March 8. Besides his immediate family surviving him, there are two sisters, Pattie of Jackson, Lela (Mrs. W. a Terry), of Richton, and three brothers, Henry, James and Osmond.

His funeral was conducted from Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, by Dr. J. R. Countiss of Grenada, assisted by Dr. J. L. Decell, pastor of Galloway Memorial, J. H. Felts of Grenada, W. O. Sadler of Hazelhurst and E. S. Lewis of Winona. His body was laid to rest in the old Greenwood Cemetery in Jackson.

John's going has had a peculiar pull on my life for the heavenly world. He and I were pal brothers. It was partly because of his membership in this Conference, (North Mississippi), that I transferred to it in 1919. I feel lonely without him. His going to be with the 'loved ones gone before' makes heaven dearer than ever. Some day we will see him again.

NATURE PROCLAIMS GOD

By Mrs. L. M. Lipscomb

The sunlight is God's smile,
Without which life is dreary.
The cool spring breeze is His breath,
Refreshing the faint and weary.

The mountains are God's thoughts
So pure, so great and high,
Above the sordid things of earth
Eternal in the sky.

The sunset is His art room
Where purple, rose and gold
Mingling in perfect accord
Glorious pictures unfold.

So all Nature shows forth God,
White lillies and violets sweet
Rippling brooks and verdant grass,
Forming a carpet for His feet.

The stars that twinkle in the sky
The moon that shines at night,
All these proclaim His wisdom
His power and love and might.

God's voice is heard in the storm,
And in the ocean's restless roll,
But His gentle whisper "Peace be still" rangemet was a wise provision of our fathers in laying the foundation of our government, both to prevent impulsive adoption of questionable measures and to protect gains secured at great cost. Certainly the sober forces of righteousness should be as zealous to hold on to the benefits of mankind as would be the forces of liquor to hold with thirteen states whatever footing they might have. They do not surrender until driven from the field, then they return to a guerilla warfare that must finally be conquered by an intelligent and law-abiding people.
Calms the sad and troubled soul.

In the second place, I would hold it at whatever cost, because so long as it is in the Constitution liquor is an outlaw and upon its brow is the curse of Cain. Repeal the amendment and you clothe the greatest source of crime with respectability and give it a seat beside the honorable factors of the country. Repeal the amendment and you exchange the blight of the nation for a mess of pottage and set a day for it to weep when it discovers that its blessing also is gone. No, better a thousand times to fight liquor as an outlaw however slender the opposing forces, however great the odds, than to enthrone it in the halls of congress and the courts of the nation to dictate the course of the life of the people.

Finally, nothing better has been offered. When this is done I shall be ready to discuss the matter.

Yes, the levee is leaky and weak in places. You have been dynamiting and gouging at it in many places all to hold up your dirty work as the defect of the noblest effort so save a nation. But I had rather try to repair the levee than to turn the Mississippi upon the homes of the people.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Get your palmetto and let's go out under the old beech, next to the shady and windy side, for this week's party. And you better bring up that old Georgia Rattlesnake from the spring. If some prefer lemonade, all right. That is better than 3.2.

Rev. Melville Johnson will assist Rev. R. P. Neblett in a meeting at Pickens, Miss.

Rev. B. D. Benson, pastor at Toccoola, Miss., has recently had Rev. Luther Bennett with him in a training class.

Bob Jones College, founded by the Evangelist Bob Jones, is moving this summer to Cleveland, Tenn. It was established at College Point, Fla.

One hundred and twenty boys and girls, ages 13 to 15, attended the Christian Adventure Camp near Durant, Miss., at Castalian Springs, July 3-8.

Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux, pastor at Many, La., sends a list of subscribers and says that he will secure more. That is the stroke that pulls the boat to port.

For seventeen weeks Dr. Theodore Copeland has been in great meetings in Texas and Georgia. There were great responses with hundreds joining the churches.

The large prayer meeting continues to hold up at Houston, Miss. Frequently more than one hundred attend these mid-week meetings. Rev. Geo. H. Boyles is pastor.

Mrs. W. H. Cheairs asks that we change her paper to 16,825 Shaftsbury, Detroit, Michigan. She is spending awhile in that city with her son, and does not wish to miss the paper.

We had company at the Advocate office last Thursday. Drs. F. L. Wells, W. L. Duren, Otto Porter, J. T. Leggett, V. C. Curtis and J. H. Felts came down to talk to us about the Advocate.

Sometimes we just fail to see people we want to see. The other day Rev. W. M. Williams, Chaplain of the Sanatorium, Magee, Miss., made a call to this office and we were out. Do over, Brother Williams.

Good crowds attended the preaching of Dr. A. M. Serex, our pastor at New Iberia, La., in his meeting with Rev. C. K. Smith, pastor at Crowley. This week Dr. Serex is with Rev. G. M. Hicks at Mansfield, La.

Rev. W. M. Campbell, the pioneering pastor in the North Mississippi delta section, is making full proof of his ministry at Tutwiler, Miss. The longer he stays at a church the more his people appreciate him.

Mr. Lydel Sims, Publicity Agent for the Young People's Division of the Louisiana Conference, is right on the job. Already we are beginning to hear from him about the work of the young people. Watch for his reports.

Have we introduced to you Mrs. H. McMullan, our new editor of the Missionary Society news? Turn to that page and get acquainted with her. She succeeds Mrs. Stanley Wilson of Meridian, who has served so effectively in that capacity.

Some preachers just keep pulling right along. Rev. Roy Wolfe writes of receiving fifty-eight into the church since conference, and that Rev. G. E. Allen is with him in a meeting at Howison, Miss. He closes his revivals with Long Beach.

A member of the Crowley Church writes: Dr. Serex of New Iberia delivered splendid sermons in our church for a week, morning and evening, including Sunday, June 25. Both old and young expressed themselves as being instructed and refreshed.

Dr. H. T. Carley, presiding elder of the Monroe District, reports that it was 101 in the shade the other day and that it was just as hot the next day. We are glad to note that he was in the shade. He did not report for the temperature in the sun.

Rev. T. M. Bradley reports a fine Daily Vacation Church School at West Point. On the 9th of August at his afternoon appointment, Siloam Church, there will be held a community gathering with all the officials of West Point and Siloam present.

From the "Kentucky Committee of One Thousand," supporters of the Eighteenth Amendment, we received this word: "You will agree with us that nothing has transpired of late that will remove the evils of liquor." Now that seems trite, doesn't it? But how true.

A happy group of the members of Algiers church, New Orleans, surprised the pastor, Rev. D. B. Raulins, with a party the other evening. It was a celebration of one of his more recent birthdays. Some very valuable and well chosen gifts were left in the trail of the departing guests.

Rev. K. E. Clark, pastor at Vardaman, Miss., is one of the younger men of his Conference in point of service, who is trying to carry out the work of the church. He has made plans for revival meetings in all of his churches and is attempting to harness his young people for service.

Rev. C. J. Thibodeaux says, "Everything is moving along in due and ancient form among the Acadians." He tells of a new roof for St. Martinville, La., church, larger congregations, and four babies baptized at one service. He invites the editor to the land of Evangeline, promising many happy views along the Teche.

Mr. T. A. Tyler is superintendent of the Sunday School at Zwolle, La., and leader of Ward Eight Sabine Parish Dry League. Recently he has had Dr. L. W. Sloan, superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, in that parish. Much effective work accomplished in the parish can be noted by the announcement on page one of this issue.

Let's not pull the beer green, Mississippians! The other day some fellows up at Clarksdale decided that they must set up an oasis in the desert right away. They began to sell the stuff. Along came federal officers and said, "No, you can't do it that way." Tell me, is Mississippi slipping? If she does, let her cease to boast of her Galloway.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, pastor at Rosedale, Miss., reports that he will send in more subscriptions when the "inflation" gets a little further under way. His son, Donald, whose letters from Honolulu you have read from time to time in our columns, will be home shortly for a visit with his parents. He has been in Honolulu three years and will return in September.

You have read "Prohibition Facts." In all that I have read on prohibition I find more dynamite to the cubic inch in this little booklet than in anything else. The "1933 Prohibition Facts" is now ready. Send ten cents to Prohibition Facts Service, 936 Fifteenth Ave., S. E., Minneapolis, Minn., and get your copy. Keep it in your pocket and stock your mind with its contents.

Rev. F. H. McGee is one of the Millsaps College men who has given all his life and heart into the Church. He and his faithful wife worked hard during the trying days when he was going through the college. They are sending out some fine children to bless the world. The Hernando, Miss., church has enjoyed the privilege of his leadership as pastor during the past four years.

Have you seen the "Silent Preacher?" It is the official bulletin of the First Methodist Church of Franklin, La., where Rev. C. C. Wier is pastor. It may be silent but it is pretty loud. Among a whole line of pungent paragraphs of point and purpose we hand you this one: "Subscribers to the New Orleans Christian Advocate are urged to read the editorial page again, and then pass it on to someone else."

Did you notice that list of "Parsonage Products" in last week's Advocate? That wasn't all. Thomas F. Neblett, son of Rev. and Mrs. R. P. Neblett, North Mississippi Conference, was graduated from Millsaps in June. He was president of the Student Association, President and Drum Major of the Millsaps Band, Regional President of the National Student Federation of American, and other things. How's that?

Rev. A. T. McIlwain, pastor at Columbus, is leading his people to have combination Sunday school and preaching service during the summer months. He begins the preaching service at the close of Sunday school, starting with a story for the children. Many methods are being used today to try to turn the tide of the Sunday school into the main auditorium for preaching services. That is mainly a town and city problem.

J. F. Bass, Jr., Morgan City, La., who took his pre-law work at Centenary College, was valedictorian of the law class recently graduated at Loyola University, New Orleans. George Wilson, Jr., who was graduated from Centenary in 1930, led his class at Tulane and has been offered a position in that great university. Better send your boys to Centenary and Millsaps. You owe it to your boy and to the community he will serve.

"No absorption into our great Nashville Christian Advocate, or merger with other Advocates can take the place of the Southern Christian Advocate in South Carolina Methodism. The ongoing of the Kingdom has been largely promoted through nearly one hundred years by this paper. It must and will go on. But it must have double its present subscription list and these must be gotten before the sessions of our Annual Conferences." That is how one neighbor Advocate speaks of itself and its work. Isn't there another Advocate somewhat closer home that has credentials for some such statement as that?

When a layman rings my doorbell I leave my typewriter and answer it. This time it was Mr. S. M. Collins, engineer, Monroe, La. He just stopped for a minute to say, "The New Orleans Christian Advocate has been my life-long friend. I should regret very much to be without it. I trust that our Methodist people will rally to the support of this good paper until it becomes the great moral and spiritual force that it ought to be and can be for Methodism." Brother Collins, here, take this megaphone. Get up on the tallest stump you can find and say that to 205,000 Methodists in Louisiana and Mississippi. Say it quickly, say it loud, and say it again.

Dr. J. H. Felts, pastor of our church at Grenada, Miss., and member of the Advocate Publishing Committee from North Mississippi, in a letter to the manager writes in part: "My services these hot days are short if not sweet. Preaching to four hundred people each Sunday, morning and evening services combined. Holding vesper services at 6 p.m. My people are beginning to like it. Combining Young People's services with the vesper services. Two hundred out this morning. Good service. Expect as many out this afternoon." Reports reaching us from other sources indicate that Dr. Felts has won the hearts of his people and that the work is progressing rapidly under his leadership.

JACKSON WELCOMES GENERAL CONFERENCE

By M. B. Swayze

Secretary Jackson 1934 General Conference Entertainment Committee

Jackson, Mississippi, appreciates the honor and privilege of entertaining the 1934 session of the General Conference of the churches. Chamber of Commerce, colleges and citizens generally have co-operated enthusiastically and give assurance of their continued purpose of extending every courtesy to the delegates and visitors to the Conference.

Jackson has grown to be a convention center of the Central South. Several national bodies and many state and sectional conventions have been entertained within the last few years, the city averaging over one hundred conventions a year for several years.

Jackson anticipates no difficulty in providing adequate facilities for members and visitors of the 1934 General Conference. Our four larger hotels: Edwards, Robert E. Lee, Walthall, and Heidelberg are the contract hotels for the bishops, delegates, alternates, secretarial staff, and official guests of the Conference and have made special contract rates for their entertainment. Visitors to the General Conference will be given the special rate of $2.00 for a single room and $1.50 per person for a double room in the Edwards, Walthall, and Heidelberg hotels.

In addition to the contract hotels we have the Royal, Noble, and King Hotels with even lower per diem rates than the visitors' special offer by the three contract hotels. Also, the Chamber of Commerce has a rooming service through which there will be available some 500 rooms, if needed, in private residences in desirable sections convenient to car lines which operate near the Municipal Auditorium at which place the sessions of the General Conference are to be held.

The Chamber of Commerce has requested and there has been effected a complete organization of committee preparatory to the entertainment of the General Conference.

Any member or visitor desiring further information may secure it by addressing the writer.

A TIME FOR REJOICING

Brookhaven, Miss., June 22, 1933.

Dr. G. F. Winfield,
President Whitworth College,
White House, Biloxi.

Glad to report Brookhaven Successfully subscribed her portion of endowment pledge.

Brookhaven Chamber of Commerce.

Led by L. J. Hollands, president, the Brookhaven Chamber of Commerce has been quietly carrying on for the last week a campaign for pledges to Whitworth College Diamond Endowment. The trustees of the college set the goal to be reached this year at a minimum of $75,000. As an evidence of good faith on the part of Brookhaven it was planned to begin the campaign here and raise not less than $25,000. The above telegram announces the result. Dr. Winfield is in Biloxi in conference with the presiding elders of the various districts who can now launch a campaign throughout the rest of the Conference. Brookhaven citizens realized the great benefit of Whitworth College to this city and cheerfully met the challenge.

The increased endowment is actually needed if Whitworth is to retain her standing in the Southern Association. A goodly number of Brookhaven citizens who are able to subscribe have not been seen and will be given an opportunity to assist in the good work, the campaign continuing through July. The larger the endowment, the stronger the college standing with the accrediting bodies.

The college has felt keenly the years of depression but under the promise of the New Deal registrations of students is gratifying. With the encouragement of this evidence of appreciation from Brookhaven, officers and faculty will be stimulated to greater activity and the Diamond Jubilee celebration in November should be a real season of jubilation.—Lincoln County Times.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

Centerville; W. M. Sullivan, Natchez; F. J. Jones, Washington; J. H. Morrow, Gloster; I. J. Snelgrove, Lorman. M. M. Black was away from home at this time. Percy Vaughan, of Roxie, was elected secretary.

Percy Vaughan discussed "The Pastor's Preparation for Revivals."

J. H. Morrow discussed "Evangelistic Conservation."

W. M. Sullivan preached a very helpful sermon, using for his subject "The Sermon on the Mount," and especially emphasizing this text: "Ye are the salt of the earth."

Brother Sullivan also discussed the subject of evangelism.

F. J. Jones led the devotional, and used for his subject "Phillip and the Eunuch."

Brother Snelgrove spoke feelingly and helpfully on the spiritual life.

We had quite a number of visitors and all expressed themselves as having had a most spiritual and helpful meeting.

The visitors, after expressing themselves as more than pleased with their entertainment, and delightful dinner served by the ladies of the church at the parsonage, adjourned with the benediction by Brother Snelgrove, after voting to go to Jefferson Street, Natchez, for our next meeting. The time, and subjects to be discussed, will be announced later.

PERCY VAUGHAN, Sec'y.

THE SEASHORE METHODIST PASTORS' SCHOOL

The Seashore Methodist Pastors' School met at the Campground at Biloxi, June 19-30. Every detail of the program had been worked out by the board of managers and program committee. The General Board of Missions and the General Board of Christian Education, in co-operation with the boards of Christian Education of the Mississippi, North Mississippi, Alabama, North Alabama, and the Louisiana Conferences, made possible the holding of this school. Due to the financial conditions prevailing the attendance was very small. However, combinations in classes were made and the school moved along in fine order. The classroom work was of the highest order. Courses were offered for undergraduates and there were four of these men present who completed their work in splendid form. The graduate classes were taught by Dr. M. L. Smith, of Birmingham-Southern College, and Rev. A. W. Martin, of the General Board of Christian Education. These courses were most helpful and instructive and it was agreed that no finer instructors could have been found in the church.

One of the outstanding features of this school is the fine brotherly fellowship that prevails here. Many of the brethren who were not able to stay all the time and take credit were with us a part of the time and added much to this fellowship.

The platform was occupied by Dr. J. W. Perry, Dr. M. L. Smith and Rev. A. W. Martin. These addresses were most stimulating to thought, inspiring to the soul, and instructive in every way. The people of the Campground attended the lectures in goodly numbers.

Plans were made for carrying on this school for another year. Dr. J. L. Decell, of Jackson, was elected to act as dean of the school another year.

There was a very keen feeling of loss and sorrow brought about by the death of Rev. John C. Chambers, the Executive Secretary of the Mississippi Conference. He had been a familiar spirit and a dynamic force on the Campground for many years. The following resolutions were read and adopted at one of the evening sessions of the school:

REV. JOHN C. CHAMBERS

Whereas, death has so recently removed from our midst our beloved brother and friend, Rev. John C. Chambers; and,

Whereas, Brother Chambers had for many years been active in the interest of the Seashore Campground, the Divinity School and the Pastors' School, and in his going these have sustained an irreparable loss; and,

Whereas, he was a leader in the field of Christian education in his own Conference and state and in the entire Church, and one whose counsel was often sought and heeded, and whose consecrated Christian character, spiritual leadership and unselfish services were most highly regarded by the leaders of the Church; therefore, be it resolved,

First, That the Seashore Methodist Assembly Pastors' School recognizes its many obligations for the very great contribution that Brother Chambers made to the establishment and maintenance of the Pastors' School and to the other activities of the Campground.

Second, That the Pastors' School express its appreciation of the splendid contribution made by his consecrated services, practical counsel, keen insight and active prosecution of Christian education in his Conference and throughout the Church.

Third, That the Seashore Pastors' School extend its deepest sympathy and offer its sincere prayers for his family and loved ones in their sore bereavement.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be given to the family, a copy published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a copy sent to the General Board of Christian Education.

V. G. CLIFFORD,
R. G. LORD,

Committee for the Board of Managers,
Seashore Methodist Pastors' School.

If all of the people, and especially the Methodists, of these three states, would get behind the Seashore Methodist Assembly we could make it one of the best in the entire Church. Let us do so another year.

R. G. LORD,
Secretary of Board of Managers.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

A recent visit to the Derma charge where Rev. T. L. Oakes is pastor was greatly enjoyed. This church is going forward with its work, with a good Sunday school, Epworth League and Missionary Society. A Daily Vacation school has been held with splendid success in which Miss Tennie Fowlkes assisted.

On the Ebenezer circuit, Rev. G. R. Williams is doing things in his usual fine way. He has made a close survey of the entire territory covered by the charge and is now ready for the holding of his revivals, vacation schools and training work. It was a real pleasure to visit this charge again and meet with these good people.

Recently there was held in the Grenada church a meeting of all of the workers of the Children Division of the local church. Miss Sallie Parnell who is superintendent of this division in cooperation with Miss Lizzie Horn the efficient general superintendent called this meeting. Every officer and teacher of the four departments of the division except three were present. It was a most wholesome and worthwhile meeting. Plans were made for carrying on the work of this division in a more effective manner. Such meetings should be held in every local church. It serves to bring this group of workers together and enables them to understand the total work of the church for children in a much better way.

Daily Vacation Schools are being held all about over the Conference. If you have had such a school in your church and have not made an official report of it, will you not write me and I will send you a regular report blank. Write up the story for your school and send it to me if you can. We are anxious to hear from this fine phase of our work.

Quick Relief for Chills and Fever and Other Effects of Malaria!

Don't put up with the suffering of Malaria—the teeth-chattering chills and the burning fever. Get rid of Malaria by getting the infection out of your system. That's what Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic does—destroys and drives out the infection. At the same time, it builds up your system against further attack.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic contains tasteless quinine which kills the infection in the blood. It also contains iron which builds up the blood and helps it overcome the effects of Malaria as well as fortify against re-infection. These are the effects you want for COMPLETE relief. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is pleasant to take and absolutely safe, even for children. No bitter taste of quinine. Get a bottle today and be forearmed against Malaria. For sale at all stores.

If you are planning a Cokesbury class on your charge this summer get in touch with me. You can have an instructor without cost except to take care of his incidental expenses and that will be very little or nothing in many cases.

We continue to get reports of Sunday School Day observance. Many more Sunday schools should observe this day. Do so and send the money to me or to the Board of Christian Education, Grenada, Miss.

The Christian Adventure Camp at Castalian Springs is in session this week. It began with an overflow crowd on Monday, July 3. This is a fine piece of work and means much to the boys and girls who attend.

We need your prayers and help. Let us pray one for another.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE YOUNG PEOPLE'S NEWS

They're over! Two young people's assemblies with the greatest combined attendance in the history of the assembly. Intermediates to the amount of around one hundred sixty-five, and young people exceeding them with over two hundred. What Assemblies! Pronounced by many to be the best yet in quality as well as quantity.

A new plan was tried in the vesper services this year for the young people. The testimonies were to mean something definite and practical, something that would help the group as well as the individual, something to give everyone new ideas—a sort of discussion group. Rev. Guy Hicks of Mansfield led them, to get the young people accustomed to the new method. The services were truly wonderful, and gave a practical as well as a spiritual benefit to the individual.

The Missionary play, "Ba Thane," put on by the Mansfield people, was excellent. It would be most profitable to put on in any local church, or in a union, to get a clearer idea of the value and need of missions.

The many great features of the assemblies are too numerous to discuss now. Possibly in the very near future we'll have an Assembly Number of the Advocate—remember the one last year?—and really discuss many phases of the assemblies. But one more thing in regard to them—"They're over." How about that? Are they really over? Is the wonderful spirit that was present throughout dead until next year? Are decisions to live more like the Master already becoming remote? Are we forgetting the ideas received in our classes? Or is that great band of youth who joined hands in a pledge of consecrated service going to make the assembly live forever by living such new and consecrated lives that the cause of this change cannot be forgotten? Working together as Louisiana Young People and as World Young People, we can do great things for Christ. Its up to us.

Your new Conference officers will be published in a short while. USE THEM! They are a medium of exchange through which your ideas and those of many other young people should pass, and in passing mix to form better ideas. Don't hesitate to tell your troubles and successes to them. Every letter is guaranteed an answer. And your Publicity Superintendents, local and union! This column is your chance. Tell us what you have been doing. Others might get pointers from your experiences. And if you have any "unanswerable" problems, we'll just write them in here too, and someone will probably write in an answer. Mail in your news right away, and then keep on mailing it in. Address it to Lydell Sims, Hammond, La.

Baton Rouge district is eagerly looking forward to their Bluff Creek Assembly, to be held August 1-5. Bluff Creek Assemblies are always good. This year's Dean is Rev. G. W. Dameron of Jackson. All costs for the four days amount to only four dollars. How's that? Better come; it'll be swell!

Central Louisiana is getting "Het up" about their camp, too. We have not yet received information on the dates of Camp Windywood, but anyone wanting to know about it can find out by writing to Miss Velma Butcher, Oakdale, La.

The Hammond Young People had an unusual service last Sunday which some of you might like to try. The president offered the floor to anyone with a "grudge"—that is, new ideas, compliments, slams, or whatnot. So many good ideas were brought out that it was decided to have such a meeting once a quarter, and call it the "Brickbats and Bouquets Meeting." Try it; you never can tell who has an idea but is too timid to come out and tell it except under such circumstances.

Do you Unions want a real Union to pattern after, or try to beat? Then take a look at New Orleans City Union. There's one for you! Their own Union stationery, their own monthly publication, their own pledges, their own money-making ideas and methods.—oh, boy, what a Union!

Say, did you ever try back numbers of the Highroad for helpful material on your program? It's just full of material! Just pick out your subject, and start looking. In a little while you'll find something really good on it. Or, if you want a REAL job, but one which is most profitable, try indexing all your back numbers of the Highroad. You'd be surprised at the variety of subject matter you find there. I'll be waiting to hear from you. This is your column. It's up to you. So long.

LYDEL SIMS, Publicity, Supt.

CHILDREN'S DIVISION NEWS

Reports for two Vacation Church Schools are in hand. We are glad to note that both of these reports indicate that those who directed the work felt that their efforts were made along more helpful lines than last year. We shall be glad to have reports from other schools as soon as they have been held. Report blanks may be secured from the Conference office in Alexandria.

Five new leaflets of interest to children's workers are now available free of charge from the Conference office. Pastors, superintendents of children's divisions, and teachers of children will find these leaflets of most practical help. They are as follows: "Songs for Nursery Children," "Songs for Beginner and Primary Children," "Preparing Children for Reception Into the Church," "Parent Education and the Local Church," and "Childhood and the Church." We are glad also to be able to state that the following new pamphlets have been issued for workers in the Children's Division at the price of 5c each, 25c per half dozen, and 50c per dozen: "Children's Work in the Small Church," "The Nursery Department," "The Beginner Department," "The Primary Department," and "The Junior Department." Workers in small schools will of course find the first named particularly adapted to their needs while the other pamphlets will prove useful in closely graded schools.

It is hoped that many of our teachers of children will guide their children into making the Chinese Friendship Folio during this summer. It is particularly appropriate for Southern Methodist Churches to carry out this project since the work in China is supported by the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise. These folios may be ordered, for filling in, from the Division of Extension and Missionary Education, 810 Broadway,

Help Kidneys

Don't Take Drastic Drugs

You have four million tiny tubes or filters in your kidneys which may be endangered by using drastic, irritating drugs. Be careful. If poorly functioning kidneys or bladder make you suffer from Getting Up Nights, Leg Pains, Nervousness, Stiffness, Burning, Smarting, Acidity, Neuralgia or Rheumatic Pains, Lumbago or Loss of Vitality, don't waste a minute. Try the Doctor's prescription called Cystex (pronounced Siss-tex). Formula in every package. Starts work in 15 minutes. Soothes and tones raw, irritated tissues. CONFERENCE NEWS

North Mississippi Conference

Mrs. Will Marshall, Superintendent of Publicity for the Woman's Missionary Society at Batesville, Miss., reports the good work of her Auxiliary of which Mrs. Russell Harmon is leader. They make and sell quilts, sandwiches and candy. They secured the best musical talent of Oxford, Sardis and Batesville and gave a musicale at the church from which they realized a "heat sum."

They entertained the Missionary Institute and Annual District Conference this year, serving lunches to a large number and entertaining 250 delegates and visitors in their homes. Two of the zone meetings were held with them. They have "Spiritual Life Group" that they hope to see progress

Louisiana Conference

A Daily Vacation Bible School was held at Port Barre, La., June 5 to 16 inclusive. A total enrollment of twenty-five with an average attendance of nineteen. Those receiving certificates of merit were: Eileen Smith, Dale Smith, Zella Collins, Bettie Rose Neal, Ruby Meyer and Gladys Hall. Miss Ora Hooper, rural worker, was teacher in charge and was assisted by Misses Alice Way and Blanche Eloise Collins.

We deeply regret having to give up our loved and loyal Rural Worker, Miss Ora Hooper. May God's blessings be with her in her new field of work.

The Woman's Missionary Society has its regular meetings every Tuesday and is doing good work.

We will soon "ring out glad tidings" as lumber is on the ground to install our bell at the church. Many thanks to the good lady who gave same.

HOW SHE LOST 29 POUNDS IN 3 MONTHS

"I am using your Kruschen Salts to reduce and I've used a bottle and a half and deleted some and lost 29 pounds in 3 months. I feel so much better and intend to keep on taking the salts as I was almost 50 pounds overweight." Mrs. Thelma Gravely, Roseville, Calif. (Jan. 11, 1933).

To lose fat and at the same time gain in physical attractiveness and feel spirited and youthful take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning.

A jar that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle at any drugstore in the world but be sure and get Kruschen Salts the SAFE way to reduce wide hips, prominent front and double chin and again feel the joy of living—money back if dissatisfied after the first jar.

Annual Conference at Haughton on May 31, 1933. Mrs. B. T. Gallagher, the district secretary presided over the meeting which was composed of about eighty-five delegates and visitors.

The Haughton ladies were very gracious in their welcome and hospitality and had everything arranged for the comfort, convenience and entertainment of their guests. The meeting was held in the High School Auditorium and luncheon was served in the Home Economics building.

A spirit of worship pervaded the atmosphere of the day and the program was very interesting and inspirational. We were very fortunate in having with us four of our State Officers: Mesdames Geo. Sexton, Jr., W. H. Martin, W. M. Ledbetter, and A. E. Woodard. All four of these brought us a message that we were delighted to hear. Mrs. Freeman from the Jubilee Inn told of the interesting work she is doing there. Rev. R. M. Brown, our presiding elder, spoke on "The Church and Its Responsibility" and Rev. A. S. Lutz gave a stirring talk on prohibition. It was quite a treat also to have with us Mr. and Mrs. Jarrett, who were gospel singers from Tennessee, here on a visit to Springhill where they were conducting a revival singing.

Other splendid numbers were rendered by delegates from some of the visiting auxiliaries and after a full program the meeting adjourned about 4:30 p. m.

MRS. D. M. STINSON, Sec.

The Lake Charles District Woman's Conference convened in the main auditorium of the Methodist Church in Lafayette, May 18, 1933.

The general theme of the conference being: "Co-operation and Togetherness" in service.

The meeting was called to order at ten a. m. by district secretary, Mrs. J. N. McDonald, Leesville. Opening hymn: "I Need Thee Every Hour." Prayer by Rev. F. J. McCoy. A most delightful welcome was given by Mrs. J. J. Davidson, President of Lafayette Auxiliary which was most graciously responded to by Mrs. H. A. McDonald, President of Rayne Auxiliary. A beautiful vocal solo opened the devotional service which was led by Mrs. A. C. LaSalle, President of New Iberia Auxiliary. She told several stories from the Bible showing how Christ stressed "co-operation and togetherness" in his work while on earth. The district secretary gave a very interesting address which included a general report of the district work. (Giving prayer and a beautiful tribute to the members who had passed on.) She praised her workers highly, giving honor especially to the earnest and faithful work of her zone leaders. Certificates for Christian Social Relation and Mission and Bible were presented. The standard of work was explained to which she ordered a plea for reports.

Mrs. Bacon of Crowley gave a very interesting talk on Jubilee Inn, a Christian home for working girls. This institution is located at Shreveport. Miss Elmira Montgomery, zone leader at Kaplan gave a most wonderful world picture of "Spiritual Life." She says it begins in the home around the family altar where it reaches out and touches other lives, a most inspiring message.

Mrs. F. P. Jones, Leesville, presented Life Membership. The Conference unanimously voted to present their district secretary, Mrs. J. N. McDonald with a life membership as a token of their love and appreciation for her untiring work for the district. Mary Gay Kennedy, baby of Rayne, was made a life member.

The work of the Young Women's Circles was given by Mrs. Smith, leader of Young Women's Circle of Crowley. Boys' and Girls' Club was presented by Miss Vera Walker of Gueydan, in which she asked that we not forget the importance of children having the right training. Mrs. D. W. Smith of Merryville talked on Bible and Mission study, urging that we get acquainted with our missions and missionaries.

The Pauline Randle vase was presented to Merryville Juniors for best work done in the district.

Mrs. C. C. Cower, Rayne, spoke of Zone Scholarships. Mrs. L. L. Harris of Lake Charles spoke on "Status of Women" and gave some interesting statistics on the subject. Mrs. Joe Wynn of Crowley presented Christian Social Relations. Mrs. Jones of Leesville gave a very instructive talk on Publicity, exhibiting Publicity scrap book.

The high light of the conference was the messages given by our own beloved Julia Reid, who brought a devotional on "The Living Christ." She also told of our Island Sister, Cuba. We were favored by a beautiful solo by Miss Fern Hebert of Abbeville.

There were 135 present including seven ministers. Gleaners of Lake Charles extended an invitation for 1934 conference, which was unanimously accepted.

A most delicious lunch was served at the De Lux Cafe. There were three sessions of the conference which were filled with inspiration and information.

Covington being the only Auxiliary with the children's organization in this section, they were asked by the Superintendent of Conference work to be hostess for the day. Miss Eddie Brown of Covington, the efficient Children's Superintendent, opened the meeting by announcing a hymn which was followed by introducing the Conference Superintendent Mrs. R. S. Crichtlow, who led the devotional from II Tim. 2:2-15.

Regrets because of inability to attend were expressed for our District Secretary, Mrs. A. L. Swan and District Director of Children, Mrs. D. B. Raulins. Mrs. Crichtlow had hoped to have both present and taking part.

There were forty-eight in attendance representing Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian workers from Covington, Waldheim, Fitzgerald, Mandeville, Hammond and Sildell. These included Missionary societies and Sunday school workers. Four Sunday school superintendents and one pastor were among the number.

After the devotional and an explanation of the object of the meeting the program followed.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY

How to manage a Junior Department was most ably discussed by Miss Mae Dean of the Union Sunday School of Mandeville.

Though quite young, she has the subject thoroughly in hand, showing a careful study of the Junior child and the value of child centered, child planned program of work.

Mrs. A. M. Wynn, President of the Covington Auxiliary Woman's Missionary Society then gave a most helpful explicit explanation of Primary and Junior work of the Missionary Society through the Boys and Girls World Club and World Circle Children, explaining in detail the intensive summer mission study plans.

Mrs. A. G. Salassi, Superintendent in describing fully the Sunday school substituted for Mrs. J. A. Bousquet in describing fully Sunday School work for the primary ages. She regretted Mrs. Bousquet's inability to come, saying she could give the subject only technical consideration but Mrs. Bousquet would have been able to give detailed information.

Mrs. Crichtlow then spoke on enrollment of the babies, urging no organization of these. A party for babies and parents occasionally or an occasional story hour for the four and five year olds was suggested.

Her main urge for parent classes either at the Sunday school hour or as a special project. She told of both the correspondence and supervised courses sent out by the different church boards of Christian education. She then suggested in small communities a Union Vacation School of Bible and Mission Study for the junior and primary children, using as nearly as possible the same teaching force as in the other children's work, thereby correlating all the work to the child's needs.

Lunch hour having arrived, the entire assemblage repaired to the spacious dining hall where the picnic lunches brought by the different ladies afforded an hour of pleasant diversion.

The afternoon session was conducted as a round table discussion. Questions asked were answered by different ones of the group or by Mrs. Crichtlow.

At the close a suggestion was made we try having quarterly Institutes. This will be discussed with Mrs. Raulins, District Director of Children in the District Board of Christian Education.

All regretted the absence of both Mrs. Raulins and Mrs. Swan. Rev. A. M. Wynn of Covington dismissed the Institute with prayer.

Nashville, Tennessee, for the price of sixty cents.

An adventure in friendship in their own community is being planned by the children of one community. These children are making booklets of old literature, Torchbearers, Haversacks, Boys and Girls being included, to give to the children of the negro Sunday school of their town. Could any adventure be finer?

In a recent issue of "The Parents Magazine," Miss Francis Perkins, Secretary of Labor, called attention to the fact that the number of boys and girls of school age who were gainfully employed had increased during the past few years. This, in spite of the fact that thousands of men walk the streets looking for work. The children of course work for starvation wages. Miss Perkins made an appeal that all states who do not have Child Labor Laws seek to get these passed at their next legislatures. She suggested that each individual who read the statement she had made, write to the Governor of the state and the representative from his Parish urging that these laws be passed. Unfortunately, Louisiana is not found listed among those states who have Child Labor Laws. If individuals, and groups of individuals, such as teachers in Church Schools, Parent-Teachers Associations, members of Missionary Societies and other organizations would write the suggested letters the cause in our state might be furthered. Certainly we should be willing to do anything possible to make more abundant living an actuality for these boys and girls who now work when they should be at school and at play.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

SURRENDER OR ADVANCE. The Methodist pastors and people of Louisiana and Mississippi are making a very important decision. Of course our office is waiting with anxious interest the outcome. We are moved, however, to remind our pastors and people that what they do is of far greater importance to them than it can possibly be to this little group, who have, with very slender support at times stood by and tried to have you your paper on time.

The Publishing Committee met last week and made a careful survey of the situation. They did not wish to assume responsibility for a decision that might prove unsatisfactory to our people. Remembering, therefore, the unanimous vote of the three Conferences to support the Advocate, they concluded to refer the matter to the pastors and churches for their decision.

We have been holding the line through a rather long and hard fight. The shells have been falling pretty thick about us. We have been expecting you to send up reinforcements. Our supplies are about exhausted. Still we are waiting word and action from you. We cannot advance; but we will not let go until we receive your word. Must we surrender or advance? We wait your orders.

For eighty years, almost the entire life of the Southern Methodist Church, the Advocate, has gone out on its weekly calls. It has passed through many difficult periods. It has not bowed to the depression. Now as things are beginning to take a turn for the better, shall we quit?

The Committee, upon investigation, could find no way out except the one they have proposed. There is no chance, as they see it, for a consolidation of any sort. Any other plan would require such support as will make our own Advocate a success.

Shall we surrender at a time when the line of religious journalism has grown thin, and when the public press, flanked by the movie and radio, though carrying much good, has marshalled greater forces to be used for the secularization of life?

Shall we surrender just when there seems to have been a redoubling of the forces of evil, backed by heavy propaganda that is already destroying some of our most valuable possessions?

Shall we surrender just when conditions, both at home and abroad, call so piteously to the church for some great commanding word of religious enlightenment and advance?

Shall we surrender upon the eve of the meeting in our territory of our great General Conference?

Shall we surrender just when our church should be preparing for the greatest advance in its history?

Shall we surrender just when the Publishing Committee has offered a plan by which, with even an average degree of concerted and heroic effort, the readers of the Advocate can be more than doubled?

Recently one of our Advocates spoke thus:

THE CHURCH

By Norman E. Richardson

I am the Church.
I am the institutional embodiment of the Gospel.
I am the social group by which the Kingdom of God is demonstrated.
I foster friendship within the beloved society of those who recognize themselves to be disciples of Jesus Christ.
I am the social guardian over the personalities of those who seek to do the will of God.
I am the corporate witness to the truth that points out for every man the way of life.
I conserve the spiritual achievements of prophetic and of mystic personalities.
I consecrate suitable persons to expound the sacred scriptures.
I safeguard the use of the holy sacraments of the faith.
I teach young and old the language with which they can worship holy things and engage in religious conversation.
I provide appropriate spheres of activity for religious leaders having various talents.
I guarantee the integrity and historic continuity of the religion first embodied in Jesus Christ.
I am the home-base for far-flung missionary endeavor.
I enlarge the horizons of spiritual knowledge and aspiration.
I maintain sanctuaries of worship.
I place the divine sanction upon the vows of those who, with unfeigned affection, desire to enter the marriage relationship.
I sanctify covenants of parents who dedicate their children to the Lord of righteousness and truth.
I supervise the religious nurture of children, youth and adults.
I provide an appropriate service for those who, in bereavement, take leave of loved ones.
I create public sentiment that encourages righteousness and restrains evil.
I give social encouragement, protection and comfort to those who desire, sincerely, to escape from evil, or who are called upon to suffer.
I am a venerable, yet youthful agency, through which the grace of God is made available to people throughout the earth.
Baltimore Southern Methodist.

"No absorption into our great Nashville Christian Advocate, or merger with other Advocates, can take the place of the Southern Christian Advocate in South Carolina Methodism. The ongoing of the Kingdom has been largely promoted through nearly one hundred years by this paper. It must and will go on. But it must have double its present subscription list and these must be gotten before our Annual Conferences."

Are you ready to speak that way for your Advocate? We shall know shortly.

We are waiting for two bishops, twenty presiding elders, 176 pastors and 205,000 members to tell us what to do.

Shall we surrender or advance?

KING SAUL LEARNED too late that he was a fool. His series of follies had gathered such momentum that, when he made the discovery, it was too late for him to turn back.

He goes on the search for David because of a consuming passion of jealousy and hate. He tracks him down as a criminal. Asleep at the mouth of the cave, David passes by and cuts off his coat-tail, sparing the King's life. Saul blubbers around and cries that David is more righteous than he. His remorse does not blossom into repentance that turns back. He takes David's trail again. Once again he lies down in the field for his night's sleep. David sends one of his men over and takes his canteen from his head. Holding it up he cries to the King. Saul rises to blubber again, "I have sinned: behold, I have played the fool."

Pretty soon he is seeking a witch through whom he hopes to catch some gleam of departing glory. A few days later, on Mount Gilboa, he falls on his sword, and dies the death of a fool. He learned too late that he was a fool.

KING DAVID made the discovery in time to do something about it. Howbeit, with all his repentance, the fruits of his folly fell thick upon his closing years and became a part of the snow that crowned his royal head. He had to pay for his folly. Not even God could save him from the folly he had sown in the soul of Absalom. As an old man he goes forth to reap, and at sunset, though pentinent, the harvest is not all gathered.

Psalms 51 is a monument to the genuineness and majesty of the repentance of King David. He learned that he was a fool in time to escape the pit. He had a friend called Nathan, who, with a steady finger, declared, "Thou art the man."

Pity we all don't have someone close by, posted near on our roads, to serve convincing notice upon us that we are fools in time to save us from an irreparable collapse.

KING SOLOMON, reputed to be the wisest of men, never did discover that he was a fool. This would have marked him as wise. He mis-read the meaning of his

CENTENARY COLLEGE

(Radio Address of Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs)

"Geography and chronology are the two eyes of history." It is very proper, therefore, that we think of Centenary in terms of geography and of chronology. Time and place have much to do with the life and work of us all, and this applies with equal force to institutions.

Centenary College first opened its doors in south Louisiana in the year 1825. It will open its 109th consecutive year on September 20, 1933, in the city of Shreveport. It is a memorable date which marks the completion of a century of service in the life of a man or in the history of an institution. We build on the past, in the present, and for the future. We take the long look backward in order to prepare for the long step forward.

Area Served

The area in which the college is now located embraces a large and noble part of three great states known to the general public as the Tri-State area. In this area there are at present two hundred and fifty thousand families representing a population of more than a million. They have an annual spendable income of $376,000,000, and the indications are that this amount will steadily increase as the Southwest continues to advance. It is not necessary for me to dwell upon the significance of these figures.

Board of Trustees

You must permit me, just here, to present the names of the Board of Trustees. You will observe that they represent practically every department of human endeavor, and that many of them are men well and widely known for their unselfish and successful labors in behalf of the State and of Society at large. They are devoting their talents, their time, their influence, their energies and their wealth to the high purpose of enabling the college to continue its work of training and equipping young men and women for intelligent citizenship and social service. It gives me genuine pleasure to speak their names with respect, appreciation, and pardonable pride. They are worthy of your utmost confidence and co-operation in the responsibility which has been placed upon them. The Board is composed of the following members: Mr. John B. Atkins, Mr. L. L. Beene, Mr. O. L. Biedenharn, Mr. S. H. Bolinger, Mr. Paul M. Brown, Rev. Henry T. Carley, Rev. Briscoe Carter, Mr. T. C. Clanton, Rev. W. L. Doss, Rev. W. W. Drake, Rev. W. L. Duren, Rev. S. J. Harman, Rev. W. W. Holmes, Mr. S. D. Hunter, Mr. J. B. Hutchinson, Mr. T. W. Holloman, Mr. Walter B. Jacobs, Mr. B. W. Marston, Mr. J. H. Jordan, Rev. H. L. Johns, Mr. Randle T. Moore, Mr. B. F. Roberts, Mr. John M. Robinson, Dr. John L. Scales, Rev. William Schuhle, Dr. W. Angie Smith, Mr. T. F. Whited.

Economics, Industry, Commerce, Law, Medicine, Finance, the Ministry, and Education, are all represented by the various members of the group just named, and the broad and deep range of their ability and influence would and will compare favorably with that of other groups in the life of the Southwest.

Administrative Supervision

The Board of Trustees have asked that an Executive Committee of nine be charged with the responsibility of meeting frequently and going thoroughly into the affairs of the college in co-operation with the newly elected president, Dr. Pierce Cline. The Executive Committee is composed of the following Trustees of the college: Mr. B. W. Marston, Mr. S. J. Harman, Mr. S. D. Hunter, Mr. W. B. Jacobs, Mr. Paul M. Brown, Mr. John B. Atkins, Dr. W. Angie Smith, Dr. Pierce Cline, Dr. John L. Scales, Hoyt M. Dobbs.

These gentlemen meet once a week and give to the business of Centenary College the same thought and care which they would give to any other important corporation with which they might be connected. Indeed, a number of them are very vitally related to the life of the Tri-State section in official and other capacities, and yet have found the time to devote their attention, as often as needed, to the welfare of the college. They believe, as do all the Trustees, that the values of life represented by Centenary College are the values which enrich and ennoble every community in which they are given recognition, and for the further reason that the highest ends to which ability and money can be applied are those of education and of character. In holding this view they find themselves in company with some of the ablest and most influential men in America. In all ages the men whose determinations have been swayed by the most distant ends have been held to possess the highest intelligence. This is pre-eminently true of those capitalists, philanthropists, and educators, of our own and of other times, who have seen the significance of education in human life and affairs—especially in a Democracy.

The Trustees of Centenary College represent the citizenship of the Tri-State circle, and have the conviction that the views just described are also the views of our whole people, and that in their efforts to enlarge the sphere of influence of Centenary College they are backed and supported by the more than one million people within our borders.

The college serves us all and we are all proportionately indebted to the college for its unceasing contribution to the total life of the people. Such a service deserves recognition upon our part, and happily recognition continues to be given, and should continue to be given by all alike.

Member Southern Association

Centenary enjoys not only this expression of our grateful confidence, but also has the seal of approval of the Southern Association of Colleges, guaranteeing full acceptance of all its credits in all Universities. Thirty-five highly trained and experienced professors and teachers are among Centenary's most highly valued possessions. After all, it is not so much buildings and equipment which makes a college—rather it is the type of character and scholarship, which it presents in those who teach and in those who are taught. The finest fruit which earth holds up to its Maker is the fruit of personality devoted to God and dedicated to the service of mankind. Upon such foundation Centenary College stands, and has stood for more than one hundred years. Wise men and women who take the long look to the future are very firm in their conviction that such institutions should not be allowed to perish from the earth.

In his address at the commemoration of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Harvard University, Dr. Daniel Coit Gilman, of Johns Hopkins, said: "From the revival of letters, five hundred years ago, until now, every advance in civilization has been dependent upon the influences which have proceeded from the seats of learning. Their light has illuminated the foremost civilizations of the world. In days to come, even more than in days that are past, their power for good will be felt upon the interests of mankind."

The Church and Education

The Church today adheres to its original purpose of keeping religion at the heart of education and education at the heart of religion. To speak of the one without the other is indeed a contradiction in terms. This is the conviction today of the wisest and most far-sighted moral leaders and educators of society. Until a man has found God and been found by Him, he begins at no beginning and works to no end. No other motivating principle is comparable to that of religion. It unifies the powers of personality, and sounds the ultimate depths of the human soul itself. It offers a single and dominant and worthy motive in ways so mysterious and so dynamic as to lead us to the conclusion that there is no true education without religion. It was Lord Macaulay who said that by far the greater part of all our human calamities have had no other origin than the union of high intelligence with low desires. History has no instance of a national character built up without the aid of religious instruction.

Recently a group of Educators of national renown met in another city to deliberate upon certain serious phases of education in America. With notable unanimity they declared that henceforth the primary purpose of the Colleges of Liberal Arts must be the "discovery of the meaning of life itself, and the achievement of its values." Commenting upon this, one of the great dailies of the world said that had been from the beginning their justification, and that it must become increasingly true in the United States of America from this time forward.

Higher Education and Religion

Occasionally we hear it said that higher education is hostile to religion and the spiritual life. Happily for us today there are many of our noblest educators and teachers who refute this in their life and character, and in their influences upon our student generation. It is indeed an infantile type of piety which apprehends that knowledge is fatal to reverence, devotion, and faith.

We ought to weigh and consider carefully the following words from one of America's greatest leaders in the realm of education:

"Individuals will err; generations will labor under false ideas; dominating intellects will for a time dazzle the ordinary mind; error, like disease, must be clearly understood before the mode of correction can be formulated; but there is no better way known to man, for securing intellectual and moral integrity than to encourage those habits, those methods, and those pursuits, which tend to establish the truth."

Cultural Opportunity

It would be a serious loss in the life of any community for it to be deprived of the cultural and practical values of its institutions of higher learning. For this reason the citizenship within our borders have diligently and faithfully seen to it that they were supported and sustained. It is ours in this new day to live up to their high standard and then to make every effort to improve upon it. For this reason and many others which might be assigned, I have been charged by the Board and by the Executive Committee to make this statement to the people of the Southwest, with the belief that you will hear it gladly and that you will avail yourselves of that which our section affords as inducements to talented young men and women about to enter upon the life-shaping experiences of a college career.

"It requires great wisdom and industry to advance a considerable estate; much art and contrivance and pains to raise a great and regular building; but the greatest and noblest work in the world, and an effect of the greatest prudence and care, is to rear and build up a man, and to form and fashion him to piety, and justice, and temperance, and all other kinds of honest and worthy action."

I invite the co-operation of all right-thinking men and women in the advancements of such enterprises.

A VISIT TO SERGEANT YORK'S SCHOOL AND HOME

By Dr. H. C. Morrison

On Sunday, May 21, it was our privilege to preach the commencement sermon at the Alvin York Agricultural Institute, near Jamestown, Tenn. We secured a young man to handle the steering wheel of our old Dodge, and Wife went with me. It is a little more than 200 miles from Louisville to Jamestown. We passed through the following county seats: Shelbyville, Lawrenceburg, Harrodsburg, Danville, Stanford, Somerset, Monticello, and Albany, over the Tennessee line, and into Jamestown, Tenn., at 4 o'clock p.m.

We left Louisville a few minutes after four in the morning and enjoyed the invigorating fresh air, stopping for breakfast in Danville, a little rest in Somerset, dinner in Monticello, and after a short visit with Principal Brier in Jamestown, down to Sergeant York's for the night. We had a delightful visit with the York family. A man would travel a long way to find a finer Christian character and a more delightful gentleman than the great hero of the World War. Mrs. York is a fine wife and mother. There are four York boys and a healthy, sweet baby girl. One of the boys is named Alvin Junior, the second Woodrow Wilson, the third Edward Buxton and the fourth Andrew Jackson; little Miss York is named Betsy Ross. I had a fine visit with these healthy boys. They got out in the yard and showed me how they could walk on their hands. I got a paddle and spanked each one with love licks to be remembered. They had a pet squirrel and they let it out of the cage into the porch and we had a romp with it. It finally returned to its cage for rest and security.

Sergeant York has a nice home, a large farm between Wolf River and a beautiful hill making, all told, some 400 acres. He is a very busy man looking after his farm, traveling far and wide speaking to vast crowds on prohibition. He had just returned from an extensive campaign for the Anti-Saloon League in the state of New York, where he spoke to immense audiences.

The Sargeant is constantly having various propositions; not long since he was offered $100 a minute for ten minutes to speak over the radio for a certain cigarette company, but you may be sure he turned it down. A few years ago he was offered $50,000 a day for three days, $150,000 in all, if he would go into the woods of Tennessee with a group of men and re-act the celebrated battle in which he won such marked distinction in the Argonne. He promptly refused the offer because he greatly regrets the degradation of the modern moving picture and determined not to be connected with it. It is interesting, and calls for gratitude that this big, brave, devout Tennessee mountaineer cannot be bought to violate his conscience for any amount of money.

He showed wife and myself the big spring from
He showed Wife and myself the big spring from

he learned and worked at his blacksmith trade, the bench in the old Methodist church where he was converted, the place in the woods where he waited for hours before God until he got the assurance that he should go to war, pass through the conflict and come home without a scratch, which he did. The Sergeant gave us a most interesting description of the battle in which he distinguished himself. It took place early one morning after he had spent six hours lying prone upon his face in prayer. He then passed through a perfect storm of rapid-fire guns where men were swept down like grass before a sickle, without the touch or smell of fire upon his garments.

We found a beautiful school building in a wonderful pine forest with a great chapel, packed to overflowing. We understood many were turned away for lack of sitting or standing room. They have a fine student body; there were twenty-eight graduates. The girls' and boys' glee club sang to the delight of the people. We met a number of fine teachers and a host of excellent people.

Brother Smith, the beloved pastor of the M. E. Church, South, invited me to preach in his church in Jamestown, Sunday evening, which I did. We had a fine congregation, and it looked as if they were ripe for a revival. A number came forward for prayer. Pastor Smith is a fine young man and they spoke very highly of him.

We had a visit never to be forgotten. We were up, dressed and out in our car a good long way down the mountain road toward home before sun-up. After a run of 77 miles we took breakfast in Somerset and pulled into Louisville in time for lunch.

We have the promise of Sergeant York to be with us at the Wilmore camp meeting, July 20-30. Be sure to come and camp and hear this wonderfully interesting man who is now fighting out the greatest battle of his life for sobriety and the salvation of the people.

Six of the towns through which we passed are places in which I have held revival meetings. Many memories came up before me, and the blessed hope that in the by and by I can meet again with those I knew and loved in these places where we labored together for the salvation of our fellow beings.—The Pentecostal Herald.

JOHN CLANTON CHAMBERS ✓

By Rev. I. H. Sells

John Clanton Chambers, son of Rev. John Wesley and Mrs. Elizabeth Chambers, was born in Camden, Miss., August 18, 1885, and died on Jackson, Miss., June 5, 1933.

John C. Chambers had all the advantages of the average parsonage home, and some besides. His father was both an acceptable preacher and a schoolmaster of no mean ability. It was from his parents that he received most of his elementary training, but little of his work being done within the confines of the class room. From his home he entered Millsaps College, from which he graduated at the early age of 17 years. Later he attended Vanderbilt University for one year. Soon after completing his course at Millsaps College he went west for awhile on account of his health.

John Chambers was marked for the ministry from his birth. Upon one occasion, while clerking in a mercantile establishment, he was asked what he expected to make his life work. He intended saying he expected to become a business man, but when the words came from his lips they were, "I expect to become a preacher." Upon another occasion after he had surrendered to the call of the ministry, he so wrote his father, only to receive the reply, "Why, John, I knew that before you were born."

J. C. Chambers was licensed to preach March 22, 1905, and was immediately appointed supply pastor on the Plainview Mission, Northwest Texas Conference. He was admitted on trial into that Conference that fall; was received into full connection and ordained deacon at the Conference which met in Amarillo, Tex., in the fall of 1907, Bishop Candler presiding. At the Conference of 1907 he was appointed student in Vanderbilt University, and pursued his studies there until called to Laurel by the illness of his father, whose junior preacher he became, serving First Church, Laurel, from May to December, 1908. He was transferred that fall to the Mississippi Conference and stationed at Ellisville. Here his father and mother made their home with him until the death of the former, on April 11, 1909. He was ordained elder in the fall of 1909, the Conference meeting at Brookhaven, Bishop E. E. Hoss presiding.

The following charges and appointments were served by Brother Chambers: Northwest Texas Conference, Plainview Mission, 1905-1906; Claytonville Mission, 1906-1907; Mississippi Conference, First Church, Laurel, May-December, 1908; Ellisville, 1909-1910-1911; Collins, 1912-13-14; Sumrall, 1915-16; Newton, 1917. At the Conference meeting in Vicksburg in the fall of 1917 he was appointed Sunday School Field Secretary. This and kindred offices being filled by him until the day of his death. At the time of his death he was the oldest Conference Educational Secretary in the Church.

Brother Chambers was a tireless worker. He gave himself to every task assigned to his care, and faithfully performed every duty placed upon him. As a pastor, he was faithful. He loved his people and they knew it by the way he served them. As a preacher, he was diligent. He loved the scriptures and made every effort to make his interpretation clear to his congregation. As Sunday School Field Secretary and Educational Secretary, he made it his task to know his work. I have heard numbers of workers say there was no man in the Church that knew the work better than he did. His opinions were sought by the leaders in the educational field of the Church. Possibly the greatest contribution he made was in the field of the small church. This was brought about by the fact of the large number of such churches in his Conference. He thought in terms of them and worked for their welfare. Well did he know that it would have been better for him to return to the pastorate. Had he done so, it might have added years to his life. But he felt that the educational work was to him a call of God and his Church, and he could not ask to be relieved from it. Thus it was that he gave his life, working until the last, for others. Just before being taken to the hospital Sunday afternoon, June 4, he had his wife call Brother Cain in Hattiesburg, and relay a message to him regarding the work of the Young People's Assembly which was to meet the next day. He died as he lived, with faith in God and mankind, busy about the work of the Lord.

John C. Chambers had many admirable qualities. He loved people and had faith in them. He knew not what it was to harbor hatred or malice in his heart. He could face open opposition with greater grace than any one I have ever known. He would never allow it to affect his work. Regardless of the opinion of others, he addressed himself to the task at hand and did his work; the others might not only refuse to do theirs, but even attempt to hinder him. He preached a gospel of forgiveness, and lived it to the last.

On the 5th of April, 1911, J. C. Chambers was married to Miss Ethel Weems, of Shubuta, Miss. To this union seven children were born—John C., Jr., Billie, Albert, Sallie, Irma, Mary Alice and Elizabeth Morris. These, with his mother, Mrs. L. D. Chambers, two brothers, Morris and Sam, and five sisters, Mrs. Mary Nimochs, Mrs. Mittie Sullivan, Mrs. Lurline Bennett, Mrs. Daisy Adams and Mrs. Sarah Carter, remain to mourn his going.

On the evening of June 6, 1933, his body was tenderly laid away in his home city, there to await the resurrection morn. The services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. Jos. A. Smith, assisted by the following ministers: J. L. Decell, J. P. Campbell, B. L. Sutherland, R. H. B. Gladney, A. W. Martin, and the writer.

We shall miss him. No longer shall we see him here, but he continues to live with us in memory and influence. Well did he work! His works shall follow him, and many in that day shall rise up and call him blessed. May the work for which he gave his life live in the hearts of his brethren until we, too, are called home, there to continue our friendship through the endless ages of eternity.

"Soldier of Christ, well done!
Praise be thy new employ;
And while eternal ages run,
Rest in thy Saviour's joy."

Carthage, Miss.

WE OPPOSE REPEAL

By Dr. Clarence True Wilson

Because beer is still intoxicating liquor. That is, one can get drunk on it. Alcohol is still a habit-forming, irritant, depressant, narcotic drug. It ought not to be sold for beverage purposes, but only for medicinal, sacramental, scientific and mechanical uses. Prohibition was right when adopted. It was right in principle and had proven itself efficient in practice. Thirty states had tried it and found it the only method of dealing with the liquor habit and traffic. The 18th Amendment was the summit of the wisdom of a hundred and twenty years of a nation's experiment by communities, counties and states. It succeeded where ever tried. It was not tried under Mellon, or Harding, or Hoover. It was just betrayed.

Because you can only get rid of the 18th Amendment by adopting the Twenty-First. The Twenty-First would imbed in the Constitution of our country the outlawed liquor traffic as having rights constitutional and permanent to re-establish its institutions—breweries, distilleries, wineries, saloons, brothels, gambling halls. Every restricted district in the United States was conducted under the patronage, partnership and protection of the Brewers Association; and it will be so again with constitutional rights added, if the repeal Amendment prevails. This decent nation ought not to write the liquor traffic into its Charter of Liberty. One may be confused as to the merits or logic of prohibition, but can an honest man be confused to such an extent that he wants to write privileges for the liquor traffic into his country's Constitution? We think not.

Because while temptations must needs come, the government ought not to go into partnership with the devil in organizing temptation for mankind, for womankind, and for childhood. Men may get liquor under prohibition if they hunt it; but under repeal, liquor will hunt men on every street corner, highway and cross road. "It is the province of government to make it easy for men to do right and difficult for them to do wrong." Gladstone. "The purpose of law is to permit what is right and to prohibit what is wrong."—Blackstone.

Because we think that ideals of a Christian nation ought not to be dragged down, crushed and buried during periods of moral slump. We should leave some principles standing even if we are "money mad," "beer crazy," "obsessed with depressions" and "looney" in hallucinations that beer will make the poor man pay the rich man's taxes; that beer of the same alcoholic content that used to make men drunk and the saloon a dive, is now a temperance beverage and its place of sale respectable. I told a Senator, "Man shall not live by beer alone," and he looked surprised.

Because if we let down the bars the other kind of bars will take their place. We are told the wets wanted a fair referendum. They gave us wet planks in all platforms and wet candidates so that there was no place for a conscientious dry to go. They promised in all platforms that the saloon should never return, but there were no wets trying to keep the saloon out when beer legislation was on. They wanted to make a saloon of every place that would apply for a selling license. They told the world that the bad features of liquor would be eliminated. The worst features were brewery-owned saloons, gambling hell accompaniments to saloons, brothels upstairs, Sunday hang-outs for criminals, treating to make men drink more than they needed and more than they wanted, selling intoxicants to minors, selling to inebriates, selling all night, selling on Sundays, keeping open on election day. Has any wet Congressman or Senator in America tried to eliminate one of these evils? Is there any plan to eliminate the saloon on the part of the party now in power, or of the leaders who were voted out of power for their perfidy? I know of no plan to fulfill one promise made to the dries before and during the election. The only way America can rebuke this perfidy and falsehood by which millions were deceived is to sustain the Eighteenth Amendment and let the Supreme Court, the Congress and the States line up to this standard.

This is a day when the moral, the religious, the patriotic, the honest and the decent should rally their forces to the rescue of their ideals sought to be trampled into the mire by a money-mad populace—worshippers of Mammon, all. If repeal is resisted, the Eighteenth Amendment is intact, the Supreme Court will throw out the beer legislation as unconstitutional, the present administration will have an oath registered in Heaven "to protect, defend and preserve the Constitution," and the President seeing the will of the American people will be the first President to take this oath seriously and actually enforce prohibition before our eyes. He will take the stain off of his name as the signer of the Beer Bill and write his name high in the annals of our history as turning the next moral epoch to Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation. The one got rid of slavery, and the other will get rid of a dominating liquor traffic. Which will look better to our children and our children's children,—to have history say that we met the crisis and sustained our ideals, or that we turned yellow in the crisis, withdrew from the battle front and let the enemy take the nation?

unusual position. He was impressed with his own grandeur which blinded his eyes. He presumed upon his glory reading it as a special privilege to licentiousness. "The King can do no wrong." He mis-read the visions of his youth and discounted them as mere dreams, phantasms, laying no obligations upon him. They were to be smiled at and dismissed with a wave of the hand.

He wrote his folly in the multitude of wives who dissipated his glory and mixed it with mud. He wrote it in diluting the religion of Jehovah and weakening it with the vice of pagan worship. He wrote it by mis-reading the life of his people and by building his kingdom upon the sands of a profligate court.

Jesus said his glory was too profane to be matched with the artless and effortless beauty of a lily, and less durable.

King Solomon failed, in his wisdom, to learn that it is the part of wisdom to recognize one's folly and depart from it.

The march of the kings: King David learned that he was a fool in time to repent of his blunders; King Saul learned too late that he was a fool and his tears availed him nothing; King Solomon, wisest of all, most foolish of all; in his vast ignorance, Sampson of intelligence, he pulled the kingdom of his folly down upon himself destroying himself and his people.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Mrs. Thos. B. Ahney, McComb, Miss., has forwarded a good list of subscriptions.

Mrs. M. E. Joyce, of Jackson, Miss., writes in flattering terms about the Advocate.

Rev. A. J. Davis, Decatur, Miss., sends in some renewals. Thank you, Brother Davis.

Rev. P. B. Fullilove, Rienzi, Miss., would like to help some of the brethren in revival work this summer.

Rev. J. E. Lawhon assisted Rev. G. C. Schwartz in a revival at Main Street Church, Water Valley, Miss., recently.

"Seems that the Advocate gets better all the time. I cannot get on without it." Mrs. Sallie Phillips, Pollock, La.

Rev. T. B. Winstead, pastor at DeKalk, Miss., sends in a list of subscriptions and says that he is looking after others.

First Church, Crowley, La., recently observed the fourth anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. C. K. Smith. We extend congratulations.

We are all glad to know that Jimmie Mattern has been found and that plans are under way for the continuance of his pioneering solo world flight.

Rev. G. C. Gregory assisted in a revival at Okolona, Miss., where his brother, Rev. T. E. Gregory, is in his fifth year as pastor.

Bishop H. A. Boaz is reported to be improving rapidly since his recent illness, but will be forced to cancel some of his engagements for the summer.

Rev. T. B. Cottrell, pastor Fayette, Miss., paid us a happy call during a recent visit to the city of New Orleans. Brethren, when in town, always call by.

Rev. J. W. Robertson, pastor of Dublin and Mattson Charge, Miss., has combined the two churches for worship. They are just two or three miles apart.

Rev. B. W. Waltman, Baker, La., writes of a great meeting at his place in which the Presbyterians participated. Great crowds attended. Twenty-three members came into our church.

WE KNEW IT, BUT THANK YOU JUST THE SAME

In the absence of the Editor, who is spending several days with his mother in Mississippi, the Chairman of the Publishing Committee entered into a conspiracy with the Business Manager to reprint the following compliment from the pen of Dr. James R. Joy in the New York Christian Advocate of July 6. Dr. Joy, editor of the General Organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in commenting on an editorial in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of June 15, under the caption, "Consider the House of Morgan," has the following to say concerning the ability of our Editor:

"It is an awkward question that Editor D. B. Raulins asks on the front page of the New Orleans Christian Advocate (one of the most arresting Methodist editorial pages in the country!). He has been discussing the senatorial inquiry into the operations of the House of Morgan and other New York bankers, and he suddenly plumps this, straight from the shoulder:

"Why in the world do these men not repent and straighten out instead of attempting to explain and make alibis? Why do they not just plainly say they were wrong and ask the country for a chance to prove a change of heart and method?"

We thank you, Dr. Joy, and congratulate you, Dr. Raulins!

visions for the Co-eds next year. You better write and ask him about it. It looks good to me.

Large crowds attended the services at Gore Springs, Duck Hill, Miss., charge last Sunday to hear Dr. W. N. Duncan, presiding elder, deliver an inspiring sermon. Rev. S. B. Potts is the pastor.

Commander W. N. Thomas, member of the Mississippi Conference, and formerly stationed at Pearl Harbor, T. H., has been transferred to the United States Naval Academy, where he will serve as chaplain.

Dr. J. R. Countiss is busy this summer in the interest of Grenada College. The prospects are for a good attendance. He recently preached for Rev. T. M. Bradley at West Point and interviewed a number of students in that territory.

Rev. S. J. McLean, pastor at Morgan City, La., is just up from an operation for appendicitis. We are happy to see him out on the porch today, and trust that his recovery may be rapid and complete with a margin of greater strength.

On another page, or appearing shortly, you will find an appreciation of Rev. Jno. C. Chambers, written by a young person. It is a youth's appreciation of a friend of youth. How I do miss him, too. I am so glad he passed my way. He was a prince.

Our work at Canton, Miss., is far from discouraging. Rev. L. E. Alford, pastor, reports good attendance both at Sunday school and preaching services. Mrs. Alford and her two daughters have been visiting her sister in Tampa, Fla., for the past three weeks.

Rev. J. Thurlow Barrett, 509 S. Murat St., New Orleans; a ministerial student of our church, appointed the last school year to Vanderbilt, is available for assistance in revival meetings during the summer, giving special attention to singing and young people's work.

Mrs. W. Lee Haley, Rayville, La., renewing the subscription of her mother, tells how, though a helpless invalid, this good mother continues to read and appreciate her church paper. May this patient sufferer have great peace and increased consciousness of the nearness of God.

The Clisby Bible Class and the Younger Adult Bible Class at West Point, Miss., had a three months' contest for attendance. The interest was fine. Mrs. B. L. Smith, Jr., teaches the Clisby class and Prof. B. T. Schumpert and Mrs. J. W. Belk teach the two Younger Adult Bible classes.

Looking over the papers we find that the Presbyterian, Methodist and Episcopal churches of Brookhaven, Miss., following a practice of former years, have pooled their Sunday evening efforts for the summer. The pastors take turns in conducting the services, sometimes meeting in open air places.

Rev. J. E. Stephens, our pastor at Lexington, Miss., will lead a group of intermediate boys to the World's Fair at Chicago this summer. He will be a good guide for the boys, as he spent several summers at Northwestern University and is fairly familiar with the interesting sights in and around Chicago.

Rev. J. A. Biffle, our pastor at Greenwood Springs, Miss., has started on his summer campaign of revivals on his charge. He has nine churches and he holds a revival in each church. If he cannot get help he goes right ahead and holds his own meeting. We have no more faithful, true man than Brother Biffle.

We thought Rev. A. C. Lawton, pastor of the Gibsland, La., charge had gone fishing. We had not heard from him in such a long time. Then all of a sudden here came a list of eight subscriptions and a letter, saying, "This puts the Advocate in every home in this church. We are putting the drive on in the other churches next week." We are putting your name in the Hall of Fame, Brother Lawton.

"Did it rain? Yes. Was it needed? Yes. It was a million dollar rain. Sixty-three people managed to worship at the Methodist church Sunday afternoon, despite the blessed rain. And the service was delightful in every way. That man Boone sure did sing, and that man Stormont sure did preach. And the quarterly conference that followed was in every way creditable." Thus writes the pastor, Dr. Jas. H. Felts, in the Grenada Sentinel.

President Pierce Cline of Centenary College recently addressed the congregation of Tallulah, La., Methodist Church upon the invitation of Rev. W. H. Giles, the pastor. "Christian Education" was the subject discussed by President Cline. He stressed the necessity of moral integrity and social responsibility as a part of well-rounded education, saying, "Education requires depth as well as breadth. It requires good purpose as well as ability."

Camp Manager, Rev. C. E. McLean, stands up to say to the young people of this Baton Rouge District, "If you failed to get to attend Mansfield Assembly, we have brought one down close to you. Bluff Creek Camp opens August 1, 2 p.m., to close August 5, 2 p.m. Young people from adjoining districts may attend upon the same terms, $4 for the period. Bring your equipment, including a pair of blankets." See fuller announcement on Christian Education page.

Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Purcell, Dade City, Fla., (Brother Purcell, a former member of the Mississippi Conference) are not seeking a divorce court, judging from a recent account in a Florida paper. They, with a large group of church friends, recently celebrated the Twenty fifth Anniversary of their wedding. They had flowers and music, too. They are very happily setting out on their second quarter century of married life. Congratulations and bon voyage.

The program of the North Mississippi Conference Historical Society at Water Valley will be grouped around the organization of the Conference at Water Valley, 1870. Rev. J. J. Brooks and Rev. S. A. Miller, ministers present at the organization, and Mr. J. B. Streater, F. A. Howell and P. A. Dulin, laymen present at the organization, will give items of interest concerning that first meeting. Rev. E. S. Lewis is president of the Historical Society and Rev. H. P. Lewis is secretary.

"I find it a good time to cling to the Bible. Have made it a rule all my Christian life to read my Bible daily. In 1930 I made the rule to read it through yearly. I have now read it through fourteen times in thirteen years. The last time I read it through in eighty days. I love it more and more every day. Many new thoughts come to me at each reading. Waldo W. Moore, Bucatunna, Miss." Dr. G. Campbell Morgan said, "You can read the Bible through in sixty hours at pulp rate." Seems more people would make a practice of such reading as Brother Moore suggests.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, pastor at Ripley, Miss., continues to have success in his work. He has recently been teaching at the Seashore Pastors' School. Brother Woollard is an example of a man keeping up with the forward interests of his church. He has seen experience as a pastor on circuits, many stations, and has served all over the Conference as presiding elder. He is master of church history and discipline, well informed on parliamentary procedure and the law of the church. When the Judicial Council is being formed at the General Conference they should look carefully into his qualifications.

There is to be a Discussion Conference at Mt. Sequoyah, August 16-22. Topics and leaders: "The Kind of Preaching Needed Today, Bishop Paul B. Kern;" "The Economic Crisis and its Bearing in the Church," Dr. Alva W. Taylor, Vanderbilt; "The Significance of Present World Conditions," Dr. Geo. B. Winton, Dean Vanderbilt School of Religion; "Re-Thinking Missions," Dr. A. W. Wasson, Professor S. M. U.; "The Character of God," Dr. C. M. Bishop, Professor S. M. U.; "Present-Day Movements in Religion," Dr. R. R. Paty, Professor Emory University; "Social Problems and the Church," Dr. R. E. Smith, Dean Emeritus, Centenary College. Wish I could go up and take 500 preachers and laymen.

The Rayne Memorial Church in New Orleans, of which Dr. W. W. Holmes is pastor, has made quite a departure from the ordinary in the nature of the Sunday evening services. These services are held in the auditorium of the Educational Building, which, on the hottest nights, is delightfully cool. The programs vary from a red-hot evangelistic sermon to a play or pageant. Last Sunday night two of the leading laymen of the church, members of the official board, M. F. Amrine and S. H. Colvin, debated the question: Resolved, "That Evangelism has done more to promote the Kingdom of God than has Education." Fellowship and larger participation are emphasized in all these services. Congregational singing of the great hymns is one of the popular features. This night service is quite different from that of the morning. The people seem to like both of them. The church is growing rapidly. Eighty-five new members have joined the church since conference.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE PROGRAM OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

By Dr. Wm. F. Quillian, General Secretary

At the meeting of the General Board of Christian Education the following action was taken:

"Motion of Rev. J. Emerson Ford prevailed that the President and General Secretary of this Board be requested to prepare a statement emphasizing the place and importance of maintaining the Annual Conference program of Christian education for publication in the Yearbook and otherwise in their discretion."

Pending the adoption of this motion, Bishop Mouzon spoke as follows:

"Let me call your attention to the peril that our work faces in having our Annual Conferences cut down their budgets. When you look at the budget of an Annual Conference Board of Christian Education naturally it seems to be large in comparison with the budgets of other boards. However, you must remember that this Board is carrying on the work of three boards, and the work of the Annual Conference Board is carried on in three departments. I have found in certain Annual Conferences a tendency to decline to employ an executive secretary, and that supposedly in the interest of economy. That is false economy. This Board cannot do its work efficiently, no matter how efficient the work is done here in the central office, unless the efficient work that is done here is carried down to the Annual Conferences. I am asking the members of the Board as they go to their homes to do some work in the interest of Christian education. Let us not, in the interest of economy, cripple the work of Christian education. I might say even more at this point, but you know the peril we face."

The work of promoting Christian education in the Annual Conference is of strategic and far-reaching importance. The new legislation contemplates that the program of Christian education shall be mediated to the Annual Conference through competent and trained Conference officers. For this reason it is of supreme importance that the executive secretary and, where possible, other officers be continued in order that the total program of Christian education may be carried forward.

On behalf of the General Board of Christian Education, we therefore respectfully request the co-operation of our bishops, presiding elders, and Conference leaders throughout the connection in maintaining capable officers in each Annual Conference.

Pastor, Canton Methodist Church.

PREPARATION FOR SERVICE—A WORD TO YOUNG PEOPLE

By J. L. Cuninggim, President Scarritt College

I am moved to say a word to the splendid young people of the Church about their preparation for service. So much has been heard of late about depression, retrenchment, reduced income, unemployment, and the like, that many, I find, are at a loss to know what to do. They are asking, "Should I go on with my preparation? How can I meet the expense of my training? Will there be any opening for me?"

It is time, it seems to me, to emphasize the fact that the Church has not gone out of business. Of course, we have been passing through very difficult conditions, money has been scarce, retrenchments have been necessary, many are out of employment—all this is true. But this is not all the truth. God still has lots of work to be done in the world. He is going to need men and women, many of them, who are thoroughly prepared for His service. Are you prepared? Do not worry about a position. Get ready to do the Lord's work better than it has been done, and I am sure He will use you. He needs the very best.

The Lord may use you in a way that you do not anticipate. Many local churches have found it necessary to retrench and are not in position just now to employ a director of religious education or pastor's assistant. But the work is still there to be done. Probably more than half of the community is quite indifferent to the church, and a large part of the membership sorely in need of Christian training. The Mission Board and other denominational agencies have been forced to curtail their programs, but the Kingdom of God has not yet been realized. In the days ahead we must have a rebirth of missions, a new social conscience, a new passion for saving men and society, a new program for realizing the Kingdom of God. All this will require a host of men and women thoroughly prepared in mind and heart to do the Lord's work.

So earnestly do we at Scarritt believe that an increased number of thoroughly prepared workers will soon be needed, that we feel it important just now to make special efforts to meet their need. Therefore, the Scarritt curriculum has been revised and expanded to provide training for various types of social and religious workers, and the opportunities have been greatly enriched by making more available the courses offered in co-operating institutions. Furthermore, in order to encourage young people, in spite of difficult conditions, to continue their preparation for effective service, Scarritt is endeavoring to assist financially, as far as possible, those who are able to comply with its requirements. This is not the time for young people who wish to do Christian work to slacken their effort; rather should they redouble their effort for the best possible preparation. And as an institution of the Church, Scarritt College counts it a privilege to co-operate with such young people to the limit of its ability.

BROTHER CHAMBERS, FRIEND OF YOUNG PEOPLE

By Ida Louise Alford

"I'll ask Brother Chambers about it."

This was a familiar expression of many of the young people of the Mississippi Conference. We never hesitated to go to Brother Chambers, who was always ready and willing to help us, to advise us. Nothing we ever did was too small for his attention. When we accomplished something we wanted Brother Chambers to know, because we knew he would be glad.

Then, suddenly, he left us, and we asked each other, stunned, bewildered, "How can we get along without him?"

He was our friend, the friend of young people everywhere. Possessing all the qualities of a truly great man, he was ever sympathetic, always thoughtful about the little things, and with the ability to understand us to an extent that seemed beyond human power, and we loved him for it. He was perfectly honest with us and inspired us to be so. Never will I forget his saying of young people, "Just trust them. Trust them again and again." Could we betray a trust like that?

Truly he gave us an example of a deeply consecrated Christian life that we will never forget. Because we have known him our hearts will be purer and our lives will be truer to the cause of Christ, whom our friend, Brother Chambers, so faithfully and so truly served.

Sergeant York, World War hero, recently urged the citizens of his state to disregard Postmaster General Farley's appeal and vote to keep the 18th Amendment in our Constitution.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE YOUNG PEOPLE'S NEWS

Want to know the figures from the Assemblies at Mansfield this Summer? Well, here they are: Christian Adventure Assembly, 158 in attendance, 98 credits, and 3 Christian Adventure Diplomas issued; Young People's Assembly, 204 in attendance, 139 credits, and 11 Christian Culture Diplomas. These have been the biggest and best in the fifteen years of Assemblies in Louisiana Conference. Our job now is, to prepare for next year's Assemblies, to make them even better. EVERY Young People's Division in Louisiana should include in their budget a good-sized Delegate Fund. And start RIGHT NOW to raise it!

Marjorie Haggart writes to say that the Lake Charles District Camp plans are well under way. They are to have two—a Christian Adventure Camp, August 7-12, and a Young People's Camp, August 14-19. Both will be at Lake Arthur. Board and registration for the entire five days is FIVE dollars! What's all this talk about inflation? Miss Sharland Myers of Rayne is Dean of the Christian Adventure Camp, and Rev. A. K. (Mac) McLellan is Dean of the Young People's Camp. Other leaders will be Miss Hazel Lea Nowell of Mansfield, Rev. E. V. Duplantis of Gueydan, Rev. A. M. Serex of New Iberia, Miss Mary Searles of Baton Rouge, and Mr. Charles Carver of Lafayette. Lake Charles District should have history making camps this year.

The Algiers Young People have decided to Clean Up. They are working on the idea that an attractive worship room makes for a more attractive and inspirational worship service. And they're certainly right. How about it? Is your League Room clean? Or is it full of several years' dust and spider webs? Remember, environment counts a lot in a worship service!

Does your Department have a Publicity Superintendent? Does he do anything? Does he know what he's supposed to do? Do you know who your Union Publicity Superintendent is? Does he stimulate work throughout your Union through suitable publicity? Let's have active officers! If your officer isn't active, maybe a push from you is all he needs. How about administering it?

The Carrollton Young People's Division of New Orleans had a very interesting musical program on Thursday, July 6. The New Orleans University Male Chorus, a double quartet, presented a musical epoch, entitled, "The Black Bards." This was a musical history of the development of Afro-American Music, including, "Farewell Africa," "Enslavement in America," "Freedom," and "Achievement." Such programs are always welcome.

We received our copy of "Union News" the other day, and are indebted to it for some of this week's news. This magazine is the monthly publication of the New Orleans City Union. It keeps things alive down there! A real publication is "Unlonews." If you'd like to subscribe to it for a year, to keep in touch with what another Union is doing, send fifty cents to the Ed. "TODAY WILL BE YESTERDAY TO-MORROW"

A Personal Letter!

Pastors, Councillors, Presidents
Young People's Divisions,
Baton Rouge District,

Dear Friends:

The Young People's Christian Culture Camp, planned to take place August 1-5 at Bluff Creek, should be the chief objective of every Pastor, Counsellor, and President in our district during the next few weeks. Wherever there is a live Young People's Organization that is "doing things," one can pretty nearly guess that the leaders have had training at the Assembly or at a Christian Culture Camp.

From information coming in from different points over the district the attendance this year at Bluff Creek is going to surpass all previous records. The faculty and leaders among the young people are going to do all in their power to make real the theme: "Paths To Power." May I suggest that a place be provided in the worship services in the Young People's Divisions for a special prayer for the Young People's Christian Culture Camp at Bluff Creek? If this could be done each Sunday at both the morning worship period and at the Young People's meeting in the evening, this would go a long way toward making Camp the spiritual experience it should be.

Please do not let this letter and program get covered up and lost. Can we not keep this opportunity for training in Christian living alive? Can we not mark the dates, August 1-5, on our calendars? Can we not put Bluff Creek Young People's Camp on our personal prayer list?

Think of the cost—only $4.00. One dollar registration; three dollars, board.

"While some people are saying, 'It can't be done,' they are constantly being surprised by somebody doing it."

I covet for everyone attending the Camp the most creative Christian experience possible.

Remember, those who come expecting credit must be within the ages 16-23.

COUNTING ON YOU!

Your Comrades in the Kingdom,
G. W. DAMERON,
Dean Young People's Christian Culture Camp.
K. W. DODSON,
Presiding Elder and Ex-Officio Dean.

A LITTLE NEWS FROM BROOKSVILLE CHARGE

If silence wins space, it is your time to listen or read, but we believe we have a better motive, for we are doing a few things worthy of notice.

The various organizations of the church are working well and in proportion to their value. Our prayer meetings have increased in number from fifteen in the early part of the year to sixty, and nearly every attendant take some part in the services. The interest in the Epworth Leagues have been fine. We have had excellent congregations at our morning preaching services. Our revival meeting held recently seemed to do a great deal of good. Brother J. A. George did the preaching. I have never worked with a more deeply consecrated man nor one who gave himself more completely to his work. God is blessing his ministry. We have just closed a Daily Vacation Bible School in which all of the churches of the town participated. I do not think that any kind of church work does more good than a school of this kind. It created the interest of both old and young, and on Friday night, the night of its closing, the crowd was even far beyond what was expected. Our finances are coming on slowly but surely.

R. T. HOLLINGSWORTH.

CHECKING UP EXPENDITURES

"I bought gasoline; I went to the show;
I bought some new tubes for my old radio;
I bought some candy and peanuts, nut bars and ice cream.
While my salary lasted, life sure was a scream.
It takes careful planning to make money go round.
One's method of finance must always be sound.
With habits quite costly, it's real hard to save,
My wife spent 'ten bucks' on a permanent wave.
The church came round begging; it sure made me sore—
If they'd let me alone, I'd give a lot more.
They have plenty of nerve; they forget all the past,
For I gave them a quarter the year before last."
Was that somebody you?—Selected.

NEWS ITEMS

Mrs. B. T. Gallaher, district secretary of the Minder district has organized several Woman's Missionary Societies among the colored women of her district and has formed them into a zone, known as Zone Six. Their meetings are well attended and they have taken as an objective the sending of one person to Paine College.

At the May meeting of the Board of Missions, five women were accepted for work in foreign fields under the Department of Woman's Work: Miss Mary O. Holler, China; Miss Evelyn Dacus, Korea; Miss Fannie Wesley and Miss Cathie Lee Clark, Brazil; Miss Monta McFaddin, Mexico.

The Bishops representing the mission fields at home and abroad made forceful, felicitous, and illuminating addresses at the annual meeting of the Board and provoked much favorable comment.

Miss Kwe Yuln Klang, principal of Laura Haygood Normal School, Soochow, China, who has been studying in America for a year, left for China in May. She will go via Europe, where she expects to visit schools in England and on the continent.

FALSE TEETH

Can Not Embarrass

Most wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their teeth dropped or slipped at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH on your plates. Makes false teeth stay in place and feel comfortable. Sweetens breath. Get FASTEETH at any good drug store.

SAFE WAY TO TAKE OFF FAT AND KEEP IT OFF

"I take Kruschen Salts because it makes me feel 100% better and it takes fat off and keeps it off. I take it in hot water every morning, then I can eat as much as I like."
Miss Ruth Miller, Des Moines, Iowa (Jan. 9, 1933).

Once a day take Kruschen Salts—one half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water first thing every morning. Besides losing ugly fat SAFE-LY you'll gain in health and physical attractiveness—constipation, gas and acidity will cease to bother—you'll feel younger—more active—full of ambition—clear skin—sparkling eyes.

A jar that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle at any drugstore in the world—but demand and get Kruschen and if one bottle doesn't joyfully please you—money back.

work, and three were given temporary retirement and assigned to work. Six were released at their own request for personal reasons. Three were released who had been on leave of absence three years for personal reasons. Ten were granted furlough. Five were given leave of absence for the year. One was given sick leave. Four were retired. Twenty were continued in the retired relation.

"Christ or Nothing"

"Christ or Nothing" was the heart of the message brought to the people of Nashville, Tennessee, by Dr. E. Stanley Jones at the great mass meeting held in the War Memorial Building, Sunday, April 2. "Society won't hold together unless it holds together according to Christ," declared this world-famed missionary leader.

Speaking on the subject, "The Renaissance in the East," and telling of the struggle between Communism and Christianity for the heart of the East Dr. Jones said in part:

"The Renaissance is in full swing in the East and it is causing upsets everywhere. It has brought not one revolution but five; a revolution of the intellect; of the economic world; collapse of old family life; political revolution; and a moral and spiritual revolution. Under the acid of modern thinking the old traditions are dissolved and the people are adrift. These five revolutions in western life were distributed through five centuries, but in China they are having to deal with them all at once. The fact that China has held together so long is proof that she will stabilize her government and achieve lasting civilization.

"The President of China has been trying to put down Communism by military force, but it can't be done. The only way to beat Communism is to have a juster social order founded upon juster principles. Does Christianity have those juster principles? The East is open everywhere. China is the ripest evangelistic field. Students and leaders are saying: 'If you have a Gospel that can save the East, in heaven's name give it to us.' In the next five or ten years great decisions will be made. Communism is patiently teaching and spreading her doctrines. We have a bigger, greater faith than Communism. We do not believe that we can make a new world out of old natures, but we believe that Jesus Christ can make a new day."

Our community was shocked and grieved to learn of the passing of our beloved friend and neighbor, MISS LAURA DORTCH. Just a brief illness, and her spirit had winged its way to Heaven.

Wednesday evening after supper she complained that she was not well, and Friday morning, February 3, 1933 at 1:15 o'clock, lapsed into that eternal sleep.

Born at Edgefield, the old Dortch homestead, just two miles east of Dayline, on March, 31, 1846, she had lived in Bossier Parish all of her life. Serving her friends and neighbors, caring for her brothers' home and his motherless daughters and various orphaned nieces and nephews, truly her life was one of long devotion to the welfare of others. She made no distinction between rich or poor, but was kind, generous and loving to all.

Following the funeral services at the home, conducted by Rev. Mr. Alford, her one-time pastor, the remains were laid to rest beside those of her sisters, in Fillmore Cemetery, beneath a blanket of gorgeous flowers.

She leaves a brother, Mr. E. S. Dortch; two nieces, Mrs. Phillip Colbert, of Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. Richard West, of Hillsboro, Texas, and several great-nieces and nephews to mourn her passing.

May each of us profit by her spotless, consecrated life, and when we, too, "cross the bar may there be no moaning of the tide when we put out to sea."

A. FRIEND.

The earthly pilgrimage of MRS. FRANCES MONTGOMERY KING, which triumphantly ended at Auburn, Miss., June 20, began on April 8, 93 years ago, within a few miles of the place of her death. Her spiritual life began when a young girl, eighty years ago, at which time she united with the Adams Methodist Church on probation.

Her associations with the people called Methodists therefore, reaches back to those pioneer days of heroic beginnings and her reminiscences of those old rugged heralds of the cross were thrilling tales. Her husband's (John) Griffin King, born 1826) memory recalled the Adams first campground and his store of information was most valuable to present day historians.

Aunt Frank King was fervently devoted to the church that meant so much to her throughout the four score years and the public services were used as a means of grace to the end as physical strength permitted. During her last illness she continued to give testimony to the saving grace that had proven sufficient through the long years.

The family name is well known in Methodist circles, in local leadership and in the itinerancy, three of her nephews being members of the Mississippi Conference.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, we in the providence of God, have been called upon by the recent death of MRS. NETTIE PATTERSON JOHNSON, one of our most highly esteemed members, be it resolved by the Woman's Missionary Society of the Pontotoc, Miss. Methodist Church.

1. That in her death, our society has lost one of its members, who for many years has, by her loyal and faithful services, greatly contributed to the success of this society in the pursuit of the noble purposes for which it was organized.

2. That our church has lost a member, whose life, beginning in a Godly home, and continued through nearly three score and ten years of righteous living, shows alike the effect of home training and the power of a righteous and consistent living.

3. That our county in which she was born and in which all her days were spent, has lost one of its most loved and revered citizens.

4. That in view of what such a loss must mean to husband and daughter and kindred, we feel that our words would fail to be a measure of such loss and we must content ourselves with the expression of deepest sympathy in their sorrow.

5. That we request the publication of these resolutions in the county paper, the New Orleans Christian Advocate and a copy be sent to the bereaved family.

Respectfully submitted

MRS. N. G. AUGUSTUS.

MRS. R. P. WILSON.

FROM MARKSVILLE, LA.

This is my second year on the Marksville charge. We are happy to report that beside serving five regular organized churches we have opened up two new preaching points, especially among the French, where we are already reaching some three hundred French-speaking people, who, until recently, did not patronize our services. Think of it! There are still seven towns within a radius of thirty miles from Marksville, without any kind of Protestant services whatsoever! What a wonderful opportunity for extensive evangelistic effort. Certainly you will want to share in this rich, promising and ripe mission territory.

Last year our friends contributed toward buying a good Ford and folding organ for our missionary work. We are indeed grateful. We have still are, and shall continue to make good use of both. But now we also greatly need a good tent to hold meetings this summer. There are thousands who will attend services under a tent when they will not come into a house of worship; and then, we have no building available in most of the places we are very anxious to open up work. A tent is what we need, now! We can buy a very good water proofed tent with trailer and necessary equipment at an unusual bargain—only $250. Twice this amount was refused from snow people because the owner has dedicated the equipment to the service of God. We believe that the good Christian people, friends of our mission-work will help us buy it!

We hope, pray and believe that you will assist us in making the above purchase. Kindly help us in order that we may more effectively press on in the on-going of the Kingdom of God.

Hoping to hear from you by return mail, I am,

Yours in the Master's service,
A. J. MARTIN.

MY MOTHER'S FAVORITE SONG

Upon this sacred day of days
I bring sweet flowers and words of praise
For her, upon whose gentle breast
In childhood I was lulled to rest.

For her, who guided me in youth,
Who led me in the path of truth,
Taught me to do good deeds for ill,
Bow in submission to God's will.

Never murmuring, though rugged the way,
In deeds of kindness she spent the day,
Others burdens she helped to bear.

Build Up that Skinny Child!

Enrich His Impoverished Blood

Sickly, weak, underweight children are usually lacking in rich, red blood. When blood becomes poor, a child becomes rundown. Already weak, he loses appetite, which makes him still weaker. Take no chances on a child gaining strength by himself. Start giving him Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic right away. This famous tonic contains both iron and tasteless quinine. Iron makes for rich, red blood while quinine tends to purify the blood. In other words, you get two effects in Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. Put your child on this time-proven tonic for a few days and see the difference it makes in him. Good appetite, lots of pep and energy and red roses in his cheeks. Children like Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic and take it eagerly. It is absolutely harmless and has been a reliable family medicine for half a century. Get a bottle today at any store.

Singing softly, "Sweet Hour of Prayer."

Always busy, yet time she found
To visit sick folks all around,
In all good works she did her part.
Frail of strength, with willing heart.

When all the world seemed going wrong.

My Mother's voice in favorite song
Like heavenly music filled the air.
"Sweet Hour of Prayer, Sweet Hour of Prayer."

When on the threshold death stood near,

And took away my brother dear,
My Mother cast on God her care.
And softly sang, "Sweet Hour of Prayer."

Then my dear Father, crossed the tide.

They laid him by my brother's side.
Alone, the widow's robes to wear,
My Mother sang, "Sweet Hour of Prayer."

When Mother's days on earth were o'er,

She passed to that eternal shore.
I know while she was traveling there,
She sang, "Farewell, Sweet Hour of Prayer."

LYNCHING RECORD TO DATE

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research, I find that there were six lynchings in the first six months of 1932. This number is one more than the number five for the first six months of 1932. In 1923, that is ten years ago, there were fifteen persons lynched in the first six months of the year.

During the first six months of 1932 there were 14 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Of these three were in Northern States and eleven in Southern States. In nine of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented; in the five other instances force was used to repel the would-be lynchings; thus a total of seventeen persons, six whites and eleven negroes, were saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the persons lynched two were white and four were negro. The offenses charged were rape, one; murder, four; charge not reported, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Georgia, one; Louisiana, two; Tennessee, two; Texas, one.

JOHN BARLEYCORN His Life and Letters

By DANIEL A. POLING

This is at once the most unique and the most powerful book ever written on prohibition. Here are the true facts about alcohol presented in a new way. It is not just an amusing book. It is an important milestone in the dry argument for control of the liquor traffic. Dr. Poling has fought long and vigorously for prohibition. From the pulpit and the platform he has spoken to the people of practically every city in America. Leader of the Allied Prohibition Forces, he is a prohibitionist who has never sensed defeat, and into John Barleycorn he has put his sincere conviction, his breadth of understanding, his remarkable literary talent, and his unfailing sense of humor.

Some Comeback

The hoy was robbing a bird's nest of its young fledgelings when a woman noticed him. "You wicked boy!" she exclaimed. "How dare you take those young birds? What will their poor mother think when she finds you have stolen her brood?"

"Better ask her, ma'am," said the boy. "That's her stuck on your hat."

A Whale of a Smash!

Mr. Milquetoast, a timid soul, wished always to be sure. He would take no chances. As he stood at the train steps at a station down the road, before putting his foot up, seeing the sign, "Watch Your Step," he asked the conductor, "Does this train stop at New York City?" "Well, if it doesn't," said the conductor, there will be a whale of a smash."

It Was Unless It Was a Warm Day
Whittier was color-blind, and once bought a bright red necktie supposing it to be a dull green one. He was not aware of his mistake until one of his Quaker brethren remarked, "Thee's never worn a necktie like that before, Greenleaf; dost thee think it is becoming?" Yes, it was, unless it was a hot day. At last we men are coming to our own and sharing with the sisters the colors of the rainbow. Why not? Some of us need them to enhance our personal pulchritude. Look at the Kentucky cardinal—and the lyre (stick of the spelling) bird.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

FEWER MOVEMENTS, please, and more movement.

In times like these we display our poverty of religious life and thought by running here and there in search of "movements." Jesus reminded the people to beware of this tendency. He said that they would cry, "Lo, here, and Lo, there." But go not after them, said he. Ah, but it is something new. It may not be. Better look. Maybe it is just the advertisement that is new. Jesus seemed to be aware of the finality of his plan for men. Fads are interesting, it may be; but what will they be worth when your little ship is in mid-sea and the storm is on. There are fads of faith.

Lazarus wanted Abraham to stage a new "movement" in the interest of his brethren who were headed for hell. Certainly seems that God could let his great work pause while he put on a new movement in order to save the brothers of Lazarus mainly for his selfish benefit.

But Abraham could not see it. He had tramped across miles of desert, punctuating his journey with altars of Jehovah, seeking the city that hath foundations, whose builder and Maker is God. This man who had pioneered with the momentum of eternity could not see it.

"Yes, but if one go to them from the dead," says Lazarus. That will attract their attention. It will be something new and unusual.

"They have Moses," said Abraham. He is still speaking. The Ten Commandments have not been repealed. And the force of his life is still alive. Let them hear him."

No, we are not in need of a "new movement" or any number of them. We need to move, and that vigorously along the way that is already plain. Every great revival seems to have gotten under way by the discovery of a long-forgotten truth. A little forgotten prophet, away back yonder, said, "The just shall live by faith." He might have been echoing it. It was the word of Paul as he swept into Europe and planted his banner at Rome. It was the word of Luther as he ripped the old church in two and declared a new day of religious emancipation and enfranchisement. It was the word of Wesley when he lifted England from her morass or religious defeat and set her feet again toward the skies.

Save us, Lord, from "movements." Be in us a great irresistible impulse and momentum along the ways already validated and made sure to us. Pardon our dabbings and our delays. Lead us of our day against all the foes of thy Kingdom. Amen.

"BRING BACK THE MOURNERS' BENCH!" cries Dr. Hartman, editor of Zion's Herald, and opens his editorial with the question, "Where is repentance in Methodism?"

Says Dr. Hartman, "For the last twenty-five years or more that historic piece of furniture, the mourners' bench, has been empty. It is time to restore it to its former place of prestige and power and once more to sound the 'altar call.'"

We join Dr. Hartman in the 'call,' begging the privilege of joining the first group to go forward. I am not so much interested in going up to "join" something. I want "heart-felt" religion. I want to be able to look life squarely in the face and meet all it has to offer without blinking. I want to take my fellowman by the hand, with a grievance toward none, and start out for a new life and a new day. The mourners' bench is a good starting place. All worthwhile religious revivals start there. And it is well, ever and anon, to observe an anniversary there.

BUT DR. HARTMAN PROPOSES an enlargement of the mourners' bench.

Now that is where he will lose many of us, both the good and the bad. For we old-fashioned people want it just as it was, and we want it all done in the old way. Stop, right there. Don't block the way to the mourners' bench by your "fencing of the altar." You know we Methodists are strong on our "open communion."

"The time demands a much more commodious bench than ever the fathers needed, and a more forcible summons to repentance than any camp-meeting preacher ever voiced." Don't go to sleep, now. Hear him through.

Going on, the editor advises that preachers of today let some of the winds of the Old Testament prophets blow through their sermons.

"Many ancient sins are still with us in both old and new forms, but the years have uncovered a vast group of iniquities that the fathers overlooked."

Dr. Hartman urges an attack along the whole line of sin both in its old and in its new forms.

Here is a fact that should arrest every minister of God and every person who calls himself Christian. There are men today, regular members and officials of Christian churches, who conduct their affairs in open violence to the spirit and principles of the Kingdom of God. They make gifts to charity, pay their pastors, and do many wonderful works; but at the same time they are so manipulating their business as to get the most money out of labor with the lowest possible wage, and so manipulate their books as to rob the government of its income tax. These men, many of them, will come to the "old-fashioned" mourners' bench, but they are not going to crowd it with Dr. Hartman's proposed enlargement; certainly not before their pastors begin to define their conduct as sin demanding repentance and restitution.

BRING BACK THE FAMILY ALTAR, too, I should like to exhort.

A presiding elder who made it his business to visit in the homes of his pastors reported, that, out of about twenty homes thus visited, he discovered about four family altars—in the homes of pastors.

The home still represents community life in miniature. In the home and family we still take the shape that shall make or mar our lives for life.

We heard some religious education leaders saying, "As religious education has been abandoned in the home the church will have to perform this task." I am strong for religious education, but I balk right at that point. When religion goes from the home-life of the people and altar fires no longer burn there we need not turn to the church. It will already be marked, "For Sale." Without the vocabulary of family life the church has no language with which to preach its Gospel. What will "fatherhood" and "brotherhood," key-words of the Gospel, mean when family religion is gone?

The home is life in epitome. Our religious, economic, political, social and educational life begins there.

Of course you may not be able to conduct your family worship as our fathers did. It is not the form that counts, but the fact and the practice. Build some new dimensions to your family altar. Perhaps it can be improved.

A young chap was my room-mate at a young people's assembly. I had retired and had taken my station to watch the boy and take a peep at his home. Would he do as I had been taught? Guess not. He is a "modern youth."

He prepared for bed, stuffed his socks in his shoes, and dropped on his knees by his cot. In my tears the form of a kneeling boy, "saying his prayers," faded, and I saw a mother and a father who had taught their boy to pray at home.

WE CANNOT SPARE GOD and Jesus Christ yet.

The Unitarian Church and the Universalist Church have entered into negotiations looking toward a merger under the name of the Free Church of America. This will constitute a total membership of 110,063 with 968 churches.

The resolution proposing this union was at first opposed on the ground that, in the preamble, mention is made of Jesus Christ and of God. The Humanist Unitarians were the ones who had balked. It was voted, however, to include them.

We should be patient with any person or group seeking the truth. Perhaps their confusion, many times, is due to the failure of us who profess to hold a better light. But we don't see any wisdom in

If only you could look into the minds of these eager young students of ours, you would realize that they are hungry for the water of eternal life which Jesus brought. I felt that the problems of the American college student were difficult until I came to know Chinese students intimately. Now the perplexities of the American college boy or girl seem trivial by comparison. If you simply observe the students on the outside, you are struck by the fact that there is very little difference in their manners, interests, activities, and dispositions from the average group of students in the United States. Living here in the Girls' Dormitory at Soochow University is just like being back at Randolph-Macon Women's College so far as the every day surface of our lives is concerned. There are the same types of girls; the book worm, the clothes-centered, the boy crazy, the tom-boy, the all round good sport. The girls giggle and talk in the same way and about the same things; they even use Chinese slang expressions which are almost the exact equivalent of the American school-girl's—"Thrilled to death" and "cute." But when I go beneath the surface of that gay exterior I find a heart that is aching for peace and certainty as it faces a changing society.

What Will Be the Outcome of China's Revolution?

Every observer of China has remarked that this glorious old country is now experiencing four or five revolutions at once—literary, political, economic, social and religious. Possibly you are tired of reading about that, but to live with young Chinese is to see the problems which those revolutions are creating daily enacted before one's eyes. The thing which makes the whole problem so infinitely more complex than it would be in the west is that underlying and running through every question of change is the tremendous struggle between the ideas and the customs of the older generation and the aspirations of the younger. Of course, the relationship between parents and children is a major problem in every country; but the strength of the family in China is almost incomprehensible to a westerner. It is because the family is so unshakable that China has weathered the centuries as no other nation has ever been able to, and it is because of the hold of the family upon the Chinese that I believe Communism will never be triumphant in China for any length of time. But oh, what a marvelous thing it would be for all mankind if the Kingdom of God could be established in the homes of China, if that great stabilizing, preserving influence which is the Chinese family could be dominated by motives of Love, of Righteousness, and of Truth! If Christianity is going to live in the West, if it is grown into a vital reality in the United States, it must at the same time become a living, transforming force in China. The next decade will see the rise of China to the position of world leadership which is rightfully hers by virtue of her great numbers, her ancient culture, her sagacity, her capacity for suffering. Whether or not the leadership shall be in the direction of materialism, or Communism, or of the Kingdom of God depends on how much we who call ourselves Christians are able to share with her of the Spirit of Jesus.

I started out with the idea of telling you about our Methodist work in China; and I have ended simply by telling you what the challenge of China is to the Christian Church in America as I see it. I wish that I could really share with you the richness and the joy which is mine as I live and labor and love in this great land and among these eager young people. You will not forget, however, I am sure, that your prayers, your interest, and your gifts are necessary to the work of the Kingdom of God in this land, and that every expression of your interest is an important factor in the work of the Master here.

Soochow University, Soochow, China.

MRS. JOHN ANGUS McLEOD

Lida Rebecca Calhoun McLeod, daughter of Colonel J. C. Calhoun and Sarah Jane Cross, was born in Mobile, Alabama, December 31, 1863, and died in the Methodist Hospital, Hattiesburg, Miss., June 19, 1933. Early in life she joined the St. Francis Street Methodist Church in Mobile, removing her membership after her marriage to Purvis, Miss., and on January 10, 1897, to Main Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., where it remained until her death.

She was happily married to John Angus McLeod at her father's home in Mobile, Alabama, on December 29, 1887, by the Rev. Dr. Andrews of the Alabama Conference. Five children, four of whom are living, came to bless their home: Annie Rose, now Mrs. Howard Gilliam, John Angus, Jr., (who died June 2, 1932), Dr. H. Carroll, Calhoun, and Daniel, all now living in Hattiesburg. Sister McLeod came of a richly endowed Southern family, furnishing her a background of rare culture and wide opportunity. The training in both mind and heart in such a home well qualified her to fill graciously the place of prominence socially, commercially, and religiously she and her husband occupied during their long and useful married life. She created a wholesome, stimulating home atmosphere and carried into the wider social circle in which she moved the best traditions of a noble inheritance.

She was held in high esteem by a circle of devoted friends and admiring neighbors. Always kind and helpful she held the affection of this selected inner group. There was no suggestion of snobbery about her in her contacts with people. She was considerate, sympathetic and mingled with and loved all classes, and they appreciated and loved her. While she was a woman of high ideals and strong convictions, she was simple in her tastes and charitable in her demands upon others. She met faithfully the old prophets question, "What doth the Lord require?" by doing justly, and loving mercy, and walking humbly with her God.

But it was as wife and mother that she manifested those superior qualities characteristic of the noblest type of womanhood. She was a real helpmeet to her husband. In the home her devoted and unselfishness were such that it might be truthfully said "she always tried to take the load." Gifted with common sense and good business judgment she was able to contribute substantially to her husband's business and religious successes. Her home was a place of refuge and strength, radiating happiness and inspiration, to those within its sacred precincts.

She was loyal to her principles, her friends, her family, and more important than all to Christ and His Church. The Christian virtues were so well blended in her life as to produce an admirable personality. Those closest to her found her worthy of their trust and lasting devotion. Her faith was clear and unmistakable. Her Christian experience was real and assuring. She lived by faith and died as she lived. Adversity and suffering which came to her never dimmed her faith nor disturbed her trust. She believed, "that all things worked together for good to those who loved God." Her religious experience was satisfying to her and a benediction to others. She was instrumental early in her married life, under the Holy Spirit's direction, in her husband's conversion, and joined with him in erecting a family altar which was maintained through life. Around this altar she gathered her family and through its inspiration she instructed her children. Truly a good woman has gone to her reward and her going has left an ache in many a heart. May her loved ones find comfort in the Christ whom she served.

Her former pastor,

CHAS. W. CRISLER.

Brookhaven, Miss., July 14, 1933.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott, Contributing Editor

Laymen and ministers appreciate books which help them to be more fruitful in their work. Here are a few books listed which have been helpful to me in preparing my mind for revival work: "Heralds of a Passion," by Dr. Chas. Goddell, will thrill your soul. Howard Agnew Johnson has written a little book, "Studies for Personal Workers," which is simply filled with good things for those who want to reach souls for Christ; "Souls in Action," by Harold Begbie, will make the reader see clearly the saving power of the gospel of salvation. Paul N. Garber gave a lasting gift to Methodism when he wrote "That Fighting Spirit of Methodism." When real Methodists read it they will feel a joy that they are in such a line of great souls. That book will strengthen your courage. Methodists have carried the gospel message as if it were a "living fire" to give warm spiritual life. The Acts of the Apostles gives a message of victory. In them we are following the leadership of the Holy Spirit and see miracles of redemption on every side. Let us all prepare for the most successful revival season Methodism has had in many years.

The church can be made the most interesting place in a town or community. Why shouldn't it? It deals with real life. I think it would add much to the attractiveness of the church buildings if the name of the church was placed so it could be seen. Then an attractive bulletin board, giving date of services, etc. That lets the public know that this church is alive and something is going on here. So many rural churches make very little appeal. That can be changed. Suppose in the vestibule of every church there was a historical digest of the church in a frame, showing names of pastors, pictures of pastors and of the different church buildings, list of Sunday school superintendents. Make it so attractive until every boy and girl will think pleasingly of it whenever they see it. Have worship programs built around such themes as, "Knowing Our Pastors," "Knowing Our Helpers." There are so many ways to create the spirit of loyal interest and personal devotion. Just to say this is "God's House" does not create reverence. This attitude must be created by following fundamental laws which govern in that field. We want our people to love the church and be so glad to get a chance to sit in it and worship our Father who art in Heaven.

What type of person has the greatest appeal? I mean in the realm of character. We soon learn to see beyond the mere physical and look into the real essence of the life. The man or woman who is willing to be themselves with due regard to personal cultivation always attracts us. We are not repelled so much by mistakes as we are by assumption and insincerity. Just to be willing to be what God has made one and not feel envious or jealous of others who seem to be more favored or fortunate, weaves winsomeness about a person that surely draws us to him. The short cuts in the course of life some way do not help us. Great characters, like great trees, have to be grown by nature's slow processes. The man or woman who has opinions but is not always aggressively expressing them somehow lead us to lean on them. The person who always agrees with us may be pleasing to our vanity, but we will ere long walk around to see if he is sincere. Why should we expect others to agree to acquiesce in our limited view of the multitudes of issues about us? We are attracted to the one with whom we can see from different angles and yet be friends.

Religion works in the realms of the feelings. That is the highest attainment. Human beings are controlled largely by atmospheric environments which are created by the use of imagination resulting from situations. So few are directed by facts. We do not know the facts or care much for the facts. The facts of the New Testament are there, but the facts do not direct so much as the great appeal surrounding the sacrificial spirit running through it. How do you feel when you think of Christ giving Himself for you? What emotions run through your mind when you see Paul in prison and stocks for preaching the gospel? The loves which surge through our hearts run riot with our boasted reasons, and well they may. All the knowledge we gain comes out in some sort of feeling and that feeling quietly moves us on in one direction or another.

Had you noticed that in every group of people of every race you have the conservative and progressive? Psychologists tell us that this is true in every country, with all race—history relates its existence. Perhaps it is God's way of leading His people slowly yet surely forward into "all the truth," which was promised as a part of the work of the Holy Spirit. It is evident that the progressive of this generation will be the conservative in the next. Whenever the conservatives completely control we have stagnation, and when the progressives completely control we have danger. A happy medium brings a balance which works for the good of the church.

attempting to unlock the door without the key. Jesus was the first great humanist. Of course he did not worry so much about the theoretical background of his humanism. His divinity seems to have peculiarly fitted him for her service to human beings. He could tell them something about origins and goals that the modern Humanist leaves in confusion.

All truth is God's truth, regardless of the realism in which it is found. Truth alone has power to hold things together, be it an atom or a universe, a theory or a system of government. Yea, much error is held together by the intermixture of truth. Sometimes we are found to be fighting whole systems without making due discrimination as to the truth involved.

Let us keep God and Jesus Christ. God is the only answer to life's major questions. He is the all-encompassing reality and personality in whom we live and move and have our being; origin, environment, home and goal of the soul. Jesus? Never man spoke like this man. There is none other name given. To whom shall we go, Lord? Thou hast the words of eternal life.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. R. G. Lord will hold a meeting for Rev. W. P. Bailey, at Dubbs, Miss.

The Bolivar Commercial, Cleveland, Miss., lists liquor as one of the three principal causes of divorce.

Centenary College reports that she will accept cotton again this year on tuition. Better look into this.

Mrs. J. C. Donald, Durant, Miss., renews the subscriptions of two long-time readers of the Advocate.

"We've sold the old parsonage at Strongs, Miss., but are planning a new one at Prairie. W. C. Galceran, Jr."

Miss Elizabeth Howell, president of the Epworth League at Kilmichael, Miss., sends a list of subscriptions. Thank you.

Mrs. R. E. Wilburn, Lexington, Miss., a reader for almost fifty years, renews her subscription assuring us of her cooperation.

Dr. R. H. Harper, pastor First Church, Baton Rouge, was platform speaker at Young People's Christian Culture Camp, Bluff Creek.

Rev. V. C. Curtis assisted Rev. J. E. Lawhon in a revival at Carrollton Church on the Nettleton charge, North Mississippi, recently.

"Summer term at Centenary College is good," writes Rev. S. L. Riggs, keeper of the Book Store and an honored superannuate of the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. W. C. Newman is holding a number of revivals for the brethren this summer. Already he has been in meetings at Hollandale, Iuka and Hamilton, Miss.

Mr. J. E. Miller, Blue Springs, Miss., in renewing his subscription for another year, writes in flattering terms concerning the Advocate. Thank you, Brother Miller.

Mr. A. M. Mayo, superintendent of the Sunday school, First Church, Lake Charles, commends the work of the Advocate and sends words of comradeship and encouragement.

Rev. J. M. Alford has enlisted the services of Rev. R. A. Bozeman for a series of meetings at Coushatta, La., to begin on the fifth Sunday of this month and continue indefinitely.

"The Advocate has been coming to my parents' and my home for over fifty years. I think the editorials the best ever. When I have read the Advocate I pass it on to others." Mrs. G. T. Shafer, James, Miss.

Rev. Melville Johnson, Cleveland, Miss., recently helped Rev. R. P. Neblett in a meeting at Pickens, Miss. Fifteen members were added to the church as a result, bringing the total for the year to twenty-three.

"We are just closing our third round of quarterly conferences and are very much encouraged at the improvement in the reports and the general optimism of the officials. Chas. W. Crisler, P. E., Brookhaven District."

What will be the answer of the pastors and churches of Louisiana and Mississippi to the referendum recently submitted to them by our Publishing Committee with regard to the Advocate?

Rev. A. R. Beasley is the fortunate pastor who serves a people who are giving him a trip to the World's Fair at Chicago. Now there will be many pastors seeking to be sent to Minter City charge this fall.

Members of Millsaps College faculty have scattered to the four winds either for a vacation at home or to further study in the universities of the country. Next fall they will be back for a great year at the college.

"I believe I shall be able to secure as many as twenty-five subscriptions to the Advocate," writes Rev. C. K. Smith, pastor First Church, Crowley, La. Let Brother Smith be one out of a hundred who will secure this number.

Rev. J. T. Harris, our pastor at Rayville, La., called at the office of the Advocate on Wednesday of last week. He reports considerable progress on his charge and speaks encouragingly of the future. Glad to see you "Jimmie!"

Mrs. E. S. Moncrief, for many years pianist of the Greenwood church, Louisiana Conference, was recently presented a beautiful silver water pitcher by the Woman's Missionary Society as a token of love and appreciation of her faithful service.

The sixty-first Annual Camp Meeting of the Seashore Methodist Assembly, Biloxi, Miss., will begin on Sunday, August 6, and continue through the 13th. Dr. A. S. Lutz, of the Louisiana Conference, has been secured to conduct the services.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs was heard on a recent Sunday afternoon in an address to a young people's rally held at our church in Lafayette, La. Rev. H. N. Brown is pastor. That evening the Bishop filled the pulpit of First Church, Crowley, La.

On June 21, Mrs. Jno. A. McLeod, a valuable member of Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, was buried from her home church. Dr. C. W. Crisler, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, assisted by Dr. J. T. Leggett and Rev. J. B. Cain, conducting the funeral.

Bishop H. A. Boaz, who has been confined to the Methodist Hospital in Dallas, Texas, is reported to have recovered sufficiently from his recent illness to return to the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. A. Penniman, 6306 Oram Street, Dallas.

The Standard Training School at Amory, Miss., was a decided success. Sixty workers from the local church enrolled for the school. Any church that puts on a progressive plan for the church work will succeed and grow. Every department of the church there is alive.

On Sunday, July 16, Rev. E. C. Gunn, Lake Charles, La., and Rev. C. D. Atkinson, DeRidder, La., exchanged pulpits for the evening service. Reports reaching our office are to the effect that both pastors delivered great messages to large and attentive listeners.

We have just received the distressing news that the condition of Dr. W. W. Drake, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District and member of the Advocate Publishing Committee from Louisiana, has taken a turn for the worse. Let us remember him in our daily prayers.

Dr. Emory Olin Watson has resigned the editorship of the Southern Christian Advocate, official organ of the South Carolina and Upper South Carolina Conferences of our Church, effective at the close of this Conference year. Dr. R. O. Lawton has been elected to succeed Dr. Watson.

A good letter comes from Mrs. H. E. Gump, Alhambra, Cal., formerly of Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport. As was to be expected, Mr. and Mrs. Gump are up to their necks in church work. Recently they heard Dr. E. Stanley Jones at Hollywood Bowl, where he was speaker at a great conference.

Miss Clara Chalmers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Chalmers, and sister of the Manager of the Advocate, is spending several weeks vacation with her parents at the Seashore Methodist Assembly, Biloxi, Miss. Miss Chalmers is serving the Woman's Board as President of our Irene Toland School, Matanzas, Cuba.

Mr. Paul B. Habans, prominent New Orleans attorney, former commissioner of public safety, and for many years superintendent of the Sunday school of First Methodist church, this city, has been selected by the Home Loan Bank Board as Louisiana state manager of the $2,100,000,000 Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

A Beautiful View of the Tabernacle on the Seashore Methodist Assembly Grounds Where the Sixty-first Annual Camp Meeting will be Conducted August 6-13

It was the privilege of the business manager to worship at our Main Street church, Biloxi, Miss., on last Sunday morning. Rev. L. J. Power, the pastor, delivered a timely and forceful sermon to a large and attentive gathering, using as his text, Proverbs 14:34: "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people."

Sunday School Day was observed by the Flournoy church of the Greenwood, La., charge last Sunday with a full program. Dinner was served on the ground following which Rev. George Fox, Jr. and Rev. R. T. Ware delivered short but pointed sermons. Captain N. B. Bodine is the superintendent and Rev. H. S. Johns, the pastor.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. B. F. Rogers, who is attending the World's Fair at Chicago, the pulpit of the Carrollton Avenue Church, this city, was filled by Rev. H. N. Harrison, honored superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, at the eleven o'clock hour, and Mr. Wm. H. Black, Cashier of the Federal Reserve Bank and leading Methodist layman in New Orleans, in the evening.

Dr. T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder of the Meridian District, Mississippi Conference, in a letter to the Business Manager, suggests that where families find it difficult to raise the full subscription price of the Advocate, neighbors pool their tithes, each putting up one-half the cost of the annual subscription, and share the paper each week. This is a good suggestion that can easily be carried out.

Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder, Baton Rouge District; Dr. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Ruston District; Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, and Dr. W. L. Duren, New Orleans District, have written assuring us of fullest support of the Publishing Committee's plan for the Advocate. Other presiding elders, from whom we have not heard, are equally enthusiastic, we are sure.

President Pierce Cline of Centenary College left for Chicago last week for a few days at the Century of Progress Fair. While in the city he will be the guest of Prof. C. L. Odom, a member of the Centenary faculty, who is in Chicago University for advanced work toward his Doctor's degree. Leaving there President Cline will return by way of his old home in Georgia, where he will spend a few days amid old friends and scenes.

In a personal letter to the editor, Rev. W. R. Lott, contributing editor and pastor of our church at Aberdeen, Miss., says in part: "I do hope the campaign for the Advocate goes over. It will. I am a strong believer in a church paper going into the homes. For a number of years, ten to be exact, I had the New Orleans Christian Advocate in every home in my church. How it did help!" Brother Lott recently sent in his usual large list of new and renewal subscriptions.

Mr. Richmond Randle, Memphis, Tenn., son of the late Rev. Robert Randle of the Louisiana Conference and father of Rev. J. T. Randle of the North Arkansas Conference, has prepared an article on the liquor question which will appear in our columns shortly. In discussing the general decline in circulation of the religious press, Brother Randle writes: "The Church paper is the pastor's most efficient assistant and every effort should be made to place it in the homes of our members."

The Methodists at Forest, Miss., under the leadership of the enterprising pastor, Rev. Jas. W. Sells, have taken to the out-of-doors for a series of summer meetings covering a wide range of interest and profit. Comfortable seats have been arranged on the church lawn where an atmosphere of welcome and friendliness prevail. No one feels compelled to dress especially for the occasion. Just a peep at the program will make you wish you could be there. Judge J. M. Forman of Jackson will be the speaker one evening. Rev. Oscar Autritt, formerly of Russia, will give an illustrated lecture on conditions in Russia. The large church choir will present Handel's Hallelujah Chorus in a sacred concert. Crowning the series will be an eight day Bible Conference, August 13-20, under the supervision of the General Board of Christian Education with Dr. Thomas Carter of Vanderbilt as speaker.

Rev. W. R. Lott, pastor at Aberdeen, Miss., is advocating a simple plan whereby the benevolent collections may be increased this fall. The plan is this: Take, for illustration, a church with three hundred members, adults, young people and children. Divide the membership into groups of five persons. In this church with three hundred members there would be sixty groups. Decide on the amount you wish each group to raise. First select your sixty people to put at the head of each group, then add four other members. Have this list posted in the vestibule of the church with the amount opposite the group number this way: "Group No. 1, $10—C. H. Smith, Ed. Jones, Mary Johnson, Sam Wood, Minnie Smith." Post the lists the first of October, giving each group thirty days to raise the amount. Do not leave out any members, no matter how poor or how sick. By making the amount small enough to appeal to each one the total will surprise the church. The last Sunday let each group leader bring the money and put it on the altar of the church. This plan will work in any kind of church.

CAMP MEETING AT FORT JESSUP

The annual camp meeting will begin on the grounds of historic old Fort Jessup, on the evening of Friday, July 28 and continue through Sunday, August 6.

Mr. James V. Reld, lay evangelist, who is widely known on account of his numerous engagements with out Epworth League Assemblies, young people's camps, and in conducting revival meetings, will have charge of the preaching, while Misses Joy and Mary Latham will conduct the music and the young people's vespers services.

The camp grounds are located on the hard surfaced highway leading from Many to Natchitoches, six miles east of Many and twenty-four miles west of Natchitoches, being easily accessible from all sections of the state.

Excellent home cooked meals will be served on the ground at 75c per day, or 35c per single meal.

EDITOR HOLDS MEETING

If the worthy editor of the Advocate is more highly esteemed in one locality than in another, the numberless friends of his native section demand that distinction. It is therefore with unmeasured pleasure that the people of the Adams charge, Auburn, Miss., anticipate the blessings of his ministry during the revival season scheduled for July 23-28.

This marks about the one hundred twenty-third year when saints and sinners have gathered at this sacred shrine to call upon God. These holy influences have made a contribution to the large usefulness of the invited minister and expectant faith looks for the return of bread cast upon the waters.

BABY'S MUG AND WHISKEY FLASK

By Mrs. C. W. Turpin

Nashville, Tenn.—A baby's silver mug and a gold-lined whiskey flask arrived in Nashville by the same mail bag, bound for the same goal,—the treasure hunt of the Methodist Board of Missions, which is in a denomination-wide campaign to salvage old gold, silver and precious treasures of other days, in the hope that through their sale as refined metal they may raise enough money to build up the waning income of the board, and halt the reduction of the church's missionary program due to lack of funds.

With the whiskey flask came a letter saying, "This flask has served the devil long enough;—it is time it did some good in the world."

All sorts of gold and silver relics are finding their way to the custodianship of Mrs. Ina Davis Fulton, who has won the title of "the old gold lady." Dr. W. G. Cram, general secretary, and other leaders are pleased at the cordial response of Southern Methodists to the appeal.

Many of the articles received belong in the unique class, such as the silver tea pot, 103 years old, which came a few days ago. One of the unusual gifts was a quantity of gold leaf sent by a minister who before his ordination had been a sign painter, and contributed the brushings.

Probably wedding rings head the list of gifts, approximately five hundred heavy gold bands having been received; next come spectacle frames; and there are gold umbrella handles and tea spoons, cane tops, dental gold, bracelets, buttons and baby pins, to say nothing of watches of all sizes and descriptions.

A record breaking mail was received Monday, when one hundred and fifty packages from every section of Southern Methodism arrived at headquarters, and steadily increasing mail is expected before the end of the treasure hunt. It is the plan of the board to have the articles smelted to extract the precious metal, and the proceeds of the sale will assist in keeping missionaries at their posts in the face of an unprecedented slump in collections.

TO THE MEMORY OF MY FRIENDS— REV. R. A. TUCKER AND J. E. CUNNINGHAM

By Rev. R. S. Lawson

No, not cold beneath the grasses,
Not close-walled within the tomb;
Rather in our Father's mansion,
Living in another room.

Living like the men who loved me,
Like my children, with cheeks a bloom,
Out of sight, at desk or good book,
Busy in another room.

Shall I doubt my Father's mercy?
Shall I think of death as doom,
Or the stepping o'er the threshold,
To a bigger, brighter room?

Shall I blame my Father's wisdom?
Shall I sit ensnared in gloom,
When I know my friends are happy—
Writing, in another room?

NORTH MISSISSIPPI

Every fifth Sunday is designated in our church as College Day. On this day emphasis is laid on the work of our colleges. No offering is asked for. We are simply requested to present the cause of Christian Education as represented by our colleges to the people of the local church. This may be done in one or more of the following ways:

1. Through a worship program in the Sunday school. If a small school, the program may be given before the entire school, and if a large school, it may be given in all departments, beginning with the intermediates.

2. By making the Epworth League program of the young people a College Day program. This program may be given at the evening preaching hour.

3. The pastor may take this opportunity to preach on this subject, possibly in connection with the program given by the young people.

You will find the help needed for making this program in the July Church School Magazine, page 447, under the title, "Enduring Foundations of Faith." If you desire specific information concerning our colleges, write to Dr. D. M. Key, Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., and Dr. J. R. Countiss, Grenada, Miss.

The Young People's Organization
At the recent session of the Summer Assembly of the Conference Young People's Organization the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Mr. Sanders Smith, Greenwood.

Vice-President—Mr. Geo. Winter, Houka.

Secretary—Miss Martha Wise, Europa.

Treasurer—Miss Edyth Lynne Russell, Sardis.

Publicity Superintendent—Mr. Hugh Cunningham, Greenwood.

District Directors

Aberdeen District—Miss Catherine Rogers, Plantersville.

Columbus District—Miss Helen Evans, Artesia.

Corinth District—Rev. Mathis Armstrong, Burnsville.

Greenville District—Mrs. Ben. B. Collier, Clarksdale.

Greenwood District—Wade Stokes, Jr., Greenwood.

Sardis-Grenada District—Rev. Roy A. Grisham, Sardis.

This is a fine group of officers and they bespeak the hearty co-operation and support of every one interested in the young people of the Conference. God always goes forward. Let us go forward with Him.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION

Conference for Christian Workers—Wesley Fellowship Assembly

Since this first Conference for Christian Workers has been a season of blessing, of benefit, and of fellowship to all who have been in attendance, we, your committee, make grateful acknowledgment to the sponsors of this Assembly:

The Louisiana Conference Woman's Missionary Society, Conference Board of Lay Activities, Conference Board of Missions, Conference Board of Christian Education, and the representatives of these Boards, who have worked so faithfully for the success of this program. To the instructors who have shared with us their information and furthered our interests in the activities of the Church.

To Miss Elizabeth Langford and her efficient corps of workers who planned so carefully for our coming and have been most solicitous for our comfort while here.

To Mrs. Parsley and her staff who have provided the choice meals we have enjoyed.

To Rev. Carl Lueg for recreational features that have entertained us.

To Miss Lorena Leithead, Miss Mary Pearce, and Mr. Mike Mickal for the inspirational music which has been a distinct contribution to the entire program.

We are deeply indebted to the citizens of Mansfield for innumerable courtesies, notably the welcome and reception extended by the Departmental Club, the swim and picnic at the beautiful lake of Mr. and Mrs. Will Nabors, so graciously offered for the occasion; fresh flowers furnished each day by the Mansfield Missionary Society, and the hearty co-operation in all activities by the Chamber of Commerce, extended through Mr. M. C. Tainter, president of that body.

We appreciate the splendid publicity we have received from the Mansfield Enterprise, and the many thoughtful kindnesses from Rev. and Mrs. Guy M. Hicks, our unofficial hosts.

For the reverent services of the early morning hours, the quiet devotions of the vespers, and for the platform messages each evening, all of which have turned our thoughts Godward and deeply stirred our hearts, we sincerely thank all who participated.

MRS. W. M. LEDBETTER, Chairman,

MIKE MICKAL.

COMMITTEE URGES CONTINUATION OF CONFERENCE FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS AND WESLEY FELLOWSHIP ASSEMBLY

We, the committee on Findings and Future plans, submit the following recommendations:

That the Conference for Christian Workers, sponsored by the Woman's Missionary Society, Board of Christian Education, and the Board of Lay Activities, be made an annual event, meeting at Mansfield College, and presenting a program satisfactory to all groups.

That a general name be found for the Assembly which will include all groups represented.

That Rev. A. K. McLellan, Conference Ex-Secretary, be named General Director for the Conference of Christian Workers.

That a permanent program committee be set up with a representative from each group and the Rev. W. H. Giles, Mrs. George Sexton, Jr., and the Conference Director of Lay Activities as Ex-Officio members.

That "Lead on, O King Eternal," be the Conference Theme Song.

That all possible publicity be given to the program and purpose of the conference through the co-ordinated groups, with special emphasis on the sending of representatives to the meeting. Also that publicity be given the Leadership School at Mt. Sequoyah and attendance urged.

That the following suggestions be given consideration in planning future Assemblies; that wherever practical young adults attending the Assembly share in the remunerative work; that a part of the morning be given to directed recreation and group activities; that the Wesley Fellowship group be given more participation in the worship and program periods.

On Monday, June 19, 1933, God in His infinite wisdom called to His servant, J. D. SPRINGER; "Come, to the Mansion prepared for the faithful!" Thus did the spirit of a good man pass to his reward. As a citizen, Mr. Springer was always public spirited. As a church member, he was always faithful, loving the service of his church and serving as Sunday school superintendent for many years.

As a friend he was loyal, loving his friends with sincere devotion.

As a husband and father he was tender and devoted. He leaves a wife, who was Miss Dora Wiygul, one daughter and three sons. One daughter, Mrs. Melva Richardson, died several years ago. A big family connection remains, who will hold Mr. Springer in loving remembrance.

Mr. Jefferson Davis Springer was born in Itawamba County about 72 years ago, moving to Shannon, 25 years ago. Our little town is made poor by his passing, the Methodist Church has lost one of her most faithful members, his family has suffered an irreparable loss, but his influence remains and we all feel there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel.

The Methodist Sunday school wishes to express its loss and appreciation of this good man, but we have this to comfort us: "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

Says Her Husband Lost 16 Pounds In 4 Weeks

"I have never found a medicine that 'peps' you up like Kruschen Salts and better still, leaves you 'pepped up.' I take it two or three times a week—not to reduce but merely to feel good and clean. My husband took it to reduce, he lost 16 pounds in 4 weeks." Mrs. E. A. Ferris, Washington, D. C. (December 29, 1932).

To lose fat and at the same time gain in physical attractiveness and feel spirited and youthful take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning.

A jar that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle at any drugstore in the world but be sure and get Kruschen Salts the SAFE way to reduce wide hips, prominent front and double chin and again feel the joy of living—money back if dissatisfied after the first jar.

UNIQUE PLAN FOR MISSION STUDY CLASSES

Realizing that interest is based upon knowledge, and that knowledge comes by study, we have adopted the following plan, which proved successful in enlisting the entire membership of the auxiliary in our study course.

After presenting the book to be studied, in the most interesting way, the leader announced that there are three degrees of membership in this course of study, and each member had the privilege of choosing the degree she would take.

First, those who would promise to make outside preparation on assignment of the teacher, and participate in class work as called on by teacher. Second, those who would attend, with the intention of learning all they could by "listening in."

Third, those who might not be able to attend regularly, but would promise to read the book.

Slips of paper were passed, and each member wrote her name, with a 1, 2, or 3, following. The Number ones, made up the active members. No. threes, our "Reading Circle" and the "Listeners in" helped us and found inspiration.

THE TREASURE HUNT

To the Holly Bluff Auxiliary, the Treasure Hunt proved to be a challenge, and resulted not only in a fair amount of old gold and silver, but in the awakening of a new sense of stewardship.

A beautiful dedicatory service was arranged. The gifts, consisting of a number of beautiful old pieces of jewelry, around which sentiment clung, were brought forward and placed on the altar, while the members sang: "Take My Life and Let It Be, Consecrated, Lord, to Thee."

A poem, "Your Gift," was read.

"What is in thy hand?"

"A rod," brought before our eyes visions of people freed from slavery's chains, of a weary, hungry multitude fed, of a sinful world, weary, hungry, waiting—waiting for us, who call ourselves Missionary, to confess our conventional, powerless discipleship, and, "not by power, nor by might, but by God's Spirit" to make whole-hearted surrender to Him, who still has power to bless and make sufficient our gifts.

"Fear not, though small the gift, when used with faith, at His command,

"'Twill be enough—with God."

In the words of David Livingstone, "I will place no value on any thing I may have or may possess except in relation to the Kingdom of God." We pledged ourselves to God's guidance, through the daily offering of ourselves and all that is intrusted to us, in His service.

"Spirit of God, descend upon my heart;

CORINTH ZONE

The second meeting of Corinth zone was held at Bethel Church, June 29, with Mrs. J. M. Bradley presiding. The zone is composed of the following auxiliaries: Corinth First, Corinth South side, Gaines Chapel, Kossuth, Pisgah, Rienzi, Thrashera, and Bethel. All were represented.

The very interesting program was as follows: Conference Report On Extension Work, by Mrs. Lucy of Corinth. Miss Annie Kemp presented Children's Work, and had with her a unique display of work done by the children of Corinth First Church, the work with the Indians predominated.

Mrs. John Blackmore beautifully related the Crucifixion and Resurrection in a talk on Passion Week.

Mrs. R. E. L. Mitchell told some of the objectives of Christian Social Relations, emphasizing prohibition. Mission and Bible Study was discussed by Mrs. Lockman. A sweet and sacred memorial service was led by Mrs. E. E. Sutton. A playlet, "The Record Book," was given by the ladies of Gaines Chapel, proving that The World Outlook is a splendid magazine.

Miss Helen Edge of Rienzi discussed the lynching problem in an interesting way. Others who added interest to the program were: Mrs. George Cox, Rev. E. M. Sharp, Misses Katherine Hudson, and Margaret Monroe, and little Miss Jean Mayse.

The next meeting will be held with Pisgah church.

ARE THEY DISCOURAGED?

Are our missionaries in China discouraged? Not a bit of it, and neither are the Chinese brethren. Strange it may be, but the depression in America has seemed to add impetus to self-support among the Chinese churches. On the Changchow district every charge except one has recently increased its contributions for support of the ministry. And yet the depression is being keenly felt in China, and in the city of Changchow alone nine harks failed at the beginning of this year. At the recent Changchow district revival, when the shortage of funds was under discussion, the Chinese pastors declared almost to a man: "No matter what happens, I'll stay in the ministry. I'll not forsake my Church or my ministry. Maybe I was tempted to leave during the persecutions of 1927, but now no matter what happens I'll stay in."

"WHAT A PASTOR TOLD ME"

It's a simple little story but how it stirs the heart! Dr. F. S. Onderdonk, presiding elder of the Northern district, Texas-Mexican Conference, tells it:

"Last Sunday I was in Houston, Texas, visiting our Mexican congregation. The pastor, Rev. E. Vidaauri, told me of one of his members who had made a vow to the Lord to pay a tithe of his earnings. He fell sick and soon all he possessed went for food and medicine. He often thought of the $5.00 tithe money he had saved up but he purposed in his heart not to touch that sacred fund. To make matters worse, his truck, which was the source of his income, got out of order and needed $5.00 to repair it. His mind kept reverting to the tithe money, but each time he said, 'That is the Lord's money and I will not use it.' And somehow, some way he managed and did not. With what joy that man came to the parsonage and handed in his $5.00 for the work of the Lord! It was just a Mexican laborer who did this. What would happen if every Methodist would do likewise? Only the Father himself can estimate."

BIBLE SCHOOL AT PALMETTO, LA.

Dear Brother Raulius: A Bible School was held at Palmetto, La., from July 3 to July 15, inclusive.

An enrollment of 29 with average attendance of 25. Quite a bit of interest was manifested. There were a good many of the children to receive certificates of merit. The school was in charge of Miss Ora Hooper, with Mrs. Floyd Hawkins and Mrs. J. A. McDaniel assisting.

We regret Miss Hooper leaving us and will certainly miss her. She has been faithful in her work and has been an inspiration to those who have been in contact with her.

REV. C. K. SMITH CELEBRATES FOURTH ANNIVERSARY AS PASTOR AT CROWLEY, LA.

Rev. C. K. Smith, pastor of the First Methodist Church here, was honored at the 11 o'clock service Sunday morning after completing four years of service as pastor here.

A resolution, expressing the board's appreciation for his untiring efforts and prepared by Jack Lyons, was presented before the preaching Sunday morning by J. W. Miles, member of the board. This resolution was read to the congregation by J. W. Embry, president of the board.

Rev. Mr. Smith in his morning sermon spoke on his four years of service in Crowley. He pointed out that during this four year period a total of $32,000 had been raised and spent in church work.

More than 150, he stated, have united with the church while he has performed a total of 71 marriages and baptized some 133 babies.

Outstanding Work

Rev. Mr. Smith has been called upon to officiate at 105 funerals and made hundreds and hundreds of calls to the homes of the sick and shut-ins.

He explained that the Woman's Missionary Society has more than doubled its membership and there has been a large enrollment in the Sunday school attendance.

He expressed the belief that the organization of the Young Men's Bible class and the formation of the Young Woman's Missionary Society are the outstanding accomplishments of the church during the past four years.

Rev. Mr. Smith in his sermon stressed the fact that the church and the members of the church had accomplished the things which have been done. He made it clear he did not claim credit and did not want credit for them.

Pleads for Unity

He concluded his sermon with a plea for unity among the members in the church program and church work and predicted that with this unity the next four years could be more successful than the past four.

The resolution which was presented to Rev. Mr. Smith reads as follows: "Resolution adopted by the Board of Stewards, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Crowley, La.

"Whereas, Sunday, July 9, 1933, marks the fourth anniversary of the services of Rev. Claude K. Smith as pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Crowley, La., and

"Whereas, during these four years he has kept the true interest of the church at heart, and through his untiring efforts has faithfully performed his duties in connection thereto,

"Now therefore it is resolved that this board extend to Rev. Mr. Smith their appreciation for his loyalty to the church; for his kindness to those in distress; for his generosity to mankind; and for his diligence in teaching the Gospel of Christ, and

"Be it further resolved that this resolution be spread on our records and a suitable copy presented to Rev. Mr. Smith.

A DELAWARE BEER PARTY

A few days before the Delaware election, a business house located within one block of the police station in Wilmington sent an invitation through the U. S. mails. We have a copy of it addressed to a boy fifteen years of age. The invitation reads: "The Company invites you to come to their store and bring a boy friend for an evening of entertainment, of moving pictures, of motorcycles, sports, thrills and spills, hill climbs and races.

"REFRESHMENTS. 3.2 right out of the keg. It is our treat."

A friend of one of the boys who received an invitation asked a young man to attend this "party" as an observer. We have his affidavit of what he saw there. The following quotations are from it:

Extracts from an Affidavit Report of the Beer Party

"Thirty or more boys were present, ranging from fifteen to twenty-two years of age, I would judge from their appearance. The majority of them were minors. A keg of beer, advertised to be 3.2 per cent alcohol, was mounted on the side of a motorcycle and wheeled into the open. The boys were invited to step up to the spigot by the host, who added: 'If any of you fellows are minors, there is some Coca Cola for you!' This announcement was greeted in the spirit with which it was made—with a Bronx cheer.

"There was no restriction on the number of times we could have access to the faucet. As nearly as I could keep track, one boy in his teens must have gone at least eight or ten times. "After about fifteen minutes of drinking the party began to liven up and finally it became quite noisy, so as to attract the attention of some half dozen people who watched us over a high wooden fence.

"After the flow of suds was under way, the boys became talkative. 'This makes six for me,' boasted one lad. 'Don't say anything about this at home,' said another. 'I see you are getting to be quite a drinker,' one

JOHN BARLEYCORN His Life and Letters

By DANIEL A. POLING

This is at once the most unique and the most powerful book ever written on prohibition. Here are the true facts about alcohol presented in a new way. It is not just an amusing book. It is an important milestone in the dry argument for control of the liquor traffic. Dr. Poling has fought long and vigorously for prohibition. From the pulpit and the platform he has spoken to the people of practically every city in America. Leader of the Allied Prohibition Forces, he is a prohibitionist who has never sensed defeat, and into John Barleycorn he has put his sincere conviction, his breadth of understanding, his remarkable literary talent, and his unfailing sense of humor.

boy greeted another. 'I am getting on to it,' the other replied.

"One young fellow moved over to me, where I was munching a pretzel. He timidly admitted that he did not like beer. 'Look, he drinks Coke!' said a jeering voice and some four or five of us who did not drink beer were placed in the category of 'sissies.'

"Out in the open lot were six powerful motorcycles which some of these boys were expecting to ride home after the party.

"A boy of about sixteen years, dressed in a Western Union uniform, was making frequent returns to the keg and belching frequently. He would go on duty afterwards, he said, if he were able. He was the owner of one of the wheels parked in the open.

"I noticed two young fellows drawn off to a dark corner of the lot and drinking from a flat bottle which contained, evidently, more kick in it than the 3.2 beer."—National Prohibition Emergency Committee.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

HELP! HELP! And I mean it.

Last week the editor hurried in an editorial the title of which was, "Fewer Movements," in which he got Lazarus where Dives belongs. So please sit down quickly with your Advocate of July 27 and write "Dives" where he uses "Lazarus" in several places.

The editor usually reads his editorials before they get into the columns of the Advocate. Having gone out of town for a meeting he missed this one.

We are greatly humiliated. Two facts, however, mollify our feelings somewhat. First, the number of people who read the editorials. Two laymen plucked my coat tail publicly, and numbers of letters from preachers and others have come calling our attention to the error. And we are afraid all of them are not in yet.

The second is that these readers note an error very quickly and expect the editor to have things right.

We thank you for your criticism.

IS IT "IF AND WHEN" OR "WHEN AND IF" repeal comes?

Well, it seems that it is coming regardless of the order of words in a phrase. And some fellow pokes his head into my window and says, "Now what are you going to do 'when and if'?"

I want to say first what I am not going to do. I am not going to drink any more of the stuff than I have been drinking. The Sahara has nothing on me. I am a very good Democrat, but I can't go all the way. I have been too happy with nothing in my pockets to be moved by the promise that liquor will bring back prosperity. And I never have been an idolater with reference to the Democratic Party. Hence I am unmoved by Mr. Farley's hint of disloyalty to the party if I fail to support repeal. And I will say, in passing, that I am not very strong for these Southern Democrats who disdain many things from the "up-northerner" but will swallow whole Mr. Farley's suggestion that we must take liquor with the party.

Secondly, I am not going to join Achilles putting in his tent because things don't go to suit me. I "joined up" for the war. I'd be a traitor to quit when we lose a skirmish. I am hunting for the spirit of Browning's man who was "baffled to fight better."

I am going to look into the whole matter a little more carefully and all things related to it. I suspect I shall discard some of my weapons. May lay aside several of those designed for defense and forge some new and better ones for attack.

I am going to keep my pride in the fact that every victory of soberness is a victory for the whole country, and that a victory for liquor is a defeat for everybody.

I am going to ally myself with all honest and intelligent people and organizations that will continue to carry on the fight for a liquorless land.

I shall remember the promise of the liquor interests and supporters of repeal to do away with poverty and crime by repeal. We owe that much to them.

I shall stand by Uncle Sam until he so-

DR. W. WINANS DRAKE ANSWERS LAST ROLL CALL

The Louisiana Conference and the whole church have sustained a great loss in the death of Dr. W. Winans Drake, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, which occurred at Lake Charles last Thursday morning, July 27. The body was taken to Shreveport for interment. The funeral service was held Friday afternoon in the Noel Memorial Methodist Church where Dr. Drake had once served many years as pastor. The officials of the church acted as pallbearers. The funeral service was conducted by Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, assisted by Revs. T. M. Brownlee, E. C. Gunn, Briscoe Carter, H. T. Carley, H. L. Johns, C. D. Atkinson, and W. W. Holmes. A large number of preachers and other friends from every section of the State were present. Forty-four years of a consecrated and efficient service, such as Dr. Drake rendered, is a contribution that few are privileged to make. He will be greatly missed in Louisiana Methodism. A suitable memoir will shortly appear in these columns.

bers up and redeems his pledge to himself and the world. I shall be greatly humiliated, but he is my uncle and I am not going to leave him when he needs me so much.

And I shall bear in mind that God "standeth within the shadow, keeping watch above his own;" and that so long as this is so right may, for awhile, be worsted, but that wrong will not triumph. "Truth crushed to earth will rise again; the eternal years of God are hers."

FIGURES ARE VERY CHEERING sometimes. Especially is this true when we are counting up the gains to the church. The census of religious bodies is in. The statistics are before us. 50,037,209 members above thirteen years of age, and a gain of 929,252 last year.

Reports as to financial support are not so encouraging, but they are worthy of genuine consideration. Let it be remembered that membership in the church and the contributions thereto are both voluntary. There is nothing quite comparable to this in all the annals of human affairs. We seem to be as unconscious of this fact as we are the pull of gravity. With all its faults and "wrinkles" the Christian church pulls humanity as the moon pulls the tides.

Seth Parker's questionnaire to his vast radio audience seeking to find the most popular songs revealed that "The Old Rugged Cross" led, while a number of the ageless hymns of the church were close by.

And it is to be noted that there is developing, slowly to be sure, a return to the church. Some who concluded that science has the last word are returning to hear a more ancient and more modern statement and to seek a more excellent way. Some rather rigid churchmen have become more tolerant and generous, while numbers of the scholarly have grown hungry of heart. A better synthesis is developing.

PERHAPS IT WOULD BE a little more sobering to us to weigh our church members rather than to count them. Numbers, contributions and organizations, have their value; but they are not primary. A yardstick is dependable in measuring cloth, and a peck measure in measuring corn; but we cannot measure spiritual values thus.

It is time for the Christian church to measure itself against some major realities of our time. Our attitudes in these matters register the spiritual temperature of the church.

What is the church doing toward the alleviation of sectarianism and denominational superiority? An agreement to cooperate in common enterprises with gains both in economy and good-will is a more dependable measure of progress in church life than an increase in enrollment.

What are we doing toward mastering the problem of war and international good-will? Surely the church must take the lead in such an enterprise. What are we doing to allay race and industrial friction, and to establish the Christian way in these relations? How loud and united is our protest against the evils of our day, and how clear is our Gospel word to a puzzled generation?

THE CHURCH CALLED TO STABILIZE

By Bishop W. A. Candler, D.D., LL.D.

Some years ago Dr. W. T. Shedd made to some recent graduates the following wise deliverance: "The proper posture of the educated man toward the current opinions of the age in which he lives is that of moderation. An educated man should keep his mind equable and in some degree aloof from passing views and theories. He ought not to allow theories that have just come into existence to seize upon his understanding with all that assault and onset with which they take captive the uneducated and especially the unhistoric mind. He occupies a height, a vantage ground, and he is to stand upon it, not with the tremor and fervor of a partizan, but with the kindness and insight of a judge."

The words of Dr. Shedd are good, but very many educated men do not exemplify the excellencies of moderation and calmness which he commended. Very many of the most dangerous agitators in our day are men of education, and many of the things for which they are making agitations are dangerous proposals.

The world of the present day is suffering from excessive agitation. It is disturbed. On all hands we hear the cries of disquietude and unrest. They fill the political world with their shrieks and they disquiet the commercial world with their hysterical noise. Intranquility prevails all around the world. But we cannot look to mere intellectual culture to bring calmness to these troubled times.

It is the high offices of the Church—by which is meant the universal Church—to stabilize this disquieted age, and to speak peace to its troubled waves. It belongs to the very nature of the Church to serve this high end.

It appertains to the Church to look at all things in the light of unchanging principles and an eternal government by the God of all wisdom and love. It sees things, therefore, not with the excited spirit of one who mistakes a transient blow for a destructive storm that will prostrate before it all things forever.

The Church is accustomed to storms, from the tempests on the little Sea of Galilee until the present time she has passed through many tempestuous eras. It is reasonable to expect that the Church, therefore, has acquired the habit of commending serenity.

Very much of the restlessness of the world today has come from wrong-doing and faithless living. Perhaps the World War is the source of a great deal of the present-day disquietude of mankind. It was unprecedented in its magnitude and in the disasters which it wrought. Hundreds of billions of treasure were wasted by it, and hundreds of thousands of the youths of the world were slain in its conflict. But it sprang from principles of utter unrighteousness, and the aims of the nations which were mainly to blame for bringing it on were in defiance of the laws of God and in indifference to the welfare of the human race. That dreadful conflict has passed by about fifteen years, but its consequences will go on for many, many years to come.

After the War our country indulged in a wild pursuit of gain. Speculative ventures of the most unwise sort were pursued with the utmost zeal. Eventually the boom exploded, as all such bubbles invariably do. Now the people are looking around at the wreckage wrought by their own folly and crying, "Who will show us any good?"

It belongs to the Church to answer this cry, and to direct the people back to God and His laws, from which source only deliverance can come.

When such a cry was heard by the Psalmist, David, his answer was, "Lord, lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us. Thou hast put gladness in my heart, more than in the time that their corn and their wine increased" (Psalm 4:6-7).

Standing amidst this forlorn world it behooves the Church of God to raise no lamentation of remediless distresses, but to rejoice in the fact that God lives and His Goodness will supply all that is needful.

Most certainly the Church should not be falling in with agitations and contributing thereby to the general confusion of the times. That would be to discredit her own nature and to fall short of her duty to such a disturbed period. What is needed is not the acceptance and propagation of novel theories, but it is a return to fixed principles and the maintenance of them with the most calm courage and serene confidence. The Church is not to be taken off her feet by rampant innovators and carried away by their cries. It is easy for many to yield to the plausibilities and fervent appeals of our modern agitators; but there is no relief to be drawn from that quarter. Doubtless, there are evils to be corrected, and wrongs to be righted, the leadership of novelty-mongers will not result in any worthy reforms, however their proposals may appear. This generation is not to be guided by hastily kindled fires on this hillock or that elevation, but by God's pillar of cloud and of fire, which has led all the past into the most blessed results which mankind has enjoyed.

It is a revelation from heaven that is to be received and obeyed if mankind is to be led out of darkness and despair into a day of peace and blessedness.

The chief thing which the Church needs now to exercise with the greatest care is her own tranquillity. In order to stabilize the world outside her pale, she must stand serene in majestic calmness without fear and dismay. The present is not a good time for the Church to undertake to revolutionize its own government, and to cast away its ancient faith. Ecclesiastical demagogues may seek to seduce her from these paths of peace and prosperity; but she will be wise to turn a deaf ear to all they have to say, and to heed the words of the prophet when he said, "Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." (Jeremiah 6:16).

What has come from the proposals of innovators and agitators in the Church who have appeared from time to time before the present day? They made no permanent contribution to the welfare of Zion, but hindered its progress by distracting its soul.

What is in the condition of the present-day Church which needs revolutionary schemes?

It is more successful than business enterprises, and is less confused than the political world. Why throw among its people apples of discord and divisive discussions?

More than at any other time in recent years the need of the Church is exemption from agitators and disquieting debates. This is no time to awaken contests among its members about matters of small importance, if, indeed, any of the proposals are of importance at all.

If the world is stabilized, it must be stabilized by the Church; for there is no other power equal to the demands of the times.

The plans and projects of the politicians yield no good. On the contrary they do rather irritate than they bring satisfaction and tranquillity. The selfishness of nations draws them into noisy debates and disturbing controversies.

The peace of God which passeth all understanding, abiding in the soul of the Church, must bring pacification to a world disquieted on every side by multiplied thousands of profitless issues. Its supreme need is the revival of its Spiritual life, and not tinkering with its government.

For the highest welfare of mankind, as well as for the success of the Church, it would be a blessed thing if of this period in human history it could be recorded: "Then had the Churches rest, and were edified; and walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, were multiplied." (Acts 9:31).

FROM THE HEART OF A PREACHER

(An Editorial from the Richmond Christian Advocate)

Real preachers who believe their call is from God and their duty is to be real prophets of righteousness, are disturbed these days and are making an effort to adjust their own souls and their messages to God and carry out His will and purpose. It is a hard time on a real preacher, but there was never a greater time to preach. We have been receiving some letters from preacher friends who open their hearts on this matter. Here is the closing section of a letter from one of the outstanding ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church holding a pastorate in a big city: "I have given you these facts, not that I am discouraged about my work or the effectiveness of the Gospel, but to let you know just how things are in this city by the sea."

"It may be that we preachers are somewhat at fault in that we have not been preaching the positive note, and even Zion's Herald has an editorial this week on the Mourner's Bench. I have not read it as yet, but even the suggestion from this paper is suggestive that we are beginning to realize that only the Gospel can save the nation. A new book just came in this morning with the title, 'Is Sin Our Fault?' which I will read with interest, for we must preach more about sin or there is no hope for the nation. When the Church was preaching about sin and the other great doctrines it made rapid growth and there was a marked distinction between the people of the church and the world. Some of us will have to pioneer the Church back again to the great facts of the Bible and let the social implications be cared for in the regeneration of individuals. I have noticed that when a man gets religion the social elevation of himself and family is the natural order. Perhaps we have tried to do too much social service work without the Christ in it.

"This is Monday, but it is not blue Monday, for I am convinced that we can save the nation and the Church if we are true to God and our convictions."

MISSISSIPPIAN IN THE CONGO WRITES TO HIS FELLOW-MISSISSIPPIANS

M. E. C. M. Kongolo, Congo Belge.

Dear Fellow-workers: Thinking back over the past three years of depression and hard times, I am reminded that these same years have been filled and blessed with labors of love and sacrifice by you and your loyal people. Perhaps, too, this would be the time of turning the tables, so to speak, giving us on the far-flung battle line the opportunity to cheer and encourage those who are making it possible for us to be here. Knowing my Mississippi from birth, and many of you personally, I want to say "Thank you" and "God bless you" from the bottom of my heart. Then I would like to have a little talk with you and tell you a few things about our life and work here in the Congo.

As many of you already know, our mission is in the very heart of Africa, among the once fierce and cannibal Atetela people. And as that great heart of Africa is filled with the knowledge and understanding of the risen, living Jesus, it commences to throb and pulsate with a life in tune with the great Father heart of God. Looking back over the years that I have been privileged to live among these black children, I am able to see and recognize many "footprints" of our Lord and Master. Just two weeks ago a letter came to my wife from our printer at Wembo Nyama, our largest and oldest mission station. He wrote— but would you mind if I just translated some of it?

"Mama Unya: Greetings from me, your child in salvation which comes from Jesus. Today I am so happy I write to give you greetings. We have had here a strong palaver (revival) which lasted two weeks, praying and preaching, and many found freedom from sin."

"And when I was praying in my home on February 19 of this year, I heard a strong voice telling me this, 'Thou, Paul Djimba, have accepted the work of witnessing for God; it is well for you to go and tell your brothers that they may come to me, repenting of their sins. Be warned that you not fail.' So I became happy to go from house to house in my village and to the big village of the chief near me and tell every person what I had heard. Truly the Holy Spirit is working in the hearts of the people these days. Be much in prayer, Mama Unya, and I refer you to Galatians 5:13-26. May God, our Father, guard you."

"Signed: PRINTER PAUL DJIMBA."

Let me further relate what came to me just yesterday in a letter from a fellow-missionary about Paul Djimba. For some time past, possibly about a month, there have been huge lions attacking villagers and we have heard of four natives who have been eaten by these beasts. One report was of a woman and a child attacked in a village not over thirty miles from here, if that far. They were seized just at dusk, right in sight of the village. These lions are so fearless and so powerful that these poor, frightened, ignorant, superstitious people have forsaken the house of God to worship and try to appease these cruel beasts. When the evangelist went to Wembo Nyama and reported this, Paul Djimba determined to go out and kill the lions. He said it would not do for a white man to go, as the natives would only say, "Of course, the white man and his powerful medicine." But he would go in the strength and name of Jesus and show these people that God protects His own. He set out for the village with his gun and his Bible, and we are awaiting news of him. We, with the native Christians, are praying for his safety and his success. Could such a faith as he has fail?

My friends, we here on the field have just such a faith in God's people to carry on His work, and we never fear, even though the clouds are black about us. Man's extremity is God's opportunity and there is always the group, God's faithful few. He made no other plan. During these days of praying and leaning heavily on His guidance, we feel that we are being strengthened for future tasks.

Our routine work continues to keep us all busy. We are doing only the necessary repair and upkeep work in the industrial department, striving to hold the fort during these days of financial struggle. We have several lovely brick residences on the Mission. Two are at Munga, two at Wembo Nyama, and two at Tunda. The ever-watchful white ants are always on the alert to find a vulnerable spot to enter and destroy our homes. Our own house of mud, sticks, and sundried brick, with a thatched roof, offers a veritable feast for them. Every year it must be repaired and re-thatched, and we continue the fight for shelter while visions of a permanent home dance in our heads.

Our school work is most interesting and the pupils seem most eager to learn. Along with the three R's we must strive to instill in them a longing for cleaner bodies and ways of living. To this end a physical examination is made and all who need treatment are listed and sent to the hospital at a specified time each day. Higher moral standards are insisted on for our leaders and teachers, that they may be examples for the pupils. With the age-old customs we must battle against, which so degrade and hold them down, one must needs suffer heartaches and disappointments many times. I have seen our school principal in tears at the seemingly impossible task of making them comprehend and understand the hideousness of uncleanness. But those same tears have been turned to joy as her boys and girls have finished school, have been happily married to Christians, and are busily engaged in teaching and uplifting their brothers and sisters.

Not long ago a revival broke out spontaneously in our village. Our evangelistic leader, quick to see the opportunity, continued the services each night for ten days. On one night the service was led by the wife of one of the native evangelists. This in itself was unusual, as women in Africa do not play such an important role as a rule. But she had a good service and when the altar call was made over a hundred people responded, lining the altar two and three deep, crying for salvation. One boy called me outside, and there I found one of my hospital boys alone, crying and praying. The fire has spread to other villages and we hear good reports all around us, for which we praise and thank God.

The last part of our work to tell you about is our medical department. There we are having some wonderful opportunities for service. The poor natives, with their yaws, tropical ulcers, sleeping sickness, operative conditions, and a multitude of other complaints, have flocked in until our hospital is filled to overflowing. We have at present 125 in the hospital. There is one white nurse, and also there are ten native boys and two native women who help in the work. The native helpers do practically all the treatments under our supervision. We have a beautiful little brick chapel for the patients, built from bricks taken from the chimneys of a building that had to be torn down. There is an early morning service each day, led by one of the hospital boys; and Sunday school on Sundays, the classes being taught by the hospital boys. There is also a preaching service conducted by one of the missionaries or native evangelists. What a privilege and joy is ours to be of those chosen by our Lord to bring the message of joy, love and peace! Pray for us that we may prove faithful to our calling.

Most sincerely yours,

(Signed) W. B. LEWIS, M. D.

Dr. W. B. Lewis is supported as a Special by the church at Amory, Miss. In a letter to the pastor of this church, Rev. C. T. Floyd, Dr. Lewis says:

"Our work is going forward in spite of the depression and hard times. Usually during the rainy season our hospital work is light because the people haven't time to get sick. They make their gardens during this season or go hungry when the rains are over they take time to come in and get treatments for yaws, tropical ulcers, hernia or some other condition. The rainy season has sometimes caused them to postpone their visit to the hospital too long and they arrive in such a desperate condition that we are not able to do them any good. But this year we had a full hospital all the year. We have more than 125 patients in the hospital. They do not have any money these days for hospital bills, so they come in with chickens or some other produce with which to pay their small fee of 25 francs. One fellow came in yesterday for a major operation, and we usually make a charge of 75 francs for such an operation. He brought about fifteen chickens, worth about 35 francs, and thirty francs in money. We will do him as soon as we get to his name on the operative list. There are about twelve others ahead of him awaiting their turn. We cannot operate every day because of the other work. For example, tomorrow is 'needlo day.' There are about twenty-five who will be there for injections for sleeping sickness and probably ten for injections for yaws, and then about thirty for intramuscular injections. It usually takes all morning to get through with the injections. So far God has blessed us and we haven't had a single accident for intravenous injections and only one abscess for an intramuscular."

MISSISSIPPI METHODIST HISTORY AND THE GENERAL CONFERENCE

Rev. J. B. Cain of Hattiesburg and the undersigned were named by the Mississippi Conference Historical Society as a committee to prepare the literary material for a pamphlet to be circulated before and during the coming General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, descriptive of the leading places of Methodist historic interest in Mississippi, such as: The grave near Vicksburg of Tobias Gibson, first itinerant of the Southwest; Grave at Natchez of Moses Floyd, second itinerant of the Southwest; Grave and Home at Centerville of William Winans; Site of Methodist Meeting House at Washington, in which Constitutional Convention met which organized State of Mississippi; Site of Newitt Vick Home near Fayette, in which first session of the Mississippi Conference was held, 1813; Old Foster Home at Pine Ridge near Natchez, in which first session of the Mississippi Conference presided over by a Bishop was held, 1816; Ford Home near Columbia, in which 1917 session was held, presided over by Bishop McKendree; Methodist Church at Woodville, 110 years old, in which sessions were held, presided over by Bishops Roberts, Soule and Paine; Bowling Green Home near Woodville, where William McKendree was guest of Edward McGehee; Portrait Gallery of Natchez Pastors in Natchez Church; Kingston Church, where the original church lot was purchased by Lorenzo Dow with his watch; Dow's Spring; Grave of Bishop Paine at Aberdeen; Grave of Bishop Galloway at Jackson; Grave of Richard Abbey at Yazoo City; Grave of Newitt Vick near Vicksburg.

Brother Cain and I will appreciate any information and any ideas. At the meeting of the Society it was suggested that our own Mississippi people familiarize themselves with our historic places, so as to be able to talk intelligently concerning them to visitors during the General Conference.

It has occurred to the writer that we should assemble and exhibit under glass during the General Conference a few historical relics. Next year will be celebrated the Sesquicentennial of American Methodism; and it will be 135 years since Gibson organized at Washington, Miss., the first Methodist society of the Southwest. Therefore there is a combination of conditions which should give interest to our endeavors along these lines.

FROM THE BOARD OF TEMPERANCE AND SOCIAL SERVICE

Speaking concerning the results in Alabama and Arkansas Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Chairman, and Dr. Eugene L. Crawford, Secretary of the Board of Temperance and Social Service of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, said today:

The repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment would not change the basal facts in the warfare against the liquor traffic. Alcohol is declared by science to be a narcotic poison and a habit forming drug. The Eighteenth Amendment prohibits the traffic in intoxicating liquors, which incapacitate the citizen from performing the duties of citizenship and makes him a menace to society in general and his own family in particular. The Eighteenth Amendment put the brand of the criminal on the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. It was adopted because the liquor traffic is a National evil which it is impossible to continue by state or local lines. If the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed, it will be because: First, Lack of effective Federal Enforcement failure to ask for sufficient men and money to enforce the law; Second, Lack of effective state cooperation, some states following the leadership of Governor Smith in New York, adopting the policy of practical nullification; Third, Intense Roman Catholic opposition, the Catholic Hierarchy and Catholic Press having aggressively opposed the Prohibition Law. Other factors have combined to produce the present situation but those mentioned above are the principal ones.

The warfare of society with the liquor traffic is inevitable, irrepressible and continuous and society will finally inevitably be compelled to prohibit the traffic just as it has prohibited the traffic in narcotic drugs. The present campaign may finally be lost but the war will continue in unabated vigor for the abolition of the traffic and for total abstinence by the individual.

PROTESTANT—CATHOLIC—JEW

Officials of national Protestant, Catholic and Jewish organizations today called for hearty co-operation of all in the operation of the National Industrial Recovery Act in order that there may be realized "the maximum social justice and economic co-operation made possible under its provisions." "The Act," they said, "has incorporated into law some of the social ideals and principles for which religious organizations have stood for many years." The statement was made by Dr. John A. Ryan, Director of the Social Action Department, National Catholic Welfare Conference, Rabbi Edward L. Israel, Chairman of the Social Justice Commission of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, and the Reverend James Myers, Industrial Secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. The signers of the statement explained that while it was not an official pronouncement of their organizations, since some of them are not meeting at this time, it is based upon previous declarations of official policy. The statement follows:

"The National Industrial Recovery Act commands our special interest because of its human and ethical significance and because it has incorporated into law some of the social ideals and principles for which our religious organizations have stood for many years. A Joint Statement on Unemployment issued in January, 1932, by the Social Service Commission of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the Department of Social Action of the National Catholic Welfare Conference and the Social Justice Commission of the Central Conferences of American Rabbis, insisted that the values of human personality must be paramount. Among other measures, it called for a great program of public works to relieve unemployment, shorter hours, living wages and economic planning, including the right of labor to collective bargaining and representation in the control of industry. The statement also called for a more just and equitable distribution of wealth and income both as a measure of brotherhood and justice and also as an economic necessity to assure purchasing power to the masses of our people, which would make possible a balance of production and consumption.

"How far the National Industrial Recovery Act can accomplish some of these results remains to be seen, but many of its provisions, particularly those relating to the rights of labor, are so forward-looking in their intent as to merit the heartiest co-operation made possible under its provisions. To this end, we urge church leaders to take an active part in developing an informed public opinion in regard to the actual provisions of the National Recovery Act, especially as they relate to the rights and responsibilities of labor, employers and the public in order that in every community the greatest possible co-operation may be assured and the most substantial progress may be made toward a better social order."

Dr. J. R. Countiss, Dean of Grenada College, occupied the pulpit of the First Baptist Church, Grenada, Miss., on last Sunday evening, using as his subject, "Moral Issues of the Day."

Approximately 250 residents of the lowlands around Shreveport, La., were driven from their homes by flood waters following in the wake of four days of rain that deluged north Louisiana with heavy damage to crops.

The idea that the liquor business creates something economically is on a par with the idea of an undertaker who complained that the pure milk committee in his town had ruined his trade in babies' funerals.—Prof. Irving Fisher.

"Come on, Let's Go!" was the subject of the sermon delivered by Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor at Brookhaven, Miss., on last Sunday morning. The evening services are being conducted in the open and are largely attended by the members.

An old fashioned lawn party was given on the lawn of our church at Lake Charles, La., on Tuesday evening of last week. The Gleaners, Business Girls' circle and other departments of the Missionary Society were responsible for this evening of fun.

Rev. T. H. Dorsey, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference, has been secured by Rev. J. L. Nabors, pastor of our church at Holcomb, Miss., to conduct a series of revival meetings to begin Sunday, August 6 and continue indefinitely.

The members of the 106th Engineers-Millsaps band reported at the college recently for four days of intensive drill and band practice preparatory to the annual field training at Camp Beauregard, La., which got under way on the 30th and will continue through August 13.

We regret to learn of the death of Mr. Stephen Winfield, brother of Dr. G. F. Winfield, Dean of Whitworth College. Mr. Winfield, whose home was in Gatesville, Texas, had just passed his 74th milestone. He leaves ten children and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his going.

EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION

The New Orleans Christian Advocate is now in its eightieth year of service to the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi. With but few exceptions, it has been visiting the homes of its readers every week, championing the cause of righteousness and leading the battle against the forces of sin and corruption with unwavering steadfastness.

In an effort to more effectively serve the Conferences of Louisiana and Mississippi the Publishing Committee has authorized the manager of the Advocate to accept subscriptions, both new and renewal, during the month of August at the exceedingly low rate of $1.00.

It is urged and hoped that every pastor and interested layman will take advantage of this Eightieth Anniversary offer of one year's subscription for $1.00, and secure as many new readers to our Conference organ as is possible.

Present subscribers whose subscriptions have expired and are running on grace are also urged to make use of this opportunity of renewing their Advocate subscription for another year at the reduced rate.

Subscribers whose subscriptions have not as yet expired but care to take advantage of this large saving can have their subscriptions advanced another year by forwarding $1.00 before September 1.

One Year for $1.00.

headquarters from the Baronne Building to 1220 Washington Avenue, New Orleans. Says he, "We are getting ready to fight the liquor traffic harder than ever, but we are moving out of the high rent district." Kindly be governed accordingly.

Mr. Frank Williams, son of Rev. W. M. Williams of the Mississippi Conference and Chaplain at the Sanatorium, Magee, Miss., has been appointed Commercial Attache and Advisor to the Consul, in Tokio, Japan. This is one of the most important posts in the service and the Advocate joins his many friends in extending congratulations to Mr. Williams.

In connection with their exhibit in the Hall of Religion at "A Century of Progress," the World's Sunday School Association is showing fifty-two stereopticon slides by means of a stereomograph. These pictures from various fields give a vivid portrayal of the world outreach on behalf of childhood and youth.

The amount collected to-date on the Kingdom Extension offering totals $120,611.74, as against $198,987.94 in 1932. These figures, taken from the General Organ, show a decline of $74,376.20 over last year. The Conferences served by the Advocate contributed to this amount as follows: Louisiana, $3,858.99; Mississippi, $2,936.48; North Mississippi, $2,059.07.

"A lie was told. Who told it? One of two parties. Which? 11 a. m. to 11:45 next Sunday." That is the unique manner in which Dr. Jas. H. Felts, pastor of our church at Grenada, Miss., announced the morning service in the Grenada Sentinel. Other activities included vesper services for the young people, a "stew party" by the Men's Bible Class, and plans for a daily vacation Bible school to be held next week.

Hadn't we better start getting ready? Only three more months remain before Conference. Just to refresh your memory, the North Mississippi Conference meets as First Church, Water Valley, November 2. The Mississippi Conference will convene in the Methodist Church at Brookhaven, November 16, and the Louisiana Conference will hold forth at our church in Winfield, November 23. Will we be ready in time?

The Board of Trustees of Grenada College, Grenada, Miss., announces the election of Miss Virginia Thomas as dean of women, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Corrine Laney, who served so efficiently in this capacity for nearly twenty years. The Board also announced the appointment of Miss Jane Adams, of Tupelo, Miss., to succeed Miss Sophie Alston, resigned, as head of the department of home economics.

Mr. M. B. Swayze, Secretary of the Jackson 1934 General Conference, together with the pastors of Jackson and adjacent towns, is already making extensive plans and arrangements for the entertainment of the large gathering of delegates and visitors who will be attracted from almost every state in the Union to what will undoubtedly prove to be the most important Conference since the formation of our great Southern Methodism.

"Louisiana's Old 'Blind Tiger' Act Held Still Valid," says Assistant Attorney-General George M. Wallace. Mr. Wallace stated that the attorney-general's office has ruled that parishes and municipalities in which dry sentiment prevails, in the event of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, may fall back upon Act 8 of 1915, known as the "Blind Tiger" Act which forbids operation of a saloon or "grog shop" in which "malt, spirituous or intoxicating liquor" is sold without a license from local authorities.

"Old Bluff Creek Camp Meetings" is the title of an interesting booklet written by Mr. H. C. Lipscomb, consecrated layman of Istrouma, La., which is now in the hands of the printer for publication. Mr. Lipscomb has attended every meeting held at this historic old Camp Ground since it was founded in 1890 by Rev. J. R. Whittington. The books should be ready for distribution by August 5 and copies can be obtained by addressing either Mr. Lipscomb or the pastors in the Baton Rouge District. They can be had for 30c a copy, postpaid.

We bow our heads in silence as we record the sudden passing of Dr. John J. Howell of Durant, Miss., son of Mr. F. A. Howell, one of the few living laymen who attended the first session of the North Mississippi Conference at Water Valley, Miss., November 30-December 6, 1870. Dr. Howell, after having attended preaching service Sunday morning, July 23, dropped dead from a sudden heart attack. He was a graduate of the Memphis Medical School, and was a devout member of the Methodist Church. May God comfort those dear ones who will miss him most.

After repeated unsuccessful attempts on the part of certain politicians to block investigation of alleged irregularities in the general election of November 8, 1932, in New Orleans, Judge Alexander C. O'Donnel, senior jurist of the criminal district court of the parish of Orleans, signed an order recently authorizing an open court investigation of the alleged frauds, and placed District Attorney Eugene Stanley, who had been superseded by the Attorney-General, in charge of the investigation. Whether or not fraudulent tactics were used in counting the votes last November we can not say, but we heartily agree with District Attorney Stanley that no guilty person should be spared where evidence of fraud is found regardless of his political affiliation.

In a letter containing several new and renewal subscriptions, Rev. J. T. Abney, pastor of the Osyka, Miss., charge, informs us of the sudden death of Mr. W. B. Ferguson, faithful member of the Methodist Church since early childhood, and father of Rev. T. A. Ferguson, formerly of the Mississippi Conference and now stationed in Florida. Brother Ferguson died suddenly while sitting in his car talking to several friends following the opening meeting of a revival at the Baptist church in Holmesville, Miss., on Sunday, July 23. He lived a long and useful life, serving his church as steward and Sunday school superintendent, and died at the age of 81. Six children and a host of relatives and friends remain to mourn his departure.

We quote the following from a letter written the Manager by Dr. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Ruston District, La.: "Most of the preachers in the Ruston District are busy with summer revival meetings. Brother V. Cyrus Barcus, the young supply at Haynesville, is doing well in the work there. He has had a meeting in which he was assisted by his brother, Ed Barcus, Jr., of Liberty, Texas, in the beginning following which his father Dr. E. R. Barcus of the Jacksonville District in the Texas Conference, came to continue and close the meeting. They received a good number of people into the church. We have at last had rains throughout the hill section of Louisiana that have relieved a dry spell of several weeks. I hope that it will make it possible for the people to make good crops."

We record with sorrow the passing of Mrs. Mona Mount Hebert, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Mount, Berwick, La., on Sunday, July 16. She had just passed her twentieth birthday when God, in His Infinite Wisdom, called her home. Mona, as she was affectionately known by all, was a staunch Christian and devoted member of the Methodist Church. Her activities among the young people were many and varied, and those who were privileged to belong to the Sunday school class she so ably taught will miss her most. The funeral services were conducted at the Methodist Church, Rev. C. C. Wier who had baptised her in infancy, and only recently performed her wedding ceremony, officiating. May God comfort those who are most grieved at the loss we have all sustained.

Following an announcement by President Roosevelt that the Federal Government, through the Department of Justice, would immediately launch a nationwide fight against the fast growing kidnapping wave that has been terrorizing the Nation since the tragic kidnapping of the 20-months-old son of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, a jury in Kansas City recently sentenced Walter McGee to death on the gallows after having been convicted for kidnapping Miss Mary McElroy, daughter of the city manager of that city. It is one of the few cases in history to bring the supreme penalty where the victim of the kidnapping was unharmed and should prove a warning to others that the peaceful law-abiding citizens of the United States are determined to use every means at their command to suppress this outrageous crime.

TOPISAW CAMP MEETING

Friday night, August 11 to Sunday, August 20, is the period of the Topisaw Camp Meeting. Dr. C. W. Crister, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, will preach each day at 11 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. Visiting preachers will preach at 3 P. M. C. W. WESLEY, P. C.

BOOKS TO BE DISCUSSED AT MT. SEQUOYAH

The following books have been suggested by group leaders for use in the Discussion Conference to be held at Mt. Sequoyah, Fayetteville, Ark., August 16-22, 1933. Those who expect to attend this conference and desire to take a particular course would do well to read these books before coming to the conference.

The groups, with their respective textbooks, are as follows: "The Kind of Preaching Needed for our Day," Bishop Paul L. Kern, leader; "Jesus Came Preaching" by George A. Buttrick. "The Economic Crisis and Its Bearing on the Church," Dr. Alva W. Taylor, leader; "Christianity and Industry in America" by Alva W. Taylor; "Our Economic Life in the Light of Christian Ideals," prepared by special committee, Department of Research and Education, Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; "The Significance of Present World Conditions," Dr. G. B. Winton, leader; "The World Since 1914" by Walter C. Langsam; "Rebel Minds and World Peace" by Philip Gibbs; "Re-Thinking Missions," Dr. A. W. Wasson, leader; "The Unquiet Nerve of Missions" by Cleland Boyd McAfee; "The Present-Day Summons," by John R. Mott; "Re-Thinking Missions," A Layman's Inquiry After One Hundred Years, Ed. by W. E. Hoeking; "The Character of God," Dr. C. M. Bishop, leader; "My Idea of God" edited by Joseph Fort Newton; "The Humanity of God" by John Wright Buckham.

MY FRIEND AND BROTHER, JOHN C. CHAMBERS

Other friends have written worthily of John C. Chambers, who recently answered the call of the Father to come up higher. John Chambers was a superb Christian gentleman, one of God's noblemen. He was an honor to the Methodist ministry in that he thought and spoke and worked upon the highest plane.

A common task in a similar field drew us close together. For ten years we planned, prayed, and worked as true yoke-fellows in laying the foundation for universal Christian Education among the people in our respective Conferences. In our annual visits to Nashville, attending General and the Master Teacher, the Lord Jesus Christ. As a true, loyal friend he was unsurpassed. When he was needed most he stood closest, the same noble, unselfish soul under all circumstances. His hospitality to his fellow-workers and to the friends who visited in his home was boundless and royal.

What a monument John Chambers leaves in the lives of the teachers and the young people of his Conference! "And they that be teachers shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness forever and ever." After all the tributes we can pay any man, I believe the most prized is the tribute that the family the man leaves to the world, is the highest test of goodness and greatness.

"And is he dead whose glorious mind
Lifts thine on high?

To live in hearts we leave behind
Is not to die."

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR, "HOW MUCH PROFIT CAN WE MAKE?"

By Georgia Robertson

If you had stock in an industrial plant operating at a loss would you advise searching out and eliminating every waste and putting it on a paying basis through efficient management? Would you urge substitution of cheaper but poisonous chemicals for the sake of larger profits though causing sickness and death among employees? Aside from such inhumanity, cruelty and injustice, after sickness and death claims were paid would there be increased profits?

A somewhat similar situation faces every voter in our country. We are all stockholders, in a vital sense, in our government. It is operating at a heavy loss which must be met by our citizens through some form of increased taxation, either direct or indirect, unless wasteful, unjustified sums voted by Congress in the past are cut out and the nation's business is put on a thoroughly efficient basis with no wasteful favors, in any way, to politicians or anyone else. Some would have us stoop to pandering to the weaknesses and vices of our people as a source of increased revenue!

We are asked to sign on the dotted line for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to produce revenue to help balance the budget! Why overlook what would follow?—increased expenses for the care of those who would be impoverished through drink (they also would no longer have property on which to pay government taxes), the drinker's wife and little children becoming a charge upon the community, increase in medical and hospital care for those injured by drink, and sickness in families of working people where money had gone for drink instead of needed food, clothing, and shelter, thus undermining health; for care of the alcoholic insane that official records show greatly increase through use of intoxicants; the lowered efficiency of all workers, both in government and private employ, where they become addicted even to the use of beer, also the cost of increased accidents to persons and property.

To furnish every dollar of liquor revenue paid into government, state and local treasuries in the old days, from four to five dollars were taken from the people, decreasing their purchasing power and robbing productive industry while enormously increasing the wealth of a few brewers and distillers and strengthening their "strangle hold" on politicians and the so-called "free press."

No one would attempt to save money on running expenses of his car by cutting down on lubricating oil and thus destroying his car. Yet it is proposed to help pay the running expenses of our government by injuring and destroying our people through sale of intoxicants, even depriving the nation's infants and children of their milk and other needed food to bind strong bones, teeth, and nerves, thus injuring them for life if the daily wage is spent for beer and other intoxicants. Can you think of anything more wasteful, foolish, cruel, heartless and inhuman? Look, in imagination, at those sickly, undernourished children, with their crooked legs, decaying teeth, emaciated bodies, listen to their pitiful cries for food and then sign on the dotted line for repeal, knowing that God sees you trying to save yourself a few cents or dollars at such a price in human suffering, sickness, poverty and death.

Conference Councils, we occupied the same room in the hotel. It was the same when attending the Leadership Training Schools held at Lake Junaluska and Mount Sequoyah. We walked arm in arm, we shared our experiences, we opened wide our hearts one to the other—thus, we formed a rare and deathless friendship. Our most delightful hours were spent in reading books together, in exchanging books, marking and commenting upon the thoughts that we counted worth while. He excelled in digging up the roots of words and in getting at the heart of a great text of Scripture. I have known him to shout over the discovery of the underlying truth of some great passage of Scripture more hilariously than a miner when he discovered a big nugget of gold.

In my study of the beatitudes, it seems to me that John hid these sayings of our Lord in his heart as fully as any man I ever walked with. He was humble, teachable, pure in heart, therefore had the privilege of beholding the glory of the Lord in the face of Jesus Christ.

"The stalk that's most replenished,
Doth bow the most its modest head.
Thus, deep humility we find
The mark of every master mind;
The highest gifted lowliest bends,
And merit meekest condescends,
And shuns the fame that fools adore,—
The puff that bids a feather soar."

Since he has gone from us it is easier to see him standing almost alone in the greatness of

Have you seen the new "Broadcasting"? Instead of the former mimeographed sheet, it's now a full page regular in the Christian Education Bulletin. The circulation problem is efficiently solved by one unified publication rather than two. We bid a lingering farewell to "Our Mary's" former "Broadcasting," which was always such a source of help, and give our best wishes to the new method. If you don't get the Bulletin, and hold a responsible position in your church—Young People's Division, Children, or Adult—you should by all means subscribe at once. It's a monthly, the organ of the Louisiana Conference Board of Christian Education, and costs the amazing sum of twenty-five cents per annum! Get your subscriptions in immediately, to Box 742, Alexandria, La.

We received a card from W. D. Boddie, saying that Camp Windwood has been called off. He didn't say why. That's too bad for Young People in Central Louisiana. Better come to one of the other District Camps if you can! They're too good to miss!

Keener Memorial Young People of Baton Rouge gave a "Kid Party" not long ago, and from the reports we got, they had a perfectly sa-well time playing Ring-Around-The-Rosie, Hide-esspecially Hide-And-Seek! Try one; And-Seek, and other games—Most they ought to be fun.

Lillie Mae—that is, Mrs. Pomeroy—has just had an operation for appendicitis, and is reported doing very well. We all wish you a very speedy recovery, Lillie Mae. And you too, Bro. Pomeroy!

Our Conference Director, Wallace White, has been taking in all the sights in and around the World Fair. He's returning in time to attend Bluff Creek Camp, and assist in the song-leading. We'll be mighty glad to see you, Wallace!

And in preparation for that Bluff Creek Assembly, the Young People of Baton Rouge District have been Doin' Things. Hammond gave a Stunt Nite, collecting a million laughs, and a nice bit of Delegate Fund money. They had a Mellerdrummer, magicians 'n sideshows 'n everything.

And the Pontchatoula Young People, not to be outdone, are giving a Minstrel Show this week to help along their delegates. It's a great place to work to go to!

What do you know about your Conference leaders? Did you know that Secretary Jessie Gray Worthington graduated from Ouachita Parish Junior College with the President's statement that she was the nearest perfect student he'd ever had? Did you know the Vice-President Pearl Hattie is a star second-year student at Centenary, a member of the debating team? We're going to try to give you the low-down on President Mickal next week. Get ready!

Why don't we hear from your Department? Haven't you anything worthwhile to pass on to the rest of us? Then send it in to me, will you? Lydel Sims, Publicity Superintendent. (Hammond, La.).

This is probably the first young people's camp using a regular camp meeting location and possibly the first combined camp for young people and intermediates in the Conference.

sixteen in the younger group, came from the Vancleave, Mentor, and Coalville charges. Rev. E. D. Simpson, pastor of the Vancleave charge, had worked out the program with Brother Chambers before the death of the latter and this program had been approved by the General Board. Brother Simpson served as dean in charge of the entire camp while Rev. W. W. Murray, pastor of the Mentor charge, directed the affairs of the older group, and Miss Maud Spaulding had charge of the intermediates.

All activities of the two groups were entirely separate, except the platform hours at night, when all met together, along with a goodly number of adults from neighboring churches. Rev. W. W. Murray spoke the first night, Rev. E. B. Flurry the second night, and Rev. J. B. Cain, the third night. A memorial service was planned for Brother Chambers on Thursday night. Classes for the older group were as follows: Worship, Rev. E. D. Simpson; Evangelism, Rev. J. B. Cain; Missions, Mrs. Flurry Allen; Recreation, Miss Annie Ruth Ellis. Intermediate classes were as follows: Helping Our Neighbors, Miss Ruth Spaulding; Materials for Worship, Miss Maud Spaulding; How Can I Know I Am a Christian, E. B. Flurry; What It Means To Be a Church Member, Rev. W. W. Murray.

Mr. L. E. Havens served as dean of men and promoter of the song services, which were led by Russell Wilson. The boys learned a negro spiritual and the intermediates learned some special songs. A quartet consisting of Cooper Roberts, Ibert Fletcher, Mary Patton Roberts, and Annie Ruth Ellis sang at one of the evening hours. Vespers were led on Monday and Tuesday by Mary Patton Roberts, who also led the early morning service on Tuesday; on Wednesday by Juanita Wilson, and on Thursday by Kathryn Ryals. Eugene Flurry led Morning Watch on Wednesday and Aubrey Murray on Thursday.

Mrs. Iola Monteith Havens, home economics agent for Jackson county, planned the menus for the meals and freely gave of her time and service in making this part of the camp a success, which it was. Mrs. E. D. Simpson and Mrs. W. W. Murray ably assisted in all features of the camp. Miss Marjorie Stewart conducted the problem hour each day, taught a class one day, and served as general disciplinarian for the camp. Rev. J. B. Cain, Conference Director of Young People's Work, who took part in this camp, writes as follows: "The camp at New Prospect was an unusually interesting one to me. It was here in October, 1904, that I was received into the Methodist Church by the late T. L. Mellen. The young folks who were there were the sons and daughters of my former schoolmates and friends. It was an occasion of deep gratitude to me to see the progress made in this effort for the young people of those charges."

Can't Eat Can't Sleep Can't Work

A Sign You're Rundown!

When your appetite has fled and you're so tired and nervous you can't even work, much less sleep, it's a sign you're rundown. It may be due to overwork, worry or sickness, but whatever it is, your condition calls for a good tonic. There is nothing better than Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic, for it is iron and tasteless quinine combined. Iron, as you know, is a noted blood builder, while quinine tends to purify the blood. Thus you get two effects of vital importance in any rundown condition.

Old and young find new appetite, new strength and energy in Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. Try it for just three days and see the difference it makes in you. You feel like a new person. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is pleasant to take and contains absolutely nothing harmful. Get a bottle today at any store.

Woman's Missionary Society

All Communications for this Department should be addressed to Mrs. H. McMullan, Newton Infirmary, Newton, Miss.

As editor of Woman's Page, I was delighted to have a communication from Mrs. Ed. Conger sent me by my worthy predecessor, Mrs. Stanley Wilson, concerning our Boys and Girls World Club. In our Woman's Work, with Mrs. Constance Rumbroug as leader of the Children's Division, there is always some thrilling project in progress such as the exchange of letters and gifts with children of other nations. Of all the efforts being made for world peace, we think this is the most effective.

Einstein who has admittedly the keenest mind in the world today, has said, "If two per cent of the population of a country would refuse to fight, that country could not have war." The children whom we train in World-friendship today may be that two per cent of tomorrow.

Mrs. Conger says, "I am inclosing a clipping from our parish paper which I thought of enough importance for Woman's Page of the Advocate. The Boys and Girls World Club members were urged to write these Good Will messages, the best from America was broadcast on May 14. A girl from Texas who is a member of the World Club of our Methodist Church, wrote the best letter and it was broadcast all over the world. I had a letter from the committee on World Friendship for children, stating that this child who belongs to the World Club here wrote the best letter from Louisiana. If this publicity is given the project, maybe more will enter into it next year. All letters are put on file at Geneva, Switzerland, at the place where Peace Conference meets." Following is the "Clipping from Bienville Democrat." A letter has been received by Mrs. Ed. Conger, who has charge of the project, in Arcadia, that Leslie Ray Darsey, son of Mrs. H. D. Evans of Arcadia, was awarded honorable mention for writing the best good-will letter among all those sent from Louisiana.

These letters are part of a program sponsored by the World Friendship for Children movement. The slogan of this committee is: "We who desire peace must write it in the hearts of our children."

The best letter written by an American child was broadcast all over the world on May 14.

LOUISVILLE, MISS. AUXILIARY

Throughout the year much interest has been shown by the Methodist Missionary Society of Louisville, Mississippi in the collection of Octagon Coupons for the Orphanage.

During the month of May a special contest was put on for three weeks by circle number three, which is composed of twenty-two members. Two leaders, Mrs. George Hollis and Mrs. Ethel Wood, were selected by the chairman, Mrs. Battee. These leaders each chose ten members from the circle and entered into an active contest in collecting coupons. Each member was individually responsible for a certain number of coupons, and different members became special agents for different products.

Much enthusiasm was shown on the day for the reports of the two leaders. It was found that one team had collected 552 coupons and the other 1123, making a total of 1675 coupons collected by the circle in three weeks.

The losing team gave to the winning team a delightful afternoon picnic at Graham Springs. An appropriate program was first enjoyed under the beautiful trees, and then the leader of the successful team called for stunts that put everyone in a happy mood and made even the most pessimistic forget there had ever been a depression.

A lovely lunch was spread and thoroughly enjoyed by all. Among the welcome guests of the circle were Mrs. Kate Woodward, Mrs. T. J. Lee, president of the society, Brother L. M. Lipscomb, and Mrs. Lipscomb.

"ILLUMINATIONS"

A good Methodist woman in Brazil was ill and when the wife of the missionary came in to see her she found a neighbor woman also visiting the sick. From her sick bed Dona Olinda introduced the neighbor; "This is Dona Francisca," she said, "she is also our sister but she is not a Methodist; she belongs to the Baptist illumination."

Smiling a bit, the missionary's wife sat down thinking she would correct their mistake as soon as she could do so tactfully. But immediately the two women began to talk of their conversion (every Brazilian likes to talk of his religion) and to tell how different life had been for them since they had become Christians. Several times they mentioned "illuminations" but never did the missionary's wife correct them for it came over her like a great light that this was exactly what the Church meant to them.

"Afterwards I heard many of our people refer to denominations as 'illuminations'," says Mrs. C. B. Dawsey, the missionary's wife, "and I hope no one will ever correct this, for that word is too beautiful to be swept ruthlessly away. May we keep our own Methodist illumination bright and shining, for the light here must shine far and wide."

A YOUNG LATIN METHODIST

Bill Sarmiento is a young Cuban of eighteen years who lives in West Tampa, Florida. He is still in high school. He belongs to the West Tampa Cuban Methodist Church, is superintendent of the Sunday school, the editor of the church bulletin, recreation leader of the young people, an active Epworth Leaguer, and one of the best athletes in the city of Tampa. Bill is assistant scout master of his troop and became an Eagle Scout in November, 1932, which required twenty-one merit badges. One of these was for journalism, the first time such a badge had been given in Tampa. In 1930 Bill was made president of the student body of the West Tampa Junior High School and received the American Legion medal awarded to the boy in each junior high school, ranking highest in courage, leadership, athletics, scholarship and character.

Rev. J. A. Phillips, superintendent of the Latin Mission, says: "This is the sort of material on which our Latin Mission hopes to build. Bill is setting the pace for others and we hope they will catch the gleam."

FROM COAHOMA AND JONES-TOWN, MISS.

We have held our meetings at Coahoma and Jonestown in the orthodox way. Rev. Archie Stephens of Kosciusko did the preaching. His talent for drawing and his gift for music in addition to his ability to preach with unction attracted young and old. His services were so much appreciated that he was urged to come back next year. The field has been worked so thoroughly that only a few persons remain outside the church. It must be said, however, that a larger number of people seldom ever attend any of the services of the church.

It seems to me that our task is to teach the people we have received into the church to put Christ and his kingdom first. The number who are self-crucified and educated in the principles of Christian living is far too small to cope with the forces of the world. As preachers, we are called upon to teach by exhibiting in our lives nothing less than the life of Christ. Our Christianity must Christianize others or else lose its essence, its power. Christian education is our hope for making the Church the conquering force that Christ means it to be. By the way of the Cross is not a short way nor is it an easy way, but it is the only way that leads home.

three Echo meetings have been given at the three Methodist Churches of Hattiesburg by the young people who attended the assembly this past summer.

These meetings took up every phase of assembly from early morn to late at night—each person re-living through his talk the part of the assembly's program that he enjoyed most.

Charles Schultz, son of Rev. C. A. Schultz, pastor of Court Street Church, Hattiesburg, was the most efficient leader of these interesting programs.

DeWitt Cameron, also from Court Street Methodist Church, gave his interpretation of "What Is Assembly."

To take up the musical part of the assembly, Louise Green sang "Living For Jesus."

Grace McCann of Broad Street Church gave a talk on, "The Epworth

Highroad." Mr. R. L. Hunt, editor of the Highroad was a teacher at the assembly and he told the young people in his class how the Highroad was put together and Miss McCann made a most interesting talk from this material.

Myrtle Lee Talbert, who did so much toward winning the Athletic Cup for Hattiesburg, most vividly told of the Fun and Fellowship she had throughout the entire week.

"A Better Understanding of the Bible" was a talk given by Frances Norsworthy. She had a class under Rev. V. R. Landrum at the assembly on "The Bible" and from her talk she received a great good form this class.

Spiritual Life and Moral Growth is the high note of any meeting of Christian people, and of course it is a very big quality at the Young People's Assembly. Edith Green, made a very impressive talk on this subject.

All meetings were very fittingly closed by the repeating of the League Benediction.

Two of these meetings were held at the regular Sunday night service, and the one was given at the mid-week prayer service on Wednesday night. All that heard these programs caught the spirit that these enthusiastic young leaguers tried to impart.

Send pledges to the Treasurer, Mr. Paul Ramsey, 304 Millsaps Building, Jackson, Miss.

RESOLUTION

The passing of our beloved friend and co-worker, WILLIAM H. PACE of Athens, La., leaves a vacancy in our town and community which cannot soon be filled. He was a pioneer citizen of our town and a charter member of the Methodist Church and Sunday school.

For many years he served as superintendent of our Sunday school, and was in turn, a steward of our church and teacher in the Sunday school.

He took the Bible for his guide and was a man of strong character and connections and lived true to them against all opposition, therefore, he is Resolved

First, we as a church and Sunday school are grateful to have had this good man planted in our midst and we are even now reaping the reward of his faithfulness and perseverance;

Second, that we shall miss his counsel in the various activities of our Church, Sunday school and community life;

Thrd, that his faith in God, steadfastness of purpose and strength of character have inspired us to higher things;

Fourth, that we extend to the heritage he has left to them.—The family our appreciation of the rich influence of a Christian life;

Fifth, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

JOHN BARLEYCORN
His Life and Letters

By DANIEL A. POLING

This is at once the most unique and the most powerful book ever written on prohibition. Here are the true facts about alcohol presented in a new way. It is not just an amusing book. It is an important milestone in the dry argument for control of the liquor traffic. Dr. Poling has fought long and vigorously for prohibition. From the pulpit and the platform he has spoken to the people of practically every city in America. Leader of the Allied Prohibition Forces, he is a prohibitionist who has never sensed defeat, and into John Barleycorn he has put his sincere conviction, his breadth of understanding, his remarkable literary talent, and his unfailing sense of humor.

DR. JOHN J. HOWELL was born December 18, 1876, in Holmes County, Mississippi. He joined the Methodist Church in early life, and lived a consistent, useful Christian life. He graduated from the Memphis Medical College, and dropped dead Sunday, July 23, 1933, after making a professional call in the morning and attending preaching service. Our Saviour said Lazarus died and was carried by angels to Abraham's bosom. I believe angels are still willing messengers of God and attending to the same business. I cannot grieve for him, but we miss Son. His father.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

ONCE MORE WE COME out on the front porch to talk to you about the Advocate. We are throwing caution and modesty to the winds and saying that it is our birthday. Eighty years is a good long time. We have but a small company of readers whose lives parallel that of the Advocate. The period has seen many changes. To catalog even a commendable fraction of them would require considerable space. In no particular, however, has there been more colossal change than in the realm of communication. But even though we have seen the concrete highway succeed the trail, the auto the ox-cart, the ocean-liner the sail boat, and the aeroplane the balloon; and though we have seen the radio take the wings of the lightning to fling our words around the globe; still the printed page remains to speak the word of today and to preserve it for the future.

With these vast changes and improvements in communication have come corresponding changes in the thought-life of the people. Over the field devoted to religion many battles have been fought. And this field bids fare to continue in the limelight with periods of greater and less glow succeeding each other until the stars fade and time's clocks all run down.

Though eighty years of age the Advocate bids for a share in the field of religious communication. It would continue to speak words of repentance, individual and social; words of aggressive and sacrificial evangelism; words of self-forgetful and heroic endeavor; and to be a voice for the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi in a period that cannot be other than dramatic and phenomenal in the life of our people.

Our Publishing Committee, through our office, reached out and laid its hand upon the pulse of our pastors in the two states. They wanted to know their attitude toward the Advocate. It is their institution. Why should they not say what they thought and felt?

From these pastors through the presiding elders have come encouraging responses. To give this attitude opportunity for tangible expression the Committee has authorized the Eightieth Anniversary Campaign. For One Dollar each, during the month of August, all present subscriptions may be renewed and a vast number of new readers may join those who constitute our present Advocate family.

During protracted meetings is a good time to present the Advocate for subscriptions. Some will wish to make presents of subscriptions, sending the names themselves. All of us must have a share in the celebration.

WHO IS THIS YOUTH? That is the question Saul asked of Abner when he saw David going out to meet Goliath. And the question was very much in order. For days, for forty of them, Goliath had been going out to challenge the armies of the people of God and nobody had the courage to call his bluff. All that Israel with her leaders could do was to draw up the army long enough for the giant to come over and make his blasphemous threat.

Little wonder that King Saul inquired, "Whose boy is this?" It is something new. His kingdom is withering in his hands. His army is daily humiliated. But here is a boy with small equipment but with big faith going out to call Goliath to make good his threat.

During the World War, it is said, Paris was saved by her young men.

David raised several questions. Saul asked, "Whose son is this youth?" Eliab, his oldest brother, in anger asked, "Why camest thou down hither? and with whom hast thou left those few sheep in the wilderness? I know thy pride, and—" Then when David made his offer to Saul the King said, "Thou art not able to go against this Philistine; for thou art but a youth."

David had some questions to ask, too. "Who is this uncircumcised Philistine that he should defy the armies of the living God?" is the one with which he registered his amazement that nobody in the whole army dared to call the challenge of Goliath. That doesn't sound like the report given of the attitude of the army and Saul when he came up to defy them. "When Saul and all Israel heard these words of the Philistine, they were dismayed, and greatly afraid." "And all the men of Israel, when they saw the man, fled from him, and were sore afraid?"

Goliath himself did not seem deeply impressed with David. He thought Israel was playing a huge joke on him sending out a fighter like that. "And when the Philistine looked about, and saw David, he disdained him: for he was but a youth." Goliath had made his fortieth and last challenge. It had grown to be a habit. After delivering it he had slowly turned his back to the armies of Israel to wait for their man. He did not expect one to show up. When he turns round there stands David with a sling—and the Spirit of God. Goliath heaves a big laugh, shaking the harness of his armor. "I will feed you to the buzzards," says Goliath.

Too slow, too slow. Zip! One smooth stone slips like a bullet to its mark and the giant falls with a thud that struck terror to the souls of the Philistines.

About the only thing wrong with David was his youth. All seemed uneasy and hopeless because of this.

WHO IS THIS YOUTH? That is the question I have been asking this summer as I have looked in upon our young people in their assemblies in Louisiana and Mississippi. With the assemblies and camps together more than a thousand of our church young people have come together to take a view of the Goliaths that stalk along the horizons of our time defying the forces of righteousness and daring us to send out somebody to fight them. I believe I saw them getting their slings ready.

I am amazed, first of all, at the number of young people who have attended these assemblies of the church. Many of them paid their own way resorting to various methods of securing the funds to make possible the trip. Others, paying their own way, spent the days of their vacation at an assembly. There they were, hundreds strong.

Secondly, I was amazed at the schedule of topics and problems being studied by these young people. I'll tell you it was no picnic and they were not fighting straw men. They were tackling real problems, such as international relations, race relations, effects of alcohol, and more efficient church methods.

Again I was amazed at the skill with which they handled their business sessions. I said, "The organized life of our church will not suffer when it comes into the hands of these young people." There was genuine order and dispatch to these business sessions with due regard for parliamentary procedure. Not only so, but the whole business management and planning was of an enviably high order.

Finally, I was amazed at the genuine and symmetrical wholesomeness of their regimen of activities. From the hour of intense recreational games to periods of fellowship, study and prayer they glided without criticism, lost motion or strain.

Young people, we are counting on you to face the difficulties of our day and call the bluff of every armored giant that dares to defy the Kingdom of God and the Church in our day. Perhaps one of your biggest difficulties will be overcoming the spirit of defeat that has stolen along the ranks of the church. Some are cynical, some baffled, some beaten. Dare to attack. No army on the defensive wins.

"The strength of youth we lay at Jesus' feet today;
'Tis loyalty, loyalty, loyalty to Christ."

IF I WERE

I

If I were a church member, I would keep in mind the vows taken at the altar of the church. Question: Will you be subject to the discipline of the church, attend upon its ordinances, and support its institutions? Answer: I will endeavor so to do by the help of God.

With a pledge like this resting upon my life, I would not try to justify my absence from the services of the church. Having taken a vow like this I would feel honor bound to make financial contribution to the church according to my ability.

If I were a member of the Church, I would carry fair with my fellow-members, and do my part in the way both of giving and active service.

If I were a member of the Church, I would "walk in wisdom toward them that are without." I would not give the outsider occasion for casting his sneer at the church. I would so honor my spiritual mother as not to bring the name of the church into reproach.

II

If I were a steward I would study the qualification of a steward as given in the Discipline. "Let the stewards be persons of sound piety, who both know and love the Methodist doctrine and Discipline, and of good natural and acquired abilities, to transact the temporal business of the church."

If I were a steward I would take a religious interest in the matters on my list, cultivate them socially, invite them to the services of the church, remove any unjust criticism concerning the pastor, and make all due efforts to secure regular and systematic contributions for the support of the church.

If I were a steward I would attend the meetings of the Board so as to keep in vital touch with all the affairs of the church. I would strive to be an example both of spirituality and liberality.

If I were a steward I would answer whenever possible to the roll call of the quarterly conference.

If I were a steward, I would take at least one of the ADVOCATES of the Church. I would endeavor to keep informed as to activities of the Methodist Church throughout the world.

If I were a steward, I would not block the progress of the church, but I would stand for every forward movement that means the enlarged usefulness and influence of the church.

III

If I were a pastor, I would avoid both the long-term and short-term mania and would try to be guided by considerations which appeared to be for the good of the church. I would avoid a restless spirit and would be content where I was as long as I was there, and not be looking out with longing eyes to greener pastures. I would freely admit to myself that the besetting sins of the preacher are laziness and ambition and he on my guard against these twin foes of the clergy. I would acknowledge the good work of my predecessors and rejoice in the success of my successor. I would carefully study the resources and possibilities of the church and make these the goal of realization. I would have respect to the judgment of the members and would not lord it over the flock committed to my care. I would exercise both the evangelist and educative functions of the ministry. I would not take advantage of the pulpit for a veiled personal abuse.

If I were a pastor, I would give more emphasis to spiritual readings, hymns, and the public prayer. It is a fearful blunder to regard this part of the worship as of only secondary importance, as formal preliminaries. As I look back on my pastorates and see my failure at this point, I am truly sorry and heartily repent and plead for the forgiveness of God and the forgiveness of the churches. Since the most of my former parishioners do not see the ADVOCATE, I am requesting my successors to convey my confession to these members.

If I were a pastor I would make continual improvement in personal equipment and would not say: "Be thou at ease, for I have many sermons laid up in the barrel for many Sundays, and I have already destroyed small barrels and made larger ones."—Editorial in Nashville Advocate.

DEAN LAING GREET'S MILLSAPS COLLEGE

By Gordon J. Laing

Dean of the Division of the Humanities of the University of Chicago.

When President Key did me the honor of asking me to make this address, he lightly, delicately and gracefully indicated that he had but one suggestion to make. And yet he did not call it a suggestion—nothing so crass or brusque as that—nor should I so designate it. For it was but a faint, slight, tenuous flicker of an idea gently propelled into the neighborhood of my mind; the merest adumbration of an inchoative notion politely transmitted to the general region of my consciousness; a fugitive, fleeting concept daintly lodged in my cerebral hinterland; what might be called the shadow of a hint, the ghost of an admonition, the phantom of a warning that whatever I said to you this morning, I should make it short. About the subject-matter of my address he was care-free. He was quite willing to leave that to me. But if I read between the lines of his letter correctly, when he touched on this question of length he wrote like a man who had suffered too much in the past to be willing to make listening to long speeches a part of even a centennial program.

I speak in behalf of the Association of American Universities, which includes within its organization twenty-seven or twenty-eight of the largest universities in the country, from Columbia in the East to the University of California on the Pacific coast. The Association sends you its warmest congratulations on this most auspicious occasion of your Founder's centennial. In doing so it is not merely adopting a form of words or endeavoring to say the pleasant thing. It is speaking out of a detailed and exact knowledge of what your college has accomplished in the past and of what it is planning for the future. It is the business of the Association to know these things, for its only hope of making progress itself depends upon the co-operation of colleges like yours in the maintenance of high standards of scholarship and academic idealism. Among other things the Association stresses graduate work. It consists indeed of universities, which have well-organized graduate schools, and the efficiency of those graduate schools is immediately dependent on the scholarly quality of the graduates of the colleges. If the student who enrolls in a graduate school has been poorly trained, he is handicapped in his advanced studies and often gets but little benefit from them. But if he comes with such equipment as he can get from your college, he takes his Master's or Doctor's degree without the slightest difficulty, and has every opportunity of becoming an influence in the educational system of the country.

But I would not confine your contribution to society to those students who continue their studies in the graduate schools. You have done and will continue to do something greater than that through the influence of those alumni of yours who have begun their life's work immediately after graduation. There are, I have no doubt, many institutions in which a student can spend four years and get no education in the higher sense of the word. All he attains is expertness in a particular field of a certain kind of mechanical skill. But no student can go through your college with its well-balanced and wisely ordered curriculum without getting that breadth of view that is the very essence of higher education. Not even the student who is most ingenious in evasion, who seems to have the gift of developing some sort of strange immunity to information and culture can escape without some education. And the great majority of your alumni carry away a soundness of judgment, a liberality of attitude and a wealth of idealism that will enrich not only their own lives, but raise the standard of intelligence in the community to which they belong. For it is these qualities of mind, not Bachelors' or Masters' or Doctors' degrees, that are the real objectives of all education. It is sometimes said that there are too many colleges. Nothing could be further from the truth. There should be more colleges and larger endowments. That social millennium of which we hear so many prophecies—that millennium when there shall be no more poverty, no more wars, no more depressions—can only come when the intelligence of the community is raised high above its present level. And in the development of that increased intelligence it is colleges like yours that must play the leading role.

FROM ONE OF THE YOUNGEST OF OUR MISSION FIELDS—BELGIUM

(Written by the Rev. W. G. Thonzer, D.D., outstanding leader of Methodist work in Belgium. Mr. Thonzer is the Missionary Special of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La.)

Dear Friends:

At this time when through our entire church a special effort is being made to attract every member's attention on the urgent needs of our missionary work, I am sure you will appreciate a message from one of the youngest of our Mission fields, Belgium.

I realize that it is quite a time since I last wrote you, but please do not interpret my silence as a proof of forgetfulness. As you can easily imagine one's time here is very much taken up by the thousand and one tasks which befall a missionary, especially when as in my case, he is burdened with the greater part of all the administrative responsibilities of the field; friendly correspondence in such a case gets easily neglected.

I am sorry to say that I have had in my home a good deal of sickness during the last six months. Happily, things are almost normal again. I wish I could say as much of the general economic and political situation here and in particular of the financial situation of the Mission.

Ten Years' Work

However, I am able to report that in spite of these difficulties, the Mission is going forward and the earnest sacrifices made by the poor Belgian people to maintain and develop what has been brought to them, together with the remarkable achievements of the Mission activities during the last ten years, is the best proof of the great need for our Church here. When confronted with the development of our Belgian Methodist Church, one acquainted with the problems of evangelistic work in the so-called Catholic countries of Europe, has very much difficulty in believing that we are so young. What are ten or twelve years in the history of a Church? Yet this short period has been sufficient to establish a Belgian Methodist Church with twenty-five congregations which, by their activities, life and influence, have a very marked place in the religious life of the nation. This is all the more remarkable that for the last three years our young Belgian Church has been heroically fighting against the most perilous hardships.

Not One Church or Preaching Station Closed.

In four years the yearly appropriations received by the Belgian Mission from our Board of Missions have been CUT roughly sixty-five per cent. This means that many necessary activities have been stopped, our three schools including the Bible school, have been closed, an important part of our personnel has been dismissed, but in spite of all, thanks to the all sacrificial spirit of our members and preachers, not one Church or preaching station has been closed, and statistics show that regular increase in Church membership and income has never ceased; the average per capita giving being during last year nearly eight dollars per member.

This is all the more striking that as it is well known Belgium is an over-populated land. Although in size more than 333 times smaller than U. S. A., its population is hardly 18 times smaller. Living mostly out of trade and industry this population even in normal times is generally poor and thrifty; naturally then, the suffering are all the more disastrous when, as today, general economic chaos prevails. In one of our congregations at Chlin near Mons everyone of our members is without work, the greater number having been unemployed for several years now.

But our people are courageous, generous, earnest and most grateful for what has been done for them. Their religion keeps them radiant in the midst of misfortune. Truly all the notes of authentic Methodism are here.

The Chapel at Quaregnon.

The following fact will illustrate their spirit: A little over three years ago some members of a family living in Quaregnon (mining center near Mons) were led to attend the services of our preaching station at LeKewette. Here in a most poor and destitute neighborhood, under the influence of truly marvelous conversions, marked moral and social progress had taken place. The two main plagues of the place drunkenness and filth, had considerably decreased. Our friends of Quaregnon, therefore, decided to have the Methodists in their own town some six miles away. Their own humble miners' home which was opened for the services soon proved to be much too small, so they decided that Quaregnon must have its Methodist chapel. Petitions and delegations to this effect were sent to the mission headquarters.

Alas, financial difficulties had begun, the demand could in no way be favorably considered. Disappointed but not discouraged, our friends got their hearts and heads together, held special prayer meetings and decided to build their chapel and for this to secure and even make themselves the necessary material. So for long months they worked hard making with their own hands mostly with ashes, a kind of rough and large brick and collected far and near all that could be found in the nature of timber or other material which could be used.

And that is how it happened that in October, 1931, in the very midst of one of the regions of Europe suffering most bitterly from the economic crisis, a band of Methodists without employment and without funds were able to dedicate to the worship of the Lord their long dreamed of chapel.

Of course, this chapel has no architectural appearance. It can stand no comparison with one of the least of your beautiful American Methodist churches. But when, having heard from without the hearty and gripping singing, one crosses its threshold and catches sight of the hundred and fifty radiant faces which crowd it, one can but remember the words of Jacob, "Surely the Lord is in this place; this is none other but the house of God, the gate of heaven."

Loyal Belgian Preachers

As to our preachers, their calibre is impressive, being the worthy leaders of these loyal people they are decided to go to the limits of sacrifice to maintain the work to which they have enthusiastically given for years the best of their lives. Probably no more striking proof of their attachment to their work can be given than the fact that they have accepted as their own personal contribution to the Kingdom Extension appeal the sacrifice of one month's salary. What such a sacrifice means it is difficult to tell, but one will get a little idea of it if remembered that for the last twelve months all the workers of this mission have had to live on irregular salaries reduced by consecutive cuts to the very limit of an unstarving income.

Most gratefully we thank you and your church for all that you have already done for us and we beg of you to remember that our work still needs in every way your support.

Please pray for us as we pray here for you. Wishing you, your homes and your church the Heavenly Father's richest blessings, I am

Yours very fraternally in His service,

WILLIAM C. THONGER.

"STATE'S RIGHTS"

(Reprinted from the Boliver Commercial, Cleveland, Miss.)

To the Editor "The Commercial Appeal," Memphis, Tenn.

Dear Sir: Noticing you are continuously advocating the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution, and all of the prohibition laws enacted thereunder, basing all of your pleas therefor on the principle of "State's Rights," in view of this, I desire to ask that you publish the following questions, and your answers to each of same.

1st. You know that we have Federal laws prohibiting the use, sale, or unauthorized distribution by any means, of narcotics. This prohibition is of the same character and purpose as the liquor prohibition laws. Why then have you never advocated the repeal of the Federal narcotic prohibition laws on the principle of "State's Rights?"

2nd. We have a Federal law known as the "Mann Act," the character and purpose of which is the same as the liquor prohibition law, i.e., to prohibit people of every state against immorality of the importation of lewd women from one state to another for immoral purposes. Why do you not advocate the repeal of this law on the ground of "State's Rights?"

3rd. For many years every state was supposed to have its own system of bankruptcy laws and probably every one of them had. But every one had therein a clause authorizing the bankrupt to designate any whom he pleased as "preferred creditors," who would be paid their claims "in full" or as far as the bankrupt's effects would go toward it, before any creditor in another state would get a dollar, regardless of the size and justness of his claim. This led to such a scandalous, widespread, legalized robbery by dishonest retail merchants of their crediting wholesale merchants and manufacturers of other states that the late Hon. Joe Bailey, Mississippi-born State's Rights Democrat, for years member of Congress, and finally U. S. Senator from Texas, formulated and fought through Congress to its passage the Federal bankruptcy laws, which have ever since prevented this rascality. But this is a Federal law that interferes with the principle of state's rights. Then why do you not demand the repeal of the Federal bankruptcy laws?

Other strong examples can be cited, but they are never mentioned in your paper. This being true, Mr. Editor, you, as a sensible man, can not blame the great body of other sensible people for doubting your sincerity in basing your pleas for prohibition repeal on the principle of "State's Rights."

"Consistency, thou art a jewel," an age-old proverb, with which we know you are familiar, is so true we must accept it, though it forces us to doubt your sincerity in this particular.

Yours truly,

REV. H. M. PERKINS.

Cleveland, Miss., July 5, 1933.

DISCUSSION CONFERENCE AT MT. SEQUOYAH

Keen interest is being manifested in the Discussion Conference which is to be held at Mount Sequoyah August 16-22. It is evident that this conference will make a large contribution in clarifying the thinking of our church leaders in reference to the great questions of this hour. Preachers and other church leaders west of the Mississippi will join with our Bishops in making this a notable gathering.

Outstanding leaders in the thought and life of the Church will conduct these several groups. Bishop Paul B. Kern will lead in the discussion of the topic, "The Kind of Preaching Needed for Our Day." No man is better qualified by reason of experience and training to lead in the study of this all-important theme. The preaching of many a pastor may be greatly changed as, with other leaders, he considers this subject.

Dr. Alva W. Taylor, an authority in the field of sociology and economics, will lead in the discussion of present-day conditions in industry and society. Dr. George B. Winton, who served for many years as a missionary in Mexico and later as editor of the Christian Advocate, and now Dean of the School of Theology at Vanderbilt University, will lead in a study of "World Conditions Today." Dr. C. M. Bishop, of Southern Methodist University, is planning a great course in the study of "The Character of God." Out of his rich scholarship, Dr. Bishop will greatly clarify this theme. Dr. A. W. Wasson, Professor of Missions in Southern Methodist University, will lead in the study of "World Missions Today." The Laymen's Report and other important missionary publications will be considered by this group.

It is our conviction that our preachers and other church leaders can make no better investment of time or money during these six days than by attendance upon this Discussion Conference. This conference is being conducted under the joint auspices of the General Board of Christian Education, the Board of Missions and the Board of Lay Activities. Dr. G. L. Morelock will be director of the conference.

Sequoyah offers many opportunities for recreation and fellowship. Reasonable rates may be secured and the Discussion Conference with outstanding leaders offers remarkable opportunities to those who desire a better understanding and interpretation of present-day conditions and problems. Make your plans to be present.

THE FIGHT ABROAD

By William C. Allen

While even the children of America can under recently enacted laws drink beer in the United States, while beer was in a hurry taken into the White House, while some states are shamefully threatened by the Federal Government with withdrawal of much needed financial relief if they do not call referendums at an early date before the effects of beer shall have become apparent to our citizens, it is interesting to learn how foreign peoples or governments are fighting the use of intoxicants.

The following information is largely taken from "The International Record" of London, England:

While millions of men and women have been unemployed in Great Britain, and while many of them are suffering from the use of beer as my personal observation would indicate, twelve British brewery companies for 1932 have shown a profit of $18,887,182. The much needed money of many of the poorer class is turned into the coffers of wealthy owners and shareholders.

In Australia, Don Bradman, Australia's "Wizard" batsman, advises his fellow countrymen "to leave strong drink alone, as it interferes with one's condition." After recent examinations held in 59 schools in connection with the work of the Band of Hope Union, Dr. Machin, Chief Medical Officer of the Educational Department, commented on the thoughtful preparation and instruction manifested by the youthful writers. Prizes were presented to the winners. I have seen much intoxication in Australia during three visits to that land.

Flora E. Strout, a member of the Temperance Society of Brazil, writes that Brazil is forging ahead in temperance matters. "We find the officials and principals of schools so sympathetic that it is a pleasure to visit them."

Little Denmark I always remember, with pleasure in connection with a visit to that very up-to-date country. The reduction of the importation of strong drinks by half has been accomplished excepting that whiskey from Great Britain has not been included in the restriction. The taxation of beer has been increased by 38%. Drunken drivers have largely increased the number of accidents of late.

The women of Estonia are working hard on behalf of temperance instruction. They are challenging the attitude of the Union of Journalists owing to the attitude of that body upholding drink.

Finland, a civilized country and the only nation which recently paid in full its quota of debt to the United States, has been a storm center on the prohibition question. A year has elapsed since a change took place in that country. Prohibition had been blamed for high taxation but under the new anti-prohibitory laws "government taxes are as high as ever they were, and local taxes nearly everywhere are from 10% to 30% higher than in 1931, which was the last prohibition year." Crime continues to increase, this being largely in the categories of murder and man slaughter. Predictions that repeal would "end a shameful catalog of blood shed" have not been fulfilled.

There seems but little headway made by the temperance movement in France. The wine brewers and merchants are well entrenched politically. It may be recalled that France has openly confessed that she was engaged in alcoholic propaganda in the United States.

The National Committee of the World Prohibition Federation has reported the interest of many women in the temperance movement in Germany. There have been published reports of German brewers' hopes of flooding America with their products.

Even little Iceland has lately been taking hold of the temperance question. The workers hope for a referendum. They publish a small journal, "The Soku," which is declared to be indispensable.

A report from Truro, N. S., Canada, estimates that there are no fewer than 1,500 bootleggers in the city of Halifax. Bootlegging "is still on the increase."

From India comes information that the Nizam of Hyderabad has opened free tea rooms which are much patronized. Years ago in England I saw somewhat similar efforts to contend with alcohol, which were successful.

In Tasmania (politically a part of Australia), the churches and temperance and other societies have successfully fought efforts to extend drinking hours in that beautiful little land.

Warsaw, Poland, recently and successfully carried out a "Sobriety Week" sponsored by the Polish Temperance Society. We are told that great interest was manifested by adults and children.

From Soviet Russia, comes interesting accounts of efforts to make that country alcoholic free. Drunkenness in Russia has been notorious for many years. Dr. Alfred Salter, M. P., an ardent English temperance advocate, has declared, "At the present rate of progress, Russia will be quite dry in another ten years."

The Union of South Africa, like most colonies of the British Empire, is terribly afflicted with results of intoxicants, as I have personally seen. The Synod of Grahamstown, of the Methodist Church, has been appealing to the Minister of Justice to protect the natives from the use of alcoholic liquors.

Even from China comes information that the W. C. T. U. is attempting to organize a united agitation against the liquor traffic in that country. The headquarters for this movement is in Shanghai.

Is it not of the utmost importance that all the dry voters get out at the approaching elections in their states where an opportunity will be afforded them to protest against retrograde movements in the United States?

Denver, Colorado.

DR. TILLET'S HALF CENTURY

Next fall it will be fifty years since Dean Wilbur F. Tillett joined the faculty of Vanderbilt University at Nashville, Tenn.

What a career he has had! Chaplain, instructor, professor, dean. He, more than any other man, can say of Vanderbilt University, "All of which I saw and part of which I was."

His students are everywhere; and it is certain they are doing more and better work because of his personal influence and his keen intelligence. Eight bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are among the two thousand ministers whom he taught their theological A B C's and then led them on to the deep things of God.

And he is more than one of Southern Methodism's great teachers. He is an ecumenical Methodist; his own church has a larger but not a stronger claim to him than the other churches of the Methodist name.

By his theological writings, by his tireless labors for genuine Methodist union, by his work on the Methodist Hymnal, and in countless other ways, he has transcended the boundaries of any one church. He bears a historic Methodist name—Wilbur Fisk Tillett—Methodist in all of its elements; for he is a preacher's son, and he has added to the names of Wilbur Fisk and of his father, the Rev. John Tillett, a luster all his own.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

A GREETING FROM CZECHO-SLOVAKIA

Sent by Rev. D. P. Melson,
Presiding Elder of Southern District

I have been asked by the General Board of Missions to write you a letter about the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Czecho-Slovakia.

This letter comes to you from Prague, the capital of Czecho-Slovakia, a republic which came into existence in 1918 by a Declaration of Independence. Plans for its freedom from the Austrian-Hungarian Empire were developed in America, and the Declaration itself was written, strangely enough, in an American city. The country has been called a key-land to central Europe. It lies very nearly in the geographic center of the continent, east and south of Germany and south of Poland. In area it is somewhat larger than Mississippi or Louisiana, but smaller than Georgia; but the population is about fourteen million. The climate is favorable for agriculture, and the chief crops are grain, sugar, beets, and Irish potatoes.

The Republic was two years old when the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, began work here in 1920. To understand the progress of the Methodist Church here we must consider very briefly the religious history of the country, which is an exceptionally interesting one. The Czech people have a glorious Protestant heritage, which began with John Huss, the reformer, who was burned at the stake in 1415, a hundred years before Luther's time. But the same battle near Prague in 1621, which lost them their national independence, was also a decisive defeat for Protestantism; the Austrian conquerors were zealous Roman Catholics and tried to stamp out Protestantism completely in the land. The long persecution and the close connection between the Austrian regime and the Roman Catholic Church explain the fact that along with political independence in 1918 there was also a strong popular movement against the Roman Catholic Church.

This break with the Roman Catholic Church and the increased popular interest in religion gave an unusual opportunity to all Protestant Churches. Although the country is still predominantly Roman Catholic, yet from 1919 to 1925 over a million people in this country left the Roman Catholic Church. The Methodist Church, therefore, began work here at an auspicious time. From 1920 to 1925 nearly three thousand adults became full members of the Methodist Church and over seven thousand probationers and children were enrolled as Methodists on the Government records. The Methodist Church made steady progress. In 1926, for instance, new work was opened in three cities, namely: Moravská Ostrava (population 160,000), Ceske Budejovice (population 40,000), and Klatovy (population 8,000). In all three places the work was successful, and we have now in these cities three good Methodist congregations. In 1927, as you know, by action of the General Conference, our mission work here, consisting of thirty congregations, was organized into the Czecho-Slovak Annual Conference.

Since that time further extension of our work in new places has been suspended, due to the reduced collections in the home Church, which forced the General Board to request that we devote ourselves exclusively to the work already established. There are still, however, many places in Czecho-Slovakia where no Protestant work is being carried on. For lack of funds, the Methodist Biblical Seminary, which was founded in 1922 by Rev. J. L. Neill, was closed in 1931. We have at the present time a class of young men serving as pastors of churches who would be glad to attend the Biblical Seminary when financial condition should make it possible to re-open it. They are being held back in their advancement in the Conference from year to year, and their people are being deprived of the larger service that a better trained pastor could give.

All our work here is conducted in the Czech or Bohemian language, which has no similarity to English but is related to Russian and Polish. We publish each month two thousand copies of the "Krestansky Buditel" (the Czecho-Slovak Christian Advocate). Methodist Sunday school literature is being translated into Czech and is published in three grades, namely: "Our Little People," "Junior Lessons," and the "Methodist Sunday School Quarterly," besides the Elementary Teacher. This literature is also widely used and renders valuable service to other Protestant denominations in Czecho-Slovakia. The Woman's Missionary Society is organized in nearly all congregations and is doing splendid community social service for the sick and poor, besides studying and supporting missionary work in Africa. In many of the congregations we have enthusiastic Epworth Leagues.

An institution that our Czecho-Slovak Methodists are justly proud of is our Orphanage, located in a small village about ten miles from Prague. We now have forty children there, ranging from two to fourteen years of age. The institution is supported entirely by gifts of people in Czecho-Slovakia; for the past five years the orphanage has not received a dollar from the Board of Missions. Mr. and Mrs. Zloch have been manager and matron from the beginning, seven years ago, and are greatly loved by the children.

At our Annual Conference last June, I was appointed presiding elder of the Southern District. It is composed of eleven congregations, in eight pastoral charges. My farthest point is three hours by train from Prague, then half an hour by bus from there. The southern part of Bohemia is entirely an agricultural district, and the people are relatively poor. Until 1918 the land consisted of great estates owned by the nobility, and the common people were practically serfs. Today, while their situation is improved under the Republic, which has confiscated and subdivided most of these estates, the people are for the most part still poor and ignorant. Nevertheless the outlook for the work in the Church is encouraging. In proportion to their means, the congregations are contributing liberally toward the support of their pastors; and the preachers in the Southern District are a group of faithful, devoted men, with whom it is a joy to work.

For the eighth year I am serving as pastor at St. Martin's-in-the-Wall, where the service is in the English language. This historic church, over 750 years old, is the property of the city of Prague and a landmark in the life of world-wide Protestantism. In 1414, under the influence of John Huss (though he was in prison in Germany and was burned at the stake a year later), the law of the Roman Catholic Church was defied, and the sacrament was given to the people "in both kinds," as it is called, meaning both bread and wine. Centuries before the Roman Catholic Church had reserved the wine for the priests and does to this day. In this old church, St. Martin's-in-the-Wall, therefore, the first open break with the Roman Catholic custom was made. In this same church we hold a service in English every Sunday morning the year round.

With all good wishes for you and your work, I remain,

Very sincerely yours,
D. F. MELSON.

Eightieth Anniversary Celebration Offer of the New Orleans Christian Advocate

In an effort to more effectively serve the Churches of Louisiana and Mississippi by securing the renewal of all present subscribers and enlisting thousands of new readers to the Conference organ, the Publishing Committee has authorized the Business Manager to accept subscriptions, both new and renewal, at the exceptionally low price of

$1.00 Per Year

Every subscriber is urged to take advantage of this large saving by renewing his subscription before September 1st. Pastors and laymen are urged to secure as many new readers as they can, thus making it possible for the Advocate to continue its fight against sin and corruption.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

From Rev. T. J. O'Neil comes strong words of endorsement and encouragement for the work of the Advocate.

"I will gladly fall in line and do all I can to carry out the EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY CAMPAIGN." That is Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District.

Rev. H. S. Johns, pastor at Greenwood, La., reports that he has been greatly aided and abetted by "boy preachers" on his charge this year. He remarks, "People love boy preachers."

We receive the bulletin of First Church, Lake Charles, La., but we miss the announcement of the pastor's sermon themes. Brother Gunn, what are you preaching to your congregation?

We are glad to learn that Dr. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder of the Columbus District, North Mississippi, has recovered sufficiently from his recent illness to be up and about his work.

Rev. J. B. Cain, Hattiesburg, Miss., announces that, because of the lateness of the season, plans for an Intermediate Camp at Camp Dantzler have been given up. Let's start early for next year.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs writes a good letter commending the EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY celebration and accompanies his endorsement with a cash contribution. Thank you, Bishop.

Rev. Geo. A. Fox, Centenary College senior, supported by a strong local staff, has just closed a Daily Vacation Bible School at Greenwood, La. The attendance was good and twenty-two certificates were awarded.

Miss Gardle Kirkman, superintendent of the Beginners Department of the Sunday school of First Church, Lake Charles, La., announces a Daily Vacation Bible school for all children four and five years of age. Have you tried that?

From time to time we receive letters from our readers commending the work of the Advocate. To all these we wish to bow and say, "Thank you." With your help mobilized and multiplied we shall be able to get out a good paper.

Mr. J. L. Bonner, father of Mrs. H. S. Johns, wife of our pastor at Greenwood, La., died July 23, at Nacadoches, Texas. He was 76 years of age having been a faithful Christian since young manhood. He was buried near Lufkin, Texas.

Where did you come from, Baby Dear? But that is not the big question right now. He is here. Master Frank Parker arrived at the parsonage of Rev. D. W. Poole at McDonoughville, La., on July 13. Parents and son all seem satisfied.

Mel Trotter, Billy Sunday, Bob Shuler, Robert E. Speer, Bishop Arthur J. Moore and James M. Gray are among the preachers who will appear on the Winona Lake program this year. This Great Bible Conference opens its 38th annual session on August 11.

The editor had a splendid season with old friends and new friends at the one hundred and twenty-third annual meeting at the old Adams Camp Ground, Auburn, Miss. This church and community have made a large and worthy page of the history of Mississippi.

"We are having a great time here with these good people at Summit and Topisaw. They know how to treat a Methodist preacher. I am expecting to be able to make a good report at Annual Conference at Brookhaven next November." Rev. C. W. Wesley, Summit, Miss.

I hear saws and smell the "slap, slap" of paint brushes at Millsaps College. Things are taking shape for the new year. Let Mississippi Methodists rally to their school and open a great year when the bell rings. You know General Conference is to meet with us and we must have the college ready.

For quite a number the going of Mr. J. R. Bingham, that great layman of Carrollton, Miss., "left a vacant place against the sky." Dr. W. L. Duren, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and long time friend of Mr. Bingham, left the city on the evening of August 1 to be at the funeral.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

We anticipate a memorial word for our columns shortly.

More than ninety pupils are in attendance upon a Daily Vacation Bible School in progress at the Methodist church in Winona, Miss. It will run for fourteen days.

Rev. A. J. Henry has held two of his meetings with good results. Rev. W. T. Phillips assisted him at Bethlehem, Miss., and Brother Henry held the other one himself.

Sixty-two people have been received into the church at Winona, Miss., since the first of the year, twenty-five of whom came in on profession of faith.

Mr. J. H. McKinnon, Lay Leader of the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, was a welcome caller at the office of the Advocate on last Monday. He spoke enthusiastically of the recent meeting held at the South Union Camp Grounds on the Chester charge. A full account of this meeting will appear in next week's Advocate.

A fine revival was concluded recently at Kilpatrick, Miss., where Rev. J. R. Murff is the popular pastor. He was assisted by Rev. R. B. Pearson, of Mooreville, Miss. The entire community was stirred. It was a union meeting held in the Baptist church.

"My daughter, Mrs. Gayle C. Beanland, retains her same post as missionary in the Cameroun, West Africa.—W. M. Williams, Chaplain of Sanatorium, Magee, Miss." To our office comes that fine missionary bulletin, "The Drum Call," ably edited by Mrs. Beanland. Again we salute this queen courageous on far shores but nearby in Christian fellowship.

Speaking of fish stories, here's one for you. A recent press dispatch states that a catfish, wearing gold rimmed spectacles, was caught by one, John Bellis, at Clinton, N. J., last Thursday. The glasses, it is claimed, belonged to another resident of the town who had dropped them overboard while fishing several months ago. And now, it's your turn.

You can't hold a good man down or back. "I certainly hope you will put on the Anniversary Campaign for the Advocate at once. I am anxious to start work." Do you recognize his voice? That is Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor at Franklin, La. The campaign is on and Brother Wier is off for a grand effort in his church. Who will follow in his train, keep beside him, or beat him to the wire?

Keep your eyes on the grand pageantry of the "Century of Progress" Fair at Chicago. Turn your telescope upon September 23. That is "Mississippi Day," and on that day Whitworth College is scheduled to stage a pageant. It is called "A Century of Progress in the Higher Education of Women." And you better keep your eyes on Whitworth all the time. Had you noticed how Mississippi is steadily climbing all along the line?

Rev. T. G. Lowry, of the Poplar Creek, Miss., circuit, is having a successful pastorate. He is having some good revival meetings. Rev. W. N. Duncan assisted him in one and Rev. E. S. Lewis lent a helping hand at another place. Among Lowry's most recent and most valuable acquisitions is a wife. He is thoroughly in accord with Solomon, who said that "he who getteth a wife getteth a good thing and shall obtain favor from the Lord."

The Woman's Missionary Society of the New Orleans District, Louisiana Conference, will hold a two-days' Retreat at the McDonnell Wesley House, Houma, La., beginning Wednesday, Aug. 16, at 10:30 a.m. and continuing through Thursday. "Come join us in a season of prayer and meditation," writes Mrs. A. L. Swan, who will be glad to furnish additional information. Call her at Walnut 2976, or Jackson 6789.

The Centenary College scrip money has attracted the attention of the Chase National Bank of New York City. Three cancelled pieces of it have been forwarded to the bank where it will occupy a place alongside the "shekel" of Israel and the "Silver Stater," Greek medium of exchange dating back to 550 B. C. It becomes a part of a great "Collection of the Money of the World." This is one of the most famous exhibits of money in the world, containing 40,000 specimens collected over a period of fifty years.

Mrs. J. G. Wafer, ably assisted by Mrs. Huffman Lewis, was chairman of a Fellowship luncheon in Shreveport recently. More than 200 women were present. A feature of the unusual occasion was the presentation, on behalf of the Gleaners, of a life membership to Mrs. Geo. S. Sexton, Jr., Conference President of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference. Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, Nashville, Tenn., was the guest speaker. A similar luncheon was conducted by the ladies of Monroe with 100 present. We tip our hat to the ladies.

We rise in our place to thank the presiding elders and pastors whose response to the recent referendum conducted by the Advocate has made possible the EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY CAMPAIGN. In my pulpit some days ago, "accidentally" ("purposely," says the parsonage queen), I mentioned my birthday. What do you reckon happened? Upon reaching home from prayer meeting one night I found the parsonage packed with people who had come with gifts and good wishes to celebrate my anniversary. With purpose and determination we are announcing the EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY of the Advocate with the sanguine hope that our people over Louisiana and Mississippi will come with loads and loads of subscriptions.

ONE YEAR FOR $1.00.

Subscribers are urged to take advantage of the EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION OFFER, and renew their subscriptions to the Advocate for another year at the LOW RATE OF $1.00. See notice at bottom of Page 4. This offer expires September 1. Mail your remittance at once.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE YOUNG PEOPLE'S NEWS

Greetings from Bluff Creek!
As your Publicity Superintendent writes this, he is seated in the Mess Hall of historic old Bluff Creek Camp Grounds. The Baton Rouge District Christian Culture Camp is in full swing and I mean full! There's a record-breaking crowd of between ninety and a hundred people out here, having the time of their lives. Among "celebrities" we have our Conference Director, our District Director, a returned missionary, and Physical Director of Baton Rouge Y.M.C.A., and three pastors who are "plump swell!" You surely had better go to your District Camp! For they've all been worked out with care, and anyone who's ever been to one will tell you how good they really are. Instruction, Inspiration, Swimming, Baseball, Volley Ball, Fellowship, Horseshoes, all sorts of games. Truly a well-rounded program which appeals to anyone!

The Grambling Union of Alexandria District had a real meeting for this month. A Mansfield Day. The regular Mansfield program was followed from morning watch through vespers. They not only had a wonderful day, but formed a tentative program of procedure for the coming year. That's looking ahead! Their program will be divided thus: Devotional, 12-15 minutes; Routine Business, 20 minutes; Help One Another Period, 30 minutes; and Recreation Period, 30 to 40 minutes. In their Help One Another, they pick out in advance certain questions which would be most helpful and have different departments discuss them. Thus they can experiment throughout the preceding month, and have something practical to offer the entire group. Some subjects they plan to discuss—in the appropriate time of the year for them—are Education, Recreation, and Football compared with the game of life. What's your Union doing in preparation for the future? Now's the time to plan at least quarterly in advance. Lillie Mae—that is, Mrs. Pomeroy—is practically recovered from her recent operation, and has returned to her home in Oakdale. She'll be O.K. in no time now! We're just tickled to death, Lillie Mae!

Miss Mary Searles announces that there will be a Christian Adventure Camp at Bluff Creek Camp Grounds the 29th, 30th, and 31st of August. The charges will be TWO DOLLARS for the entire Camp, and Christian Adventure Credits will be issued. Here's the chance all you Intermediates have been waiting for! Don't miss it!

And Shreveport District is also planning a camp for their Intermediates. Miss Anna Pharr Turner, our Conference Director of Intermediates, is the dean. Rev. Jolly Harper HIMSELF will have charge of the Recreation for the Camp—they'll Recreate, I mean! Classes will be taught in "Worship," "Choosing Our Heroes," "Helping Our Neighbors," and "How Can I Know I'm a Christian?" The teachers are excellent. And here's the Surprise—it'll be held at no other place than BEAUTIFUL CAMP LASSA itself! And Uncle Van Carter will be there to make faces at the girls! The costs for this camp are also two dollars. Credits will be given, too.

What are you doing in your Department? Your Division? Your Union? Your District? OUR Conference? This column is for advice, questions, news, personal "cracks," and most anything else. Write!

BELLS OF BARRE, LA.

Dear Brother Raulins: Will you kindly print this letter in your paper as an appreciation for the good work Miss Ora Hooper did at Port Barre church?

As pastor of Port Barre church, I want to express my appreciation to Miss Ora Hooper for the good work she did at Port Barre while she was living there. Whoever told her that God did not expect any Christian work to be done at Port Barre was not far from the truth. Every pastor who has served Port Barre Church testified about the many difficulties they had to encounter. However, in spite of the fact that the field was a difficult one, Miss Ora Hooper threw herself wholeheartedly into the work.

When she moved to Port Barre the Sunday school was almost dead, but she reorganized it and consolidated Waxia Church with Port Barre Church. This makes us now a good Sunday school. Although Port Barre is a one-room church, she made it possible to have separate rooms, made with curtains. She also organized a missionary society, which is now moving on nicely.

I must not forget to mention the good bell she was altogether instrumental in securing through the help of Dr. D. B. Raulins. I want to thank the good people who gave the bell. Our people there are very proud of it.

As much as we hate to lose Miss Hooper, we wish her God's speed in her new work where she was appointed. It is our loss, but Texas' gain.
Her pastor,
G. A. LaGRANGE.

HOME COMING AT LIVE OAK CHURCH

By W. H. Underwood

To Christian Advocate: Please allow me space to make a brief report on the HOME COMING day held at Live Oak Church on July 30.

Considerable preparation had been made, we expected a large crowd, and our hopes were fully realized. Those who attended from a distance were not strangers, but old friends, many of them having joined the church here, as had the preacher of the day, Dr. A. W. Turner. With him on the platform was Rev. J. D. Nesom, who had gone out from this church more than thirty years ago, to preach the Word. Rev. J. P. Bonnetcarere, a former pastor, led the singing. Rev. R. A. Cross led the opening prayer. Mrs. L. B. Nesom, sister of Dr. Turner and mother of J. D. Nesom, may be termed the mother of this church. She is, I think, the only member still living, of the group that organized this church. Her husband, the late George Nesom, was for many years superintendent of the Sunday school. Indeed it was by his indomitable will and energy that the first building was erected. By the time it became too small for the needs of the community, P. D. Turner grew up and was converted, and enthusiastically led in the building of the edifice in which we now worship. E. S. Easterly, whose grand-fathers were both pioneer local preachers, in his address of welcome to our visitors pictured, in his own inimitable way, the beauties of home life and brotherly love. It was all the more appreciated by those of us who know him best, because we know how fully and completely he exemplifies the virtues that he advocates.

I will not ask for space in which to mention all those who have contributed to the upbuilding of the community, but would be derelict in my duty if I did not acknowledge our debt of gratitude to Wright Reid of Baton Rouge for his tireless work in teaching us to sing, and for his splendid addresses to the young people, both morning and evening. His father, Frank Reid, was a pioneer in the settlement of Livingston Parish, and the worst thing that I ever heard of him was that he would lend a neighbor his plow horse to ride to church and walk himself.

The Community Coffee Company of Baton Rouge contributed an ample supply of coffee, and our colored friends kept the pots boiling.

An abundant dinner was served at the noon hour. Not an accident happened to mar the harmony of the day. Dr. Turner suggested that we make this an annual affair, and the congregation enthusiastically endorsed the proposition.

The pastor, Rev. L. P. Moreland, began revival services last night and will continue through the week, Rev. J. P. Bonnetcarere assisting.

Stop Chills and Fever!

Rid Your System of Malaria!

Shivering with chills one moment and burning with fever the next—that's one of the effects of Malaria. Unless checked, the disease will do serious harm to your health. Malaria, a blood infection, calls for two things. First, destroying the infection in the blood. Second, building up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and to fortify against further attack.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic supplies both these effects. It contains tasteless quinine, which kills the infection in the blood, and iron, which enriches and builds up the blood. Chills and fever soon stop and you are restored to health and comfort. For half a century, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic has been sure relief for Malaria. It is just as useful, too, as a general tonic for old and young. Pleasant to take and absolutely harmless. Safe to give children. Get a bottle at any store.

The second meeting of zone 3, Sardis-Grenada District, North Mississippi Conference, was held at McGee's Chapel, July 25, with Mrs. E. H. Rook, zone chairman, presiding. Five of the seven auxiliaries in the zone were represented and a goodly number of visitors were present. The Crenshaw auxiliary had charge of the program and McGee's Chapel with Mrs. Broom as pianist and leader furnished the music. Some selections were well rendered by the young people. Christian Stewardship, Christian Social Relations and Spiritual Life were discussed as the principal part of the program. The need and use of Octagon soap coupons was stressed. All the auxiliaries gave interesting reports. Mrs. R. M. Short former district secretary was present and gave much help and encouragement. The place of next meeting was left open and will be announced later. Rev. E. H. Rook led a closing prayer.

FELLOWSHIP TEA

The Woman's Missionary Society Newton, Miss., was hostess at a Fellowship Tea, Monday, July 24, in the annex of the church. The affair was attended by members and their guests, numbering about 50. The social committee served a plate lunch and tea faultlessly on this occasion.

Small tables centered with vases of summer flowers were used throughout the room, adding beauty and fragrance.

Miss Lucille Jarvis with the violin and Miss Katherine Brown at the piano, rendered beautiful musical selections during the afternoon.

Mrs. O. E. Whyte, president, spoke words of welcome, after which toasts were made to the circle leaders, musicians and others.

Mrs. W. I. Munn read an excellent paper on a Woman's Right to Preach. Mrs. H. McMullan, program chairman, announced that a debate was planned on this subject, but all refused to accept the negative point of view, thus

Assembly of Women Preachers

The fifteenth annual assembly of women preachers met in Milwaukee, July 5-7. Much attention was given to the fields in which there was need for the services of women. Says M. Madeline Southard, "There are fields that offer opportunity for fearless spiritual adventure and we know that the glorious spiritual vision has been lost by many men ministers in the dull mechanical grind. Women to whom recognition as ministers is coming slowly, must find a way to keep from the deadly routine that kills the spirit, without shirking the drudgery that goes with any worthwhile work."

She urged women to find fields that offer the fearless spiritual adventuring manifest in the lives of Peter and Paul, Phoebe and Priscilla.

There are such fields calling for real heroism in wide rural districts, congested city areas, newly discovered oil fields where no gospel services are heard. Great numbers of industrial workers have no adequate ministry provided for them. One who goes to them must know the social and economic teachings of Jesus and likewise his power of personal redemption. In all these fields preaching women could find opportunity for heroic service if they were ready and sent. Our deaconesses would find in their work in these fields, a greatly enlarged opportunity for service if the artificial barriers to ministerial orders were removed.

When the missions of two Methodisms combined to form the independent Korean Methodist Church this new national church gave complete ecclesiastical equality to women.

M. Madeline Southard, W. C. T. U. Secretary to the Orient, is author of the "Attitude of Jesus Toward Women."

Rev. Bessie Oliver of Wonsan, Korea, missionary of our Church is Presiding Elder of her District in Korea. The United Lutherans of the United States continue their study of the election of women as "congregational representatives" and the Church of Scotland at its 1933 session approved sending down to the Presbyteries for their action before December 15, a resolution "removing the barrier of sex ineligibility" in the matter of ordination as elders and deacons in the Kirk session.

This material was sent in by a member of the committee on the status of women.

Many ministers and other thoughtful men find substantial difficulty in reconciling the vocations of minister and mother. Perhaps no difficulty borrows its dimensions more largely from the imagination.

Motherhood did not prevent Elizabeth Fry from taking the Savages in the New Gate prison, nor Josephine Butler from traversing England, France and Italy as an Evangelist, nor Mary A. Livermore from dwelling in camps and hospitals during our Civil War, nor Hannah Whitehall Smith from declaring to assembled thousands the unsearchable riches of Christ.

The more it is studied the more it will be proved that our holy faith can have no ally so invincible as she who with strong crying and tears has learned the sublime secrets of pain and pathos that only mother hearts can know.

IMPRESSIONS FROM THE ASSEMBLY

The first assembly for Adult Christian Workers ever sponsored by the Louisiana Conference was held in the historic old town of Mansfield during the week of June 26 to July 1, 1933. There in the old Mansfield College whose very walls have long been consecrated to religious teachings, were gathered delegates and Christian workers from all over the state who were interested in learning more about the great program of the church and how to make it a more dynamic power in their own community.

Each morning in the fresh quiet stillness broken by the singing of the birds in the trees and in the beauty of the sunrise on the campus our hearts and thoughts were led to God in prayer, meditation, and song by Mrs. R. F. Harrell. Each evening at sundown out on the campus, resonant with hallowed memories for many, our vesper services were led by various Christian workers.

Classes for different groups were in the morning such as: "Leadership for Mission Study Groups"—Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb; "Stewardship"—Rev. F. E. Singleton; "Teaching Children"—Mrs. W. W. Holmes; "The Home in Society"—Mrs. R. E. Smith; and "A Study of Adult Life"—Rev. H. W. Williams. These classes were very interesting and instructive and were a great source of inspiration to all who took them. In addition to these classes each morning there was an hour spent in bringing before the assembly various phases of the church program by men and women who were in charge of the work. During the afternoon there were committee meetings and conferences of different groups for the purpose of helping one another. Every night some outstanding speaker conducted services at the church which was located on a corner of the campus and was attended by the people of the town as well as the members of the assembly. The recreational and social life of the assembly was an attractive and enjoyable feature. It consisted of plays and games, a reception, a picnic, and a banquet which was followed by a very impressive and well rendered play.

There were about sixty registered delegates at the conference which was a splendid beginning under the circumstances. It is to be hoped that the attendance to this assembly in the years to come will rival that of the Young People's which has grown in the last fifteen years from 35 to over 400.

A delegate,
MRS. D. H. STINSON.

MISSISSIPPI LEADS THE WORLD
IN MANY THINGS

Bolivar is the biggest cotton producing county in the world.

The largest plantation in the world is in Mississippi.

The largest pecan orchard is in Mississippi.

More tomatoes are shipped from Crystal Springs than from any other point in the world.

In Mississippi there is more standing timber than in any state in the union, except one.

There is more yellow pine lumber in Mississippi than any other state, and Laurel manufacturers more yellow pine lumber than any other city in the world.

More lumber is shipped from the port of Gulfport than from any other port in the world.

The largest consolidated high school in the world is located at Crystal Springs.

The largest queen bee establishment in the world is located at Mayhew, Mississippi, in Lowndes County.

Artesia, Mississippi, in Lowndes County, ships more hay as a point of origin than any other point in the world.

Mississippi has more consolidated schools, more agricultural high schools and more teachers' homes than any other state in the Union.

All of which is true—
Even so, the half has never been told.

And the richest assets of the state of Mississippi lie in hospitable, kindly, progressive, upward-reaching Mississippians themselves.—Columbus Dispatch.

FROM ST. FRANCISVILLE, LA.

Dear Brother Raulins:

Our summer's work and revival season is about over, and I am well pleased with accomplishments. Meeting at St. Francisville wasn't up to our expectations. So many things to break in on us unavoidable, notwithstanding these things, there was good accomplished.

Rev. E. M. Mouser, Chaplain of the Penitentiary, assisted me at St. Francisville and Tunica. Doubtless we had the best meeting at Tunica that has been there in years. We had the pleasure, last Sunday, of extending the privileges of the church, after a splendid sermon by the presiding elder, Rev. K. W. Dodsor, and six came bravely and took the front seat, asking membership, all by profession of faith. It really resembled old times to see them come forward.

Our meeting at New Hope was splendid, being well attended, the writer doing the preaching. Four were received into the church, three of them by profession of faith.

Further results of the year's work is the organization of two splendid prayer meetings, at Tunica and New Hope; also a new Sunday school at Concord, under the splendid leadership of Miss Irene Early, and Emmitt Spillman. Congregations at all points are much increased. There is yet much to do, but we are happy in what has been accomplished, and reverently give God the glory.

If your campaign goes on, you may count on us to do our part for the Advocate.

Yours sincerely,
J. C. PRICE.

GREAT REVIVAL AT CASEYVILLE,
MISSISSIPPI

Caseyville is located in Western Lincoln County, near Brookhaven, Miss. It has been a camp meeting location for many years and has enjoyed the ministry of some of the most famous gospel preachers of America. Among them being: H. C. Morrison, G. W. Ridout, Andrew Johnson and, C. M. Dunaway, and many others.

This year the workers of the camp were: Rev. H. B. Hysell of Hodge, La., the evangelist, Rev. Otis W. Spinks the song leader, and Rev. Charles Assaf of Jackson Miss., personal worker. Rev. Seth Granberry and Sister Frances rendered valuable service to the meeting. Miss S. A. Watts and Mrs. Spinks were the children's workers.

By DANIEL A. POLING

This is at once the most unique and the most powerful book ever written on prohibition. Here are the true facts about alcohol presented in a new way. It is not just an amusing book. It is an important milestone in the dry argument for control of the liquor traffic. Dr. Poling has fought long and vigorously for prohibition. From the pulpit and the platform he has spoken to the people of practically every city in America. Leader of the Allied Prohibition Forces, he is a prohibitionist who has never sensed defeat, and into John Barleycorn he has put his sincere conviction, his breadth of understanding, his remarkable literary talent, and his unflinching sense of humor.

blessed the preaching of His word. Emphasis was put on the fact that "all Scripture is given by inspiration of God" and that "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." This kind of preaching and the prayers of the people brought about a gracious revival. At nearly every service there were seekers, sometimes with the altar filled. There were seekers for both pardon and purity with a most encouraging number of professions. The Lord was with us and we give Him the credit for all that was done.

We heartily recommend Brothers Hysell and Spinks to any one desiring safe and sure help in a revival campaign. This is the greatest and best revival that I have been in or had any connection with since being a member of the Mississippi Conference. The Lord be praised for it all.

"LAZARUS"

My Dear Raulins:

I heartily commend the suggestion and sound rebuke you administer to the present day spirit of fads, hobbies and new movements, etc., as expressed in your Editorial Observations of July 27, 1933. But I respectfully suggest that you owe Lazarus an apology and Luke 16:19-31, a more careful reading. I am sure Lazarus was a conservative and a fundamentalist and that the new movement idea could never have originated with him. I have always thought that the rich man was the progressive and modernist in the case, and he it was that proposed the staging of a new movement—I trust you will make it all right with Lazarus and trace the movement to its origin.

Yours very sincerely,
SAMUEL S. BOGAN.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

GERMANY HAS TAKEN over the Protestant Church. Instead of being the conscience of the state it now becomes an arm of the state for the accomplishment of its purposes.

Dr. Shillito wrote a book called, "Nationalism, Man's Other Religion." I have not read it, but I can imagine some of the things the author has to say.

Come back, Martin Luther. On this your 350th anniversary we have another job for you. The government forces the church to underwrite and approve its plans at its own peril. The church must be free or it ultimately becomes a farce. When it is taken over by the state it betrays the weakness of the church rather than the strength of the state.

Like Nathan the church must be permitted to point its finger at the king and say, "Thou art the man." Like Elijah it must meet Ahab at the gate of his ill-gotten gains, bearing, if it must, his charge, "Hast thou found me, O mine enemy?" but fearlessly replying, "I have found thee: because thou hast sold thyself to work evil in the sight of the Lord."

At whatever price Christianity must retain its obligation to speak the words of spiritual verity. In its supreme task it must maintain its independence or we are doomed.

In the United States the relation of church and state is interesting. Certain concessions, such as freedom of worship, freedom from taxation, are granted apparently with the tacit understanding that the church be spiritual vision and conscience for our country. Upon our coins we say, "In God We Trust;" in our courts we lay our hand upon the Bible and swear to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God; and we open our houses of congress with prayer.

In its service to the government may the church never forget nor surrender its divine responsibility for the spiritual guidance of the government.

I AM READING Dr. Van Dusen's book, "The Plain Man Seeks for God." It is worth your reading. I am glad to hear that the plain man is seeking for God. I had about decided that he was not much interested in God.

Seems to me though, that the author moves almost too much in the realm of man's thought, or his thinking, as though God be lost there. And this surely is not to be discounted. Says he, "Any conception of God, to be practically effective in the life of the ordinary worshiper, must satisfy at least these four norms: It must be definite, precise, concrete. It must be readily understandable, not obscure and highly sophisticated. It must be realitively constant.

One may change his suit of clothes each year but he cannot change his thought of God annually and have it a living force in his life."

I am inclined to agree and add that this will be good for the extraordinary worshiper also, if there be any such.

But I have the notion that we lose God at the point of conduct and motive rather than at the point of thought and theology. Do we not lose God at the point of practice rather than at the point of correct creed? Is there not a sense in which we act before we think religiously?

Is not the way to God so plain that we fools and wayfaring men cannot miss it if we are willing to follow the road? Did not Jesus call upon men to act now even though they had not completed the statement of their creed? Did he not say that he that willeth to do shall know?

With due regard for clearer and better thinking about God, and with due appreciation of the difficulties facing men today about God and life, may we not propose that we strike out in the direction of wholehearted application to the way pointed out by Jesus as the shortest road to finding God?

Sam Jones found a man who seemed unable to "get religion." He despaired of getting in. He just could not feel right or understand the matter. He was asked by the evangelist if he knew how a Christian man should live, whereupon he gave a remarkably clear outline of Christian conduct suited both to his individual and home life. Sam Jones said, "Go home and begin at once doing these things and living this way. You will more than likely find God before you have gone far."

Science has done much to change the thinking of people. And I am for all the truth and help that science can bring. But God is still to be found by the way laid out in the Bible answering to the haunting needs of our hearts.

ALL, WHAT A WORLD. "A state of war for Managua, Nicaragua, and a state of siege for the entire republic were declared today by President Juan B. Sacasa as precautionary measures after the explosion last night, which destroyed most of the government's ammunition," say the papers of August 2. The presidential palace was rocked by the explosion. Seemed that the city might be swept by flames, and rescue was made perilous by the stray bullets flying from the burning ammunition.

How would you feel upon going out to hunt squirrels if all your shells should blow up, burn your coat tail and frighten your dog away? How in the world are we going to fight a neighbor nation if all our ammunition explodes prematurely right in our faces?

On the same date: "Japan's decision to embark upon the greatest naval building program in the history of the empire was generally interpreted in Washington today as marking the complete failure of disarmament gestures at Geneva, and what is perhaps more important, the abrogation of the 5-5-3 naval treaty upon its expiration in 1935." $71,000,000 is to be spent the next fiscal year and $190,000,000 the following.

And in the same paper: "President Roosevelt to-night approved plans of the navy for construction of 21 new warships in the $238,000,000 building program." This program, of course, is not for the purpose of military preparedness but to furnish jobs for the unemployed.

They that take the sword shall perish with the sword. Of course this is not an argument, just a statement of fact. Those who rely upon military strength are not subject to the normal processes of reasoning, it would seem. Our country is in great financial distress, and the same is so of Japan if reports be true. But we can afford to shovel our money into the causes of war. The very fact that we learn so slowly the inevitable outcome of war is evidence that we do not seriously reason about the matter. The fact that nobody won the World War, but that the whole world lost it, has little effect upon the mind of the militarist.

Poor President Sacasa. His ammunition blew up. Would it not be fine if the nations could agree to bring all their ammunition together in one big pile, lay a wire from it to Mars where we might move humanity for the time, touch it off, have one big BOOM! then come back and start off right? Maybe we prefer to blow ourselves up with it in the "Last War."

They that take the sword shall perish by the sword.

THE LAST WORDS of men who have been in the habit of saying things worth while are usually more significant and prophetic than are those of the people whose conversation never takes the depth of sober thought. Two great men of our country, one great in statecraft, the other in literature, both in religion; passing from us in recent years, left behind words we might ponder and act upon.

Woodrow Wilson, who died in 1924, in a closing paragraph of his article, "The Road Away From Revolution," published in the Atlantic Monthly, said:

"The sum of the whole matter is this, that our civilization cannot survive materially unless it be redeemed spiritually.

MORAL AND SOCIAL VALUES OF NRA

(Extracts from a sermon delivered by Dr. B. F. Rogers, pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, New Orleans, on last Sunday morning).

While there is complete separation of church and state in the United States of America, yet today in its effort to bring about a return of prosperity and happiness to the American people, it is highly significant that the United States government with all of its mighty power and influence is seeking diligently to secure the acceptance and practical application of Christian ideals and principles to all of the economic problems of the nation. The blue eagle has suddenly become the emblem of brotherliness. That you may know how fully the government is now advocating and supporting the principles which the churches have long advocated and taught, I quote the Social Creed of the churches adopted a number of years ago by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. Omitting the preamble, the churches stand for the following principles:

1. For equal rights and complete justice for all men in all stations of life.
2. For the protection of the family, by the single standard of purity, uniform divorce laws, proper regulation of marriages, and proper housing.
3. For the fullest possible development for every child, especially by the provision of proper education and recreation.
4. For the abolition of child labor.
5. For such regulation of the conditions of toil for women as shall safeguard the physical and moral health of the community.
6. For the abatement and prevention of poverty.
7. For the protection of the individual and of society from the social, economic and moral waste of the liquor traffic.
8. For the conservation of health.
9. For the protection of the worker from dangerous machinery.
10. For the right of all men to the opportunity for self-maintenance, for safeguarding this right from encroachments of every kind, and for the protection of workers from the hardships of enforced unemployment.
11. For suitable provision for the old age of the workers and for those incapacitated by injury.
12. For the right of employees and employers alike to organize; and for adequate means of conciliation and arbitration in industrial disputes.
13. For a release from employment one day in seven.
14. For the gradual and reasonable reduction of hours of labor to the lowest practicable point and for that degree of leisure for all which is a condition of the highest human life.
15. For a living wage as a minimum in every industry and for the highest wage that each industry can afford.
16. For a new emphasis upon the application of Christian principles to the acquisition and use of property, and for the most equitable division of the product of industry that can ultimately be devised.

We can readily see that the whole program of commercial and industrial recovery is based upon many of the principles enunciated in this social creed of the churches. For that reason, if for no other, the people of the churches ought to lend their whole-hearted support to the program of the President, for in every particular, except two, he is advocating the program of the churches.

First of all, he is making war upon selfishness. This is and has always been the supreme sin of the ages. It is the mother of avarice and greed and graft. It comes into men's hearts like a chilly wintry blast and destroys love and sympathy and justice, and demands the right to rule over all. It is blind to the misery and suffering which it may cause and is concerned only with the achievement of its own miserable ends. It is encouraged by a world of fierce rivalries and keen competition. It is the creator of a host of other sins and is the arch-enemy of the individual and of society. It may be true that legislative acts will not remove it from the hearts of men, nevertheless, it may be restrained by such acts until the scales of blindness fall from the eyes of men and they are brought to see that a business or industry conducted on selfish principles does not and can not pay in the long-run. The profit motive alone is not a sufficient foundation upon which to build an enduring business. It is a foundation of sand and when the winds of economic adversity beat and blow upon the structure it is not able to stand because it is built upon a false foundation. The President is undertaking to transform the greatest nation in the world into a great brotherhood based upon the ideals and principles of Jesus of Nazareth. "Rugged individualism" is a beautiful theory, but it breaks down in the face of the terrible facts with which we are confronted. No wise man would destroy individual initiative, but this must be tempered with a sympathetic consideration of the needs, rights and welfare of others. Let every man, woman and child aid in outlawing selfishness and encourage honesty, sympathy, fair dealing, and a recognition of the rights and privileges of all men, and thus we shall help in this mighty battle against selfishness in all of its varied forms and manifestations.

An old economic adage accepted by the world for a long time was "Competition is the life of trade," but it is equally true that "Unfair competition is the death of trade." The NRA seeks to protect business men from the evils of unfair and suicidal competition. Business should not be a warfare wherein men seek to destroy each other. It should not exist for the purpose of piling up enormous profits for the few while the many are reduced to penury and want. To do this is like killing the goose that laid the golden egg. When the masses are impoverished no one can be prosperous long. The President says that unfair and cut-throat competition must cease. The small independent merchant, business man, or manufacturer has as much right to exist and earn a living as the executive of the biggest corporation. While it may be true that many business firms have gone bankrupt in the years that have passed because of a lack of business knowledge and mismanagement, it is also true that many of them were forced to the wall because of the dishonesty, crookedness, and unfair methods of their competitors. The President says that business under the Blue Eagle shall be conducted on a sound, honest and fair basis, and we to that man who may wilfully violate the terms of the code under which he operates.

The consumers, too, are to be protected against profiteering. Every man in business is entitled to a fair, legitimate profit, or else he can not remain in business; but no firm is to be permitted to take advantage of the necessities of the public and collect exorbitant profits. It was once said that "Supply and demand regulate prices." That old adage is another much quoted economic principle which has been thrown overboard. Supply and demand plus ability to purchase is now recognized as a governing influence in the regulation of prices. It matters not how great or small the supply may be, or how great the demand may be, business lags when the purchasing power is absent. And so the President and his advisers and co-laborers realize that this is a mighty co-operative effort in which we are engaged. The producers and consumers alike must be considered.

One of the great moral values of the NRA is the effort to create and foster a spirit of co-operation and good-will among our own people. This means that employers and employees must work together for the common good. Labor and capital can not afford to engage in strikes and shut-outs. They can not afford to be unreasonable in their demands of each other, and General Johnson, together with the President, are determined that they shall recognize the justice of the Golden Rule and abide by that righteous principle.

Another moral value, it seems to me, involved in the NRA is the insistence upon the recognition of the superiority of human rights over property rights. Jesus taught that a man is far more valuable than a sheep. He did not hesitate to destroy a whole herd of swine in saving and restoring one individual to health and happiness. It is a very significant fact that our government appears now to be deeply concerned about the welfare of its people. For years large sums were appropriated for the protection of hogs and cattle against disease and it was willing to spend large sums for the destruction of destructive insects for the protection of property. Recall the federal expenditure of several millions of dollars a few years ago for the destruction of the Mediterranean Fruit fly in Florida, for the destruction of the corn borer in the corn belt, and for the protection and preservation of the natural resources throughout the length and breadth of the nation. I find no fault with this. But I am tremendously proud of my country because it has at last recognized that a child is worth at least as much as a sheep or a hog.

A great moral and social value of NRA is found in the elimination of child labor, a reform for which the churches have fought for many years with only partial success. Under the Blue Eagle no employer, no matter how greedy and selfish and grasping he may be at heart, can pile up wealth by sending little children down into the coal mines or into the factories where they are deprived of the rights which all children have and where their bodies and minds are blighted and dwarfed. Neither can selfish and conscienceless operators of sweat shops employ young girls and women with little babies and drive them like slaves for a mere pittance. If the NRA had accomplished nothing more than this righteous reform, it would be worth all the effort that is being put forth.

But for the protection of human rights it is doing something else that is of great importance. It is protecting a vast army of employees against the cupidity of employers who demanded long hours and paid ridiculously low wages in return therefor. It is increasing the compensation of millions and shortening their hours of labor. The full moral and social value of this reform can not be accurately estimated, but I feel sure that it will result in the lengthening of lives, the prevention of bodily breakdowns and the increase of efficiency and happiness.

One of the primary purposes of the NRA is to provide employment for the millions that are now cursed with enforced idleness. There is nothing more repugnant to a self-respecting American citizen than to have to stand in a bread or soup line or be the recipient of charity at the hands of a relief organization. And thousands of them have suffered in silence rather than undergo or submit to the humiliation involved. The average American citizen is inherently opposed to becoming a beggar. He desires the opportunity of earning an honest living for himself and family. He has a moral and social right to such an opportunity. The NRA proposes to furnish work for millions of those who are now unemployed so that many of our citizens may no longer be humiliated. Thousands have already been employed and it is the hope and prayer of all good Americans that millions will return to work within the next sixty days. The moral and social value of such an achievement is so patent that it needs no discussion.

These are some of the moral and social values which I see in the NRA. Let the churches rally to the support of the President and those who are doing business under the Blue Eagle. And let us not forget that the ideals and principles involved and which are being put into practice are the ideals and principles advocated and taught nearly two thousands years ago by One who said that he who would be great must be the servant of all.

WEEK OF LAYMEN'S RALLIES, MERIDIAN DISTRICT

The Seventh Annual Week of Laymen's Rallies was held in the Meridian District, July 9-14, with the program for all-day meetings and meetings in the evening hour. The entire district was covered and there were in attendance in the 11 meetings, a total of 612, distributed as follows: 26 pastors, 20 charge leaders, 23 church leaders, 64 stewards, 119 other church officers, and 360 members.

In many respects this was the best series of meetings held in the district, even though we did not get any outside speakers.

MATTERS BEFORE NEXT GENERAL CONFERENCE

By Dr. J. M. Rowland, Editor

A casual survey of the field through the Church press and other listening posts indicate the following are among the main items to be considered by the next General Conference:

1. Working out a spiritual and evangelistic program for the next four years with a view of a Church-wide revival and deepening of the spiritual life of the membership.
2. A complete recasting of our financial system, which will perhaps do away with the present plan of assessments and place the whole program on a free-will offering, following an intensive cultivation plan, emphasizing tithing and consecrated giving. All askings to be in one sum with no extra calls on the churches.
3. Legislation concerning the Episcopacy with perhaps a time limit of years for the election of bishops. No new bishops to be elected, districts enlarged and all bishops recalled from foreign fields.
4. Legislation concerning presiding elders. Time limit raised to six or eight years. New program for elders adopted giving them the responsibility of putting on in their districts the program of the whole Church and decreasing the specialists who cover the districts with programs of the different boards and departments. From all the evidence it seems the presiding elder stock has gone up a few points and this office is now considered of even more importance than formerly.
5. Change of pastoral time limit with a return to a fixed limit of either six or eight years. A reaction against an unlimited pastorate has been noted all over the Church, and, while the change may not carry, it promises more strength than any have expected.
6. Reorganization of all Annual Conference boundaries with a view of making Annual Conference territory more suitable to natural and state lines and the elimination of several smaller Annual Conferences.
7. The question of ordination of women to the ministry. This question had great strength at the last General Conference and received a majority of votes, but was vetoed by the College of Bishops. Reports coming in indicate there has been a decided reaction and this bill will have hard travel before the General Conference.
8. Reorganization of our missionary program and policy with such retrenchments and adjustments as will enable us to carry on with our expected income. This will mean perhaps giving up many mission points and even one or more mission fields, which will be taken over by some other board operating in that territory.
9. Increase of power and instructions to the commission now dealing with the interchange of territory between our Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, with a view of trying the experiment of transferring the overlapping territory to the other jurisdiction. It is believed by many, if these commissions have more authority to make some real changes that will enable churches in the same community to work out some friendly experiments, it will soon lead to a real getting together of the two branches of Methodism.
10. The working out of a plan for Church papers on the lines of a cooperative program between the General Conference and the Annual Conferences, grouping three papers west of the Mississippi and six east of the river, with zones of two or more Conferences combining on one paper and the deficit of the papers to be met by both the General Board and the Annual Conferences. The boards are to use the papers for their programs and in return pay the papers half of the deficit incurred, or advertising rates for space used, and the patronizing Annual Conferences are to make up the rest of the shortage of each paper in its zone. (This is in brief a plan proposed by the editor of this paper to the Methodist Press Association).

Note: These are some of the items we have heard discussed and they furnish material for thought and study in working out a constructive program for our Church.—The Richmond Christian Advocate.

BISHOP DOBBS OFF TO EXPOSITION

On the ninth of this month Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs left for Chicago, where he will spend a few days at the "Century of Progress Exposition." It is hoped that this trip will prove a profitable digression from the very taxing work of his office.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN ROGERS

By Rev. Walter L. Stormont

William Franklin Rogers, son of George W. and Martha E. Rogers, was born near Booneville in Prentiss County, Mississippi, September 20, 1855.

Brother Rogers came from a sturdy stock of pioneers, who moved from Tennessee to Mississippi in 1835 and settled in what is known as Blythe's Chapel neighborhood in Prentiss County. It was in this same community, where his grandfather, Zimrie Rogers, settled, that William Franklin Rogers grew up. From early childhood the imprint of pious and godly parents was ever upon his life. His home life, as a boy, was such as to fix in his heart a desire for the true, the noble, the beautiful, and from these his mind never strayed. His educational advantages were the best the rural schools of his section of the state afforded. He was not satisfied with what he learned while in school, but he sought daily to improve his mind by hard study. He was never idle. For some years he taught school in his native county. At the age of eighteen, while attending a meeting held at Blythe's Chapel, he professed faith in Christ and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Early in youth he felt the call to preach the gospel, but for many years he resisted the Spirit.

On March 27, 1878, he was happily married to Miss Nannie T. Henson of Booneville, Mississippi. Five sons and five daughters came into this parsonage home to grace and bless this happy union. Two sons preceded him to the Better Land in their infancy. He is survived by his wife, three sons and five daughters.

Brother Rogers was licensed to preach at Marietta, Mississippi, October 10, 1885. He was admitted on trial into the North Mississippi Conference on December 8, 1891; was ordained deacon by Bishop Charles B. Galloway at Grenada, Mississippi, December 14, 1890, and elder by Bishop H. C. Morrison at Winona in 1901. During the years of a long and faithful ministry he served the following charges: Brown's Creek, four years; luka Circuit, four years; Corinth Circuit, four years; Sturgis Circuit, four years; Chester Circuit, four years; West Circuit, three years; Sallis Circuit, four years; Oakland Circuit, four years; Coffeetown, two years; Holcomb Circuit, three years; Pott's Camp, four years; Kilmichael, three years; Horn Lake, seven months. Brother Rogers loved his home and was careful each day that his home was a house of prayer. He lived daily before his children so as to make them thoughtful, pure and strong in Christian character. The love of his devoted wife, and the faithfulness and obedience of his children were to him a crown of joy. The one desire of his heart was that his loved ones should receive the best he could provide for their welfare and comfort. His home life was in perfect keeping with the high standards of religion he professed. His home was a Christian home. As a husband and father, the earth has had few like him; none better. He was kind, thoughtful, patient and gentle.

Brother Rogers was not known as a great preacher, but those whom he served knew him as a man of great faith, charity, hope, courage, sympathy. These elements were so prominent in his daily life, and such essential fibers in his message that the gospel he preached was compelling. Few pastors made more calls at the homes of the community than he. He loved children and young people, and received in return their affection and esteem. He was humble in spirit, gentle and sympathetic. He sought to share with those whose burdens were heavy, and whose sorrows were great. He found the stranger and welcomed him in his church. The sinner he brought to Christ. He spoke ill of no man. His devotion to the church was that of a true servant, and his loyalty to fellow-servants could not be shaken. The secret of his life; the source of his courage and character, was his strong faith in God.

Brother Rogers for several years had not enjoyed the best of health. His family realized that he had almost come to the end of his journey, and rather insisted that he take a relation that would permit him to rest; but it was his earnest desire to remain in the active ministry. This he did. On April 16, 1933, Easter Sunday, at Poplar Corner church on the Horn Lake Charge, he preached his last sermon to the text: "What think ye of Christ?"—Matthew 22:42. Immediately after leaving the pulpit he had a severe heart attack. In a few days he was carried to the Methodist Hospital, Memphis, Tennessee, for treatment, but in two or three days he came home. For some weeks he seemed to improve. At 3:30 o'clock on Sunday morning, June 4, 1933, the soul of this good, true, faithful servant, after 48 years and 6 months of service at the altar of the church, passed to the Eternal Home. A true soldier has fallen on sleep. A faithful servant has his reward.

On Monday, June 5, at 9 a. m., in the Methodist Church at Horn Lake, Mississippi, a short service was held by Rev. S. A. Brown of Sardis, Rev. W. L. Robinson, of Lake Cormorant and the writer. In the afternoon of the same day he was buried from the Methodist church at Grenada. The service was in charge of Rev. James H. Felts, who was assisted by Rev. A. T. McIlwain, Dr. J. R. Countiss, Rev. T. H. Dorsey, Rev. E. H. Cunningham and the writer. There was a large number of ministers from all parts of the Conference present, and a host of friends from the charges he had served. His body was laid to rest in the beautiful cemetery at Grenada while the white light of a spring sun lighted his bier.

Friend and fellow-soldier, farewell, but not forever!

ANNIVERSARY THOUGHTS

LONG TRIP WITH THE ADVOCATE

Dear Advocate: You and I have walked the trail together, arm in arm, for about seventy-five years. A long trek; but replete with history of preachers, churches, happenings, struggles, progress, and humorous incidents of long ago days. If I could put it in fairly good telling, do you think it might be of interest to your folks? It would cause many to look again on pictures that hang on the walls of memory.

(If only we but knew it),
And those who boost the paper of
Their church will never rue it.

I'd hate to have to name as wise
The man who claims devotion
To some fair church of Christ on earth
Yet has no slightest notion
Of what that church has done for God
(Except in his own town),
Who takes a dozen magazines
But turns his church one down.

—The Methodist Protestant.

WHAT DO WE READ?

An American bishop tells of an interesting experience in a western town. He was in the modest book store one day, when a rather prominent woman came in to buy a book. When asked what kind of a book she wanted, she replied, "Oh, just something to read." An obliging clerk handed her a worthless new story, which she had rapidly glanced through by simply turning the pages, and then said: "That looks good, I will take it." She paid for it without even asking the price. A half hour later the bishop was in the meat market making a purchase—for even bishops cannot live by books alone—when the same woman came in and demanded a steak. She scornfully refused the first cut and the second that were offered, insisting rather loudly upon "the best you have." When she finally received and paid for a most expensive cut, she announced for all to hear: "I am particular about what I eat." The woman was perfectly right about the meat. But life is more than meat, and man cannot live by bread alone. A cultured mind is one of the great secrets of happiness. They who miss "the glory of the lighted mind" miss a great part of the glory of life.—The New Outlook.

It can be saved only by becoming permeated with the spirit of Christ and being made free and happy by the practices which spring out of that spirit. Only thus can discontent be driven out and all the shadows lifted from the road ahead.

Henry Van Dyke, who died this year, left a message. Let us compare them.

"We must turn to our divine Savior Christ. Materialism, gross or refined, is certainly the besetting sin of this age, and to it we owe most of our troubles. Christ attacks the fundamental and harm-working heresy by calling attention to the inevitable fact of death, which strips us of all material possessions and leaves the soul naked. God says to the foolish man: 'This night thy soul shall be required of thee; and the things which thou hast prepared, whose shall they be?' We cannot find or invent a better text than this to put to the souls of men today.

"The only lasting values are spiritual. If we lose these, we lose everything. There is no way of recouping that loss, even though a man should gain the whole world for a brief possession and lose his own soul at last. If the preacher no longer believes in the possibility of losing the soul, he is certainly not entitled to call himself a disciple of Christ. It was to save the human souls, great and small, that Jesus came into the world and gave himself as a divine sacrifice on the cross of Calvary."

The kingdom of things and the Kingdom of God, Mammon and God. There they are. Sin may change its forms and creeds and theologues march to a new rhythm, but these unaging and relentless foes abide. The conflict is basic and inevitable. Many of us never get to the front lines but waste our days in skirmishes that matter little, after all, to the cause of Christ. And He still hangs in agony on a cross because of our delay.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

"John Barleycorn" to hand. Great!" writes Brother L. J. Upton of Slaughter, La.

Eighteen young men and women received their degrees at the close of the summer session at Centenary College.

On last Sunday evening, a general exchange of pulpits was made by all ministers of the Methodist churches in New Orleans.

The Advocate office enjoyed a short visit from Rev. J. P. Bonnetarrere, pastor of Donaldsonville charge, Louisiana Conference, on Monday of this week.

A letter comes from Dr. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder of the Columbus District, assuring us of his active cooperation in the Anniversary celebration. Thank you, Dr. Curtis.

Rev. J. T. Abney of the Oxya, Miss., charge is holding meetings and presenting the claims of the Advocate. Already a lot has come in and he assures us that more will follow. Thank you, Brother Abney.

Presiding elders and pastors are tried to keep in touch on all church events and other news items of interest to their work. Tell us so that we may tell others through the columns of the Advocate.

Centenary College of which he was a graduate, closed at noon on Friday, July 24, out of respect and appreciation of Dr. William Williams Drake, who was buried in the city of Shreveport that afternoon.

Rev. Percy Vanzhan, pastor of the Rorie, Miss., charge, closed Sunday night, August 7, a meeting at Rosetta, Miss., one of the churches on the charge doing the preaching himself. There were five additions to the membership.

Dr. P. C. Wren is a busy layman of the Winfield, La., church. The other day he sent us a list of five subscriptions. With the new offer we feel sure that an announcement from him to the congregation will bring a much more lengthened list.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

Bishop H. M. DuBose has announced the appointment of Rev. A. A. Sims, beloved supernuminate of the Mississippi Conference, to supply the Trenton, Tenn., circuit, Memphis Conference, made vacant by the death of the pastor, Rev. J. C. Cason.

Are you helping to celebrate our Anniversary? Encouraging reports are coming in from some of the churches. We hear that one or two just ignored their promised quotas and have passed beyond them. Individuals are sending in their renewals.

Today's mail brought fine lists of subscriptions from Rev. W. B. Baker, Durant, Miss.; Rev. B. F. Rogers, Carrollton Avenue, New Orleans, and Rev. W. F. Roberts, Dubach, La. In each instance the words, "More to follow," were penned at the bottom of the lists. Thank you, brethren.

A letter from Rev. W. C. Frank, pastor First Church, Henderson, Ky., commends the work of Rev. A. J. Martin, our pastor at Marksville, La. Brother Martin, upon his return from Chicago, filled the pulpit of Brother Frank, telling this Kentucky congregation of the French Mission work in Louisiana.

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn and family are visiting the Chicago Exposition. On the 10th he reports to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., as Chaplain of the Thirty-First Division of the U. S. Army. He will be there for ten or twelve days. Dr. C. D. Atkinson, pastor at DeRidder, La., filled the pulpit at Lake Charles on Sunday, August 13.

"The Fort Jessup camp meeting is in full swing with Mr. Jas. V. Reid doing the preaching and the Latham Sisters doing the work of song leaders. We are having a great revival. Numbers are at an old-fashioned altar, claiming conversion, reclamation and the baptism of the Spirit. J. C. Rousseau, pastor, Many, La."

Rev. Jas. B. Grambling, pastor at Mer Rouge, La., recently left with a party of thirty-two for a visit to the "Century of Progress Exposition." This party, with Brother Grambling as guide, is assured of the most pleasure and profit from the money spent. He has been a citizen of Chicago and is able to pilot the party with great skill.

Rev. C. B. Powell, pastor at Menden, La., is in the midst of his revival meetings. He will do the preaching at all points except one. He will have the support of the women, young people's organization and others. He reports that his people are praying and that they seem ready for a revival on the work. The attendance at the prayer meetings is large.

"Mrs. Lewis, my daughter Ann, and I leave for Hattiesburg Friday, August 11, where my wife's brother, Dr. Grady Cook and Dr. Crawford are to take out my chronic appendix next Tuesday at Crawford Clinic. I expect no trouble," writes Rev. O. S. Lewis, our enterprising pastor at Brookhaven, Miss., just before leaving for Hattiesburg. Let us remember this faithful servant of God in our prayers.

We are indebted to Mrs. R. A. Killgore, faithful member of Mangum Memorial Church, Shreveport, La., for the splendid manner in which she is looking after the interests of the Advocate in connection with our Eightieth Anniversary Celebration. Already she has secured a large list of new readers and hints that more are to follow. Rev. W. T. Gray, pastor, is responsible for her appointment as Advocate representative.

With every pastor making a unified effort to secure subscriptions to the Advocate during the next two weeks at the less than cost subscription rate of $1.00 per year, the number of readers to the Conference organ would be increased to more than 15,000. Your efforts to this end will be rewarded with large dividends. A religiously intelligent membership is an asset to any church and will reflect in the collections as well as in the spiritual life of the church.

"We have recently had great distress in our home in the loss of one of our little granddaughters who passed to her home in heaven on July 14, after some weeks of severe illness. Kirby Riddell, who died, was just ten years old. An older sister has been seriously ill with the same fever for seven weeks but she is now on the road to recovery, for which we feel very thankful.—J. M. Sullivan, Millsaps College." Dr. Sullivan is Mississippi Conference Lay Leader. Let us all rally to him and family in this sorrow and give a lift with our prayers.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, preached for Rev. J. H. Morrow four days, August 7-10, at Hopewell, on the Gloster, Miss., charge. There were nine additions to the membership on profession of faith, and one by certificate. Hopewell is in Wilkinson county, and the Methodist congregation there was formed in 1830. In the early days five local preachers were members there, one of whom, Rev. H. Enlow, served the congregation during the Civil War period. Brother Hawkins is to assist Rev. W. B. Hollingsworth in a meeting at Nebo, Miss., beginning August 20.

Brother Pastor, already half of the month of August is behind us, and but two weeks remain in which to canvass your membership for subscriptions in connection with the Eightieth Anniversary Special Offer Campaign of $1.00 per year for renewal and new subscriptions. Let every pastor take advantage of the exceptionally low offer and double the present circulation of the Advocate which is now in its eightieth year of service to the Conferences of Louisiana and Mississippi.

Before us is a copy of the Bulletin of Centenary Methodist Church, McComb, Miss., Rev. B. M. Hunt, pastor. Brothers Hunt, Ledbetter and Leggett, with several of their members, were highly appreciated attendants at the Auburn protracted meeting where the editor of the Advocate did the preaching. In the bulletin is a strong paragraph about the Advocate and the Eightieth Anniversary Celebration. While this congregation is saying to the government, "We Do Our Part," they are saying the same for the Advocate. We are expecting a long list from that good church. Mrs. L. W. Alford and Mrs. R. M. McEwen represent us.

Do you know him? Rev. W. M. McIntosh, General Evangelist, Emeritus, has recently been in meetings at Columbus, North Carrollton and the Union Camp Ground at Ackerman, Miss. For almost fifty-five years Brother McIntosh has been

In the active work of the ministry. He still delights to preach the gospel and see sinners seek God. Let him testify. "These fifty-five years have been great, and my way grows brighter and brighter as the years come and go. The Lord and the Church may still count on me." Brother McIntosh reports that he and Sister McIntosh are very happily located at Columbus and that the preachers and good people of that good city are extremely kind to them.

Miss Ann Stevens Lewis, daughter of Rev. Osmond S. Lewis, our pastor at Brookhaven, Miss., has been editing the Bulletin of the church during the summer months, and doing it well. A paragraph in the August 6 number reads as follows: "Are you keeping up with the news of your Church as well as with the daily news of the world? Don't you know that it is just as fascinating, eventful and far-reaching? Take advantage of the Eightieth Anniversary Celebration offer of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and renew your old subscription, or, if you have not been taking it, subscribe now. It will be to your advantage as well as to the Advocate. Subscribe right away!"

"I am sure you will be glad to know of our Young People's revival that closed last night. Brother Carl Lueg, of Delhi, La., was with us on the 7th through the 11th. The young people—and older ones, too—responded well. We have held a Young People's revival each of these three years, but this one was the best. Brother Lueg understands the young people, and his messages were inspiring and instructive. The closing night was the best; and at the close the League gave a social in honor of Brother Lueg. Eleven of our young people attended Mansfield. About ten are planning to attend Camp Ki Ro Li September 4-9. I am observing the 'Eightieth Anniversary' and have several subscriptions already, with a few more in sight."—Rev. C. B. White, Wisner, La.

J. R. BINGHAM PASSES AWAY

The death of J. R. Bingham at Indianola recently removed from us the most potential force for good that Carroll County has known in many a day. Mr. Bingham lived in Carroll County all his life except the past few years which he spent for the most part in Greenwood. Very properly the family brought his mortal remains back to Carrollton to rest in the bosom of the community that knew and loved him best.

Dr. W. L. Duren of New Orleans, a life-long friend of the family, conducted the brief, simple funeral service, paying a beautiful tribute to the transforming character of a life spent in unselfish service for others. Mr. Bingham's innate modesty forbade any extended eulogy. Rev. Sam Ashmore led the prayer and Rev. C. A. Parks and Dr. J. R. Countiss read the lessons. A number of other preachers attended the services as a mark of their appreciation of the life that had closed among us. A great congregation assembled to attest his popularity.

Mr. Bingham will be sorely missed, but his good works will follow him. No man ever lived in Carrollton, not even the two United States Senators who lived there, who left a deeper, more lasting impress than did J. R. Bingham. Peace to his ashes and blessings upon the bereaved family.

MONROE DISTRICT HAS CAMPITIS TOO!

The Young People of Monroe District are at last about to realize their dreams of a Camp. And they say that they have the finest site in the state for a real camp. Camp Ki Ro Li, just out of West Monroe, is a Boy Scout Camp for that district. It gets its name from the three great organizations that sponsor it—the Kiwanis, Rotary and Lions organizations. The Scout officials have consented to let the Methodist Young People use the grounds and equipment for a small fee per day.

So! On September 4-9 the Camp gates will swing open and young people between the ages of 16 and 23 will circle the grounds and stop in front of one of the cabins to register and find out what's what and who's who. The first meal will be served on Monday evening at supper, and with Mrs. R. B. Neeley of Monroe in charge of eats, the gang will feast on good things three times a day until Saturday noon, when they reluctantly eat their last bite and say farewell until next summer.

Rev. Carl Lueg of Delhi, District Director of Young People, is busy advertising the Camp throughout Monroe and Ruston Districts. He is not confining his invitation to those two districts, but says, "Come on—wherever you are; but 70 is the limit and we'll be satisfied with 50."

Our most experienced young people's leader in the Conference, Rev. J. B. Grambling, is acting as Dean of the Camp. Among those on the faculty are: Rev. A. W. Townsend, Rev. C. B. White, Rev. W. H. Giles and Rev. Henry Rickey.

The theme assures the campers of success: "Pathway To Abundant Life." The cost of the camp for the six days, including all supplies for class work and registration and board is only $5.00. If you are interested in attending the Camp the writer is anxious to have your registration in advance. Write her at Monroe, Louisiana, in care of Letter Service Bureau.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE YOUNG PEOPLE'S NEWS

Gea whiz, the news we've got for you this week! Things you'll like, too, we hope. Personal news, district news, Union news,—why, just all sorts of news! And if you don't like it, why it's up to you to send us something better!

First, let's try a little Union news for an appetizer. Going into Ruston District, we find the Ever Ready Union meeting in Simsboro, with over seventy-five present in spite of the weather! An interesting devotional entitled, "Thy Kingdom Come;" an announcement of another Union to be formed in another section of the district; another that the Intermediates would be formed into three Unions, to meet at the same time and location as the Young People, but in different buildings; plans for the swell district picnics to be held pretty soon; water-mellons in plenty; oh, man, what a meeting! Thanks to Edith Skinner for our information.

Then there's the meeting of the Lou Heart Union in Bunkie, with around eighty present! A devotional which included a solo by Alton Pierce and a reading by Miss Montez Haas; echoes of the assembly by Miss Gertrude Palmer; choruses led by Charles White; business, with president H. L. Bradford in the chair; ice cream and cake for all; what a meeting that one was! Thanks to Miss Maude

NURSE REGAINS HER HEALTH

After Taking Five Bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I am a registered nurse. For three years I was too run-down to work. My condition improved wonderfully after taking five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It increased my appetite, quieted my nerves, improved my digestion and relieved sleeplessness. I am glad to tell any woman what a splendid medicine this is."—CLARA A. SABIN, 195 Amity St., Brooklyn, New York.

You can depend upon a medicine which has the written endorsement of more than half a million women.

McFarland and Mr. W. D. Boddie.

The Lake Charles District is vacationing this week—that is, this week and last week! Last week the Christian Adventurites had their fun, and this week it's the Christian Cultures. They are, and have been, at Lake Arthur. Thirteen churches were represented at the G. A. Camp, with fun and cooperation on every hand. Their Dean and Morning Watch leader, Miss Sharland Meyers, had to leave before Camp was well started, but the fine young people stepped right in and helped with everything. Greetings to Lake Arthur! Look out for poison ivy, 'n snakes, 'n worms!

Baton Rouge District has formed a Council to work on district problems, and generally help struggling youth. Collins Lipscomb, retiring district director, is chairman; Aline Chaney is secretary; and "Bay" Fonte is treasurer. Best wishes, Council!

And now for a promised treat! We have today an exclusive thumb-nail autobiography of none other than our Conference President, Ernest Mickal! Here's his words about it:

"Ernest Mickal is a lanky lad of five feet nine and a half inches, kinda white but mostly black. He has dark wavy—I mean kinky—hair and big feet, with eyes that are sometimes brown and sometimes brown. He weighs 137 pounds, except immediately after a free meal, when he weights about 190 pounds. In June, 1931, the College of Commerce and Business Administration of Tulane University decided that they wanted to get rid of him, so they gave him the degree of Bachelor of Business Administration and kicked him out. Out of sympathy, the Y. M. C. A. took him in and gave him a job as accountant.

"Although a member of the Epworth League of St. Mark's for many years, he did not have sense enough to join the Methodist Church until November, 1931. He was secretary of the Senior Epworth League, but did not take very much interest in the work of the League until he went to Mansfield in June '31. During this assembly he fully realized the importance of Young People's work in the church, and came back home resolved to do his bit toward making a go of this work in the church. About that time, the new plan of organization came into effect, and he had an active part in introducing it into St. Mark's. That fall he was elected president of the local chapter of the first Young People's Division of St. Mark's. He took an active part in the work of the New Orleans Union, and in October, 1932, was elected president of that body. After a lay-off of one year from his first Mansfield Assembly, he returned in 1933, and there was elected President of the Conference Young People's Division.

"He is twenty-two years old, born June 6, 1911, in old New Orleans. He is still the despair of many girls, but the shining light of none. He tries to be athletic, playing on the baseball and basketball teams of St. Mark's and the "Y," but he is too clumsy to ever amount to anything. Last March he suffered a broken ankle through this clumsiness. It has healed now and we are afraid he will live.

"Other than this, there is nothing to tell about him." (Or nothing that could be told about him?)

LYD SIMS,
Conference Publicity Supt.

ONE YEAR FOR $1.00

In Memoriam

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

DR. H. S. JOSEPH

Horatio Seymour Joseph was born June 10, 1868, in Crawford County, Illinois. He was the sixth of eight children born to William H. and Lutheria Ward Joseph. He graduated from medical school in 1893. For the first four years of his practice he was located at Eunice, La., then moved to Melville, La., where he carried on his work until 1926. In that year he sold his practice and moved to Baton Rouge where he lived for three years, then located at Harlingen, Texas, where he was living at the time of his death which came June 27, 1933. The body was brought to Melville where funeral services were held in the Melville church with Rev. C. W. Lahey and Rev. Mr. Lipscomb officiating. He was then tenderly laid to rest in the family vault by the side of his son.

On March 27, 1895 he was married to Miss Mattie Pearce of Arcadia, La. To them were born two children, John Seymour and Theria. John Seymour died while in service in the World War.

Dr. Joseph was a public spirited man and was interested in both educational and spiritual matters. In his church he served as steward, Sunday school superintendent, Bible teacher and was a licensed exhorter. In the Louisiana Conference he was a lay delegate and served on the Board of Missions for several years. At the time of his death he was the Bible class teacher in the First Methodist Church at Harlingen.

Dr. Joseph was a man of sterling character one who was true to his friends. He stood by his pastors and their families both as a spiritual help and advisor and in the capacity as a medical doctor. His services were always given free and willingly. He spent much time studying his Bible and teaching it. He was truly one of God's messengers. How we, his friends, will miss the sweet companionship with him. His home life was ideal. There was such a beautiful companionship between Dr. Joseph and his wife that is not felt in all homes. May the Lord help and bless her who is left behind and may we who called him friend be truly a friend to her who is left to walk alone with her Saviour until that happy meeting time over there.

A FRIEND.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. EMMA LUM

The passing of a gentle mother and dear friend has brought unspeakable sorrow to the hearts of those who loved her through a long and happy life.

Mrs. Emma Lum was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Powell who resided in Maryland prior to the Civil War, and later moved to Mississippi, first to Bolivar county, then to Claiborne county at the close of the war. Here Mr. Powell purchased the Summer Seat plantation with its broad acres and palatial home from the McComb family. From this home the Christian influence of these worthy parents was handed down to their sons and daughters whose descendants are numbered among the best citizens of Claiborne county.

Mrs. Lum was born April 3, 1853, and was married January 6, 1874 to Mr. Erastus W. Lum of Rocky Springs, Rev. John A. B. Jones, of Port Gibson, performed the marriage ceremony.

To this union six children were born, Elbert L., Mrs. Lou Patterson, Mrs. Daisy Wheelless, James, Fannie and Mrs. Mary McAdoo. Fannie died in early childhood.

Mr. Lum passed to his reward in 1913, and the wife of his youth was left to be a comfort to her dear children who were ever ready to make her declining years full of joy by their untiring devotion and dutiful thought of her.

While on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. McAdoo at Brookhaven, Mrs. Lum fell ill and everything that love, skill and attention could accomplish was done for this sweet sainted mother. The summons came and on June 26, 1933, she passed to her heavenly reward. Interment took place at Hankinson, Miss., where she rests besides her soldier husband.

"Leaves have their time to fall:
And flowers to wither at the North winds breath;
And stars to set, but all,
Thou hast all season for Thine own, Oh Death."

HEADACHE

TAKE LIQUID MEDICINE
READY TO RELIEVE

Nothing gives such quick relief from headaches, neuralgic, rheumatic or periodic pains, or aches due to colds, as Capudine because it is liquid and its ingredients are already dissolved. MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The little town of Lake has a Federated Woman's Missionary Society composed of the Methodist and Baptist auxiliaries. They meet every 5th Monday and on July 31 met at the Methodist church with about twenty-five ladies present. A program of "Worshiping God Through Music" was rendered as follows: Devotional, Mrs. A. Wilkins; Worshiping God Through Music, Mrs. W. P. McMullan; Song, He Keeps Me Singing; Winning Souls for Christ Through Music, Mrs. S. B. Cole; Vocal Duet, Mesdames G. N. McIlhenny and G. A. Brooks; Song, You Go to My Church and I Go to Your Church, by society. Mrs. C. C. McClennahan was elected leader for the coming year. The meeting was closed by singing, "Blest Be The Tie" and prayer offered by Mrs. H. J. Moore.

The northern zone of the Missionary Societies of the Brookhaven District met in the Crystal Springs Methodist church, August 2. The leading feature of the program was an address by the conference superintendent of Mission and Bible study, Mrs. J. L. Carter.

The meeting of Margie Hall zone, Jackson District, was held at Morton with Mrs. Guy Sigrest as leader. Forest, Lena, Walnut Grove and Harpersville auxiliaries were represented with Lena giving the program, the topic was, "Rediscovery of Ourselves." The next meeting will be held at Harpersville.

WESLEY HOUSE NOTES

Children Enjoy Outing at Park

Forty children of the Wesley House groups enjoyed an outing at Highland park Friday, made possible through the courtesy of the Catherine Stevens circle of Central Methodist church, Meridian.

Mrs. C. M. Martin, who is staying at the Wesley House during the vacation of Miss Annie Trawick, and Mrs. Hughes Knight chaperoned the group. Don Carlos entertained the children and staged his dog and pony circus much to their pleasure.

The children are enjoying the shower baths at Wesley House and large numbers attend each day.

Her Double Chin Is Vanishing

Shape Growing Normal

"Why am I taking Kruschen Salts? Because I was getting so broad across the hips I was ashamed of myself. I've been taking Kruschen about 2 months and they certainly are bringing my shape down to a normal condition and what is nice about them (to my way of thinking) is they haven't taken flesh from my cheeks but to my surprise my double chin is vanishing for which anyone should be glad." Mrs. P. E. Gardner, Worcester, Mass. (Jan. 3, 1933).

To lose fat and at the same time gain in physical attractiveness and feel spirited and youthful take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning.

A jar that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle at any drugstore in the world but be sure and get Kruschen Salts the SAFE way to reduce wide hips, prominent front and double chin and again feel the joy of living—money back if dissatisfied after the first jar.

MISSION WORK JOGS ALONG

Miss Virginia Atkinson, our Emeritus Missionary, still "going strong." Says: "Missionary work jogs along. Schools are fuller than they have ever been and the evangelistic work here in Changshu was never before so prosperous. Families are asking us to go and destroy their idols and heathen paraphernalia at the rate of about a family a week. They are still saying that they want to become Christians. We are the busiest people here you ever saw, and never get to the end, and are never satisfied with what can be done in a day, but as Mrs. Wong says: 'It is a happy busy.' We have a new village near here—new to the church—for two years ago we hardly knew of its existence. In that time about twenty-five families have joined the church and seem to be loyal and in earnest. Our women, Mrs. Wong and Miss Koo, are out there now holding a Short Term School. They go every afternoon, do the teaching, and return by dark."—Exchange.

THE OLD GOLD SHOWER

Uncle Sam is delivering such loads of packages these days at Mission Headquarters that if the weather was not so extremely hot one would be tempted to believe that this is the Headquarters of Santa Claus.

But when one steps into Mrs. Ina Davis Fulton's office there is no doubt of the loyalty of our Church to the call of missions. The request went out: To keep the missionaries on the field by gifts of old gold and silver. The response was almost instantaneous. Thousands and thousands of pieces, many of them precious possessions have been donated.

One of the first gifts was two twenty dollar gold pieces which was a precious gift of a husband, long dead. An old communion set was sold for $10 and the money sent in. Another friend writes that she mentioned the old gold gifts to a Chinese in the community and he said: "I have no old gold but here is two one dollar green backs for missions." A friend eighty-three years of age sent $2.50 in gold which had been given her on her golden wedding anniversary. Her house had been buried so there were no treasures to hunt. She said: "If every woman would respond with $2.50 we could keep our missionaries at work."

A TRIBUTE OF LOVE

When the gentle spirit of Mrs. W. W. Wilburn was borne from its earthly house into the abiding place of the soul to be eternally with the Lord, the North Mississippi Woman's Missionary Conference suffered an irreparable loss.

For twenty-seven years as treasurer of this organization she rendered an efficient and loving service to her Master, and the sacred memory of her exemplary life will have benign influence over those who are left to carry on.

She was a beautiful character, possessed with all the graces and virtues that render woman so potent a factor in contributing an uplifting influence to society. Her life of faithfulness and devotion to her family, her friends and the church she loved, was an inspiration to those whose privilege it were to know her.

While her passing has left our hearts saddened, we know she has entered into the joys of her Lord. Hosanna to Jesus on high,

Another has entered his rest.
Another has 'scaped to the sky
And lodged in Immanuel's breast;
The soul of our sister has gone
To brighter the triumph above;
Exalted to Jesus's throne
And clasped in the arms of His love."

MONETTE C. WILBURN.

PERSONALS

Rev. John Paul Pappas, pastor of the Greek Methodist Church, Tarpon Springs, Florida, is doing fine work among the 2,500 Greeks of that section. He is doing valiant work in street preaching, pastoral visits, and the distribution of tracts and Bibles and portions. This is the only Methodist Church for the 300,000 Greeks in the United States.

St. Mark's Mission charge, located in the "Vieux Carre" section of New Orleans, is the outstanding missionary institution of our Church in the South. This section of New Orleans has an approximate population of 30,000, representing twelve or more nationalities. The General Section of the Board of Missions supports the church; the Woman's Section of the Board supports all the social activities. The clinic, which is a part of the settlement work of St. Mark's treats about 400 patients each month. A well trained, registered nurse, who is also a deaconess, is in charge of the clinic.

Through a special fund of the Home Department of the Woman's section of the Board specialized training has been given to the following workers this year: Deaconesses Verdine Anderson, Zoe Anna Davis, Ola Gilbert, and Margaret Young. Misses Capitola Dent, Olivia Napoleon, and Felicia Starke have also received training through this fund.

SOUTH UNION CAMP MEETING ACKERMAN, MISS.

South Union Camp Meeting on the Chester charge opened the Friday night before the fourth Sunday in July, eighteen tenters on the ground. Rev. T. F. Sartain, pastor, was assisted in the meeting by Rev. W. M. McIntosh of Columbus, Miss., and Rev.

T. B. Thrower, pastor of Ackerman station.

Hour of services: Sunrise Prayer meeting under the Tabernacle conducted by some layman; preaching hours, 9 a.m.; 11 a.m.; 3 p.m.; and 8 p.m.

Dr. McIntosh preached at 11 a.m. and 8 p.m. He is a firm believer in the Old Time Religion and the Old Time Power and manifested in his preaching that Old Time Methodist power. He is seventy-five years of age, but never has lost the art of preaching.

Some fifteen additions to the church were a part of the results. The meeting came to a close on Wednesday evening, Dr. McIntosh giving the history of his life at this service, winding up with an old time experience meeting. People pledged their allegiance to the church and pastor as never before. There will be some six or eight new tents erected in the next ninety days which displays the interest taken by the people as a result of the meeting.

The third quarterly conference of the charge was held at the camp meeting, Rev. T. B. Thrower in charge in the absence of Dr. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder, due to sickness. Reports were the best for the charge in some two or three years.

FROM MONTROSE, MISS.

Dear Brother Raulins: Just a few dots concerning church membership that are interesting to me, and perhaps will be to you, and thus to Advocate readers.

I am now serving my fourth year on the Montrose charge. The smallest membership on this charge is Reads Chapel, which had a membership of 20 when I came here. I have received 25 into this church thus far, more than doubling the membership in less than four years.

Rev. S. C. Moody, pastor at Rose Hill, has just been with me in a helpful revival in this church. Eight additions, 5 by baptism.

Garlandville church now has 90 members, forty per cent of whom have been received during the present pastorate.

Louin church now has 96 members, more than a third of which have been received during the present pastorate. This church has enjoyed a twenty per cent increase in membership this year. The pastor has recently been assisted in a revival by his father, Rev. W. B. Jones, of Magnolia, during which revival there were 11 additions, 5 by baptism.

Already trying to co-operate with Anniversary Celebration in effort to secure more subscriptions than I promised.

THE MAN WHO CAME EARLY TO CHURCH

He had time to take his seat quietly, and get warm or cool, as the case might be.

He had time for a quiet season of prayer before the service began.

He did not disturb anybody.

He showed due respect for time and place, and also for Him who has promised always to meet those who are gathered in His Name.

He was able to join in the whole service, and to be in time for it.

He set a good example to others.

He won a blessing for himself.

Suppose every member of the congregation were to be in his or her place five minutes before service began, and should spend that five minutes in earnest prayer for the Church and her mission, the congregation, the school, the clergy, and himself, what would he lost? What might not be gained?—Selected.

Need More Iron in Their Blood!

Children who are thin and pale and who lack appetite are usually suffering from a deficiency of iron. When the blood lacks iron it becomes thin and poor and fails to nourish. Then a child loses appetite and becomes still thinner and weaker—and easy prey to disease!

To build up your child, give him Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. It contains iron which makes for rich, red blood. It also contains tasteless quinine which tends to purify the blood. These two effects make it an exceptional medicine for young and old. A few days on Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic will work wonders in your child. It will sharpen his appetite, improve his color and build up his pep and energy and increase his resistance to disease. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is pleasant to take. Children like it and it's absolutely safe for them. Contains nothing harmful. All stores sell Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. Get a bottle today and see how your child will benefit from it.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

"YE THAT DO TRULY and earnestly repent of your sins, and are in love and charity with your neighbors, and intend to lead a new life, following the commandments of God, and walking from henceforth in His holy ways; draw near with faith, and take this holy sacrament to your comfort: and make your humble confession to Almighty God, meekly kneeling upon your knees;" are the majestic words with which we are invited to partake of the Lord's Supper. Perhaps you did not hear them. Maybe the pastor did not take time and pronounce them clearly, distinctly.

But these are arresting words. Seems that they should come after a period of silence and be followed by a period of silence.

You better read them again and ponder them for awhile. There is the recognition of sin and repentance for the same, "truly and earnestly;" for sin is not to be regarded lightly. "Love and charity." Why both? Are they different? And not some vague and abstract and nebulous something. "With your neighbors." Here is where religion becomes practical and real and concrete. Jesus fixed it that way, telling us, if you, on the way to the altar for worship, remember your brother has "something against you:" better leave your gift and go back to repair the wall of brotherhood before going further in your worship.

But maybe we don't know the way. "Following the commandment of God." That is your guide. Read the Bible. Ask your pastor about it.

Isn't the sacrament observance sufficient? Does it not end with that? May I not be excused now until next Communion Day? Walking from HENCEFORTH in His holy ways." Here are the constant persistent, everyday, ethical implications of the observance. I exchange my ways for His holy ways.

"Faith." Draw near with FAITH. "Comfort." "Confession." "Meekly kneeling." Meekness.

AND YET HOW we have robbed ourselves of the light and lift of this "means of grace." The Roman Catholics have their "five sacraments" and make something of them. At the time of the Reformation we left behind three of them, and have continually discounted the two we have left. Baptism and the Lord's Supper. "The sacraments," says the Discipline, "were not ordained of Christ to be gazed upon, or to be carried about; but that we should duly use them. And in such only as worthily receive the same, they have a whole-some effect or operation."

But who is going to receive them worthily if they be not administered worthily and effectively? What professor in our seminaries has taken time to instruct our young preachers in the meaning and methods of the sacraments of our church? In contrast, how much time has been put on the theme and thought of the sermon? Worship has not had the large place it deserves in our preparation of the ministry. Just now is it coming to have a share in our consideration. There is a real sense in which the pastor is priest and guide in worship.

Both by neglect and method of administration we have been robbed of our sacraments. May not our baptismal ceremony be made more effective and more beautiful with a little more care and a little better preparation? Has it not sufficient meaning and holy suggestiveness to command better execution?

But just now we are thinking of the Lord's Supper. In how many congregations, especially in the smaller churches

UNBELIEF

By Edward Bulwer-Lytton

There is no unbelief:

Whoever plants a seed beneath the sod,
And waits to see it push away the clod,
He trusts in God.

Whoever says, when clouds are in the sky,
"Be patient, heart; light breaketh by and by,"

Trusts the Most High.

Whoever sees, 'neath winter's fields of snow,
The silent harvest of the future grow,
God's power must know.

Whoever lies down on his couch to sleep,
Content to lock each sense in slumber deep,
Knows God will keep.

There is no unbelief;

And day by day, and night unconsciously,
The heart lives by that faith the lips deny—
God knoweth why.

and country communities, it is neglected. A little mother in a far away country place wrote asking if something might be done about the Lord's Supper. It had not been observed in that church in years. She was hungry for this means of grace.

Then the method of administration. Of course we find these instructions: "If the elder be straitened for time, he may omit any part of the service except the prayer of consecration." The presumption, it seems to me, is that it will be the exceptional rather than the chronic condition that would compel us to resort, with loss, to this expedient. But, oh, how many of our pastors are "straitened for time." God pity us. Why straitened for time? By beginning late with the service, and by preaching a sermon on the occasion.

"Not preach, Mr. Editor?" I hear you crying in astonishment. Exactly so. Not preach. Certainly this should be the way unless the number of communicants is very small.

First of all, you do not preach every time you go into the pulpit any way. And, secondly, that is not the only way of conducting worship. You are overrating your preaching. Did you put any time on the preparation of your pastoral prayer?

Here are some of the things that destroy the meaning, the beauty and the effectiveness of the Lord's Supper, considering that you have an orderly congregation: Cramped time, people leaving the church during the service, each communicant rising from the altar when he is served, and neglect of the Ritual.

HOW SHALL WE DO it, then?

Announce Communion Day at least a week ahead, calling the attention of the people to the place and opportunities of the observance. Take time to instruct your congregation as to the meaning and method of the service. A whole series of sermons might be preached on the clauses of the Invitation.

Omit the sermon for that day, especially if the number attending will require some time for the observance. Let this sacrament preach for one service a month. Let it be permitted to deliver to the people its own ageless message. Of course a brief Communion Word may be delivered at the proper place in the service, a word calculated to invest the service with greater meaning. Why do you feel that you must always preach a sermon?

No one should leave the building during the entire service. The pastor is often responsible for this disorder, first, by failing to teach his people the meaning of the Sacrament; second, by crowding the service into a cramped remnant of time at the close of the sermon. Let us stop it. There should be perfect quiet with no moving except those coming to and returning from the altar.

It is not necessary to mumble the words, "The body of our Lord Jesus Christ," "The blood of our Lord Jesus Christ," to each communicant. The pastor may, while holding the plate of bread, say the words before serving. Likewise with the wine. Then the service at the altar may be conducted in silence.

When one table has been served, let the communicants be dismissed with a blessing. And so on until all have been served.

During the service the music of some of the great hymns like "Rock of Ages" and others may be played softly.

First and finally, let the Ritual of our church be followed both by the pastor and the people. It is found in the back of the Methodist Hymnal. If our Hymnal be not in use the ritual may be printed on a separate sheet for use on the occasion of the Lord's Supper.

"Do this in remembrance of Me."

LABOR SUNDAY MESSAGE, 1933

Issued by the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America through its Department of the Church of Social Service.

In this period of long-continued hardship and human suffering, the churches in giving spiritual help and physical relief to individuals, should not forget to lift high the ideals and principles of their faith upon which a better world must now be built. The voice of the prophet needs once more to be heard, both proclaiming the need of personal righteousness and calling men and nations to repentance for unchristian relationships in our economic life; crying in the wilderness of modern times, "Make straight in the desert a highway for our God."

The teachings of Christ which bear on economics are not expressed in technical terms. They deal primarily with motives and human values. They are therefore the more searching and timeless. They center upon the priceless worth of the humblest human being; the fundamental place of love in human life; the religious significance of daily bread, shelter and security. They give supreme emphasis to the motive of serving the common good as over against private self-seeking: "Whoever loseth his life for my sake, shall find it."

These teachings strike at the very root of the exploitation of human life for profit, at the mania for gambling and stock speculation, and at all efforts to acquire wealth while making no personal contribution to society. Jesus' teachings of love and brotherhood are in sharp contrast with the present shocking inequalities of wealth and income. His teachings clearly set forth principles that demand an industrial and economic system dedicated to the common good.

As an expression of the specific ideals for which the churches should stand in seeking to bring in this better social order, we would point to those articles of the recently revised Social Ideals of the Churches, which deal with economic questions. They include the following declarations:

The Churches Should Strive For

"Practical application of the Christian principle of social well-being to the acquisition and use of wealth; subordination of speculation and the profit motive to the creative and co-operative spirit.

"Social planning and control of the credit and monetary systems and the economic processes for the common good.

"The right of all to the opportunity for self-maintenance; a wider and fairer distribution of wealth; a living wage, as a minimum, and above this a just share for the worker in the product of industry and agriculture.

"Safeguarding of all workers, urban and rural, against harmful conditions of labor and occupational injury and disease.

"Social insurance against sickness, accident, want in old age, and unemployment.

"Reduction of hours of labor as the general productivity of industry increases; release from employment one day in seven, with a shorter working week in prospect.

"Such special regulation of the conditions of work of women as shall safeguard their welfare and that of the family and the community.

"The right of employees and employers alike to organize for collective bargaining and social action; protection of both in the exercise of this right; the obligation of both to work for the public good; encouragement of cooperatives and other organizations among farmers and other groups.

"Abolition of child labor; adequate provisions for the protection, education, spiritual nurture and wholesome recreation of every child.

"Economic justice for the farmer in legislation, financing, transportation and the price of farm products as compared with the cost of machinery and other commodities which he must buy.

"Justice, opportunity and equal rights for all; mutual good-will and co-operation among racial, economic and religious groups.

"Repudiation of war, drastic reduction of armaments, participation in international agencies for the peaceable settlement of all controversies; the building of a co-operative world order.

"Recognition and maintenance of the rights and responsibilities of free speech, free assembly, and a free press; the encouragement of free communication of mind with mind as essential to the discovery of truth."

No one can contemplate the profound changes involved in any successful carrying out of these Social Ideals without realizing that they make unprecedented demands upon the moral capacity of individual leaders and the whole people. What we lack in order to accomplish these ends, is neither material resources, nor technical skill—these we have in superabundance—but a dedication to the common good, a courage and an unselfishness greater than are now manifest in American life.

If violence and bitterness are to be avoided in the process of social change, the privileged must actively participate in the movement toward economic justice, thus creating a spirit of fellowship instead of conflict in social progress. A heavy obligation also rests upon labor and its leaders to establish and maintain a co-operative relationship in the economic process. It is the church's business to teach, to inspire, to provide the moral and spiritual dynamic for basic change. The time is at hand. Lest blind selfishness destroy civilization, let us move forward more boldly in our economic life to the realization of our ideals of justice and human brotherhood.

JOSEPH REID BINGHAM

AN APPRECIATION

By Rev. W. L. Duren, D.D.

The subject of this sketch, in addition to being one of the sanest and most lovable men I have ever known, was my long-time personal and loyal friend. I can not write of him in other than an intimate and personal way; for it was thus that we lived and talked for more than thirty years. He was in no small degree the inspiration of my life, and he was my associate and counselor in all the writings that I have done. Among his papers are copies of sermons and addresses of mine; of the manuscripts of the books which I have published; and of manuscripts which are as yet uncompleted. Thus we thought and wrought together until his last day on earth.

When the hour of separation comes, it is then that we realize the place and value of those whom we designate as friends. There may be few or many, according to the attractiveness of our own personality; but the number of those choice spirits, whose lives become intertwined with our own, is always small. No task can be more difficult than that of committing to the printed page feelings and appreciations which have been fashioned upon the anvil of human circumstance, and which have been tried in the holy fires of long-continued and unbroken friendship. There is, indeed, no language for recording the feelings and impulses of those to whom friend has become a synonym for faith.

We speak in a conventional way and say that Mr. Bingham had lived longer than the allotted span of human years; but, after all, what true relation to life have the drab points of beginning and departure? A great and worthy life can not be dated—it is ever a brilliant glow upon the horizon, and the question of aspiring hearts is not "When?" but "What?" For what we are opens a field into which one may thrust in his sickle and reap. The meaning of Mr. Bingham's earthly sojourn will not be measured in years, but by his splendid life through which he brought something of inestimable value to the people among whom he lived. It was this that summoned the throng who paid tribute at the bier of their ascended friend; and those who knew his refining touch will linger long in their meditations upon his noble life and work.

He was a native product of Carroll County, Mississippi. There he was born, there he spent his days, and there his body sleeps. For many years he was a business man with large interests, and some of his greatest friends were made in his business contacts. He was public-spirited and generous, and in nothing needful for community development did he withhold his hand. As a Sunday school superintendent, he presided over the spiritual instruction of a generation who now rise up to call him blessed. His ability and worth received wide recognition in his church; but no responsibility ever came to him as the result of his own seeking, and he retained no place beyond the moment when he felt that his work was done. He led the Twentieth Century Fund campaign for education in Mississippi, as his correspondence shows, when it was pressed upon him.

Mr. Bingham's high sense of honor, as well as his great interest in public affairs, made him keenly sensitive lest any impairment of health or other impediment, should hinder the progress of interests which he had been chosen to promote. Once, when he had serious illness in his home, he sought to surrender an important connectional position which he held; and when his health gave way last autumn he promptly tendered his resignation as a member and as chairman of the Board for the Hospital for the Insane in Mississippi. And one of the last acts of his life was to resign from the Vanderbilt Board of Trust, because he was unwilling to allow the University to be deprived of the counsel which he was unable to give. In all things and always, he held himself responsible for an honorable attitude toward every trust, and his course through life was in keeping with that policy.

The home and the early environment of Mr. Bingham contributed a fair part to the making of the man; but his education, measured in terms of school attendance or college semesters, would not make an impressive record. Nevertheless, he had one of the best furnished minds I have ever come in contact with, and his literary appreciation was little less than a marvel. He attained a culture in letters which made him easy and interesting everywhere; and he made illuminating contribution to any discussion or circle of which he was a part. His knowledge and use of words were discriminating, and he possessed an understanding of history and literature which was greater even than some with imposing literary credentials in the form of academic degrees. He was at home in the life and thinking of the world.

But, for all his polish and culture, the modesty of his soul was never once betrayed into an expression of pride in his attainments. He lived in a world where pomp was popular, and in an age when achievement was divine; but never once, either in conversation or correspondence, did I hear from his lips even a word concerning developments for which he was entitled to so large a measure of personal credit. Whatever pride he may have felt in such things was dissolved in the radiance of a personality that needed neither boasting nor contrast with a period of culture deficiency.

His love for the Methodist Church was truly a passion, intelligent rather than sentimental; and it found fruitful expression in a loyalty and service extending over more than fifty years. A more impressive feature of his devotion was his sacrificial giving. The volume and variety of his gifts will not be known until it shall be revealed by the Recording Angel. He did all that he could to encourage and develop a capable ministry for his Church; and he sought out those who professed a call to preach and admonished them to make full preparation before entering upon their sacred task. Where he found a lack of funds, he generously made it possible to meet the deficiency, and upon terms neither difficult nor embarrassing. Here, as elsewhere, the story of his splendid generosity was a closed book.

Mr. Bingham's devotion had its mystical as well as its practical side. He loved the service and the literature of the Church, and he was specially moved by great hymns. Many years ago he wrote asking me to find for him that daring hymn of Charles Wesley, containing the stanza:

"My dear Redeemer, and my God,
I stake my soul on the free grace;
Take back my interest in Thy blood
Unless it streams for all the race.
I stake my soul on this alone,
Thy blood did once for all atone."

On another occasion, in replying to a letter which I had written him at the time of his brother's death, he said that he felt, as he had never done before, the comfort and support of George Matheson's hymn:

"O love that wilt not let me go,
I rest my weary soul in thee."

To one of his pastors he expressed profound appreciation of that majestic hymn of Isaac Watts:

"When I survey the wondrous cross
On which the Prince of Glory died,
My richest gain I count but loss,
And pour contempt on all my pride."

Not many months before the beginning of his fatal illness, we were together in Nashville and I showed him a letter written by Bishop Soule. He was instantly gripped by what he termed its "apostolic fervor and tone." These instances are sufficient to show how thoroughly his soul was steeped in the devotional literature and thought of his Church.

I know of nothing connected with Mr. Bingham and his Carrollton home more beautiful and impressive than the revelations made in a bundle of letters from the lamented Bishop Galloway, whom he called "Our Great Heart." Upon every page of those letters, covering more than twenty-five years, are the marks of a confidence and an affection never bestowed upon any but great souls. The letters have none of the reservation and caution characteristic of a great leader; and at the end they always break into a beautiful cadence of trust and personal affection, "Best love to all at home."

He had an affectionate nature and, as a consequence, he was keenly sensitive to injury and injustice, whether done to himself or to those whom he loved. But he held himself above that bitterness and rancor in which small souls take refuge. He suffered, as any devoted man with convictions will, but he had the spiritual poise and grace necessary for his hour of conflict. He learned through bitter experience that,

"The mark of rank, in nature, is capacity for pain; On the anguish of the singer hangs the sweetness of the strain."

I have known Carroll County and its people for more than half a century, and I do not forget the illustrious men who proudly acknowledged it as home. It is my deliberate judgment, however, that the influence of no other upon the people as a whole was so great or will be so lasting as the life and example of this splendid man whose recent going fills our hearts with gloom. The world builds mausoleums for emperors and establishes memorials for the commanders of war legions; but it betrays little interest in those humble and devoted souls without whose love and toil there would be nothing to rule and little for which to fight. But, at the roll-call of the heroes of faith, "jewels" of the Lord of Hosts, the name of Reid Bingham will be heard in the heavenly courts.

On July 23, 1904, Bishop Galloway wrote: "Awaiting here in this Sunday Doorway of the Dominion, for the sailing of the good ship Empress of India, I send you and all the household at Carrollton an affectionate goodbye." Our dear and noble friend lingered for a time in the sunset doorway of life; but the good ship has crossed the bar and, through the gloom, we have heard his last goodbye. We know that he will not come back; but we confidently expect ere long to hear his happy "Hail," and "Good morning."

JOHN WESLEY REDISCOVERED

By Dr. L. O. Hartman, Editor

No figure in the last two hundred years of history has grown in the estimation of the world as has John Wesley. During the last decade particularly his place in the small group of England's greatest leaders has been definitely established, and he is no longer known simply as the "founder of Methodism" but is recognized as one of the world's outstanding personalities. No one today could name the six most distinguished men in the history of the English people and omit the name of John Wesley.

As one of the evidences of the new appreciation of the greatness of this eminent son of Oxford, we have but to point to the large number of books published within the ten-year period from 1923 to 1933 which treat of his life and work. Here is a list of seventeen titles of new volumes that have appeared during the decade which deal with Wesley and his movement:

"John Wesley: A Portrait," Abram Lipsky.
"John Wesley," Arnold Lunn.
"The Lord's Horseman," Umphrey Lee.
"John Wesley," C. E. Vulliamy.
"John Wesley," John Donald Wade.
"John Wesley," James Laver.
"John Wesley," William Wakinshaw.
"John Wesley," Bonamy Dobree.
"John Wesley and the Eighteenth Century: A Study of His Social and Political Influence," Maudwyn Edwards.
"Wesley as a World Force," J. Telford.
"Wesley's Legacy to the World," J. E. Rattenbury.
"Studies in the Life of John Wesley," E. B. Chappell.
"Love Stories of John Wesley," Joseph Cooper.
"Voices of the New Room," Thomas Ferrier Hulme.
"John Wesley Among the Scientists," Frank W. Collier.
"The Psychology of the Methodist Revival," S. G. Dimond.
"The Letters of John Wesley" (eight volumes).
Doubtless other recent books on Wesley could be added to the foregoing works, but these volumes are sufficient to show that the appreciation of Wesley's greatness is growing rapidly with the passing of the years.

Turning to an analysis of these new studies of England's great religious leader, it is clear that they were not written in any partisan spirit, nor are they the works of "insiders" who have vested interests, but they are careful discussions of Wesley's life, and the great revival of which he was the inspiring and organizing genius. It is rather remarkable that Wesley has thus far completely escaped the biographical debunkers. Not much has been done even in psychoanalyzing him, though Abram Lipsky penetrates deeply but with great respect into the psychological processes of the founder. S. G. Dimond has given us a thoroughly scientific study of the great awakening in England and has shown how deep and thoroughgoing was his revival whose beneficent results are still with us. Who has thought much about the science of Wesley? Dr. Collier has opened up a new vein of rewarding research in his excellent book, "The Lord's Horseman" is a thrilling biography. Probably the greatest contribution to the Wesleyan bibliography in the decade, however, is the "Letters," which furnish a wealth of new, first-hand information about this tireless servant of God.

Why is the sense of the greatness of John Wesley growing so rapidly upon the world? Because at last we are beginning to evaluate him in his true perspective. Heretofore we have been too close to him to see him as he actually was. We have cited his accomplishments and treasured his writings, to be sure, but we have not looked at him in his true setting in the history of England and of the world. Now, after a century and a half, his mighty figure looms up before us, dominating the age in which he lived.

No one can read those pulsating letters of his and fail to sense the utter consecration of the man. He made a business of prayer. It was the habit of his life. Enegr? Was there ever a man since St. Paul so tireless, so enduring? Study his mind. Mark the range of its interests, its familiarity with all the knowable research of his day. Mark also the hospitality and tolerance of that mind—a true sign of greatness. He understood human nature, he yearned for souls. His spirit was kind and crystal-clear. But he was practical. Distantly related to the Duke of Wellington, he equalled, if he did not surpass, the hero of Waterloo in organizing ability. He had a velvet-covered hand of steel and he used it to marshal and command the forces of the Kingdom of God. Yes, here was a truly great man.—Zion's Herald.

Mississippi Conference Lay Leader.

THE ALERT METHODIST PREACHER

Methodist preachers from the days of Jesse Leo have enjoyed the distinction of being equal to any and every emergency. But this fine resourcefulness is not limited to the pioneers. Those of the present day are worthy the record of the pioneers, as the following story serves to show. According to the Pacific Methodist Advocate, a pastor in Southern Illinois went to spend the night with a member of his church and just before bedtime he said to his host: "Brother, if you will bring me the Bible I will read a chapter; we will have prayer, and I will go to bed."

"We have no Bible."

"Well, bring me a Testament then."

"We have no Testament."

"Well, bring me the church paper, and I will read you something out of that."

"We never take the church paper; it costs too much. Besides we never have any time to read it."

"You haven't a Bible, not even a Testament, you say you are too poor to take the church paper, and you haven't any time to read it? Brother, there is only one thing I can do for you."

So he reached into his pocket, pulled out his Discipline, and read the service for the burial of the dead.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

THE COMMONWEAL GOES FORWARD

The Commonwealth of this city, is one of the best American journals interpreting, from the Roman Catholic point of view, current events and opinions in literature, the arts of public affairs. Under the pressure of hard times it has lost circulation and advertising and has incurred a heavy deficit, which threatens its existence. The Protestant religious press holds the paper in high esteem, and is watching with sympathy its struggle to keep its head above water. Two months ago The Commonwealth stated its desperate case and appealed to its friends for help. The response was prompt. More than 1,000 of its 20,000 subscribers sent in checks. The sum of $17,000 has already been received, mostly in sums of $25 and under, though a few gave $100 or over.—New York Christian Advocate.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

The parsonage at Tupelo, Miss., has been painted recently.

Rev. A. T. McIlwain, Columbus, Miss., has assisted in revival meetings at Caledonia, Steens, and Mashulaville, Miss.

The Springhill, La., pastor, Rev. E. C. Dufresne, says, "Our work is still moving along nicely." That is as it should be.

There are serious threats that a new parsonage will be ready ere long at East End, Meridian. Rev. P. M. Caraway is pastor.

Four young men were granted licenses to preach at a meeting of the Licensing Committee of the Columbus District recently.

Mr. John Campbell, son of Rev. J. F. Campbell, our pastor at Crawford, St., Vicksburg, was a caller at our office last week.

Dr. J. R. Countiss conducted a revival for Rev. W. I. White on Red Banks charge, North Mississippi, the second week in August.

Have you read Dr. Poling's "John Barleycorn"? If you have not you better get a copy and read it. Where? You can get it at this office.

They still write me about the terrible error about Lazarus. Be sure to read the issue following that one, and let me have a little peace.

W. B. Baker, Durant, Miss., sends a list of subscriptions and good wishes for our Eightieth Anniversary. His faith and works come together.

Dr. R. H. Harner, pastor First Church, Baton Rouge, filled the pulpit of the Carrollton Presbyterian Church, New Orleans, last Sunday morning.

Rev. T. M. Bradley joined some of his friends from his church at West Point, Miss., and spent part of his vacation at a camp on the river nearby.

Word has just reached us of the passing, in Evansville, Ind., of Mr. H. B. Walton, brother of Rev. R. S. Walton, pastor of our church at Amite, La.

We acknowledge greetings, congratulations and good wishes from Mrs. Porter Laird, Alexandria, La. She says the Advocate is worth twice the price.

"My Responsibility" and "The Reward of the Faithful Servant" were themes of recent sermons by Rev. Claude K. Smith, pastor at First Church, Crowley, La.

Miss Alpha Puckett, Secretary First Church, Baton Rouge, was an appreciated caller last week. Miss Puckett brought a nice list of subscriptions from her church.

Many subscribers who were behind with their subscriptions are catching up. This is a part of the Eightieth Anniversary celebration. Come on with yours. Renew at One Dollar a year.

The Y. M. C. A. at Vicksburg, Miss., is sponsoring an all-expense tour to the World's Fair at Chicago for only $39.00. See advertisement on page 8.

Dr. B. F. Jones is the "colonel" for the Advocate up at Brookhaven, Miss. First thing you know he will have in a list of subscriptions that will put Brookhaven in the center of the map.

Mr. W. D. Hawkins, District Lay Leader, Meridian District, almost always tells the truth. He says recently that he sent us a program of a meeting but never did see it in the Advocate. Well, the program just did not reach us. But Uncle Sam is the goat this time. Sometimes he misplaces things in the mails. Brother Hawkins is very much alive up in his district.

Mr. J. P. Drake, charge lay leader at Bay St. Louis, Miss., along with some subscriptions, sends greetings and good wishes to Louisiana people who spend a part of their summer days over there.

News from Rev. B. P. Jacob, Raymonville, Texas, is encouraging. He teaches a men's Bible class and is studying all the time. He had that method of work all during his active pastorate in North Mississippi.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

The church at Aberdeen, Miss., is making plans to celebrate its Centenary in 1934. It might be interesting to know just how many other churches in Mississippi and Louisiana have been organized as long as one hundred years.

Dr. D. M. Key, President of Millsaps College, has gone to Lake Junaluska to address a conference of Southern Methodist educators. This meeting was called by our General Board of Christian Education.

Dr. and Mrs. Geo. F. Winfield, Whitworth College, accompanied by their niece, Miss Evelyn Langston, and Miss Clara Cox, recently left for a few days in Texas. Miss Cox will spend some time in Shreveport and Fort Worth.

"I will rejoice if the Advocate can get back to its former size. It has been coming to my home since I was a tiny baby, and I intend that it shall be a visitor until I pass over the river. Mrs. M. C. Bell, Cary, Miss."

Mrs. Florence Travis, Liberty, Miss., renewing her subscription, says, "God bless the Advocate." You will all say, "Amen." But for fear you may let it stop there, go out and get those subscriptions so the Lord can answer your prayer.

Are you supporting the camps of our young people? Let us grow and train a generation of young Methodists who will be able, both from the standpoint of Christian experience and training, to guide the old ship into the big waters of the future.

Dr. Franklin N. Parker, Dean of the Candler School of Theology, Emory University, was a caller in the city last week. On last Sunday he filled the pulpit of First Church, Baton Rouge. With members of his family Dr. Parker was making an automobile trip through his home section.

Dr. V. C. Curtis has fixed up a fine little camp house on the Tombigbee river near Columbus, Miss., where he and his wife spend many happy days. Brother Curtis is reported to make many efforts at fishing and hunting but we have had no report as to any fish caught or game bagged.

Rev. C. L. Rogers is making full proof of his ministry at Central Church, Columbus, Miss. He has splendid assistance from his accomplished companion and his fine son and daughter. His son, a sophomore at Millsaps next year, is a gifted leader of song.

Rev. W. C. Beasley, our pastor at Cold Water, Miss., is one of the diligent pastors of his Conference. Brother Beasley spent several years in the Conference and then took up his course of studies at the University of Mississippi and graduated there with credit.

Hall Summit, La., Rev. R. A. Bozeman speaking: "We have just closed a fine meeting at Prospect with Rev. C. F. Sheppard. Four babies baptized, eight received into the church, eight promised to tithe, ten promised to take the Advocate." Brother Bozeman is in a meeting at Hall Summit.

Rev. B. C. Taylor, pastor at Natchitoches, La., reports from the "Century of Progress Exposition" that he has found out that we live in a big world. That is encouraging. So many of us preachers live as though it were quite a small affair after all. He says he has heard Gypsy Smith at Moody's church.

Miss Amelia Ruxton, head of the Department of Expression, Whitworth College, is in Chicago arranging for the historical pageant, "A Century of Progress in Woman's Education," which Whitworth is planning to stage at the "Century of Progress Exposition" on Mississippi Day, September 21.

James Lipscomb, a ministerial student, preached for Rev. T. M. Bradley at West Point, Miss., the last Sunday in July. Those who heard the sermon report that he possesses some gifts for the work. This young man is the youngest son of the late Rev. T. H. Lipscomb of North Mississippi Conference.

I see in the papers that Miss Minnie Rae Sells, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Jas. L. Sells, Port Gibson, Miss., is to be married to Mr. Jas. G. Faulk, of Port Gibson. Miss Sells is a graduate of Whitworth College where she was very popular with her fellow students. The Advocate stands by with flowers and good wishes.

We regret to hear of the painful accident sustained by the eighteen year old son of Rev. J. A. Bittle, our pastor at Greenwood Springs, Miss. The young man was injured while hauling a heavy load on a truck, a piece of iron bar striking him on the chin, shattering the jaw-bone and knocking several of his teeth out.

The Conferences are beginning to be held over the church. The first one was the Pacific Conference. News from it heartens us when we hear that a fine percentage was paid on the benevolences. We MUST do better all over the church if we are to keep up our work. Methodist pastors and laymen must pull this year as never before for our connectional causes.

Mrs. C. M. Martin, Meridian, Miss., has been in charge of the Wesley House during the vacation of Miss Trawick, superintendent. She makes a very interesting report of the work being done there. Mrs. Martin should be remembered for her success in securing, some time ago, thirty-seven subscriptions for the Advocate among the members of East End Church.

Rev. W. C. McCay, pastor at Baldwin, Miss., is working with his home people. He was reared at Baldwin, Miss., served as Sunday school superintendent and now is their pastor. He has been very busy this summer in revival work on his own charge and has helped some of his brethren. Baldwin has a fine new church. The name of Rev. J. J. Garner appears on the corner stone as being pastor when it was erected.

"A group of interested citizens arranged to have Sergeant Alvin C. York, whom General Pershing called, 'The greatest civilian soldier of the war,' and to whom Marshall Foch said, 'What you did was the greatest thing accomplished by any private soldier of the armies of Europe,' speak to a statewide meeting of those interested

In temperance and prohibition in Jackson, Miss., on Friday night, August 11, at Poindeexter Park.
—Lincoln County Times.

"The Advocate has been coming out of your office under the name of Crossley for about sixty-five years, first in my father's name. At his death it was changed to mother, and since her passing it has been coming to me personally for forty years. It would be no less than a tragedy to discontinue it, particularly now when it is so much needed. I am at work on my quota and hope to report soon.—C. M. Crossley, Newton, Miss." Such spirit knows no failure.

Mr. John Robertson, aged 85, died at his home in Black Hawk, Miss., following a brief illness. "Uncle John," as he was affectionately known, was a native of South Carolina, and a veteran of the War between the States, having served with the Confederate Volunteers of his native state. He was a resident of Carroll County, Miss., for more than sixty years during which time he led a consistent Christian life. Funeral service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. R. L. Ellis, from the Black Hawk Methodist Church.

Dr. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder, Columbus District, is planning a pastors' meeting for the pastors of his district early in September at the Camp Ground near Ackerman, Miss., for the purpose of making definite plans for the closing out of the Conference year. They plan to do some definite work of the Institute nature, such as: "How to get Stewards to work," "What kind of men to select for officials," "When should an official be changed?" and many other types of work the pastors have to deal with at this time of year.

The Bulletin of our church at Long Beach, Miss., Rev. G. E. Allan, pastor, shows that Rev. D. F. Anders, our pastor at Slaughter and Zachary La., was the preacher in that pulpit recently. At the bottom of the bulletin this caught our eyes: "Another N. R. A. is needed to assist the Blue Eagle if we are to have real recovery. May this other N. R. A. be NATIONAL RELIGIOUS ACTIVITY, with each Church Member able to say truthfully, 'WE DO OUR PART.'" We say Amen and apply for membership. Come on, all of you.

"Earning While Learning" is still the slogan at Millsaps College. "Rooms in the college dormitories, more attractive this year than ever before, because of the extensive program of retinishing and repair carried on this summer." Why, they say that a freshman can get a room in Founder's Hall for as low as $25 for the school year. My, how I'd like to call back a few years and "go to college" again. Yes, I'd take all the courses "gauntlet" and all, just to be a freshman again. You better write to Millsaps and get your boy in this fall.

This man Rev. H. A. Gatlin, pastor at Columbia, Miss., writes to us saying, "I want to do some real work for the Advocate." That is like a cool breeze when the thermometer hits the ceiling. With every pastor doing that, why—Well, I just hesitate to say what would happen for the Advocate. We have reserved a place on the Honor Roll for these churches, and several others: Gallo-way Memorial, and Capitol Street, Jackson, Miss.; First Church, Gulfport; First Church and Noel Memorial, Shreveport, La.; Alexandria; Rayne Memorial, New Orleans; Starkville; Central, Meridian; Grenada; Mansfield, and First Church, Baton Rouge. No one of these churches should let itself off with less than one hundred subscriptions. If these pastors don't make a big move we may continue to love them, but we certainly cannot afford to support them for Bishop.

A CENTURY OF PROGRESS IN THE HIGHER EDUCATION OF WOMEN

The above is the title of a very beautiful pageant which has been written by Mrs. Janie Drake Cooper of Church Hill, Miss. This pageant was written in celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of Whitworth College.

The author of the pageant is the logical person to have produced this play. She is the granddaughter of Rev. B. M. Drake, the most outstanding president of Elizabeth Academy to which Whitworth College is successor. Elizabeth Academy was founded at Old Washington in 1818, and was given to the Mississippi Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by Mrs. Elizabeth Roach. This was the first institution to be chartered by the new State of Mississippi, 1819. In 1826 Elizabeth Academy, which by charter right had the privilege of offering whatever curriculum the Board of Trustees might provide, began conferring the Mistress of Science degree. It is said that this was the first degree to be conferred upon a woman by any institution of learning.

Another fact that makes Mrs. Cooper, widow of the late Dr. J. W. Cooper of the Mississippi Annual Conference, the best person qualified for the task is that for twenty-three years she was connected with Whitworth College, first as head of the English Department and then as Dean of the college. In both of these positions Mrs. Cooper rendered very valuable service.

At Whitworth College Mrs. Anne Coleman Pappan was graduated with honors and later became a member of the faculty. In turn she became the founder of Mississippi State College for Women, which is the oldest tax-supported college for women in the world.

This thrilling story is to be told through the pageant that is to be staged on the campus of Whitworth College, November 17, 1933, during the session of Mississippi Annual Conference at Brookhaven.

The management of the World's Fair has invited the college to stage this pageant in the "Court of States" as a part of the Mississippi Day celebration, September 23. The faculty and students of Whitworth College will attend the Century of Progress Exhibit in a body where they will spend a week viewing the colossal exhibits of a hundred years of progress in the various lines of human activities.

NO OTHER PLAN

The other day one of our Advocate editors said, "Let us not suppose there is some other plan to which we can turn and solve our problem. The effort that will make another plan succeed measurably will make this plan succeed marvelously. The inertia that lets this undertaking fail will foredoom any other attempt to defeat."

Hear him. He is right. What we need is not a new plan but a new purpose and a new effort. Surely we Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi are not going to be guilty of "passing the buck." Surely we are not going to say, "Let George do it."

Let us rally to our Eightieth Anniversary plan, concentrating our whole attention upon it. Who would want us in on any sort of a plan if we cannot run our own affairs?

DR. LEGGETT'S DISTRICT LEADS

The Hattiesburg District, under the leadership of Dr. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder, leads all the others in quota of subscriptions with which to celebrate the Eightieth Anniversary of the Advocate. Every pastor replied with a quota, the total being 260 for the district.

That does not mean that this fine record may not be beaten by some other district in the final run-off as some of the presiding elders and pastors set up the quota as a minimum. They will beat it.

We congratulate these presiding elders who have responded so generously to the Eightieth Anniversary, and these pastors who have replied with such unanimity to the request of their presiding elders.

REV. OTTO PORTER SECOND WITH W. L. DUREN AND H. G. HAWKINS CLOSE BEHIND

With 100% responses from the pastors of the Seashore District, Rev. Otto Porter, presiding elder, reports a total of 190 subscriptions pledged by his pastors on the Eightieth Anniversary Offer Campaign.

Not far behind with responses from 90% of the pastors, are the New Orleans District and the Vicksburg District. Rev. W. L. Duren and H. G. Hawkins are the respective presiding elders.

JAMES GRAMBLING, JR., DIES OF ACCIDENT

On last Friday morning, just before noon, James Grambling, Jr., son of Rev. James B. Grambling, our pastor at Mer Rouge, La., while playing with some other boys with what was thought to be an unloaded pistol, was accidentally shot. He was immediately rushed to a hospital in Monroe where he died the following morning at six o'clock.

Brother Grambling and wife, with a party of friends, were spending a few days at Winona Lake, Ind., after having visited the Exposition at Chicago, and reached home a short time after the fatal accident occurred.

Funeral services were held in the Methodist Church at Mer Rouge, La., Revs. H. T. Carley, W. C. Scott and W. L. Duren officiating. Interment was at Ruston, La.

The Advocate family will please sustain Brother and Sister Grambling with their prayers.

THE PAPERS SAY THAT—

Women using cosmetics in the United States will be barred from lower grades of Navy and Army aviation, according to a new regulation issued from the army.

That will be good for the noses as well as the Nazis.

Hoover's new town, built also called a recent election defeat of the proposal to build the sale of beer in the township which includes Stanford University and the home of former President Herbert Hoover.

Well, Hoover may have been drier than some thought. Wonder what would have happened had he seriously tried to make and keep our country dry?

Some visitors from Grenada, Miss., to the Chicago Exposition were fired upon by bandits as they were leaving for home, two of whom were wounded.

There are lots of hoodlums in Chicago, but this drive on crime should be a matter of every community's interest and action. There is no way of keeping a criminal in one community, just as the states cannot handle the liquor question alone. We are living in new circumstances and we had just as well make our arrangements accordingly.

Senator Huey P. Long is losing prestige in his own state and it seems that he never has landed much national prestige.

Well, let us hope that the efforts to dislodge him may not be prompted by the motives with which opponents are disposed to charge him. Do you not grow tired of this political plum business? Would not some broad-gage statesmanship be a relief? But it is peanut citizens that make peanut politicians. We have the kind of government we deserve, eh?

The Emperor of Japan has sailed out with one of his fleets to meet another in sham battle.

Why not? That is one way of rattling the sword by which all nations given to military violence must ultimately perish. This whole business of big navies must finally be settled at the point of greatest values. As soon as we can see that human values and international goodwill are the primary values, then we shall not concern ourselves about maximum treaty allowances, but with the things that make for peace.

The British government has decided to permit Gandhi to go ahead with his efforts to regenerate the "untouchables," and that this and other concessions mean that he will not enter upon his threatened fast. Gandhi speaks of the voice of God calling to him and bidding him to go forward with his work. He is quoted as saying, "I might as well be dead if I am not allowed to proceed with my work, which is my very life."

Of course, those 60,000,000 "untouchables," whose life is the most degraded imaginable, do not amount to much. What are they worth, anyhow? And Gandhi. Well, I agree that his theology is a bit out of line, and that Dr. Steel is correct in recommending more clothes. (I am not so strong for the latter since these hot August days set in). But I must be permitted to take off my hat to that little old black cinder of a ninety-pound man, who without guns and without hate, muscles out Great Britain in one hand and in the other his own 300,000,000 Indians, and lifts them both out of age-old traditions and customs and shoulders them all toward God and a better day. And I shall be able to take, with much better patience, this Christian criticism of Gandhi when we Christians a little more seriously undertake our religion and present a few more examples lifting humanity as Gandhi is trying to do.

Encouraging reports are coming from every part of the Conference pertaining to the work. We are making some progress along every line. Our Sunday schools are being more largely attended than at this time of the year in previous years in many of our churches from which we have heard reports, and no doubt in many more. Many new Sunday schools have been organized in the Conference, a number of them for the first time. New Young People's organizations in the local churches are being organized and there is a very live interest in this important work. Recently very fine Young People's Unions have been held in the Aberdeen, Columbus, Greenwood and Sardis-Grenada districts. Some of these are newly organized unions. Daily Vacation Church Schools have been held in increasing numbers. These have been of a much better type as a rule than previously. Our Conference is among the leading Conferences in this work and if we get a report from every school this year we should lead again this year. If you need a report blank for reporting your school, write to me and I will send you one.

It was my pleasure to teach a Cokesbury Class and do the preaching for the revival at Tillatobia last week. We had a nice class and a most splendid response on the part of the people. Rev. E. L. Jernigan is doing a most constructive piece of work on the Oakland charge. He has had revivals in all of his churches, three Cokesbury classes and two vacation schools.

WOMEN'S PAINS

EASED QUICKER
BY LIQUID MEDICINE

Why prolong your discomfort waiting for solid pain remedies to dissolve in your stomach? When you take Capudine for periodic pain, rheumatic or neuralgic pain, headaches, or aches due to colds, you needn't wait for relief because Capudine is liquid and its ingredients are already dissolved. Your system absorbs them at once. Soothing relief follows immediately.

Get Rid of Malaria!

Banish Chills and Fever!

To conquer Malaria, you must do two things. (1) Destroy the infection in the blood. (2) Build up the blood to overcome the effects and to fortify against further attack. There is one medicine that does these two things and that is Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic! The tasteless quinine in Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic destroys the malarial infection in the blood while the iron builds up the blood. Thousands of people have conquered Malaria with the aid of Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. In addition to being a noted remedy for Malaria, it is also an excellent tonic of general use. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is pleasant to take and contains nothing harmful. Even children like it and they can take it safely. For sale by all stores.

These fine people are rallying to his helpful leadership.

A few weeks ago I was with Brother A. L. Davenport on the Tyro charge when we attempted to hold a revival at Free Springs Church. The meeting had begun with some promise when the rain began, and we were rained and muddled out. But it was a real pleasure to be with Brother Davenport and his good people. He is closing four years of very fine work on this charge.

Two Bible Conferences have been arranged for the first week of September. They are as follows: Lexington, Sept. 3-6, and Cleveland, Sept. 7-10. Dr. Thomas Carter will be the Bible lecturer. We have no greater Bible student than Dr. Carter. These conferences will be for all the surrounding territory and will be held under the leadership of the Adult Bible Classes of the districts in which they meet. Be sure and attend these meetings.

A Standard Training School will be held at Tunica Sept. 3-8. The following courses will be offered: "Stewardship," Rev. S. H. Caffey, instructor; "The Life of Christ," Rev. W. L. Robinson, instructor; "Christian Education in the Local Church," Rev. R. G. Lord, instructor. This school will take in the upper end of the Greenwood district and the Lake Cormorant charge of the Sardis-Grenada district. The workers of this territory should avail themselves of the opportunity for training.

Pray for us and for the work.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE YOUNG PEOPLE'S NEWS

Hello, young people! How's the world treating you? Fall is fast on its way, and with fall comes football, and school, and—Election of Officers! And, just guessing, I'll bet you haven't bothered yourself one little bit about who your officers will be. Well, now's the time to start. If it's your department, you'll want your officers to be the best you can get. And in connection with election of officers, your Conference President suggests that we have classes for officers-elect. They could include the new cabinets of the individual chapters and the Union; would be held sometime during the latter part of September just before the officers are installed, last for two or three nights, and in Ernest's words, "would be a round table discussion, bringing out possible points of confusion, specifying duties, and mapping out a tentative program for the coming year." That's an idea every Union ought to jump at. A real opportunity for service. Maybe you could have these round tables quarterly. Go on, do something about it!

We see further from "Unionnews"—"further," because that's where we got Ernest's suggestion—that St. Mark's Young People are continuing to supply milk to a needy family. How about your Social Service work? Or do you have any?

We heard from Miss Sue Bill Sherwin of Coushatta concerning the meeting of the High Road Union of Shreveport District, which is "presided" by Miss Florence Murphy. Well, they met on the thirteenth, at Keithville, with about fifty present. Their "something different" was a play—"A Still, Small Voice," presented by Young People. Something Different is the thing we need in all our Young People's services. You can't logically expect intelligent young people to sit through dull, routine stuff at every meeting. Now can you.

Miss Sherwin also tells us of the Institute which the Harmon young People are sponsoring for those sixteen through twenty-three, on September 1-2-3. District Director, Pauline Rodgers will be Dean, and one Christian Culture Credit may be earned. They are planning on having Misses Hazel Lea Nowell and Ruth Lowery for teachers. And the only expenses will be for books and perhaps one chicken supper. They'll see to the rest. Everybody is invited. Better go!

And from the Ruston District, Miss Grace Jones, we hear many things. A new Union has been organized—the A. W. Townsend Union, with Miss Julia Webb McGehee of Downsville as president (she's a former Hammond girl; bound to be the best)! A District Rally is to be held at Clay, with Dr. A. W. Turner speaking. A Christian Culture Institute is being held at Haynesville, sponsored by the All for Christ Union. That's quite a few things for one district to be doing at once, isn't it? Congratulations to Ruston District and Grace Jones.

One last thing to leave with you. It's something I heard a Boy Scout Executive say at an out-of-door campfire: "See these trees all around us? We know they're alive because they're growing. How can people tell that you're alive?" So long!

HOW TO GET ADVOCATE SUBSCRIPTIONS

So many people have asked me how I got my number, especially preachers. I tell them maybe they don't have the right speech. They told me to give it to them and here it is. A man decided he would have to cut expenses. He and his wife talked it over and of course since the depression is on they would start economizing with something pertaining to the church. They thought they would borrow their neighbor's church paper. The father sent his boy across the street for the paper. He fell down and broke his arm. The father hearing his cry ran out and tore his trousers that cost $2.50 and broke his right leg as he fell. The mother hearing all the commotion ran to the rescue and the baby crawled out and fell in the well. While she was fishing it out the house caught fire and burned down. The comment is this: Don't borrow your church paper. Subscribe for it—it is cheaper.

REVIVALS AT GLENMORA AND OBERLIN, LA.

Our revival meeting was held at Oberlin June 6-19, with Rev. C. B. White, pastor at Wisner, La., doing the preaching. While there was no ingathering, the interest and attendance was good. Several years ago Brother White attended high school in Oberlin for a short while. It was a joy to friends of former years to have him back again. The music was fine with Miss Ray Baggett at the piano and her sister, Miss Mary Iles, accompanying on the violin.

Brother White also did the preaching in the Glenmora meeting, which ran from July 25 through Aug. 3. Glenmora is Brother White's home town. "Bud," as he is known throughout this section, is not without honor in his own county. He has a host of friends. Crowds came from the start. More than 500 were crowded into the church on the closing night. Brother White is an experienced evangelist and an inspiring preacher. There were 13 accessions; 12 on profession of faith and one by letter. This makes 21 additions for Glenmora this year. A choir of about 40 voices added much to the success of the meeting. Mr. D. C. Caruth led the choir while Mrs. Lydia Phillips and Mrs. A. R. Hyde rendered faithful service at the piano.

A PRAYER

Down by my bed I knelt
One cold dark winter night;
And I thought of the day that had passed;
And I thought not a thing went right.

I thought the world had gone wrong;
Because nothing seemed to be right
I thought everyone else was wrong
And I, myself, was right.

I prayed a selfish prayer,
"O God Thou knowest I'm good,
My thoughts are sweet and pure,
And my deeds are always good."

To that prayer no answer came,
And I gave up in despair;
But I thought perhaps I was wrong,
So I prayed another prayer.

"Dear Jesus, who lovest me,
Make me a better boy;
Help me to be good and kind,
And help give others joy."

Into my heart there came a light;
A light from Heaven above.
God heard and answered my prayer,
And sent me a heart full of love.

I saw myself as I really was;
How selfish I had been.
Now I loved those whom I had hated,
And everyone was my friend.

Mrs. A. R. Ruby, newly elected secretary of a zone in the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference, sends an interesting report of a meeting at Midway church. The new district secretary, Mrs. Norman F. Taylor, was present and urged continued work in the "Treasure Hunt" and "Fellowship Societies." The young people of Benton assisted in the program by giving a playlet. Rev. George H. Thompson conducted the devotional, the pastor Rev. L. D. Haughton, was also present and others who added interest to the occasion.

We consider the zone meetings of great value as in them the women learn by doing, the programs being put on by the women of the zone, using all the material furnished by literature headquarters from all departments of our work.

The following letters copied from our great magazine "The World Outlook" are not only inspiring but convincing of the worth of our mission work in Japan.

Dear Dr. Rawlings:

I have been so much impressed by the love and appreciation the Japanese show for Dr. Lambuth after all these years, and by the thought of what one man's influence can mean, that I felt moved to write you about these two meetings.

Forty-one years ago Dr. J. W. Lambuth died in Kobe, Japan. He lived and worked here for only five years; yet he still lives in the hearts of those he led to Christ, and the influence for good he exerted during those few years continues in their lives and in the lives of their children, grandchildren, friends, and acquaintances until only God himself can measure it.

Dr. Lambuth founded the Kobe Central Methodist Church, which has become the strongest Methodist church in Japan. One of its many organizations is a society for the older women of the church known as the "Kotobukikai" ("Long-Life Society"). A few weeks ago in the anniversary month of Dr. Lambuth's death, these ladies held a special meeting to honor his memory. His picture was placed in the front of the room and surrounded with flowers. Then these old ladies gathered around, and the years slipped away as, with tears in their eyes and joy in their hearts, they

Just 46 Pounds of Fat Gone

Feels 20 Years Younger

"I surely can recommend Kruschen Salts. I reduced from 156 to 110 lbs., my natural weight and I feel 20 years younger. 'A pinch a day, keeps the fat away.'" Mrs. Vale Walter, Seattle, Washington (Dec. 30, 1932).

Once a day take Kruschen Salts—one half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water first thing every morning. Besides losing ugly fat SAFELY you'll gain in health and physical attractiveness—constipation, gas and acidity will cease to bother you—you'll feel younger—more active—full of ambition—clear skin—sparkling eyes.

A jar that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle at any drugstore in the world—but demand and get Kruschen and if one bottle doesn't joyfully please you—money back.

talked together of this friend through whose influence they and their loved ones had been led to know and love the One who has become their best and dearest Friend.

Mrs. Nobu Jo, whose wonderful work for the women and girls is well known and who is called by some "the woman Kagawa," said that she first heard him preach when he was on an evangelistic trip in Matsuyama, and that she still remembers his sermon from the fifteenth chapter of John. She described him as a man who actually practiced the love of God.

Mrs. Nakamura, wife of an influential layman who died a few years ago, and mother of a large family, many of whom are workers in church and Sunday school, said: "Our family was led to Christ through Dr. Lambuth. If he had not come to Japan, what would we be today? I thank God that he came."

On April 28, the anniversary of Dr. Lambuth's death, the Central Methodist Church held special memorial services at his grave. Representatives from Kwansel Gakuin, the Lambuth Training School for Christian Workers, Palmore Institute, Palmore Women's Institute, the other Methodist churches in the city, and from another mission united with them to do honor to his memory.

Dr. Yoshioka, President Emeritus of Kwansel Gakuin, convert and friend of the Lambuths, told intimate, interesting details of Dr. Lambuth's life and character. He reminded us of the messages sent from his deathbed—messages which, please God, will stir us again as we hear them ringing down through the years, give us fresh inspiration, and arouse us to greater effort—to the Church in Japan, "Be thou faithful unto death," and to the Church in America, "I fall at my post. There is much work for us to do here. Send more men!"—The World Outlook.

Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Sirs: In the course of my hurried trip across the country, I have noticed in the many hotels in which I have stopped along the way the Bibles which your institution has placed in the rooms for the use of the guests. When I was stopping in Chicago, I asked the manager of the Drake Hotel if I might not take home with me as a souvenir the Bible which I found in my room, and he very kindly consented.

I am a Christian, and although I started as a Methodist, I am not of any particular sect or denomination. I have drawn my religion directly from my own readings of the Scriptures. That, I feel, can be done by any thinking, sincere person, and that is why I consider the work of your organization so valuable.

In order that I may, in a small way, contribute something to the high objects for which you are striving, I take pleasure in sending to you with this letter a modest check ($100.00), to be devoted to the furtherance of your cause.

HOLLINGSWORTH TO CHICAGO

Dear Editor: Please allow me to express through the columns of your good paper my profound appreciation to the loyal people of New Bethel Church, on the Brooksville charge, for giving their pastor a trip to the World's Fair in Chicago. One can hardly gain more profitable information in five or six days than he can at the World's Fair. It is well worth the money it costs and I hope to be able to use profitably the information I gained while there.

I saw only one man I knew and that was Rev. C. C. Norton, Ph.D., who is now teaching at Spartanburg, South Carolina. He was my class mate at Millsaps College. I really revelled in his company for the very brief time we were together.

Best wishes to you and the work you are doing. You may count on us for our pro rata share of the subscriptions for which you asked.

So much do I enjoy hearing from my brethren through these columns that I am also asking for space for these few lines.

GOD'S FLOWER

When we gather from our garden flowers for any occasion we want the rarest, most fragrant blossoms of all, the full bloom and the buds we gather there. So it is with God, my friends, when He comes to His garden gathering flowers for His home over there. He chooses from among us some flowers we hold most precious and fair. We oft times think He's unfair, but remember friends we know not His purpose for this jewel so rare.

God chose from among us one of our most precious flowers, when He took our little sister Wilma Fletcher Scott, of Kilbourne, La., Friday, July 28. Many shall mourn her passing. Many shall miss her sweet face from our happy throng. Friends, relatives and parents shall see her earthly form here no longer, but her memory shall linger on and on. "You may break the rose and scatter it at your will, but the odor of roses will linger round it still." So will her sweet smile, her good deeds and her lovely Christian example remain always with us.

We, of the Methodist Sunday school mourn our loss of so loyal a member, such a devoted and faithful secretary. Another secretary we may secure, but not another Wilma. Her place in our midst will remain vacant.

But friends, although we shall miss her each day more and more, let us not mourn too much of her passing, but remember God had a purpose in calling this flower home. Let us rather rejoice that He had a greater, nobler duty for her in His home over there.

We hereby tender the members of her family our heartfelt sympathy.

RESOLUTIONS

"A whiter soul, a fairer mind,
A life with purer course and aim,
A gentler eye, a voice more kind,
We may not look on earth to find.

The love that lingers o'er his name
Is more than fame."

Whereas; We in the providence of God, have been called upon by the recent death of our beloved pastor and friend, Rev. W. F. Rogers, one of our most highly esteemed ministers of the North Mississippi Conference.

Whereas; Whose consecrated Christian character, spiritual leadership and unselfish services were most highly regarded by the members of the Horn Lake charge; therefore be it resolved by the Third Quarterly Conference of Horn Lake charge of the North Mississippi Conference:

First; That the Horn Lake charge express its appreciation of the splendid contribution made by his Christ-like services.

Second; That the Third Quarterly Conference of the Horn Lake charge recognize its many obligations. Bro. Rogers was our friend, a friend of our young people.

Third; Truly he gave us an example of a deeply consecrated Christian life that we will never forget. Because we have known him, our hearts will be purer and our lives will be truer to the cause of Christ, whom our pastor so faithfully served.

Fourth; That the Third Quarterly Conference extend its deepest sympathy and offer its sincere prayer for his family and loved ones in their sore bereavement.

Fifth; That a copy of these resolutions be given to the family of the deceased, a copy be published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, a copy be published in the Times Promoter and a copy be given to the recording secretary of the charge who shall include it in the records of the Third Quarterly Conference which was held July 23, 1933.

Respectfully submitted,

IN MEMORIAM

They say she's dead,
That cannot be;
She still lives in the life
Of you and me.

Her kindly smile,
Her Godly face,
Years cannot from Memory's wall erase.

God showed the way,
She walked therein,
Through years of toil
And pain and din.

Until the Master said,
"Well done,
Your work is o'er,
Your crown is won."

Both the Glenmora and Oberlin churches have recently enjoyed Daily Vacation Bible Schools, thanks to the assistance of Miss Ora Hooper, rural deaconess.

The Oberlin school had an enrollment of 36 with an average attendance of 23. A goodly number did the assigned memory work and did not miss a day. The school began on May 22 and ended on June 2. Immediately after the close of the school, Miss Hooper was honored by the Oberlin ladies with a delightful handkerchief shower. This shower was given at the home of Mrs. T. A. Crawford. Nice refreshments were also served.

The Glenmora school ran from July 14 through July 28. After the first week Miss Hooper was compelled to leave. During the second week Mrs. L. R. Nease, Jr., was in charge. This school had an enrollment of 100 and an average attendance of 60. But for almost incessant rains during the last week this splendid record would have doubtless been even better. In spite of the rains quite a number received certificates for perfect attendance. The boys and girls were very enthusiastic over the school.

The good people of this charge have come to esteem Miss Hooper most highly. Her many friends regret that she is so soon to leave the Alexandria District and the Louisiana Conference. Our prayers and high hopes will accompany her as she enters upon her new labors at Valley Institute.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

AS CHURCHES WE may overlook some of our major responsibilities in this time of national reconstruction. It is not our business merely to cooperate in the execution of the emergency measures, but rather to take some forward steps in the way of creating a higher national morale. This is a task upon which we should be engaged all the while. We are not to be excused for ignorance of national and political affairs. This fuss about mixing politics and religion is fostered by second-rate and scheming politicians and by religious leaders who have no lineal connection with the Prophets.

One of the best things we can do right now as Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi is to stand by our colleges and schools. It is easy in times like these for us to become critical and censorious of the operation of these institutions. We become purveyors of muffled complaints about our colleges and thus unconsciously discount them in the minds of the public, little realizing the damage we are doing.

We must not forget that Centenary, Millsaps, Whitworth and Grenada are our schools, and that we owe them our heartiest support. Through them we hope to make a large contribution not only to our church but to the country as well. This cannot be done without complete confidence and an intelligent and determined support.

If at times we feel that the authorities of our schools are making a mistake let us go to them and talk the matter over. Honest and sincere men surely will be found willing to take counsel in matters pertaining to our common interests. Unwise talk to the strangers within the gates robs us of our tools for advancement.

Let us keep in close touch with our schools.

AND YOU MEN of our colleges, a word with you. You need to keep in close touch with the pastors and churches of your territory. One reason we sometimes get our backs up out here is that we just do not know you fellows, your slant on things, and just what you are driving at. You are familiar with that cleavage which has become chronic between what we call "connectional interests" and the local churches. It is damaging both to the local churches and to the "connectional interests" when this situation develops. We must remember that we are just one great Church.

You remember how Paul put the matter. The hand cannot say, because it is not the foot that it has no need of the foot, and therefore the foot is useless or less important. Let us be reminded that when a toe is mashed, even though it be a small and insignificant member, from that source blood poison may spread to the whole system and that pain and infection cannot be confined to that point.

You men of our schools need to get a little better acquainted with us out here on the charges in order that we may work out our plans together. Of course there are certain responsibilities we have out here that are strictly our own. We should be willing to receive friendly counsel, but we know that we are responsible for the conduct of this work. We are not very well qualified to tell you just how to run the colleges, but we are tremendously interested in what you are doing. We need to know each other better in order that we may effectively accomplish our common tasks. We do not wish you to be "connectional interests," but our neighbors and friends working together.

Centenary, Millsaps, Whitworth and Grenada will be opening in a short while. Our boys and girls will be going back. Some new ones will be joining the Freshman Class. Let us follow these boys and girls with our prayers. And let us keep our colleges on our prayer list. And let us give them great backing and make this a great year for them and us.

LET US ALL PULL for Whitworth College. On September 23, at "A Century of Progress Exposition," Chicago, she will stage her Jubilee Pageant, "A Century of Progress in the Higher Education of Women." This pageant will be a big feature of Mississippi Day at the Exposition. If you are there by all means go around to the Court of the States and see this magnificent exhibit written by one of our own good women, Mrs. Janie Drake Cooper, and staged by our own Mississippi girls.

Of course we are anxious for this pageant to be a success. It will "let the world know" something about Mississippi's share in the higher education of women, and it will indicate something of the share our church has had in that vast and noble enterprise.

This pageant will be staged again at the time of the Mississippi Annual Conference session in November.

It is easy to forget or become too familiar with the great facts of our own history and the achievements of our leaders in the field of Christian education. This pageant will serve as a reminder.

When I say, Let us pull for Whitworth College, I mean more than the support necessary to make this pageant a success. Let us pull for Whitworth all the time. How? Send your girls there. Put your money into its program. Tell it, in season and out, from the house top to the basement, that Mississippi Methodism has a girl's college of which the state and church may be justly proud.

We say the same for Grenada.

GOOD-BYE, PRESIDENT MACHADO. We are glad to see you go. Hello! I see in the papers that you have ordered an aeroplane upon which you plan to come up to see us in the States. Well, my latch-string is not out. You will not find a welcome in my quarters till you show signs of repentance. May be that my Uncle Sam should join you in such a preparation for the Kingdom.

Machado was known throughout Latin America as "The President of a Thousand Murders." Apparently he lived up to that reputation. His administration has been one of butchery and murder. Our Church and other churches have been sending missionaries down there to Christianize the Cubans, but we have paid very little attention to the pagan practices of the administration.

Conditions grew steadily worse with Machado declining to alleviate them or resign. The former he would not do; the latter was made immediate and spectacular when the President woke up one morning to find guns from several locations about the place pointing at his palace with the militant hint that twenty-four hours for his departure was regarded as exceedingly lenient. And he went. Yes, he went.

While these conditions have prevailed and continued to grow worse and worse for years we, in amazement, ask, why have we not known about them? and Why hasn't something been done about them? For only a very short while have we been able to get at some of the facts. Finally the cat became so dead that the whole world began to smell it.

Then came revolution. I deplore revolution. But I could have little respect for the Cubans had they not tried to throw off the yoke. It was the only language the Machado administration could understand. I regret the blood-shed of the revolution, though it was small. Revolution with blood-shed is the inevitable reply to a butchering tyranny.

TWO PARAGRAPHS ABOVE we asked some questions. And farther up we hinted that Uncle Sam might come forward to the mourner's bench with President Machado. What caused me to say that was some misgivings I have had for some time about the Cuban situation and some reports confirming those suspicions.

Can it be?

The Pittsburg Press carried something like this: "We are to blame that the dictator lasted so long. Behind Machado and his army during all his hectic days stood the financial and diplomatic support of the United States. The State Department was

GENERAL CONFERENCE MATTERS

By: Rev. V. C. Curtis, D.D., Presiding Elder, Columbus District

Many have an idea that legislation in the General Conference is introduced as it is in State Legislatures or the United States Congress. But this is not true. The individual members of these political bodies introduced bills which are referred to the appropriate committees for approval or disapproval and then brought back before the body for discussion and vote. But individual members do not introduce bills in the General Conference. In some instances several members get together and introduce a "memorial" but this is rare.

Proposed legislation is brought before the General Conference by memorials, usually from the Annual Conferences and District Conferences. Of course, a memorial from an Annual Conference has more prestige than one from a small body. There is good reason for this. When a memorial is presented from an Annual Conference, the presumption is that it has been properly presented before that body and discussed in detail and then passed and for that reason must have some merit. If each individual member of the General Conference should have the privilege of introducing bills in an effort to express in law some pet scheme he has, the "hopper" would be as full as that of the United States Congress.

The prevailing custom gives not only the members of the General Conference the opportunity to propose legislation but it gives every member of an Annual Conference the same right. If any member, from a college president down to the preacher, who is traveling a Starvation Mission, desires to introduce legislation, he has that privilege at his Annual Conference. So the purpose of this article is to call attention to the privilege of the members of the Annual Conference at its approaching session.

This writer will be glad to join others in memorials on the following items:

1. The shortest possible session for the sitting of the General Conference, not longer than ten or twelve days.
2. The election of no bishops. After three have been retired, we have a sufficient number to do the necessary work.
3. A change in the plan of assessments. Let the Budget Commission apportion the amounts as now but let it not be binding on any charge until it has been accepted by the Quarterly Conference of the charge. In other words, the Quarterly Conference must be the final authority as to what they are assessed for hereafter. They must have the privilege of raising or reducing as they see proper.
4. The doing away with all special collections. Let all claims be included in the one assessment.
5. The doing away with all secretaryships and other offices not absolutely essential to carrying on the work.
6. Combining the work of the Boards where it is possible.
7. Bringing all proposed expenditures within the budget, so as to avoid the many "S. O. S." calls to save a "sinking ship" that has wandered too far from shore.

A GREAT AMBITION

What one is there of us who cannot, as he thinks back to boyhood years, remember how on days he grieved, as he read of the great exploits of the men of other times, that all the great deeds had already been done, and so little was left to try the soul and courage in his prosaic day. Columbus had discovered America and there were no unknown continents left; Robinson Crusoe had explored his wonderful island, but the seas were all charted and every spot was set down on the map. The feeling didn't last long, perhaps, but it brought a sense of having been born too late for the doing of all the fine brave things that might have been.

Later years brought other thoughts, and a realization of the fact that each new age offers its own peculiar opportunities for great achievement, and yet, even as men we have a habit of slipping back into that boyhood mood, and deciding that life isn't giving us quite the chance that we ought to have. We feel it in us to have done better than we have, but we find it hard to lay the blame on ourselves, and, therefore, seek the satisfaction of laying it upon our lack of opportunity. If we can persuade ourselves that most of the fine things that we have a gift for have already been done, or that we really have never been given a good fair chance at them, it becomes much easier for us to be content with our own poor performance: a content which may work very disastrously in the end.

Whatever could have been said of any other day it certainly is true of ours, that it has a very great number of very important and very necessary things waiting to be done, and things that are quite as difficult as they are necessary and important. No man that has ambitions, and would set his name high in the list of those who have served their fellows, has any call to feel a lack of opportunity in our day. So far from everything being done, it would seem at times as if we had made only a poor bungling beginning at everything, and that the whole scheme of rational, intelligent, living together on this planet of ours had yet to be worked out. Talk about opportunity—no man in all the long history of the world ever had as many fine things for his hand to do as you have! Like Ulysses of old the call comes to you as you face the great ocean of your opportunity:

"Tis not too late to seek a newer world
Push off, and sitting well in order smite
The sounding furrows."

—The New Outlook.

CAN A METHODIST SELL BEER?

By Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon

I am in receipt of the following letter from one of our faithful pastors in North Carolina:

"Dear Bishop: For several days I have thought of writing you with reference to the following question: What shall a pastor, the board of stewards, or a church do in the case of a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who dispenses 3.2 per cent beer?"

"Since coming in from an afternoon's pastoral visiting I have heard one of my stewards plans to sell beer in connection with his business as a grocery dealer. Personally, I have positive convictions. I see no possible chance for a member of the Methodist Church consistently to deal in beer.

"I shall appreciate your immediate reply."

I did reply immediately and gave him an opinion which I now amplify and give to all the pastors and members of the Church in my episcopal district.

Everybody knows that beer is an alcoholic beverage. It is freely admitted by all that what makes 3.2 per cent beer interesting is the 3.2 alcoholic content. It is the effects of the alcoholic content that lead men to drink the beer. Alcohol is a habit-forming drug; drinking alcohol even in small quantities inevitably leads to the desire to drink it again; leads to the desire to drink it in larger quantities; and drinking it in larger quantities inevitably fixes the habit, and the habit inevitably leads to drunkenness.

Now here follows the law of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

"Let all our preachers and members abstain from the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors to be used as leverage, from signing petitions for their sale, from becoming bondsmen for any person as a condition for obtaining a license, from acting as a dispenser or voluntarily accepting an appointment or election as such under the laws of any state in which there is a dispensary law authorizing the sale of liquor by the state, county, or municipality, and from renting property to be used for such sale. If any member shall violate any of the provisions of this paragraph, he shall be deemed guilty of immorality (See 1930 Discipline, paragraphs 513-515)."

I quote also the Rule as contained in the "General Rules" which came from the hand of John Wesley:

"It is expected of all who continue as Methodists that they should continue to evidence their desire of salvation.

"First, by doing no harm, by avoiding evil of every kind, especially that which is most generally practiced: such as,

"Drunkenness, or drinking spirituous liquors unless in cases of necessity."

Mark well this rule which forbids "drinking spirituous liquors." By scientific test, 3.2 beer is a "spirituous liquor." By its very definition and description, "3.2 beer," it is an alcoholic drink. Whosoever drinks it is therefore running counter to this historic rule which from the very foundation of our Church has marked us out as Methodists who do not drink "spirituous liquors."

As to how much of this beer one can drink and not be intoxicated, I do not pretend to know. But the following clipping, taken from the Charlotte News of Sunday, April 23, seems to throw light on this interesting question:

"First Beer Conviction.—Mecklenburg county rural police have recorded the first 'beer drunk' here since the brew has been legalized in near-by South Carolina. And incidentally the case speaks well from that well known 3.2.

"H. S. Hucks, arrested for driving his car while under the influence of whiskey, said that he has taken nothing but two bottles of legal beer obtained in South Carolina. His attorney argued that, since that beer had been declared by Congress to be non-intoxicating and since its sale on that basis had been legalized, his client should not be held—which argument didn't stick with Recorder Hunter.

"A fine of $50 and costs was imposed on the defendant. A six months sentence was suspended with the revocation of the driver's license for ninety days."

An important question arises just here. How shall we deal with members of our Church who yield to the temptation to sell beer or to drink beer? The answer is plain. I give first the language of the New Testament: "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted. Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ" (Galatians 6:1-2). "My little children, these things write I unto you, that ye may not sin. And if any man sin, we (that is to say, the Christian community) have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous" (1 John 2:1). We may be able to save the erring brother by praying for him. And I give also the answer of the Methodist Church as to how we are to deal with one who violates the General Rules:

"If there be any among us who observes them not, who habitually break any of them, let it be known unto them who watch over that soul as they must give an account. We will admonish him of the error of his ways; we will bear with him for a season; but if he repent not, he hath no more place with us; we have delivered our own souls." (Discipline, paragraph 6).—Baltimore Southern Methodist.

COOPERATION OPENS SOME DOORS

By Robert T. Henry, Missionary in China

In South Soochow is a cotton factory employing about three thousand workers—men and women. In this vicinity is quite a group of industrial plants. With the smaller home industries included there is a community of about five thousand people in this section. All of the plants are outside of the city.

For a number of years we have been trying to establish a church in this community. We would rent a chapel and have the usual efforts of preaching, Sunday school and evangelistic services. Invariably interest would lag and in a little while the undertaking would be abandoned to await a more auspicious time.

Part of the difficulty lay in the fact that we were attempting to church these people in the city where the congregation was made up for the most part of students. Added to this difficulty was the distance the women had to walk and also the fact that the men had to work on Sunday. They are now being given three days each month as days of rest.

From our Institutional Church Center in the very heart of Soochow we began to organize neighborhood projects in order to take the church a little closer to the people. We went to the church that had been responsible for the chapel and asked permission to try to do something in the industrial center.

Our opening wedge was to approach the factory owners and seek some cooperation from them. As we were waiting to see the manager of the factory a foreman passed along and recognized our good pastor, Tal Nyang Ching. He was invaluable in getting the opening we wanted.

Our proposal to the manager of the factory was that we wanted to open a kindergarten for the children of the mothers working in the factory. The mothers were going to work at six o'clock in the morning and in some cases there was no one with whom they could leave the little children. Even though the mill had some safe guards around machinery and there were exhaust fans to take out some of the dust and dirt, it was not a very desirable nursery.

The manager was enthusiastic about our proposal but was doubtful as to whether the women would cooperate. But he gave us the use of six Chinese rooms without rent in a section of tenements that had been renovated and also allowed us to fence off a little playground. He gave us a three year contract for the building in order that we would be assured of an opportunity to carry out the undertaking.

Work was opened in the fall of 1931. It had taken us more than a year to work through the details and get a basis of understanding. At first only about twenty of the more daring children came. Miss Wang went right ahead. She is the sister of one of our fine preachers in the China Conference. Her mother came to the center to live in the house with her, and of course this made the people feel closer to her as they felt she was one of them.

In several weeks a little demonstration program was given and the mothers and fathers of the children came to see their's perform. Parents are the same the world over in this regard and I just wish you could have seen the response there that afternoon. Those parents went away from the little program all enthusiasm. One would say, "You should have seen my Ah Pau march." Another would counter, "But did you hear my Ah Nyi sing?" These and other comments from these pleased parents opened the door to our acceptance in the country. In a few days we had more children than we could take care of.

Very often when one door opens you have access to others. The kindergarten had not been open very long before a group of the young women working in the factory came and requested evening classes. They wanted to learn to read, to write, and to cipher. A class was started. Then the night shift came and said, "See here, you are not treating us right; we have to work all night and so cannot come to the evening classes. Could you not give us a class in the morning from seven to eight?" Well, Miss Wang found a way to work it. Another touch was brought when the nurse agreed to come out from the Institutional Church Center once a week and look after the children's general health conditions.

What happened to the church as a result of these undertakings to make the spirit of Jesus Christ minister to the needs of everyday life? Two Sunday schools of more than a hundred children in each were organized, a fine Vacation Bible School was run, a probationers class was formed of mechanics and young women from the night classes. The nucleus of a church was set up with the group of members transferred from the church in the city. These Christians took on new life when they realized that the church was theirs and was actually serving the people. Personal work was soon on a new basis and we feel that a foundation has been laid for a living, growing Church.

This is but indication of what must more and more take place in China if the church is to be indigenous and one day be entirely supported from local resources. Here was an undertaking in which two of the stronger churches cooperated, a factory management assisted by giving us the use of rooms, the Committee on Deaconess and Bible Women's Work assisted by helping to pay Miss Wang's salary, a number of Christians there in the city found an opportunity to do something for Him by doing for the needy. Cooperation pays big dividends and opens Some Doors!

THE GLORY OF VISION

By Rev. S. E. Carruth

Youth as such are to be reckoned with in all the programs of human activities. It is significant that the prophet should foresee in that glorious forthcoming era that "young men should see visions." Realities come of the blue print in the abstract. Achievements are first rehearsed in the minds of the adventurous. The best is always yet to be. Immaturity unceasingly reaches for that which is before. Faith and hope envisage heights hitherto unreachd.

The distinguishing characteristic of youth is the love of adventure. The realm of the unknown holds for them irresistible enchantment. The reservoir of restrained energy, the ambition to excel, the ardor unquenched by failure, is a veritable mighty Niagara with well nigh infinite potentialities.

The conservation and proper direction of these pent-up forces is the problem of the ages. That there must be an outlet is inevitable. The God-given energy, if not harnessed and employed for worth-while production, will be usurped and perverted by humanity's enemy.

Spirited young manhood and pure young womanhood hold in their grasp earth's most prized asset. A man worth one hundred million dollars is quoted as publicly saying that he would give one-half his fortune for youth with its attendant health and hope. A fuller appreciation of relative values might go further with the willingness to exchange the whole of today's greatest amassed sum of patry wealth for ideal beginnings. Youth is gratuitously handed that very asset together with an unmarred career before them. Such a stupendous responsibility stabilizes the daring spirit of serious minded young folk. How shall I discharge the obligations of this commitment? engages the consideration of the recipient and becomes the monitor over life's uncharted sea.

Discerning youth will distinguish between the true and the false—the basic and the transient. Principles of justice, purity and sobriety, representing the essence of wisdom of the ages, are eternal and basic to all programs of adventure. They mark the only starting point of every life and forgetting them incurs certain failure. The Author of all reforms was careful to have it remembered, "I came not to destroy" fundamentals. The valor of youth is well employed in defense of their perpetuation. Macaulay has his hero Horatius to resignedly say,

"And how can man die better
Than facing fearful odds
For the ashes of his fathers
And the temples of his gods?"

In our accompanying illustration the artist caught the pose of ardent youth as life's objective is envisaged from the beginning. The coveted prize is yonder in the heights. Manhood is dauntlessly eager for the march of attainment. Womanhood loyally supplies the complement of whole-hearted encouragement and cooperation. In the present crisis it is reasonably surmised that the goal visualized is perfected temperance protection for the less stable of their fellows. To the holy cause of sustaining a saloonless flag and accomplishing honest law enforcement they are willing to devote their noblest powers. What call could be more appealing? What motive more alluring to deeds of glory?

William Herbert Carruth reached the zenith of his inspiration in the words appropriate to this occasion.

"It is glory enough to have shouted the name
Of the living God in the teeth of an army of foes;
To have thrown all prudence and forethought away

And for once to have followed the call of the soul
Out into danger of darkness, of ruin and death.
To have counseled with right, not success, for once.

Is glory enough for one day.

"It is glory enough for one day

To have dreamed the bright dream of the reign of right;

To have fastened your faith like a flag to that immaterial staff

And have marched away, forging your base of supplies.

And while the worldly-wise see nothing but shame and ignoble retreat,

And though far ahead the heart may faint and the flesh prove weak—

To have dreamed that bold dream is glory enough.
Is glory enough for one day."

THE WAY OF LIFE

By a Layman

The Law of Love

Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Matthew 22: 39

Jesus sums up the whole duty of man into two commandments—Love God, and love your neighbor.

The Greek word, here translated love, means to have regard for the welfare of your neighbor. This love is expressed in assuming an attitude of helpfulness and friendly interest to all with whom you come in contact. Your neighbors are those next to you.

This love is commanded as a duty. Hence, it is Nothing else can be substituted for it. It is through this friendly service to others, here called love, that the Christian enters the kingdom of Heaven and finds his own life. There is no other door.

This love is the supreme duty of the Christian, not to be regarded simply as a sentiment. The Christian must practice this love whether he feels like it or not. He is not to wait to be prompted and guided by his feelings. The sentiment, the feeling of love, is the result of the practice of love. There is little virtue in doing simply what you feel like doing. This is the life of lower animals. The Christian must often do that which he doesn't feel like doing. Noble actions are not feeling and sentiment. Lofty feeling and sentiment are the products of noble actions. This is implied in the statement of Jesus that those who do his will come to an understanding of the meaning of their activities.

How may the Christian develop the sentiment of love for others? Can he learn to have the sentiment of real interest in those who have no natural attraction for him? If so, how may this sentiment be acquired? Is there a law of love? This question may be answered in the affirmative. There is a law of love. A law by which the love of which Jesus speaks may be acquired and developed.

The common view that we love those who serve us with a friendly spirit, and that our love in general is measured by the intensity of this service, is wrong. Ingratitude is so common that it is no surprise. Service to people seems to have little effect in increasing their regard for those who give the service.

The law of love is that people as a rule love the people and institutions that they serve and make sacrifices for, and the intensity of the love is measured by the intensity of the service.—Southern Agriculturist.

NOTICE TO WORLD FAIR VISITORS

A few weeks ago the Advocate announced the plan of the Church Housing Commission of Chicago to care for church World's Fair visitors in accredited church homes at a very low rooming rate.

This service was launched through a working arrangement with the Visitors Tourist Service. Because of the failure of this organization to fulfill its agreements, the Church Housing Commission has severed its arrangements with the Visitors Tourist Service and the churches are going forward alone to deliver the type of service and hospitality promised to their constituencies through correspondence and denominational journals.

The Methodist Housing Service will be managed from 740 Bush Street, Chicago, and Bert E. Smith will continue to direct the enterprise. Our people now can secure better service than ever and at only a nominal service charge.

Methodist visitors from thirty-two states have taken advantage of the service supplied by the Methodist Division. Their appreciation of what the churches are doing to protect visitors from high prices and to provide hospitality and service is so genuine and enthusiastic that the sponsors of this movement are convinced that it must go forward in a bigger way than ever.

For only a little service charge Methodist visitors may secure good rooms or housekeeping apartments at a very low cost, parking and information assistance that will make their Chicago trip inexpensive and safe.

A leaflet descriptive of this service may be secured by writing to Bert E. Smith at the above address.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT TAKES THE LEAD WITH THE HATTIESBURG DISTRICT A CLOSE SECOND

Rev. C. C. Clark, Waynesboro, Miss., Sends Largest List, Followed by Rev. W. B. Baker, of Durant, Miss.

Our first report of subscriptions received on our Eightieth Anniversary Special Offer Campaign finds the New Orleans District, Rev. W. L. Duren, presiding elder, leading all others with a total of 58 subscriptions. The Hattiesburg District, Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder, occupies second place with a total of 52 subscriptions secured.

Rev. C. C. Clark, Waynesboro, Miss., tops all other pastors for individual honors, having secured a total of 36. Rev. W. B. Baker, our pastor at Durant, Miss., occupies second place with a list of 17.

We have prepared a report on all subscriptions received through Monday, August 28, which will be found on page 8 of this issue.

What district will lead next week? Who is going to take individual honors away from Brother Clark? Get your lists in before September 1. Let's swamp the Business Manager with subscriptions.

ATTENTION, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE PRESIDING ELDERS

openly sympathetic to the Dictator, and our ambassador, Harry Guggenheim, was one of Machado's closest advisers. New York bankers, led by the National City Bank, poured millions into Cuba in the form of loans. That money enabled the Cuban tyrant to pay his army, buy war supplies, and put down rebellions. Together with the diplomatic support of the Hoover administration, the loans kept Machado in power four long years. President Machado lasted only as long as his American financial and diplomatic support. If that support had been cut off at the beginning of his reign of terror, the bloodshed, tyrannies and suffering might have been avoided.

Another paper comments: "Yet, after all, what were we to do except what we did? From 1928 to 1932 we clung desperately to the belief that the Mellons, Rockfellers, Morgans, Kahns and Mitchells knew better than anyone else just what was best for us and for the rest of the world. If that belief cost Cuba dearly, it cost us a good deal, too."

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. E. W. Day, pastor at Greensburg, La., has been engaged in a meeting at Wesley Chapel.

"By the grace of God we are trying to push forward for Him and His cause," writes Rev. J. E. Hearn, pastor at Olla, La.

Mr. T. V. Gordon, Houston, Miss., a long-time reader of the Advocate, passed away some time ago. The Advocate now goes to his brother, J. Q. Gordon.

Dr. Brisco Carter, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, was preacher at both services at First Church, Lake Charles, on Sunday, August 20.

From T. F. Dumas, Lucedale, Miss., come birthday greetings and congratulations for the Advocate. Rev. J. M. Corley, the pastor, is steadily moving forward with his work.

The Bulletin of First Church, Greenwood, Miss., Rev. E. H. Cunningham, pastor, carries a strong appeal for the Advocate. We expect a good list from that church.

A letter from Rev. J. W. Lee, our pastor at Colfax, La., indicates that his health is better. His little city has been hard hit by bank failures, but there seems to be the spirit to carry on.

Rev. W. B. Baker, pastor at Durant, Miss., has gone the "second mile" with the Advocate. At least he has sent in a second list of subscriptions. Thank you, Brother Baker. Who'll be next?

Laymen are not excluded from taking a part in the EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY CAMPAIGN. Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Meridian District Lay Leader, sends in a good list of subscriptions.

Rev. J. A. Biffle had Rev. T. H. Dorsey to assist him in a revival at Friendship church, on Greenwood Springs charge, North Mississippi, during the third week in August.

In another column will be found reports from pastors and committees turning in subscriptions with which to celebrate our EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY. In gratifying numbers the subscriptions are coming in.

A copy of The Bulletin, official organ of the Columbus District, Dr. V. C. Curtis, Presiding Elder-Editor, is here, and it is crammed full of good things. Good notion to put some of it in the Advocate.

Rev. C. W. Rodgers, pastor of Simpson Methodist Episcopal Church, Lake Charles, La., was the preacher at First Church on a recent Sunday evening when the congregations of these two neighbor Methodist Churches united for their service.

We note that the Christian Advocate, general organ of our Church, is to become more of a general news organ of the Church. That paper, as all of our Church papers, deserves a better circulation.

A team of baseball playing Methodists over at Lake Charles, La., challenged the Fireman's team

"I feel sure that at the price you are now offering, if the preachers will take the matter of securing subscriptions in our own hands, we shall be able to put our paper on a sound footing. M. W. Porter, P. C. Wiggins, Miss." This word comes with a list, thus proving his contention.

Rev. S. M. Butts is assisting Rev. L. B. Wimberly in a revival at Grady's Chapel church, on the Becker circuit, North Mississippi. Brother Butts was Conference evangelist for several years. His brethren use him frequently in meetings during the revival seasons.

Rev. W. T. Phillips, pastor at Webb, Miss., has been very busy in meetings. He reports large congregations and responsive people at all places. Many have surrendered for the Christian life. Beginning the fourth week in June and running through the fourth week in August he will have been in nine meetings.

Here is something that makes a hardworking man hotter than hot weather: "Dear Mr. Editor: Wish you were here. Conference is great. Yours, C. D. Atkinson." That is from the seat of the great Discussion Conference at Mt. Sequoyah. We appreciate the benevolent wishes of the writer; but why bring it up when we cannot be there?

We had this word from Rev. J. B. Gambling, written from Wirona Lake, Indiana: "This is a good place. Only a couple of thousands on the grounds. All denominations. Addresses from 7 a.m. to 9:45 p.m. Robert E. Speer, Bishop Arthur Moore, Bob Shuler, Homer Rodeheaver, and many others."

Mr. Marlin Drake, Shreveport, La., son of the late Dr. W. W. Drake, en route to Lake Charles was in a car accident which took the life of a cow and caused considerable bruises to Mr. Drake. We have heard no further report of the accident. It is hoped that Mr. Drake did not suffer seriously.

Meetings: Rev. W. D. Milton closed at Walker, La., with nine additions on profession of faith. Rev. L. D. Moreland, pastor at Denham Springs, La., assisted in a meeting at Friendship, on the same charge. Rev. R. A. Cross, pastor of the Walker charge, will hold his own meeting at Mangham. Rev. B. H. Andrews, pastor at Pontchatoula, La., assisted Brother Cross in the meeting in Albany.

Miss Nell Wimberly, graduate of Grenada College, has been teaching in several Daily Vacation Bible schools this summer. We notice that nearly all of the graduates of Grenada College come out of the college with a thorough understanding of the work of local Methodist church and nearly all of them take up work in the local churches. That is a contrast to the actions of many college graduates.

Is this open season for poundings? Do you think this will pass the state game laws or qualify under the N. R. A.? Rev. Rolfe Hunt, pastor at Lauderdale, Miss., reports that the people of his community, including Presbyterians, Baptists and Episcopalians, have visited upon him a liberal pounding. I believe he does call it a "grocery shower." Well, what's in a name? More important, What's in the pantry?

Dr. R. H. Ruff, President of Central College, Missouri, is a Mississippi boy, reared in the territory near Ackerman, Miss. This great college turned out ninety-three fine young men and women in the graduating class this year. It is one of our many strong church institutions. Dr. Ruff was at one time pastor at Moorhead, Miss., and served other charges in the North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. R. V. Fulton, pastor at Choudrant, La., sends a list of subscriptions and says, "More to follow." We have seen that on a number of letters recently. My, if all hands will just get to the oars now, why, we can pull through in good shape. Brother Fulton reports good meetings on his work. Among preachers who led in these meetings he mentions the following: McCullin, Matthews, Riser and Cudd. These men rendered valuable service.

Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor Trinity Church, Ruston, La., is off to the Chicago Fair. As he left he said, "The following speakers and preachers will be in my pulpit: August 20, Layman's Day, Judge C. A. Barnett; Union Service in the evening with Rev. S. E. McFadden, D.D., Presbyterian minister, doing the preaching; Sunday, August 27, services conducted by Dr. J. G. Snelling; Sunday September 3, Dr. R. W. Vaughan." Seems that he left his pulpit in good hands.

Dr. Nolan B. Harmon, editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, is editing one of the best Conference organs in the connection. He made a star student at Millsaps College and even then for battle. Reports say they goose-egged the Firemen with a lead of 10. Methodists, if you go into anything, go in to win.

They tell us that Rev. O. S. Lewis, who tarried in the hospital at Hattiesburg, Miss., to have his appendix removed, is doing quite well, and that he will be on the go shortly. We are glad for you, Brother Lewis.

The younger adult section of the West Point, Miss., Sunday school is planning a rallying social gathering for the early weeks in September. Mrs. J. W. Belk and Prof. B. T. Schimpert are leaders in that large group of fine young men and women.

Mr. Boyd Campbell, Jackson, Miss., has been appointed by Gov. Connor as state director of NRA. Mr. Campbell is a graduate of Millsaps College, now treasurer of that institution, and is an active member of the Methodist church in the Capitol city.

"There will be more to follow. We are wishing you and the Advocate a big anniversary, and we are doing all we can to make it so. R. G. Moore, P. C. Ita Bena, Miss." That makes it much easier to have a birthday. Thank you, Brother Moore.

Rev. R. E. Smith, D.D., Dean Emeritus, and Professor of Bible, Centenary College, and instructor of the Foursquare Bible Class, First Church, Shreveport, has been ill for some weeks, up and down. Let prayer be made that this most valuable man may soon be up and out again.

was showing some of the gifts for writing. He later produced for the church two books which have had wide circulation over the entire territory—"History of the Methodist Ritual," and "Ministerial Ethics and Etiquette." Many are anxiously waiting for another production from his pen.

Bristling bayonets! Dr. Jas. M. Felts, wide-awake and fast running pastor of our First Church, Grenada, Miss., tells of a happy and profitable trip to the Gulf Coast, and follows with this militant note regarding the Advocate: "I will make my announcements Sunday, August 20, and make a personal canvass for the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Just forget about Grenada until you hear from us. We will be 'on the firing line,' 'keeping our powder dry,' and 'the enemy is ours,' or 'Molly Stark will be a widow.'" Now that sounds like victory. We are getting ready for a long list from that fine people.

RUSTON BUILDS CHURCH

Contract was signed on August 15, for the erection of a modern Sunday school building for Trinity Methodist Church, Ruston, La. The building when completed will cost $25,000. To keep the church on a cash basis in this project certain phases of the building were not contracted for as yet, but it is expected that they will all be included as the work progresses.

The building will be the educational unit of a new church plant for Ruston, located on the spacious new church site purchased during the pastorate of Dr. W. Winans Drake for $20,000. The church auditorium can be added at a later time.

The educational arrangement calls for the following: First floor: nursery, beginners department, primary assembly room and four class rooms, men's Bible class room, women's Bible class room, lavatories, kitchen and social hall, to be used as young people's department assembly; Second floor: senior department assembly and eight class rooms, four young people's class rooms; young adult department and class room; pastor's study; superintendent and secretary's offices; Third floor: junior department and twelve class rooms; intermediate department and eight class rooms; lavatories. Construction will be of brick, and re-enforced structural steel, with plastered walls, celotex ceilings, asbestos shingle roofing, etc.

Witt, Seibert & Halsey of Texarkana, Ark, are architects, and the contract was awarded to T. Miller & Sons, of Lake Charles. Construction will begin at once and the contractors require four months for completion.

The building committee, authorized by the quarterly conference is composed of Messrs. T. L. James, chairman; C. E. Tooke, vice chairman; T. H. Mills, B. H. Rainwater, O. E. Hodge, H. H. Smith and J. M. Sims. The finance committee, which has raised $8,000 in new gifts, and must raise something like $3,000 more if the building is to be entirely finished, is G. L. Shadow, chairman; Floyd B. James, vice chairman; Jack C. Ritchie, L. B. McDonald, O. E. Hodge, and H. H. Smith. Rev. H. L. Johns is the pastor.

This building cares for more than one hundred of the children of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, who attend Sunday school at this church in the Junior, Intermediate, Senior and Young People's departments, and for students at Louisiana Polytechnic Institute.

TENURE OF BISHOPS AND PRESIDING ELDERS

By Rev. W. H. Giles

The article, "Is Life Tenure Doomed?" written by Dr. John S. Jenkins, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Atlanta, Georgia, read before the Atlanta Methodist Preachers' Meeting, and published in the Christian Advocate, of last week, probably expresses the views of a large and ever increasing number of our preachers and people, with reference to our church policy, governing the episcopacy, or "plan of our itinerant general superintendency." The fact that nine-tenths of the Atlanta preachers present at the meeting, before whom this paper was read, voted a memorial to the General Conference asking for the election of General Superintendents quadrennially, is indicative of the prevalence of such views for "change" in that part of our government, although it is guarded by the restrictive rules of our Discipline, paragraph forty-three, subhead three.

The writer believes that even a much larger number of our preachers and laity is persuaded that an immediate legislation, not later than the next General Conference, should provide for enlarged, or fewer districts, within the Annual Conference. Further, that the members of the Annual Conferences should have some direct responsibility in the choice of presiding elders, who will superintend the districts. It is believed by a good number of our preachers, as indicated by a petition circulated and signed by a majority of the members of the Conference at that time (Deliberation, 1921) that General Conference legislation should provide that a presiding elder be not appointed to the presiding eldership, or other district after he has served four consecutive years in that office.

"CHRISTIAN PRINCIPLES IN MAKING AND USING MONEY"

This is the title of an adult elective course to be published in the columns of the ADULT STUDENT during the months of October, November, and December. The course has been written by Dr. Richard L. Ownbey, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Memphis, Tenn.

By using this course with adult classes in Sunday school pastors and local church leaders will be able to render a great service to the adults of the Church. Now is the time to give attention to the important subject of the finances of the Church. Dr. Ownbey has provided valuable material to be used in connection with the study of this problem.

MISSISSIPPI ATTRACTS ATTENTION

Mississippi, the "Magnolia State," is claiming its full share of attention among the thousands of visitors who swarm daily through the beautiful Hall of States of A Century of Progress Exposition, the Chicago World's Fair.

The Mississippi exhibit is in the south wing of the great hall, in the shadow of the eastern tower of Sky Ride. It represents months of effort on the part of the Mississippi Committee, Century of Progress Exposition, of which Governor M. S. Conner is ex-officio chairman, E. H. Bradshaw is chairman, and J. C. Holton, commissioner of agriculture, and Walker Wood, secretary of state, are members. Much credit for assembling, preparing and installing the exhibits is due J. M. Dean, supervising director of the exhibit.

The importance of Mississippi as an agricultural, live stock and dairy state; its mineral and forest resources; its recreational, health and educational advantages; its manufacturing activities; the attraction of its beautiful Gulf Coast—all are given due emphasis in this well-balanced presentation of the state's resources and opportunities.

On the inner wall above the entrance leading from the Court of States is the Mississippi coat of arms. On the side walls are large mural paintings on appropriate subjects. Inset in each mural is a map with an inscription telling an interesting fact about the state. On the south wall is a large map of Mississippi, attractively done in colors, showing its railroads, highways, gas and electric lines and principal towns and cities. A belopticon machine presents colored views featuring agricultural and industrial activities in Mississippi. A diagram of Mississippi's natural gas industry is another feature.

Native Mississippians who visit the exhibits are learning things they never knew before about their own state, according to Supervising Director J. M. Dean, while World's Fair visitors who have never been in Mississippi, or even in the South, are learning that cotton and lumber are only two of many products that originate in Mississippi. They are learning, for instance, that Mississippi is an important dairy state, that a considerable part of the country's tomatoes are produced in Mississippi, that its textile mills are turning out many fine fabrics, and that many important mineral deposits are located in the state. They are also learning that the Mississippi Gulf Coast is a tourists' and fisherman's paradise.

Of special interest to visitors from Northern states and from Canada and other foreign countries is the cotton exhibit. Beginning with an ideal stalk of cotton, laden with bolls ready for harvest, visitors see the fleecy staple from its growing state through its various stages of harvesting, marketing and manufacture to the finished products.—Illinois Central Bulletin.

THE PAPERS SAY THAT--

Members of the Young Men's Business Club were asked to adopt a resolution last Wednesday calling upon Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley and the Commission Council to legalize gambling in New Orleans as a move toward reducing taxes.

Shall we continue in sin that grace may abound? God forbid. But this proposal is cut off the same cloth from which the effort to secure a balanced budget by unbalancing a nation's soberness. Just how far must we go before we discover that honor and integrity and moral character are indispensable to national recovery and preservation?

50,000 Chinese Drown in Honan Province Flood. An additional 50,000 have been made homeless. The Yellow River has gone on a rampage and sweeping the country before it. The flood is the worst since 1887.

But China is so far away. And there are so many Chinese anyhow. But what effects China will, sooner or later, effect you. There is a Bible in the world. And Jesus has already come. And He is still here. He said all of them, Chinese and all, are God's people. God is all wise, but Paul said he does not know the difference in a Chinese and an American. I told somebody that I was a Christian. Didn't you?

Esther Sanberg, (I'm afraid she was not a descendant of Mayflower ancestry) aged 18, risked her life in saving fifty people in a tenement fire in Brooklyn. Choked with smoke, men and women screamed. The high school girl said, "Stop it. Don't get excited. We'll all get out of here."

Great work, Esther. But I doubt if your courage should have been necessary. Tenement owners have not been known widely for their special concern for the safety and welfare for those who live in the fire traps they have built not for people but for profit. I shall vote for a medal and a monument for you, but if you will continue your education and make a special study of the tenement business and get up on something and tell the world about it till something is done, I shall favor still greater recognition.

The United States is through, for the time being at least, with its missionary work in Europe in behalf of peace and disarmament. Mr. Norman H. Davis, America's roving ambassador for six months, giving hard work to the problem in Europe, seems rather disheartened over the matter. A decision has been reached that the United States will now wait some move from Europe.

Well, Uncle Sam, let's not wait too long. It may prove a bad policy, this business of calling missionaries home. Let's go over and live among them a bit. Let's work up a little larger exchange of students between countries. Let's keep this work alive. There will be some more generations on after awhile. We do learn mighty slow, but the prophets and poets have done a lot for us thus far. Have laid no concrete highways, you say? But they have opened new roads of thought and fellowship and co-operation. And it's their visions that are troubling us now. One of them said, "Through the ages one increasing purpose runs, and the thoughts of men are widened with the process of the suns." And on the pages of the Old Book I found this: "They shall beat their swords into plowshare, and their spears into pruning hooks. Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." We are late getting to the lesson. Some day we shall.

Hattiesburg Leagues are on the map and they are on to stay. Besides the regular work of the individual Leagues the three Leagues have co-operated in presenting "An Old-fashioned Mother," a very impressive play.

The Leagues gave this parable in Hattiesburg in July and in Lumberton on the 18th of August at the request of Rev. M. L. McCormick, of Lumberton.

Miss Grace Lewis and M. L. Davis were the very efficient directors of this play and they spent their time and untiring efforts on this production.

Miss Frances Harrell, who teaches school at Belzona, took the part of the old-fashioned mother, and she very beautifully filled it. The audience responded heartily to her singing of "My Wandering Boy," and they seemed to feel the very spirit of a mother who had lost her son.

Herry Lewis and Lucille Parker, of Broad Street Methodist Church, who were the comedians of the play, kept everyone laughing throughout.

All the cast worked hard and the success of the play made them feel that their work was not in vain.

The money that was made went into the treasury of their union.

The Standard Training School will be held at the Main Street Methodist Church, beginning the 3rd through the 8th of September, and all the young people are looking forward with interest for this school.

LOUISE GREEN.

Notes From the Conference Director

It has been my privilege this summer to visit three camps. I was disappointed at not being able to visit Camp Kickapoo, but I'm doing well to spell that, much less visit it. The three that were visited—New Prospect, Topisaw, and Bluff Creek—all had points of similarity in that there were groups of happy young people but there were differences in equipment and age limits that gave a different aspect to each group. At Topisaw all were intermediates, except the workers; at Bluff Creek all were in the Christian Culture group, 16-23; and at New Prospect there were two distinct groups, one working for Christian Adventure credits and the other Christian Culture.

The camp at New Prospect was unique in a number of ways, and I knew as soon as I heard about it that I would not miss it for anything. A rather full account of it has appeared in the Advocate, but there were a number of impressions on me that will abide. New Prospect campground is only seven miles from my boyhood home. It is one of the first places that I remember going to as a child. I joined the church at Red Hill, but for some reasons was not received until the annual camp meeting, and on Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock hour I stood before that intellectual and physical giant, T. L. Meffien, and took the vows of the Church. This was the first camp held in that section and it was a success in every way. They voted unanimously to have one the next year at the same time and place.

I was at Topisaw only one day, in company with Brother D. T. Ridge-way, Jr., pastor at Silver Creek, to whom I am indebted for the ride from his home to the campground. Topisaw is also known as Felder's campground, from one of the leading families of the county. A family with a long and honorable history. The name Topisaw comes from the creek that flows by the grounds and, I judge, is of Indian origin. The equipment at Topisaw is the best of any campground I have seen in Mississippi and it might easily become the meeting place for much larger groups of young people. The attendance was smaller than was expected, but the camp was well organized and everything was moving smoothly and effectively. Miss Jessie Campbell, efficient district director; Miss Frances Bennett, her assistant; Rev. O. S. Lewis and Mrs. J. L. Carter, taught classes. Ann Stevens seemed to be active in promoting recreation; C. W. Wesley took in the cash and saw to it that everybody had an extra blanket that needed one (Junaluska, take notice), while Mrs. C. W. Wesley saw to it that everybody had something to eat. It was good eating, too. I tried it.

I had heard of Bluff Creek so long and so favorably that one day while I was with Brother F. J. Jones in a meeting at Kingston, one of the churches on my first charge, a church that everybody should see and hut few people have, I slipped away and went to Bluff Creek for part of the day, though I had to make a round-trip of one hundred and seventy-five miles to do it. Bluff Creek is also a historic campground, about twelve miles southeast of Clinton, La. The camp was for the young people of the Baton Rouge District, and they were there, more than ninety of them! I think it was the best district camp I have seen any time, anywhere. Their equipment was a little better than at New Prospect, but not nearly so good as Topisaw; but, my, what a splendid crowd they had and what fine young people. I only knew two folks there, Rev. R. T. Henry, serving as supply pastor at Kentwood, and Fred St. Amant, of Baton Rouge, who visited our Assembly at Brookhaven in 1932. The Dean, Rev. G. W. Dameron, the Conference Director, Wallace White, and the District Director, Miss Mary Searles, all gave us (my brother-in-law, R. E. Watson, Superintendent of Schools in West Feliciana, was with me) a royal welcome.

This was my first visit to Clinton, La., and my second to Jackson and St. Francisville, the first and last parish seats of the two Felicianas. The latter place is very old (Lorenzo Dow mentions it by name in 1803). Jackson and Clinton were the centers of culture for that section for many years, as everybody knows, and the ruins of Silliman College at Clinton and of Centenary at Jackson stir emotions in one who never saw them in their glory. Centenary College had its birthplace in Mississippi, not at Clinton, as a good many historians assert, but at Brandon Springs, about eight miles east of the present town of Brandon, and many eminent Mississippians secured their education at Centenary when it was at Jackson.

I wish that we might arrange a series of meetings with adjoining districts in the two states; better still, annex the Baton Rouge District to the Mississippi Conference!

J. B. CAIN,
Conference Director.

PARISH-WIDE REVIVAL

Never before in the religious annals of this section has a greater spiritual manifestation taken hold of the people than was evidenced in the great Tabernacle Revival under the leadership of Rev. Harry S. Allen, General Evangelist, of Denton, Texas, and Kermit Hollingsworth, great musical director of Whitewright, Texas. The revival started July 30, and closed August 13, and from the beginning the influence continually spread out until for miles around throngs day and night taxed the capacity of the big tent and seats had to be made on the outside, and still the crowds increased. The preaching was of the old fashioned sort, sin being uncompromisingly assailed, but a spirit of love permeated all the soul-stirring messages. Hundreds openly came out on the side of the Lord, while about sixty united with the churches of Plain Dealing. Rev. J. B. Williams, pastor of the Methodist Church, was certainly divinely guided in selecting the workers he did for this meeting, no one can question the fact that great and lasting good was accomplished, for which all Christians are truly thankful.

WESLEY, TOPISAW AND ELSE

Dear Brother Raulins: My people gave me the mouth of August for a vacation. I spent one week with Rev. H. C. Castle in a meeting at Carpenter on the Utica charge. We had a great time together. I came home Friday, the 11th, and began the Topisaw camp meeting that night. We ran through Sunday, the 20th. We had a great camp meeting. All who attended tell me that it was more like a camp meeting than any they had had in twenty-five years or more. Dr. C. W. Crisler of Brookhaven did the preaching at 11:00 a.m. and 8:00 p.m. and he did it well. If you ever need a preacher to help you in a camp meeting get C. W. Crisler, he is fine. I led the singing and I tell you we made a fine team. I never had better help and one who worked more harmoniously in a meeting.

Brothers H. A. Gatlir, W. M. Sullivan, M. L. McCormick, L. E. Alford, S. B. Watkins, and B. M. Hunt, preached afternoons at 3:00 o'clock. All brought good messages that were appreciated by all in attendance. Brother Sullivan preached two afternoons and was a great inspiration in all the services till Friday noon when he left for home. Everybody entered into the spirit of the meeting and helped to make it a success.

I am hoping to send you a good list of subscribers by the 31st of August. I had some things to say in behalf of the Advocate during the camp meeting and I believe my people are going to respond favorably.

With best wishes for you and the Advocate, I am,

Sincerely yours,
C. W. WESLEY.

Summit, Miss.

NAPOLÉON BONAPARTE HUNTER

Mr. N. B. Hunter, our oldest citizen passed away at his home in Waterproof on July 24. Mr. Hunter was in his ninety-first year. He was born in Clinton county, Kentucky, January 29, 1842. He came to this parish at the age of four. He was married to Miss Eliza Turner at the old Carrollton, La. Church, February 7, 1875. His wife and seven of their nine children survive him. The children are: Louise, Randall, Guy and Earl Hunter, Mrs. W. T. Lanier and Mrs. Julia May, all of Waterproof and Floyd Hunter of Pine Bluff, Ark.

Mr. Hunter was widely known in the business and social circles of his state and his home was always open to the ministry. He and his good wife held their wide acquaintance with the preachers of the state as a much treasured memory.

AMPLE HOPE

"The history of the Memorial sent to General Conference in 1930 by the Woman's Missionary Council concerning clergy rights for women, and the growing interest in the Christian principle involved in ordination of women, as well as of men, give us ample hope, that, as soon as it can be legally accomplished, there will no longer be distinction, because of sex, made in the Methodist Episcopal Church. South, in the service that women may render to the Kingdom of God." This quotation from the Council Minutes of 1933 expresses the united and constructive thinking of many women. It is based on seven years of study.

The Memorial referred to above was presented to General Conference in 1930, in less than two months after its passage in the Council. There had been no campaign; no literature circulated nor publicity given in church or secular papers concerning it; but it passed the Committee on Itinerary by a large majority, and when it came before the General Conference lacked very little of the two-thirds vote that a constitutional question must receive in order to be submitted to Annual Conferences for ratification.

During the years that have elapsed since that time, the question has been studied from every angle, by men and women alike, and the caption "Ample Hope" is not taken lightly, because the forward and progressive attitude of the last General Conference has resulted in a changed sentiment among many who did not support the Memorial in 1930, and it is sure to receive a favorable consideration in the 1934 General Conference.

Women have kept the faith throughout the history of the Church, and will not less faithfully present the Risen Messiah to a needy world when this larger opportunity comes.

MISS IDA ANDERSON RETURNS FROM CHINA

After forty years in China through the hardships of pioneer mission work Miss Ida Anderson has returned to her native land and is now at home with her family in Jackson, Miss. Going to the Orient as a tutor for her missionary uncle's children she later became a missionary herself as a representative of the Methodist Church of Macon, Ga. "There is no question but that China and Japan are both greatly influenced by Christianity," Miss Anderson says in answer to those who may doubt the extent of missionary work in the foreign field. "Most of the officials at Nanking are Christians or are from Christian homes and the Christian religion has penetrated far and wide among the people."

Asked if she were a believer in the saying: "East is East and West is West," Miss Anderson smilingly replied, "human nature is much the same the world over." "The Chinese arrive at conclusions in a different manner, but in the end their ideas are practically the same as ours." To illustrate, Miss Anderson cited a custom of the Chinese that leads them to treat their bitterest enemy with utmost courtesy at all times. Yet the Chinese understand that this courtesy is mockery and accepted as such.

With reference to resuming her life here, Miss Anderson voiced the hope that she may in a manner carry on part of her work by contacting missionary societies.

Mississippi Conference

A meeting of the Central Zone, Vicksburg District was held at Oak Ridge, August 16, with Mrs. J. H. Grice as leader and Mrs. Aubin Holliday, secretary. The following auxiliaries were represented: Edwards, Hermanville, Port Gibson, Vicksburg, Crawford Street, Gibson Memorial and Oak Ridge. Among the speakers were: Mrs. Cottrell, Conference president; Mrs. Hegman, district secretary; Miss May Sells, teacher in the Sue Bennett School of Kentucky; Miss Matilda Killingsworth, a student of Scarritt College. Also Mesdames C. J. Henry and J. H. Grice of Oak Ridge. The Methodist pastors of the zone held a meeting in the afternoon, Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson presided.

Sylvarena Methodist Missionary Society was hostess to the zone which comprises the Raleigh, Sylvarena, Bay Springs, Louin, Montrose and Garlandville Societies. Tuesday, August 15. One of the main features of the afternoon was a presentation of a beautiful "Life Membership Pin," which the Betty Hughes Zone voted last year to give to some outstanding member of the zone. Mrs. W. W. Nelson of Bay Springs was selected as the worthy member by popular vote. A splendid program on Christian Social Relation was carried out. The next meeting will be held in October.

Resolutions: Whereas in the dissolution of the Newton District we have lost our capable District Secretary, Mrs. J. W. Abney and whereas as she has been a great inspiration and help to us, both individually and collectively and through her untiring zeal and efforts the work has made great progress, therefore, be it resolved, first: that the Betty Hughes Zone express regret for our loss; second, for our appreciation of her efficient work and pray that God may bless her and lead her into fields of greater usefulness; third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent Mrs. Abney, one spread on the minutes of our zone and one sent to the New Orleans Advocate.

REVIVAL AT LIVE OAK

One of the finest revival meetings we ever had at Live Oak, La., closed Sunday night a week past.

Following a real successful Home Coming Day, Brother L. P. Mooreland, our pastor, began a series of sermons that lasted through the following week, closing on Sunday night.

Brother Moreland was assisted by Rev. J. P. Bonnacarrere, of Donaldsonville, a former pastor of Live Oak. Brother Bonnacarrere conducted the song services which were very much enjoyed by everyone.

The afternoon songs were followed by short talks to the young people by Brother Bonnacarrere. These talks were helpful to both young and old.

Brother Wright Reid, a layman of Baton Rouge, was with us on several occasions. He was much impressed by the large attendance of young people and made some splendid talks to us.

These talks by Brothers Bonnacarrere and Reid were followed by some real sermons by Brother Moreland.

We had large congregations and everybody enjoyed the meeting. Six new members were added to the church and the older members were filled with new hope for a bigger and better Live Oak church.

In closing I wish to say that I think this was one of the best revival meetings ever held at Live Oak.

Thanks to the pastor and his Christian helpers.

FROM GRAND CANE, LA.

Dear Brethren: The Methodist Churches of the Grand Cane charge, are in the midst of a charge-wide revival. We began on Thursday evening, August 17, with Rev. W. T. Gray of our Mangum Memorial Church, in Shreveport, preaching for us Thursday and Friday evenings, and on Sunday morning, August 20. Brother Gray has brought us face to face, in these messages, with the importance of a revival in the hearts of men, and the wonderful opportunity we have in renewing our pledges and re-dedicating our lives to God our Father.

We are holding this meeting in the beautiful grove of our beloved Dr. F. O. Brinkley, at Kikcapoo No. 1. This location is in the midst of the Grand Cane Charge, and about half way between Mansfield and Shreveport. We have an arbor forty by sixty feet, comfortably seated and well lighted. The attendance, up to date, has been good.

Rev. B. C. Taylor, pastor of our First Church, at Natchitoches, will join us Monday morning, August 21, and preach for us, twice each day, through Sunday evening, August 27.

We cordially invite you, Dr. Raulins, to visit us during this meeting, and present the New Orleans Christian Advocate. We believe, with what foundation has been laid, in the interest of the Advocate, your presence and the facts presented to our people, results will be obtained. I hope you can come.

Praying God's richest blessings upon you and your work, and assuring you I will do my best for the causes represented in our Methodism, I am,

Your brother,

JAMES M. BOYKIN, P. C.

BEER—THE TOADSTOOL

One of the great controversies of the current hysteria is over the idea that Beer is a Food. The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union in its educational campaign against the alcohol habit finds that large numbers of people are likely to be alcoholized through the spread of propaganda that Beer is a food.

The "food" properties of Beer can be viewed somewhat as the food properties of a toadstool. Mushrooms and toadstools have practically the same food value—but the toadstool in addition contains poison. So it is with Beer; its slight food value is completely offset by the inherent poison in the alcohol which science condemns as a beverage. The only reason this is not generally understood is because of the clamor of the liquor propagandists.

Beer is now put forward as a non-fattening food. But eight ounces of four per cent beer contains two teaspoonsful of the active poison alcohol, a narcotic, habit-forming drug.

Food furnishes first building material; second, fuel for warmth and work; and third, may be stored against future needs. Alcohol cannot be used for building purposes or warmth and all the while it is in the body it is exercising its characteristic poisonous effect.

EVANGELINE BOOTH SAID

"Drink has drained more blood, hung more crepe, sold more homes, plunged more people into bankruptcy, armed more villains, slain more children, snapped more wedding rings, defiled more innocence, blinded more eyes, twisted more limbs, dethroned more reason, wrecked more manhood, dishonored more womanhood, broken more hearts, blasted more lives, driven more to suicide, and dug more graves, than any other poisoned scourge that ever swept across the world."—Exchange.

Eightieth Anniversary Celebration

A total of 363 subscriptions have been received through Monday, August 28, as the pastors of the patronizing Conferences begin to send in their Eightieth Anniversary quotas which, according to the pledges made by them, should pass the 3,000 mark by the end of August.

At the time these figures were compiled, the New Orleans District, Louisiana Conference, Rev. W. L. Duren, presiding elder was occupying first place with a total of 58 subscriptions, enjoying a scant margin of six subscriptions over the Hattiesburg District, Mississippi Conference, Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder, which occupies second place with 52.

The honors for the largest individual list received thus far goes to Rev. C. C. Clark, pastor of our church at Waynesboro, Miss., in the Hattiesburg District, he having secured a list of 36 subscriptions. Rev. W. B. Baker, Durant, Miss., Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, occupies second place with a list of 17.

The following list includes both new subscriptions and renewals received through Monday, August 28. We greatly appreciate the efforts of our friends and confidently expect every pastor to go considerably beyond his pledge before the special $1.00 per year offer is withdrawn.

Rundown in Health

Means Rundown in Blood!

Blood is life. Blood is everything. When blood gets thin or poor you feel it in a dozen different ways. Appetite fails, strength ebbs and you become weak and depressed.

To build up your blood, take Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. It contains iron which makes for rich, red blood. It also contains tasteless quinine which tends to purify the blood. Thus you get two effects of great value in any rundown condition. Taken regularly for a few days, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic will soon have you back on your feet. It will improve your appetite, increase your strength and vitality and put color in your cheeks. For half a century, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic has been a source of strength and energy for young and old. It is pleasant to take and contains nothing harmful. Get a bottle today and enjoy real health. Sold by all stores.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

THE BLUE EAGLE is now perched on my door. I have signed up for the war against the depression. However, I have no misgivings as to causes and implications involved. And I shall not attempt to detach the "depression" from the past or the future. It is not something wholly independent nor wholly material.

We are passing through a period of terrific strain, and it reaches out to us all. It is highly important that we pull together for one another and for all. The present crisis is lacking in those dramatic and spectacular elements that attend a great war. We are not reading the daily casualty lists, nervously looking for some familiar and loved name. There are no flaming headlines telling of positions taken or salients lost. There is no map showing us just where the fighting is hottest and just where the major conflicts may come. We do not have figures portraying the relative positions and strength of the enemy. Under those conditions in 1918 we found it easy to forget our differences, social, racial, religious and political, and to pool our resources and efforts for "the boys at the front." We did not find it such a sacrifice to take our quota of sugar and other items in order that the soldiers might be fed and victory be won.

This conflict, though, is equally real and bears a very vital connection with that more spectacular conflict of the war days.

What shall we do about it?

First, let us not overlook our opportunity to learn as much as possible about underlying causes and inevitable consequences. We must not surrender our powers of intelligent and constructive criticism.

Second, let us not wait till all the problems connected with it have been solved. We are informed that much of it, even a major part of it, is experiment. That being the case, we have sufficient stake in the outcome to participate in the experiment, realizing that there will be some blunders and mistakes.

Third, let us try to pick out, if possible, the commendable and promising features of the experiment. Let us not be fooled into thinking that we are going to get back where we were. Who wants to be there? The late President Harding's "normalcy" has never arrived, and it never will. Neither can we ever go back to the normalcy, which was a nightmare, had we known it, that preceded our economic crash. We are in the process of making a new country and a new world. Therefore let us not draw our circle premature. Let us not ignore the spiritual factors and energies breathing through this whole situation.

Fourth. If you find that allegiance to the NRA jeopardizes your business you have access to the government. Do not surrender at once and say that your little business cannot be run under such a schedule. Do nothing rash. Take time. Of course there must be sacrifice. But we want the sacrifice to be productive. Avoid, therefore, any rash conclusion or action. Do not imagine the government is trying to give you a hard deal instead of a New Deal.

Finally, let us all get into the harness and pull together, seeking something far greater than a temporary return of material prosperity. It is our government and our problem.

There are a number of things in the NRA which, had they been proposed not

TO THE PASTORS OF THE LOUISIANA AND MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES

Dear Brethren: Since a number of you have asked an extension of time for the EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY subscription campaign, this is to announce that the time has been extended to October 1. In other words, during the entire month of September you may take new and renewal subscriptions at One Dollar a year.

We realize that many of you have been on vacation; others, with large circuits, have found it difficult to get around.

We thank you for the many encouraging responses thus far. With all pastors doing their part we do not see why we should not go even beyond the quotas accepted by the presiding elders and pastors. Those of you who have not completed the canvass will take advantage of the extension, we feel sure, and see all your people.

Come on, now. We can finish this thing up in great fashion.

Sincerely

F. L. WELLS, Chairman;

many years ago, would have been met with instant and determined opposition. However, a number of these things have been comprehended in the Christian vision for a great many years.

I'VE LOST MY CHANCE to become rich.

"Mr. Raulins, is it?" asked the tall gray-haired man who stood at my office door.

"Yes," I said, "Come in."

"My name is Sellfast," he said as he took the chair and with it some half-hour of the editor's time. "Mr. Raulins, I have been given your name as a man who might be interested in making some money and with little effort."

(He had me spotted all right. I wanted to make the money. And, of course, just why should I desire to sweat overmuch over the effort?)

"I have come to interest you in some brewery stock of which I have the honor of being the agent. I represent the Old Misery Brewery. This is a standard company and is now capitalizing in preparation for opening and expanding its business. To a select number we are offering a place on the ground floor which you can reach at one effortless step as it is level with the earth."

I squirmed in my chair, wondering what I had said or done at any time in my life, or even thought in my most thoughtless moment, that anyone should dare to suggest to me stock in a brewery; a Methodist preacher buying stock in a brewery. Squirming more my mind next leaped to the question, "Who, now, has played this joke on me and given my name as a prospective purchaser of brewery stock?"

But Mr. Sellfast did not seem to note in the least my squirming, perhaps mistaking it for eagerness to reach the proposition and the price.

"We are selling this stock at One Dollar per share. It will be worth Ten Dollars in no time." (I had caught my breath a time or two, but had not found a place to speak).

Then came the supporting arguments and examples.

"The woeful and unspeakably desperate condition of our country today, with all its kidnaping, ganging and racketeering, is due to Prohibition. There is not a virtuous girl to be found in the country. All of them, with the young men, drink and carouse. That is what Prohibition has done." (When he said that the blood leaped to my face, and through the haze I saw the faces of my own wife and daughters, and the hundreds of Methodist young people I had seen at summer assemblies, and the hundred girls who had graduated under my care and gone out to noble and beautiful womanhood). He kept on.

A man has just bought from me $500 worth in the name of his fourteen-months-old baby boy. The clergy are buying this stock. You will want some of it, I am sure. Why, by the time this fourteen-months-old boy is twenty-one this stock will be worth Forty Dollars a share, unless the people go crazy again and return to Prohibition."

"I hope they will go crazy," I burst in upon him.

This seemed to shock him. Will you give me the names of some of our preachers who have bought your stock?" I asked. "No, I am not at liberty to do that. Here is the name of a priest up here on Rockless Street. He bought some."

With that brief break I began to ask a few questions.

"Just what church do you represent?"

"I have nothing to do with the churches. But what does that have to do with this stock?"

SOME SALIENT POINTS IN THE PAGEANT TO BE STAGED BY WHITWORTH COLLEGE AT "A CENTURY OF PROGRESS" EXHIBIT ON MISSISSIPPI DAY, SEPTEMBER 23

"A CENTURY OF PROGRESS IN THE HIGHER EDUCATION OF WOMEN IN MISSISSIPPI"

In the portrayal of the story of the higher education of women in Mississippi, dresses worn by the ladies in each period of 115 years back, will be exhibited, including the bustle, hoop skirt, and hobble skirt. The very language used in the old South of one hundred years ago will be used in this very beautiful pageant, which is written in rime and of the old style classical English, especially that part of it that tells of Elizabeth Academy, founded in 1818 at old Washington, the territorial capitol and first state capitol of Mississippi, which town is five miles from Natchez. Jefferson College for boys, founded in 1862 stands just a few hundred yards from old Elizabeth Academy campus. It is still in operation. It is said that Jefferson Davis attended Jefferson College, and that Mrs. Jefferson Davis (Varina Howell), who lived near there, attended Elizabeth Academy.

The Elizabeth Academy charter, granted in February, 1819, was the first institution chartered by the new State Legislature. It conferred upon the Trustees of the Academy the authority to determine the curriculum of the Academy, which, although offering courses of collegiate grade, was called an Academy doubtless because so few people believed at that time that a woman could take a college education. As early as 1826 Elizabeth Academy conferred what is reputed to be the first college degree ever conferred upon a woman, — Domina Scientiarum. John Audubon, America's great naturalist, was a member of Elizabeth Academy faculty, and this doubtless accounts for the degree, Mistress of Science, being conferred. It is not claimed that Elizabeth Academy conferred the Bachelor's degree.

The President of the Board of Trustees of the school, Dr. W. W. Winans, said of Elizabeth Academy that it marked "the intellectual emancipation of women." A century of the most marvelous progress in the history of civilization now testifies to the prophetic vision of this old seer in education. The fact that we have made more progress in the past century than in ten centuries previous, as is claimed by most historians, — in science, invention, and the spread of the doctrines of the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man, is doubtless due to this recognition of the equality of men and women intellectually. Elizabeth Academy was given by a woman, Mrs. Elizabeth Roach, who had moved to Mississippi from Philadelphia, to the Mississippi Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The Board of Trustees of Elizabeth Academy named the school in her honor.

At the end of four years of statehood, the capitol of Mississippi was moved from Washington to Jackson. By 1846 Washington had become a mere village. The buildings of the Academy burned and it was not deemed wise to attempt to re-build at that location. In 1857 a Methodist local preacher, Rev. M. J. Whitworth, on whose land the town of Brookhaven had just been laid out, gave a campus and raised money and erected some buildings for a college right in the heart of the town, only two blocks from the railroad station. He gave this property to the Mississippi Annual Conference of the Methodist Church. The school named Whitworth College in his honor was opened in 1858. It is, therefore, this year celebrating the Diamond Jubilee of its opening. The pageant, "A Century of Progress in the Higher Education of Women," has been written to be staged on the college campus, November 17. At the request of the management of the World's Fair, the pageant is to be staged in Chicago on September 23, which is Mississippi Day. In addition to portraying the history of Elizabeth Academy and seventy-five years of Whitworth College history, Mississippi State College for women will, also, be represented because Anne Coleman Peyton, the founder of M. S. C. W., was educated at Whitworth College, and as a member of the faculty, began the agitation that resulted in establishing the first tax-supported college for women in the world, which will next year celebrate the 50th anniversary of its founding.

The fact that Mississippi has more women's colleges than any other state in the union will, also, be brought out in the pageant. This is a thrilling story and of national and international value. It is believed that comparatively few people know that it was in this, the heart of the South, that the higher education of women was first advocated and realized.

The pageant has been written by one best fitted for such task, Mrs. Janie Drake Cooper of Church Hill, Mississippi. She is the granddaughter of Dr. B. M. Drake, the most distinguished president of Elizabeth Academy, whose wife was herself a graduate of that institution. Miss Janie Drake was at the head of the English Department of Whitworth College and was Dean of the College for some years. She then became the wife of the late distinguished president of that institution, Dr. I. W. Cooper. For twenty-three years she was officially connected with this college for women that is now celebrating its Diamond Jubilee.

At the reception in the pageant, distinguished men and women who have been connected with these three colleges will be represented. Many of them will be there in person. Those represented will include Jefferson and Mrs. Davis, Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Winans, Dr. and Mrs. Drake, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Audubon, and C. C. Claybourne, Territorial Governor of Mississippi, who went from old Washington to New Orleans to receive the Louisiana Purchase, and became the first Territorial Governor of Orleans Territory, now the state of Louisiana, and the first Governor of Louisiana, which was admitted into the Union under that name in 1812. Some of the outstanding characters in the development of Whitworth College will likewise be represented. Rev. M. J. Whitworth, Dr. Harvey M. Johnson, Bishop Charles Betts Galloway, Dr. A. F. Watkins, Bishop W. B. Murrah, and Dr. I. W. Cooper, who have been presidents of the school but who have passed on, will be impersonated by members of their families. Dr. H. G. Hawkins, the only living ex-president of the institution and his wife, Anne Galloway Hawkins will be there in person, as well as Dr. G. F. Winfield, who is in charge of the institution at the present time, and Mrs. G. F. Winfield; also, Dr. D. M. Key, president of the Millsaps system of Colleges, and Mrs. D. M. Key. Whitworth College is a member of the Millsaps system of Colleges.

Distinguished presidents of Mississippi State College for Women will likewise be impersonated, including Ex-Governor H. L. Whitfield and Dr. John C. Fant; and the present president, Dr. B. L. Parkinson, and Mrs. Parkinson, have been invited to be there in person. Also, many distinguished alumnae of Whitworth College will be present or represented. Mrs. Arne Coleman Peyton, the founder of Mississippi State College for Women, will be represented by her daughter, Miss Mary Lou Peyton, who is a member of the faculty of M. S. C. W. Mrs. Kavanaugh, wife of Bishop H. H. Kavanaugh, will be represented. Mrs. Longino and Ex-Governor A. H. Longino will be there. Miss Tallulah Ragsdale, an authoress, one of three Mississippi women whose biographical sketches are found in Who's Who in America, Mrs. B. M. Sholars of Monroe, Louisiana, and Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Moreton, Sr. Mr. Moreton's father built the first building, and his mother graduated in the first class following the Civil War, in 1867, and is still living in Brookhaven. Mrs. S. E. Moreton herself is a graduate of Whitworth College, and Mr. Moreton is President of the Board of Trustees, Governor and Mrs. Conner, as well as many of the other present day distinguished citizens of Mississippi will be at the reception, which is a part of the pageant at the Fair.

WILLIAM WINANS DRAKE

An Appreciation by Rev. W. W. Holmes, D.D.

For forty and four years, Dr. W. W. Drake was a faithful and effective preacher in the Louisiana Conference. He has answered here his last roll call and has been transferred to the Conference of the Redeemed and has been appointed to the City of God where all time limit is removed and where memorial services are never held.

I was intimately associated with Dr. Drake in the work of our church in Louisiana for more than a quarter of a century. I knew him as a preacher, as a pastor, as a presiding elder, as an evangelist, as a teacher, as an efficient member of several of the great Boards of the Church. In all of these relationships his service was of a very high order.

He was a modest man, and was willing to come into the limelight only when his work brought him there. He was a friendly man, yet he had a certain reserve beyond which no friend was invited. He was wonderfully sympathetic with others, yet he bore his own sorrows alone. His joy and good will he shared fully with others. His cackling laugh was contagious, and on many occasions relieved a tension and saved the day.

His consuming passion was faithfulness to duty as he saw it. He was a devoted friend, yet the cause of Christ and the Church always came first with him. He was ambitious, yet he never sought preferment or promotion at the expense of his brethren or the best interest of his church. He gave his very best to any task assigned him by the church. In everything he was absolutely dependable. He was a good man.

TODAY'S CHALLENGE TO METHODISM

We doubt if within a generation the churches have faced a more distinct challenge than they face in this hour. The world needs their ministry and leadership. It might be thought that the world is not aware of this need but there are many evidences that it is. It is a disturbed world and its people are uncertain what direction to take. In this time of uncertainty the attitude of the people is perplexing. The churches are failing to reach the vast majority of them. They manifest an indifference that is startling. People are attending church in large numbers it is true and the total increase in membership is gratifying. It is also gratifying that in this protracted depression the churches have been able to carry on far better than most business enterprises. But the fact remains that the churches today are not reaching the vast majority of the people in an effective way. The church faces this challenge of indifference and will gain nothing by ignoring it or by trying to explain it. In a recent article by Rev. C. Ensor Walters on "London's Challenge to Methodism," the writer says: "Let there be no mistake. There is a tremendous war being waged throughout the world against the Christian faith. In some areas there is fierce opposition to religious propaganda. It is true that this attitude is often disguised as zeal for certain political and economic beliefs. But this makes the attack more dangerous. We are up against a fierce materialism, a denial of God, the miraculous and the soul." American Protestantism probably never faced a more severe attack than it faces now, and was never nearer temporary defeat. The mere fact that its opponents are willing to attack it is proof that they see or think they see its weakness. It is a melancholy fact that members of our churches in large numbers justify this judgement of our opponents.

What about Methodism? We have been for a hundred years in the front trenches and quite naturally must be in the line of attack. It is a position of honor but more important than that it is a position of responsibility. By reason of our numbers and because of our historic tolerance our church must have a large share in winning the next battle if it is won. This is not just cause for pride but it carries responsibility that ought to be sobering. Are we willing to pay the price that must be paid if we do our share in this tragic hour? It will be a heavy price and unless we are willing to pay it we might well retire from the field.

We must repossess the spirit of our fathers. This is another day it is true and we do not plead for any outworn methods effective in their day. But we do plead for the devotion and unselfishness our fathers had. We must be willing to take the hard road, the unselfish road, the obscure place. Our ministry must lead the way and set the pace. They cannot do this by thinking of their own preferment, or honors, or ease. Some of them must be willing if need to die for a cause. In the face of the present situation a self-seeking spirit would be intolerable. — Editorial in Southwestern Advocate.

BISHOP DOBBS SAYS—

As we survey the past thirty years of epoch-making events, we have cause to do so with faith and courage—and not with doubt and fear. The spread of knowledge, the growth of science, the increase of wealth, the unprecedented expansion of Christian thought and Christian enterprise, and the increasing desire, and effort to co-ordinate more perfectly the life and work of the world—all these cause thoughtful men to pause and weigh carefully their meaning. Much of it perplexes. Some of it is disappointing. But there is much of it which is cheering and full of hope. The conviction deepens that our day and generation may be just as competent to deal with its problems as have been the generations preceding us. In fact no generation has ever been wise enough to legislate for generations unborn.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott, Contributing Editor

We must be on our guard lest we let the economic situation drive us from the well defined plans and purposes of our church. Our training and evangelistic work are like the two rails of the railroad—both are absolutely necessary. One should not be substituted for the other. Those who would cause a prejudice of one against the other are not helping the cause but hurting it. The churches where we have had the most training work usually produce the best revivals. Such a small number of our officers of the church have taken any training at all till it is folly for any one to think we are going too far in that field of work. Every local church will do well to have a well defined plan of leadership training, also a well defined evangelistic plan throughout the entire year. I have watched carefully the rural churches where workers have been trained and in nearly every case more is paid the pastor and more on benevolences than those churches which neglect it. It is also true that they receive more on profession of faith each year. There is no conflict. The Holy Spirit calls and points to the Savior and then he leads in training the believers to be workmen "that needeth not be ashamed."

The Methodist itinerant system has proven to the world its wisdom and economy. It works as efficiently in times of depression as in times of prosperity. The churches are given a variety of ministry so as to take care of the many types of people within the churches. Most pastors are men of one-track-mind. The type of work they do throughout their ministerial life is largely colored by the association with older ministers during the first five years of their preaching; their mental temperament and the type of work to which they are sent. There is one who thinks the church work revolves around pastoral visiting so he devotes a great amount of time to it to the neglect of some other very important phase of the work. Occasionally we have a man who thinks revival meetings will solve every problem in every church so he has a bias against people who take an interest in Sunday school or young people's work. Then we have the preacher who thinks if he could get his workers together and train them he would make heaven on earth. Occasionally there is a brother who has the conception that sermon delivering is the highest work a preacher can do; so he studies sermonic materials and lets the heart life of his people go uncultivated. What if a church has to put up with any one of these types for ten or twelve years? The beauty of our system is that it does not have to do that for we keep our churches well rounded-up by a variety. "There are diversities of gifts but the same Spirit. There are differences of administration but the same Lord."

Many of our churches with several hundred members have entirely too many organizations within the church. It is a human impossibility to run them all with any degree of efficiency. That is where the Local Board of Christian Education comes in to its designed use. Do not hesitate to discontinue an organization in the local church when you see clearly that it has no definite function. Let the Board of Christian Education have courage to place the emphasis on those organizations which that particular church is able to care for with its personnel of workers. We made a great stride at the last General Conference in giving the local church its rightful choice in those matters. The funeral of hundreds of little weak struggling organizations in local churches should be held at once. In many cases we are working our choicest people to nervous exhaustion trying to keep too many groups. Local churches do not have to do that now. Many of those false standards do not exist at all. Let every church take a gait it can keep an dgo along and be happy on its way.

LOUISIANA LEGISLATURE AND PROHIBITION

The Louisiana Legislature may be called to meet in extraordinary session soon, and, among other things to be considered, will likely be a law licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors, to become effective when and if the Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution is repealed. Also prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquor without a license and providing a penalty therefor.

I hope if the Legislature sees fit to enact such

A LAW OF SOMEWHAT SIMILAR NATURE WAS PASSED BY A STATE FURTHER AND TO THE EFFECT THAT NO LICENSE SHALL BE GRANTED FOR THE SALE OF INTOXICATING LIQUORS BE PERMITTED IN THOSE PARISHES AND OTHER TERRITORIAL SUBDIVISIONS WHERE THE SALE OF SUCH LIQUORS WAS PROHIBITED BY LAW WHEN THE EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT BECAME EFFECTIVE. WHERE THE SAID LICENSE HAS BEEN GRANTED BY THE PEOPLE. IT IS ALSO ALSO THAT ANY SUCH PROVISION MAY APPLY TO THE GOVERNING AUTHORITIES FOR IN ORDER TO DETERMINE WHETHER THEY DESIRE TO HAVE THE SALE OF INTOXICATING LIQUORS AS PROVIDED BY LAW. THE SAME OPTION TO APPLY TO THE STATE POLITICAL SUBDIVISION THAT MAY DESIRE TO VOTE TO PROHIBIT THE SALE OF INTOXICANTS.

This, I think, will be the best way to deal with this matter when and if the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed.

If you are at all interested in this matter please see or write your State Senator also your member of the House of Representatives expressing your views. Most legislators that I have known are ready to listen to their constituents if approached in a respectful manner.

If you do not like the suggestion contained in this communication, you may suggest something better that may appeal to the legislators, but don't delay to let your legislators hear from you before the Legislature meets, if practical, for they may not have a long session and your best time is now.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE JUBILEE SESSION OPENS

On Tuesday morning, September 5, Whitworth College opened its Jubilee Year with the registration of a most encouraging attendance of both old and new students.

Formal opening was observed Thursday morning with Prof. W. F. Bond, State Superintendent of Education of Mississippi, as chief speaker.

A marked feature of this year's history of the college will be the pageant, "A Century of Progress in the Education of Woman," which will be staged at the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, and at the session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, which is to be held this year at Brookhaven.

President Winfield and his co-workers are to be congratulated upon their heroic and successful efforts for the school.

TO PASTORS IN LOUISIANA AND ELSEWHERE

Rev. Joe Brown Love has been appointed as university pastor of the First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, La. That he and the church may the better minister to Methodist students in the Louisiana State University, pastors are asked to send him the names of Methodists who will attend the University. It will facilitate Mr. Love's work to know in advance about a particular student, his home church, and the part he has taken in the work of his home church. Kindly write Mr. Love, addressing him at First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, La.

Rev. J. B. Love comes to his present task with fine preparation and experience. He is a graduate of Southwestern; received his A.M. and B.D. at Southern Methodist University; also B.D. at Yale. He was connected for a time with the Department of Schools and Colleges of our Church, his work being that of visiting the churches in university centers. Later he served the students of the University of North Carolina. He comes to his present task from a similar work among the students of the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. He has an able helper in Mrs. Ruth Winfield Love, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Winfield, Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss. Preceding her marriage, Mrs. Love taught in Mansfield College, and later taught in the department of Southern Methodist University, and has taken work in special schools in Chicago.

NOTICE

The next session of the State School for the Deaf, Baton Rouge, La., will begin Monday, September 18. Children will be expected to arrive at the school some time during the day Sunday, September 17, so as to be ready for school the next morning.

The School for the Deaf is maintained by the state for deaf children and for children whose hearing is so poor that they cannot satisfactorily do the work of the regular public schools. There is no cost to those who attend except for clothing and transportation. The school furnishes everything else free. Deaf children and children who are very hard of hearing between the ages of six and twenty-one are accepted as pupils in the school. The session runs nine months, beginning in September and ending usually the first of May.

Parents having deaf children and others knowing of deaf children will confer a favor on these children by sending the information to the superintendent of the School for the Deaf. Further information may be had by writing to A. J. Caldwell, Superintendent School for the Deaf, Baton Rouge, La.

"I am not interested in your stock or anything you represent."

As he turned to go I turned to my desk and to work on the EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY campaign. How I did want some money for the Advocate. I mused: "476 Methodist pastors with their presiding elders, representing 205,000 members. Will they not send us such an increase in subscriptions as shall make it possible for us to fight damnable drink and its retinue of evils? Surely, they will."

Imagine us with an income from a brewery to support the Advocate, if you can. Never! Better a glorious death than an ignoble life.

O ZION HASTE! Dr. Hu Shih, a prominent American educated Chinese philosopher, has been in this country telling about the "Cultural Trends in Modern China." Many interesting things he says of his great country, but skeletons stand by some of them.

China, with the oldest civilization extant, is famous for its peaceful attitudes, and its devotion to its religion. It is therefore quite disturbing when Dr. Hu says that the trend is away from both of these. Whatever may be said of these virtues or the quality of Chinese religion, these things explain the longevity of China. From time to time warring people have invaded China and remained to settle among the Chinese. Some tell of a Jewish colony. Today almost no traces of these people can be found. They have been absorbed.

China has suffered greatly. She is now brutally overrun in large areas by the Japanese. Much has occurred to convince China that the only way to command the respect of the world is by military strength and violence. And even the Christian church has not greatly emphasized the Gospel of Jesus that, "They that take the sword shall perish with the sword." The missionaries themselves have come from those countries who boast of their military achievements.

Says Dr. Hu, "China will need several generations to get over its prejudice against the military and to build up a strong army and navy? Will those generations be long enough for us to save her from our Western folly? This philosopher feels that the trend of Chinese culture is away from all religion, and that the leaders of thought feel religion is an enemy to progress and must be replaced by science. And Stanley Jones has told of the race between Christianity and Communism in that land.

Our church, with other denominations, has too great a stake in China to remain undisturbed or inactive at such revelations as these. We should prepare for a major offensive all along our wide missionary front. It is no time for us to take counsel of our poverty or our former failures. Let us redeem the pledges of Dr. Young J. Allen, Bishop Lambuth and others.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. J. T. Abney, Osyka, Miss., passes beyond his quota and sends in more subscriptions.

Rev. C. B. Powell, pastor of Melder, La., tells of a good revival on his charge with seven accessions to the church.

Mr. C. T. Charles, Sunday school superintendent, at Cruger, Miss., writes a good letter and sends in some subscriptions.

Rev. A. K. McLellan, Conference Secretary of Christian Education, filled the pulpit at First Church, Lake Charles, La., on a recent Sunday.

Mrs. J. R. Dees, Philadelphia, Miss., who has been kept from church for a year, requests the prayers of our Advocate family. Let us not forget it.

Rev. T. E. Gregory, Okolona, Miss., pastor, finishing his fifth year, claims that it has been the best of all. Congratulations to Brother Gregory and his good people.

Those of you who are making a present of the Advocate to some friend, why not drop them a line saying so, and calling their attention to what you think worthwhile in it?

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

Dr. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, has been elected to head up the NRA work in his city and community. It could not have been placed in better hands.

Rev. F. J. McCoy, Pastor at Leesville, La., is one of those fortunate pastors who got off to the Chicago Exposition. He accuses a friend of making the trip possible for him.

L. P. Bailey, Route 2, Coldwater, Miss., tore out a page of his day-book, size 3x5 inches, and dropped us a note saying, "Please extend my subscription from January, 1934, to January, 1935."

How good it is to have a letter and renewal from Rev. M. C. Murphy, that grand man, who, for so many years, served as a supply in the Louisiana Conference. His address is Campti, La.

Brethren, if you do not find mention of the good list of subscriptions sent in by you in this column, you will find it in another column dedicated to that purpose. We want all of you to appear on this Honor Roll.

"I want to say, it can be done, when the pastor will get out after it himself." That is the way Rev. M. W. Porter, pastor, Wiggins, Miss., writes about the anniversary subscription campaign as he sends in his second list.

Our friend of Korntosle Farm, Star, Miss., sends a word of cheer and congratulations. Every time I see his letterhead I can see the corn waving down the long rows, and smell the tassels in bloom. Yes, plain dirt farmer.

The Boys and Girls World Club of our church at Crowley, La., recently assembled at the church for their second meeting. This group includes those who are too young for the Epworth League group. There are great possibilities in this organization.

There are thoughtful people. The other day we had a subscription from a lady, sending a check. These words closed the letter: "For fear that you will have to pay exchange, I'm enclosing a few stamps." Out of town checks do cost us just ten cents each.

Mrs. T. J. Brown, Grenada, Miss., writes a letter commending editorials on prohibition, saying, "Whiskey will never bring stable prosperity to any people." She is not alone in this conviction and there is considerable documentary evidence to support it.

Rev. L. D. Haughton, pastor at Benton, Miss., reports good revivals on his work. Dr. J. L. Decell, pastor, Galloway Memorial, Jackson, Miss., and Rev. T. O. Prewitt, pastor, Millsaps Memorial, Jackson, Miss., are among the good men he has had for his meetings.

A strong note of optimism comes from Rev. W. W. Perry, pastor at Cotton Valley, La., notwithstanding bank failure, short crops and the like. He says, "We carry on." That is the spirit. Who can't whistle when the wind is to your back? This is the grit that goes on.

The tent meeting at Algiers, La., led by Lay Evangelist, Howard S. Williams, Hattiesburg, Miss., assisted by Mrs. Williams, Miss Parmelee and pastors of the community, resulted in much good. Numbers made definite professions, seeking membership in the churches.

Rev. Derwood L. Blackwell, son of Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Blackwell, DeSoto, Miss., is making full proof of his ministry. He is assistant pastor and director of religious education of our First Church, Beaumont, Texas. He recently spoke over Station KFDM in the interest of the Young People's Prohibition Alliance.

Dr. W. W. Holmes, pastor, Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, returned from the Chicago Exposition, reporting many things of interest. Numbers of our pastors availed themselves of the opportunity of this great fair. In numbers of cases individual friends or church congregations made the pastor a present of this trip.

"I am pushing the preachers and laymen to secure subscriptions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Anything I can do let me know. B. L. Sutherland, P. E., Jackson District." Boy, there is lots you can do. Keep at that "pushing." When the Jackson District steps up to the plate we have a right to expect a homer. Let's have it.

"Dear Brother Raulins: You may count on me to send you all the subscriptions I can find in Winona. Will do my best. You must go on. Don't see how we could do without the Advocate and I know the Advocate can't do without a lot of new subscribers. Hail to you! We must succeed. Mine will come in right at the last of the month. E. S. Lewis."

Listen! "Mrs. E. E. Erwin's subscription is paid each year by her mother, Mrs. Betty Erwin, a Baptist, who has been reading the Advocate for seventy years, having lived for many years under the influence of North Mississippi Methodism." That is from Rev. H. B. Hines, our pastor at Lake Providence, La. We like this inter-church goodwill fellowship.

Rev. M. L. McCormick, pastor at Lumberton, Miss., confesses a deep appreciation for his people. He has had three great years on the charge and has seen much growth in the work. The various enterprises of the church are moving beautifully. Rev. Victor Clifford, pastor at Purvis, will lead in the revival meeting set for the week between second and third Sundays of October.

A great meeting at Derma, Miss., is reported by Rev. T. L. Oakes, pastor. Rev. F. M. Ballard, West Point, was the preacher. Other churches of the community participated in the meeting and reaped much of the benefits. Family altars were re-established and new ones erected. There were twenty-nine conversions, eight of whom united with our church, ten going to the Baptist church.

Mr. A. M. Mayo, that up and coming layman of our First Church of Lake Charles, La., saw the little article in the Advocate about the "Alert Pastor." (Did you see it?) Straightway he renewed his subscription saying, "Some time when a preacher stays all night with us, I do want a church paper at least, for him to read." I wonder if there are any preachers not reading the Advocate and pulling for it. How would you classify them?

A unique service was recently held at First Church, Little Rock, Ark., of which Dr. Claude M. Reeves is pastor. The children of Methodist preachers made the service a memorial to their fathers who have spent their years in our ministry. Among the preachers and children mentioned we find the names of Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, and daughter, Mrs. Gordon Hastings; Rev. A. J. Coburn and son, W. J. Coburn.

A very interesting and helpful meeting recently closed at Slidell, La., where Rev. B. D. Watson is pastor. A great tent was secured and pitched on a convenient spot. Pastors from New Orleans and elsewhere did the preaching from evening to evening. Other churches of Slidell co-operated. Crowds ranged from three hundred to seven hundred. Rev. Harry W. Brown, local preacher, was chairman of the arrangement and deserves much credit for the success of the meeting.

Blessed be those who help to keep the editor on an even keel. Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor at Franklin, La., commends the editorials on the Lord's Supper, but reminds of error in statement as to the number of sacraments observed by the Roman Catholics. We thank him for this service and list the sacraments: Baptism, Holy Communion, Confirmation, Penance, Extreme Unction, Orders and Marriage. We appreciate the many words of approval of these editorials.

Dr. Lawrence L. Cowen, pastor of our Central Methodist Church, of Meridian, Miss., has received one hundred and forty seven (147) new members since Conference and has baptized thirteen (13) infants, giving the church a membership of 1,584 which makes it the third largest of any Methodist church in the state of Mississippi. All of these members have been secured through "Personal Evangelistic" efforts of the pastor and his people, as no revival services have so far been held by the church.

What are you going to do about this? Mr. H. G. Wells, who has attracted a rather wide range of interest and attention, keeps on writing books. A late one is, "The Shape of Things to Come." He claims that the next sixty years will bring the following things to mankind: 1940, "Another and Final War;" 1945, "Era of Crime;" 1950, "Relaxation of the British Empire;" 1950 "The Raid of Germs;" 1960, "Disruption of the American Republic;" 1968, "Great Land-Slip in British Isles;" 1990, "Emergence of Genuine 'World State.'"

Anything happening to my old pastors interests me greatly. From Rev. H. P. Lewis, pastor at Rosedale, Miss., along with a good list of subscriptions, comes the statement that his wife has left him. That is bad enough for any man, but for a preacher, well, there isn't much left of him when his wife leaves him. But he checks our tears by saying that, after a vacation of about three months in Honolulu, with their youngest son, Donald, she will return to him. This vacation is the gift of the two boys: Henry Polk, Jr., and Donald.

Do you know Rev. C. C. Clark, pastor at Waynesboro, Miss.? He has taken our EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY quite seriously. When his good presiding elder, Dr. J. T. Leggett, called upon him for his quota he wrote down 15. "But," says he, "we were so much interested in seeing the Christian Advocate continued that we decided to double the quota. Waynesboro is under the NRA when it comes to the Christian Advocate. We have faithful and loyal people, whom it is a pleasure to serve." But his arithmetic went "haywire" on him somehow. He has passed beyond the 30 mark and is not exhausted yet. Who'll beat him?

The Bible Institute Colportage Association of Chicago (founded by D. L. Moody) has been sending New Testaments, Gospels of John, Pocket Treasury, Moody Colportage books, Evangel booklets, and gospel tracts this summer to the Re-forestation Camps for distribution by chaplains and associated Christian workers. There are over 300,000 men located in 1,500 camps, and many of them are glad to receive and read such literature. Thus far reading matter has been provided for 182 camps for distribution among 38,000 men. Those who desire to have fellowship with the Association in forwarding grants of such literature to the remaining camps within the next two months are invited to send their contributions promptly to 843 North Wells Street, Chicago.

DR. S. H. WERLEIN PASSES OVER

On Wednesday morning, August 30, eleven o'clock, Dr. S. H. Werlein, for many years a prominent figure in Louisiana Methodism, passed away at his home on the Seashore Methodist Assembly Ground, Biloxi, Miss.

Dr. Werlein had preached at the Tabernacle on the Sunday before his going, and appeared to be in fine spirits. On Tuesday his heart began to fail. Realizing the end was near, he summoned his loved ones for final words. Then his princely soul went home to God.

We shall expect shortly a memorial paper for the readers of the Advocate.

IN MEMORIAM

(Rev. S. H. Werlein and I were fellow-students in Emory and Henry College sixty years ago. There was never a cloud on our friendship. Let me lay this little tribute to his memory on his new-made grave).

His sun has set, his spirit gone to God.
We lay his body 'neath the sacred sod.
We call it death, but rather it is life—
Life free from toil, and pain, and mortal strife.

DR. S. H. WERLEIN

How calm the end. How peaceful is his sleep!
Why should we mourn, and in our sorrow weep?
The flowers which we lay upon his grave
Rebuke our grief, and bid our hearts be brave.

He kept the faith; his sword was ever bright,
And wielded in the cause of truth and right.
But he has laid his shining armor by,
And gone to live with Christ in bliss on high.

His harp is mute, its music heard no more.
His lips are still; but on that other shore
He lifts his voice with angel choirs to sing
The lofty praises of our Lord and King!

We follow on. The crossing is not far.
For some there shines even now the evening star
O, may our sleep like his at last be sweet,
And we awake our Savior's smile to meet.

LOUISE PRESTON MEMORIAL FUND

So far, we have received approximately two-thirds of the thirty-six subscriptions to the Advocate for the Sanatorium from the various young people's groups. We thank every group sending a dollar, but we cannot give all the names at present, as some were sent direct to the Advocate, which is perfectly all right. Will every group that has not sent its dollar do so before September 15? Send it direct to the Advocate, or to Miss Louise Green, 900 Main Street, Hattiesburg, or to myself. We thank you one and all.

THE PAPERS SAY THAT--

"Big Jim" Farley is quoted as saying that the prohibition laws will be enforced and should be enforced. The number of prohibition enforcement officers has been cut down. More than 1,000 and hundreds of ships—principally of the rum-chaser type—have been dropped from the active forces of the Coast Guard. With the relaxation of prohibition enforcement, resulting from the drastic reduction of enforcement agents and the sharp cut in the Coast Guard, the liquor smugglers have become increasingly bold in the last few weeks. Foreign rum ships again are appearing off the Eastern coast of the United States in considerable numbers.

Do you find it easy to put much faith in anything that "Big Jim" says about prohibition? Doesn't the very name, "Big Jim," almost prejudice you from the start?

And you are not surprised that rum smuggling should follow close upon the heels of recent action about prohibition enforcement. You are rather surprised that anyone should be surprised. Nothing is going to change the character of liquor. The late Senator Edward Ward Carmack, martyr to the cause, remarked that the saloon was not subject to reform, therefore it must be destroyed.

Billy Sunday says: "I can't continue to preach prohibition and preach the Gospel. I am not as young as I used to be, and the load is too heavy, so I am returning to my first love—preaching the Gospel."

Billy, it doesn't sound like you. I cannot imagine Amos issuing any such statement about the evils of his day, regardless of the prospects of winning against them. And I am unable to get Paul into that sort of picture either.

There is a whole load of "bunk" in this attempt to distinguish between great moral issues and the Gospel, and scores of preachers are joining the false prophets at this point. What is the Gospel? Billy, you better go back and look that matter up.

Paul and Silas got beat up and jailed over at Philippi because they tackled some popular sins. The next morning's Philippi Chronicle carried a statement like this from the great evangelist: "I can't continue to preach against soothsaying and the profits made by a bunch of gangsters out of a poor, helpless girl, and preach the Gospel. I am not as young as I used to be, and the load is too heavy, so I am returning to my first love—preaching the Gospel." No, it did not, not on your life. Read Luke's statement about the whole thing. It appears in Acts 16.

Billy, if the matter of prohibition is not matter of the Gospel you ought never to have preached it. You should have reformed long ago. Preaching the Gospel is easier for an old man, is it? It is a lighter load, is it?

And, Billy, I notice that the wet papers are commending your action, and many others will rejoice that you have decided to "keep out of politics and confine yourself to the old-time Gospel."

But, just a minute, Billy. I hate to see a soldier like you sheathing his sword and mumbling such stuff as he goes down the western slope toward sunset and night. Good night, Billy.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

We are entering the "home stretch" of the conference year. With the coming of harvest time, the N. R. A., and the usual revival of life that come with the fall of the year we should close the year's work with success. In these two closing months every effort should be made to raise the benevolences of our church. Just an amount equal to one dollar paid by every member of the church in our conference would give very great relief and make the work of our church go forward. Many can and will give much more than this and all can give something. It is the business of the organization of the church to see that every member has a chance to give. Small amounts from every one will make a large sum in the total.

Rev. W. P. Bailey, on the Dubbs and Evansville charge, is doing things as he usually does. He has recently had a Daily Vacation School, Cokesbury class for training his work rs and a splendid revival meeting in which he did the preaching. Rev. E. M. Sharp of the Rienzi charge led the singing and taught the Cokesbury training class.

Few charges have the record that the Becker circuit has. Led by the consecrated and efficient pastor, Rev. L. B. Wimberly, there have been five Daily Vacation Schools held. Sunday School Day has been observed in every church; two of the churches had representatives at the training school at Amory; revival meetings have been held in all of the churches; three of the four churches participated in the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise. Every organization on the charge is live and doing excellent work. A vacation school was held on the roadside, where there was no church building for children who never go to Sunday school. However, a Sunday school is being organized for them. Such work counts for the building of the Kingdom.

The September meeting of the Local Church Board of Christian Education is the most important one of the year. At this meeting the officers and teachers of the Sunday school are elected for another year. Plans for promotion day are made. Plans for the next year's work are projected. If this board has not met before it should meet this time. No officer or teacher, except the few whose election is provided for differently, can be elected by any other agency than by this board. This law of the church should be observed just as closely as that which provides for the appointment of the pastor or any other legal provision of our church. The officers and teachers should be publicly installed. If you desire a plan for the installation of the officers and teachers of your Sunday school write me and I will be glad to furnish you one.

Vacation time is over now. No doubt every Daily Vacation School that will be held has already been held. Have you made the report of this school to anybody? If you need a report blank write me and I will send you one.

Now is the time to begin planning for the observance of Childhood and Youth Week in October. Write me for helps if you do not have them already. This is a time when the adults get busy and do things for the children and youth of the church. A time when the church and home come closer together in the great task of Christian education. The churches that observe this week in their program find it very valuable.

Let us do the best we can with what we have, but be sure and do our best. When we do our best, God will do the rest.

R. G. LORD.

On the label is Mrs. M. C. Hunt, 404 E. Grove St.

It is of great interest to me, on account of its age, and because it was my mother who subscribed for it. I am getting some antiques together to put in Emory Museum. If they care to accept this, I will put it with my treasures there.

I will let Mr. Chalmers, of the Seashore Camp Grounds, see it. I thought the above would interest you, and for that reason am writing you.

Very truly yours,

SHALL WE EXTEND CLERGY RIGHTS TO WOMEN?

This is a matter that is being discussed on every hand today—this matter of women preachers. In our Methodist Church, the Council has flooded our periodicals and our local auxiliaries with information on the "status of women in the church."

Our August Missionary Program was built around this theme. In our Missionary Meeting at Athens, La., quite a lively discussion was held on this topic. It seems that we disagree with Council. Emphatically we do not want clergy rights for women. We are content to continue to bear and rear clergymen.

Tells How Cardui

Stopped Cramping

"Several years ago, when I was younger, I was advised to take Cardui for cramping and irregular trouble," writes Mrs. Esther L. Dodson, of Lowry City, Mo. "It helped me and stopped the cramping. I feel that my good health is due to Cardui, and I can certainly recommend it to other women."

When womanly aches and pains and cramps are due to weak, run-down condition, take Cardui.

Quick Relief for Chills and Fever and Other Effects of Malaria!

Don't put up with the suffering of Malaria—the teeth-chattering chills and the burning fever. Get rid of Malaria by getting the infection out of your system. That's what Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic does—destroys and drives out the infection. At the same time, it builds up your system against further attack.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic contains tasteless quinine which kills the infection in the blood. It also contains iron which builds up the blood and helps it overcome the effects of Malaria as well as fortify against re-infection. These are the effects you want for COMPLETE relief. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is pleasant to take and absolutely safe, even for children. No bitter taste of quinine. Get a bottle today and be forearmed against Malaria. For sale at all stores.

We are told that women do not have a representative place on our official boards. Conference and General Boards, etc. We are satisfied to have our husbands, fathers and sons represent us on such bodies and would like to continue to push them forward while we occupy the background. Too long men have told us that religion is for women and children. We want them to see that this statement is untrue. We want our men in the prominent places. We desire to see every official board of every local church composed entirely of men wherever it is possible to find men who will earnestly undertake this responsibility.

No one would minimize the part of women in the church. Without us the church would suffer great loss; many churches could not possibly operate without its loyal women members. We have our place and it is a big one. Truly God gave to women the larger and nobler task when He made us mothers and wives. There is no higher calling than this. We do not feel that we are inferior because we cannot preach. We simply feel that preaching is outside the sphere of usefulness of women. We have our God-given tasks and pray that we may not fall down or fail in our responsibility.

We missionary women of Athens, La., wish to enter our protest against the movement to license women to preach.

Zone No. Six of the Vicksburg District held a most pleasant meeting with the Percy Creek Auxiliary on August 2, 1933. Mrs. Whittington, our leader, presided. The meeting opened with a song, "Glory to His Name." Rev. J. H. Morrow, of Gloster, led the devotionals, reading from the 19th chapter of St. John. Rev. E. A. King, pastor of the Centerville charge, led in prayer.

The welcome address by Mrs. Jim Lessley was responded to by the following original poem from Mrs. W. P. Morris of Gloster.

To Lessley, to Lessley, to Lessley we go,

To our zone meeting, four cars in a row.

To us, indeed, this is a great treat. And, as you see, our crowd is complete.

We are here almost one hundred per cent,

For this is a very important event. So let us wholeheartedly take part in the work, Assured at no time our duty to shirk.

We all have our problems to work out today—

We trust we can do it in the very best way.

To our zone chairman we have this to say:

She's a very fine leader in every way.

And the people of Lessley, we are told,

Are truly worth their weight in gold.

So we are assembled on Percy Creek For this one reason: a blessing to seek.

For this we will ask our Saviour above,

Who always overshadows us with His love.

We appreciate the welcome you have extended to us;

May God bless you and keep you Until in another zone meeting we greet you.

MRS. W. P. MORRIS.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Miss Stricker sang, "In the Garden." A letter from Mrs. Carter concerning the Mission Study was read by Mrs. Cottrell, who also explained the standard of excellence.

The Rev. Mr. Black dismissed us for dinner, which was served at the home of Mrs. Lessley.

The afternoon session began soon after dinner with the singing of the song "Jesus Saves." Devotionals were led by the Rev. Mr. Black. Following was a paper, "Where are we now in Prohibition?" by Mrs. Dooley. Mrs. Shelton then gave a reading, "Self-Examination." Ella Sue Hardy favored the meeting with a story. Mrs. Cottrell introduced Miss Mabel Killingsworth, a student from Scarritt, who gave a very interesting description of the work at Scarritt.

Mrs. Cottrell and Mrs. Hagaman gave us most helpful talks on the work. After giving Percy Creek a rising vote of thanks for their hospitality, the meeting was dismissed by the Rev. Mr. King.

WACO, TEXAS, SPEAKS A WORD

Gentlemen:

Inclosed herewith you will find one dollar for the renewal of my subscription. This paper has been coming to my desk since December, 1905. At that time I was teaching in the public schools at Rose Hill, Mississippi. Two years later I joined the Mississippi Conference and remained in that Conference until March, 1922, at which time I transferred to Texas. But my subscription to the New Orleans Christian Advocate has not been allowed to expire.

Very cordially yours,
JOHN W. CHISHOLM.

WOMEN'S PAINS

EASED QUICKER
BY LIQUID MEDICINE

Why prolong your discomfort waiting for solid pain remedies to dissolve in your stomach? When you take Capudine for periodic pain, rheumatic or neuralgic pain, headaches, or aches due to colds, you needn't wait for relief because Capudine is liquid and its ingredients are already dissolved. Your system absorbs them at once. Soothing relief follows immediately.

Use Liquid

YOUSURE HAS. THERE MUST BE SOME-THING TO THAT IDEA OF CHEW-ING IT.

It's the chewing that makes Feen-a-mint so much better than ordinary laxatives. The chewing spreads the laxative gradually through the intestines producing a safe, natural action. No sudden jolts or harsh, irritating action. And it tastes just like a piece of minty chewing gum.

Eightieth Anniversary Celebration

Since our last report on subscriptions received on the Eightieth Anniversary Special Subscription Offer of $1.00 per year the Business Manager has been kept busy night and day revising expiration dates of old subscribers and entering the names of new ones on our mailing list as a result of the interest taken by many of our pastors in circulating the Conference organ among the membership of their respective churches at the greatly reduced subscription price.

Due to numerous requests by pastors who have been away from their work during August on vacations and holding meetings, and since the full quota of subscriptions assumed by the pastors of the three Conferences has not as yet been secured, the Chairman of the Publishing Committee has authorized us to continue the $1.00 offer through the month of September. Pastors who have not already done so are urged to canvass their membership for Advocate subscriptions at their earliest convenience and forward same to our office before October 1.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT LEADS

The pastors of the Hattiesburg District, under the capable leadership of their presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Leggett, have moved into first place in number of subscriptions secured, and enjoy a margin of 54 subscriptions over the Seashore District, led by Rev. Otto Porter. It is interesting to note that the presiding elders of these two districts are both members of the Advocate Publishing Committee.

Only one pastor, Rev. J. B. Cain, Main Street, Hattiesburg, has succeeded in passing Rev. C. C. Clark, Waynesboro, also of the Hattiesburg District, for individual honors. Brother Cain has secured a total of 42 subscriptions, and is closely followed by Brother Clark with 36. Other pastors securing more than 20 are: W. B. Alsworth, Picayune, Seashore District, 31; R. H. Harper, First Church, Baton Rouge District, 29; H. A. Gatlin, Columbia, Seashore District, 25; W. F. Roberts, Dubach, Ruston District, 22, and H. P. Lewis, Rosedale, Greenville District, 21.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

ENCEPHALITIS LETHARGICA is the name of that dread malady which seems to have taken such a hold upon the city of St. Louis with cases here and there at other points over the country. There is the case of one young lady who is now well on toward the close of her second year of "sleeping sickness." Day after day she is massaged and fed by means designed to keep her alive. At various times she has shown signs of waking but lapses again into sleep.

The disease is all the more distressing because of seeming inability to locate causes, without a knowledge of which all treatment must be more or less guesswork. The United States Health Department and other medical authorities and students are putting their best efforts on the fearful sickness. Numbers of cases have already succumbed to the ravage. How soon it may be understood and checked no one seems to be able to say.

Encephalitis lethargica alarms us. We do not know at what time there may be a case next door or in our own homes. It is baffling.

Pastors, have you not seen something of it in religious form in your congregations? Do you understand the malady of spiritual sleeping sickness? Can you account for the religious indifference with which the pastor has to struggle? You note some of the symptoms. It is marked by absence from church except on rare occasions. Church vows are forgotten and seem to mean nothing. Golf and fishing seem to take the place of Sunday worship. Moral laziness develops. Few cases are being saved. Numbers have lost practically all connection with the church. You still carry their names on your register, but it is little more than a list of names.

Can you diagnose the condition? If so how are we to treat it? Surely we cannot ignore it. Religiously it seems to be contagious. It passes from one to another. The father or mother contracts it. As the children grow up they succumb to it. The whole family is lost to the church. They continue to be interested in politics, sports, and society; but so far as the church is concerned they sleep on. No, they do not sleep in the church. They do not come to church.

Cases have been known to go for years, then upon the occasion of some crisis, accident or extreme illness they have shown signs of interest. They have sent for the preacher. They want him to pray. And they want the preacher to conduct the funeral in case death comes. After the funeral is over they will come to church for a few Sundays then disappear again.

What is to be done about it? Certainly we cannot afford to become indifferent to this alarming situation in many of our churches. Is it possible for a pastor to contract a form of it that renders him insensible to this condition among his members, so that he smiles about it when he speaks of it? A scripture writer referred to that condition as "ease in Zion."

It might be well for us preachers to start with a careful examination of ourselves. Let us not excuse ourselves from a heroic effort to cope with the malady just because old methods fail. Let us be as eager as our government and the scientists to cope with encephalitis lethargica. Let us go to the spiritual laboratory and give careful study to the matter. Let us pray for light and guidance and courage. Let us keep giving the best possible pastoral service to all such cases, praying God for revival. He is far more concerned than we can ever be.

Bishop Arthur Moore tells of placing thermometers in a church building. He MAKE ROOM FOR 2,400, was the request of our pastors throughout Louisiana and Mississippi. And they are coming in. We have prepared to entertain that many and more.

We are speaking of the quotas signed by our pastors for our EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY campaign. We promised the Publishing Committee that a minimum of that many would be with us for the celebration. The Committee said, "Go ahead. If they crown you, you may make down your pallet and sleep on the floor."

suggests that a spiritual thermometer hanging on the pulpit will more nearly indicate the spiritual level of the church.

UNCLE SAM, COME OUT of Cuba.

Yes, we understand about that Platt Amendment. That was a kind of arrangement whereby you were to continue as nurse for this baby republic. She is now thirty-five years old. If she has not learned how to find her way around yet the calamity may be due as much to your bad nursing as to her bad ways. At least if she has not, further nursing will be of little value.

Suppose we repeal that Platt business. You know we are in a mood to repeal things. Well, put the Platt Amendment on the skids. Let us try being a partner to Cuba rather than a nurse. There are some promising possibilities in this direction.

I notice that you have rushed your gunboats and marines down there to straighten out the revolution, and to protect some American lives. Are you going to do anything about the money we have invested down there?

It seems sometimes, Uncle, that you act just a little doty. You seem to think you are trying to do something for America when you are risking the lives of our boys for the sake of a few millionaires who have investments down there. That represents a very small fraction of America. Now, of course, those millionaires are not so much worse that we would be if we had the millions. We are not virtuous just because we are poor. To think so is one of our sins. But do not make the mistake of concluding that that small per cent of men who have big investments in Cuba are all of America. I know that the billion and a half dollars invested in Cuba is a whole lot of money. I couldn't even count it. But it won't buy the friendship and confidence of Cuba and it does not go very far toward making us concerned about the real welfare of the "Pearl of the Antilles."

I believe missionaries and investors should go into a country on the same terms. They should go with respect for the people to whom they go, and with faith in their possibilities. Neither of them should expect you to run off down there to help them when the government gets a little rocky. Of course, if they wish to return home, let them pay their fare and come on back. Neither trade nor Gospel that must be protected by gun-boats is worth what it costs. When Jesus saw the mob coming he declined to use the "twelve legions of angels" for his protection. He faced it and took the worst of it. And we still worship him. He declined to come down from his cross, and so should the investors and missionaries.

I just don't like to see you, when there is a little noise down there in Cuba, grab your guns and run off down there to "straighten things out." It doesn't have the ring that it used to have. The glamor of guns is gone. You can find a better way. And I am expecting you to do it.

You are a bit like Simon Peter. He went into the garden of Gethsemane with a sword strapped on himself. Jesus told him to keep his eyes open and watch. He declined to do so. Why should he not sleep if he had his gun handy? And he did sleep. And look what a fool part he played when the crisis came. Let's quit this sleeping through our times of testing. Then when the crisis comes we shall not play the fool.

Anyhow, Uncle Sam, come out of Cuba.

CAN THE PRESIDING ELDER be saved?

Which one, you ask? That is not what I mean, but it may have some bearing on the discussion. I am not talking of men, but of the office. Of course, there is no good way quite of separating between the two. Each affects the other.

Really I am asking, can the presiding eldership be saved? We are not now think-

"JUDGE NOT"

By H. H. Smith

The words of the Master, "Judge not, that ye be not judged," are often misunderstood. "Unkind and frivolous criticism is what is meant," says one eminent Bible scholar. "Judging as a serious and solemn act is not forbidden by Christ. It is indeed often the Christian's duty to judge and severely to condemn things which the world never thinks of judging." Recall Christ's teaching: "If thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone; if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother."

The Master did not teach His followers that they should bear unjust treatment in silence; but in "judging" or condemning faulty conduct the main object should be to win the offender to the true way of life. Paul exhorted Timothy not only to teach and preach, but also to "rebuken." And Paul knew by experience that some could be won from the error of their way only by severe rebuke. By his severe words he made them "heavy with sorrow," that they might repent and find true Christian joy. A steward of a large city church once said to his pastor: "I think I will resign the office of steward. I haven't the time to devote to the work." His pastor replied: "I think it is time you are resigning. You have been playing with the work of the church long enough. And let me say this very plainly and in Christian love, if you don't take your church and your religion more seriously than you have been doing you are going to be a lost man."

Pretty plain talk! But the pastor said that when he left the charge, shortly afterward, he received a letter from this brother thanking him for his plain words, which had aroused him to begin the Christian life anew, and asked the preacher for his photograph! This reminds us of the saying, "Love, and say what you please."

Another able commentator gives this note on the Master's words about judging: "The censorious spirit is condemned; it is opposed to 'forbearance,' 'fairness in judgment,' that allows for faults, a characteristic ascribed to Jesus Christ himself. In this connection we are reminded of Paul's words, urging forbearance toward those who had scruples against the eating of certain meats and the observance of certain days. The conduct of the brethren who were weak in the faith did not involve a point of morals, and they should not be censured."

We should be careful how we judge each other lest we be guilty of unfair or unjust criticism. We must judge by outward appearance; God alone can know the real motives of the heart. Sometimes we have thought others were plotting against us, only to learn later that they were really trying to act for our best interests. Eli condemned Hannah for being muddle-minded by strong drink, as he observed her lips move but heard no sound. But instead of mumbling senseless words from an alcoholic brain she was devoutly engaged in fervent prayer, a prayer so earnest and importunate that God heard and answered.

Several years ago a postal clerk was convicted of the theft of a registered letter. The records showed that he had receipted for the letter, but no further trace of it could be found. He bore a good reputation and protested his innocence, but the evidence was all against him, and he suffered the penalty of the law. Several years afterward, when some old mail pouches were being repaired at Washington, the letter was found between the linings of an old mail bag. Man's fallible judgment should cause him to be careful how he judges his fellow-man. True Christian love is the only safe guide. We should also bear in mind that the searching words of our Lord about the "mote and the beam" were spoken with reference to judging others.

A JEW LOOKS AT MISSIONS

Mr. George E. Sokolsky, a Jew, the correspondent of the New York Times in China, who has lived in China all his adult life, warmly endorses Christian missions; he has written a long defense of missions against what he thought was unfair and hastily conceived criticism in the report of the Laymen's Inquiry. Coming from a Jew, this is highly significant. Most Methodist preachers have seen Mr. Sokolsky's article, but some high points are here reproduced.

Significance of Missions

"The Christian mission is one of the most vital revolutionary forces in that country. It was the impact of Christianity upon China which opened the carefully erected dykes of obscure seclusion to the full stream of western ideas and practices. Thus China finds herself today attacked by six powerful revolutionary forces, namely, the renaissance, Christianity, the social revolution, nationalism, the industrial revolution, and communism. It is the interplay of these forces upon the Chinese people that creates that order of life there which westerners like to call chaos but which in reality is only the slow and constructive alteration of a huge mass of mankind from a primitive (in some places) and medieval (in others) civilization to a twentieth century political, social, economic, and intellectual life."

Creating Personality

"It is the role that Christianity has played in the creation of a distinctive personality that has made the missions so attractive to me. What does it matter what the numbers of converts are? What matters it whether there is a large or a small number of churches? China will not be saved as a nation by multitudes or by buildings. She requires leadership, and the Christian Mission has done more than its share in the reorientation of the Chinese mind from Confucian selfishness as evidenced by the family system to a social consciousness as evidenced by the effort of an increasingly large number of Chinese men and women to serve China in a modern manner."

"Dr. Sun Yat-sen was a direct product of missionary effort. The Soong family represents the peak of the missionary's influence upon personality, for the father of this household, Charles Jones Soong, was himself a missionary, a teacher of religion and English. Chang Kai-Shek may have, as some believe, become a Southern Methodist to please his mother-in-law, but his outlook altered constructively after he came into direct contact with Christian influences, and his Officers' Moral Endeavor has engendered an altogether new spirit and attitude toward the Chinese masses in the armies under his control.—The Kingdom Call.

PRESIDING ELDERS—NOW AND THEN

By Dr. R. E. Smith, Contributing Editor

In the early days of Methodism in America the presiding elder was necessary:

1. Because most of the pastors were not ordained and could not baptize and administer the Lord's Supper. The coming of the presiding elder at each quarterly meeting meant much more in those days than a dry dialogue between the presiding elder and pastor. It meant baptisms, the Lord's Supper, better preaching, news from the bishops (no church papers, slow mails, etc.), and a revival started.

2. The presiding elder was necessary then for Discipline. In the early days Methodists were known as rigid observers of religious practices. If members persisted in drinking, gambling, dancing, etc., they were "disciplined." And the elder was the mainspring of discipline per force. The young pastor could not be such, and the bishop was too far away. The elder was held in dread—he spared not the rod.

3. The presiding elder was necessary to the itineracy itself. More than half of the traveling preachers after a few years located—married, settled down, but kept preaching as local preachers. It was the presiding elders, bishops (very few), and a host of young men "on trial"—undergraduates—who carried on itineracy and two, three, or four bishops on horseback trying to cover a continent could never have served the itineracy. Nor could a mob of young, beardless, unordained preachers, most of whom never took orders nor remained in the traveling connection, and the hard-riding, capable, consecrated presiding elder served the itineracy. Bishop Asbury lamented, "Matrimony seizes half of our preachers and we lose them." Of course. How could men preach and rear a family on less than $100 a year? Saintly Asbury, himself a bachelor for the Kingdom's sake, insisted that salaries (his own included) not exceed $150. All honor to the presiding elder for his record!

But shall we continue the office, now that all these needs for it are gone? The elder does nothing now that might not be done better without him. He is now a handicap to our superb system. He is a most expensive antique, in the way everywhere we step. He is an extra hurdle—not needed in the race. There is nothing personal in this. It is merely the office under fire. I love the men—never had a personal grudge against one in my life. The men now in the office have my sympathy. They ought to know that the church by an overwhelming majority does not want the office. The laity objects to its expense. The pastors object to its ineffective superintendence. It does not pay its way any more.

Even so, I should not dispose of it suddenly. Eliminate by degrees. Reduce the number. Half of them could make the rounds by enlarging the districts. Take care of the extra half for a few years by continuing the assessment (only reduced) until new circuits and stations can absorb them.

REV. WILLIAM WINANS DRAKE—AN APPRECIATION

By Rev. Elmer C. Gunn

In the passing into the great beyond of Rev. William Winans Drake, D.D., the Louisiana Annual Conference has lost one of its most effective ministers, and the Church at large one of its most faithful servants. The work and character of Dr. Drake were of such nature as to make it certain that he will be missed more and more as the months and the years move on. Having been intimately associated for a number of years with this man of God, I ask the privilege of calling attention to some of the traits of his splendid character.

Evident in all his work and his relations with his fellowmen, was sterling loyalty to his church. It was his privilege to serve where the executives in charge of appointments placed him. On more than one occasion, as some of us well know, he was sent to a different field from that of his first choice. The world knew nothing of any disappointment he may have felt. His work under all circumstances was maintained at the high level of Christian living and Christian leadership. His work was done faithfully and well under the directing hand of loyalty.

Again, one who was associated with Dr. Drake was ever impressed by his utter sincerity. He believed absolutely the doctrines he preached from the pulpits of his Church. No spectre of doubt ever seemed to cross the frontiers of his mind and cast its shadow on the brightness and glory of the messages he brought us. His Gospel was not a gospel of hearsay, nor of the intellect only; it was the Gospel of a deep experience. No one, preacher or layman, ever questioned for a moment, the sincerity of this Godly man.

Then, I would keep ever bright in my own mind the beautiful fact that no bitterness against any person ever had an entry into the pure heart and consecrated soul of Dr. Drake. He must have had people under his ministry who were not most cordial in their relationships with him. All ministers must face such circumstances. But if such folk were found among the flock he served, even those closely associated with him would never learn from any word or act of his that he realized such opposition or reciprocated such evil sentiment. In this particular it has always seemed to me that he was most like the Christ, whose he was and Whom he served.

I would call attention also, to Dr. Drake's unselfish devotion to the task in hand. Whatever the Church gave him to do he did with a will. So utterly wrapped up in his work was he, so conscientious in every particular, that some of his friends thought he overtaxed his strength and perhaps hastened the time of the end of his ministry. However, we may rest assured that even such danger to his health would not have deterred him from doing with a will the work in hand. The philosophy of his ministry was that of unselfish service to humanity and to God. He lived and wrought as a faithful minister of Jesus Christ, strong in the faith and dependent upon the saving grace of Christ.

Dr. Drake's ability was such as to be recognized throughout the Church. He served on Boards and Trusteeships in the bounds of his own Conference and beyond these bounds he helped to direct the work of some of the great institutions of which we are so justly proud. He was a member of the Board of Trust of Southern Methodist University from its founding. So far as the writer knows he never missed a meeting of this Board, it being one of the last of the official duties he was able to render when he attended a meeting of that Board early in June.

For forty-four years he preached the Gospel of Jesus Christ wherever and whenever opportunity offered. He preached the Gospel he lived and loved, and now he has fallen asleep. For some of us the world will be lonely without him. He will be missed by the multitudes who had waited upon his ministry through these years. His gentle spirit was felt in every meeting in which he participated. His splendid counsels, with voice never raised above a conversational tone, with face animated with the "light that never was on land nor sea," were such as always to help forward and never to hinder the progress of the Kingdom of God among the sons of men. Had he been able to choose the time and manner of his going, he might not have thought the hour was come. We who remain to carry on the work he loved must trust in the Gospel he preached, a fundamental truth of which is, "God makes no mistakes." He has passed out of the realm of the shadows of time and circumstances unto the sunlit hills of Eternity. He died as he lived in full faith and confidence that God will keep His own, and that somehow, somewhere, the time having come for us to go, we shall meet where "beyond these voices there is Peace." In this hour of trial we know the consolations of God are able to help us forward and to keep us true.

"Go home content; the evening falls,
Day's tired sinews are urgent;
No more the thrush or linnet calls,
The twilight fades; go home content.

"Father, the field is but half-turned,
And yet the spring is well-nigh spent.
My son, the hour of rest is earned,
The day's work done. Go home content."

DOINGS OF SHREVEPORT DISTRICT

The meeting of the Methodist pastors and lay leaders of the Shreveport District was held in the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, Tuesday morning and afternoon, Sept. 5. Plans were adopted for "The New Deal and the Church" campaign that is to be carried on throughout the district in September and October. Dr. George S. Sexton, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, presided at the meeting.

In announcing the reason for calling the meeting, Dr. Sexton stated that in all of the national recovery plans now carried on throughout the nation, the churches were not included. Character building institutions have not been provided for in America's New Deal nor in the National Recovery Act. Banking, farming, manufacturing—all have been given aid by the government, while the churches, orphan's homes, missionary operations, have been left to their own resources, and it is up to them to put on the "New Deal." National rehabilitation and recovery plans will ultimately fail unless the churches and character-building institutions are strengthened so that they may furnish the moral foundation for all economic improvement. "This must be done," said Dr. Sexton, "by intensive organization inside of the churches and the enlisting of all the church members and friends of the church groups in an effort to strengthen and revitalize every department of the church's work. More pay and shorter hours have been provided for everybody except those who are working in character-building institutions. The very stress and emergency of the times has reduced the pay and lengthened the hours of the leaders and workers in all character-building institutions."

Addresses were delivered by Dr. Angie Smith, pastor of the First Methodist Church; Mr. H. H. Bain, Shreveport district lay leader; Rev. Guy M. Hicks, of Mansfield, and Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, of Vivian.

Plans were adopted to have inspirational meetings in all the pastoral charges in the Shreveport District. The intensive inspirational organizing campaign will be in charge of Mr. H. H. Bain, district lay leader; Mr. R. T. Douglas, and Mr. I. C. Strickland, associate district lay leaders, and Dr. George S. Sexton, presiding elder of the Shreveport District. Dr. W. Angie Smith, Dr. George S. Sexton, Rev. Guy M. Hicks, Mr. R. T. Douglas, Mr. I. C. Strickland, and Deaconess Grace Gatewood will compose the group of speakers who will be heard at the inspirational meetings. The New Deal topics that will be discussed by these speakers are: "The Church and Its Foreign Relations," "The Church Strengthening the Home Front," and "Recruiting for the Kingdom." The meeting programs will provide for music by Centenary College students and volunteer soloists who will contribute their time to help carry on the New Deal and the Church in the Shreveport District.

Mrs. Guy M. Hicks, of Mansfield, La., with a group of Mansfield citizens, will put on a missionary play showing the actual working and results of the Church in its foreign missionary work.

At 12:30 the conference adjourned for luncheon, which was served by the Y. M. C. A. Cafe in the Y. M. C. A. building. Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs was the principal speaker at the luncheon. He gave full endorsement of the New Deal plan which had been adopted. The Bishop stated that a great responsibility and heavy burden had been placed upon the churches because of the general plans of the National Recovery Act. Said the Bishop: "The churches must provide entertainment and cultural influences for the people in their increased leisure hours as a result of the working hours of all the people being shortened. This," said the Bishop, "is not the task of any one denomination, but it rests upon the churches of all faiths." He expressed the belief that out of these new responsibilities and new duties there would come a closer relationship in all church denominations in their work.

Mr. I. C. Strickland, associate district lay leader, spoke encouragingly of the New Deal plan, expressing the belief that the laymen would join heartily with the ministers in making the plan effective.

Dates and places for the inspirational meetings were adopted as follows:

Vivian—Friday, September 22, 7:30 p.m.
Mangum Memorial—Sunday, September 24, 7:30 p.m. Missionary play.

IN THE CONGO MISSION—1933

Medical Department, Tunda Station, First Quarter

By W. B. Lewis, M. D., In Charge

Our work for this quarter continues to be heavy both in the Medical and Surgical part of the work. The number of patients continues about the same. At the beginning of the quarter we began the plan of feeding the patients in place of giving them ration money with which to buy their own food. This plan in our opinion is much better, as we know the patients get sufficient rations and we do not hear the cry of hunger as we did before. There is also the added advantage in the amount saved. During the fourth quarter of 1922 we spent $211.28 for food and rations. This quarter, with the number of patients about the same, our food cost $121.33, or a saving of about $90 for the quarter. As soon as we are able to put more of the patients in the gardens, we can have better and larger gardens and save more, but because of the white ant it has been necessary the past year to replace nearly every building.

We were able to move into our new operating room the first of this quarter and find it much lighter and more roomy. The patients are now busy erecting another Surgical Ward to replace the one we had to tear down because of its condition. This new building is of the same material, mud and sticks. As the Dispensary building which was built in 1922 is about to fall down, we are combining that with the Surgical Ward.

As we enter upon this new quarter we do so with a prayer in our hearts that we may be able to witness more effectually for the Great Physician who honored us by His call to service in this country.

Statistics—First Quarter—1933

Treatments given in out-patient department	3,118
Patients in hospital at beginning of quarter	160
Patients admitted during quarter	118
Patients dismissed as cured	111
Patients dismissed improved	18
Patients dismissed unimproved	11
Patients died during quarter	2

✓ DEATH OF MRS. THURMAN SPINKS

In the January Issue of the Bulletin we announced the marriage of Rev. Thurman Spinks, pastor of the Sibley charge, to Miss Mary Sue Garland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Garland, prominent members of the Pine Grove church, where Brother Spinks is pastor. It grieves us deeply to have to announce in this issue the untimely death of Mrs. Spinks. She was taken with acute appendicitis Friday, September 1, and rushed to the Minden Sanitarium, where she was operated upon immediately. Complications, however, had set in, and in spite of the most skillful medical attention available, she could not be saved. She died Sunday morning at 3:00 o'clock and was buried in the Pine Grove cemetery Monday afternoon at the same hour. The church proved utterly inadequate to accommodate the host of friends who attended. The presiding elder who officiated was assisted by Revs. J. F. Brink, A. S. Lutz and P. B. McCullen.

During the brief months that Mrs. Spinks occupied the position of a minister's wife she gave abundant proof of her fitness to fill this delicate and important place. In recent months she had come into a deep religious experience. Her great ambition was to serve her Lord well and to assist her husband in every possible way to make full proof of his ministry.

We extend to the grieved ones our sympathy and prayers. May the Christ whom her husband has commended to others be his comfort and stay in this overwhelming grief.—Rev. Robert Brown, P. E., in the Minden District Messenger.

NORTHERN GROUP PREACHER-LAYMEN MEETING, BROOKHAVEN, DISTRICT, SEPTEMBER 19.

The group meeting for the northern section of the Brookhaven District has been in summer quarters. Our presiding elder, Rev. C. W. Crisler, now awakens us with a call for the following program and assignments. The meeting will be held at the Gallman church, where Rev. J. W. Moore is pastor:

10:00—Devotions, E. A. Kelly.
10:15—"The Pastor's Responsibility in Closing the Conference Year," J. L. Carter.
10:45—"Responsibility and Opportunity of the Presiding Elder in Co-operating with the Pastor to Close the Conference Year," F. L. Applewhite.
11:10—Sermon, H. C. Castle.
12:00—Lunch.
1:00—Devotions, W. B. Hollingsworth.
1:15—"Place and Opportunity of Board of Stewards in Closing Conference Year," W. O. Sadler.
1:35—Round Table, led by C. W. Crisler.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Now that the time for the Eightieth Anniversary campaign for the New Orleans Christian Advocate has been extended to October 1, let us make a concerted and strenuous effort to secure a large number of subscribers to this, our valuable Conference organ, and show to the Editor and Publishing Committee our appreciation for this extension of time.

The Advocate is a valuable bureau of information of church news, and should be a regular weekly visitor in every Methodist home in Mississippi and Louisiana.

ing of the group of men who happen to occupy the office at this time. If the office has served its day and is no longer capable of effective adaption to a new situation, why, we Methodists should have both sense and courage enough to abolish it. It does not commend us to carry along unnecessary baggage. For we have hard work ahead. There is nothing about our church organization sufficiently sacred to carry on if, when measured by the task we must do, it falls short of the undertaking and we can find a better way of doing it.

We should not be forgetful of our disposition, in a time of transition such as this through which we are passing, to charge up our difficulties to some scapegoat. On the other hand let us not forget the opportunities that may arise in the midst of such times as these. In a crisis we all tend to become reformers, especially so long as it does not seriously affect us.

Methodism, as a whole and in its parts, must be willing to be measured by the work it should do. In the presence of such critical needs as we face today it will not hurt us to examine all our equipment, not only the organizational, but the spiritual as well. And there should be no conflict.

Turn to Section III in your Discipline. Read what it has to say about Presiding Elders, and read the other references that are mentioned. Then you may be able to think and discuss a bit more intelligently the presiding eldership.

If the presiding elder is to be saved there are two men who will have to take a big hand in the matter. Those two men are the bishop and the presiding elder himself. The bishop makes the presiding elder, that is, he selects him and appoints him. He is not compelled to ask any questions about the man he appoints. His ability to select men may be second rate if not poor. We do not always elect men to the episcopacy because of special ability along this line. Presumably, though, they will exercise sound judgment in the matter.

The presiding elder himself has a very great deal to do with his own salvation, the salvation of the presiding eldership. Some believe that there should be frequent changes in the eldership. This does not necessarily make for efficiency in the office even though it may obviate some abuses. Little is said as to what training a man should have for this office. Does he require special equipment? Is the office such as to demand training such as is not necessary for the pastorate?

The presiding elder labors at some disadvantage in that he has no congregation looking to him directly for guidance. The intimacy of this relationship has tremendous value. His word is not so personal and direct. It is generalized and at more or less long distance. Again, he is insulated too much from constructive criticism. Criticism arises to be sure, but fails to operate frequently until it has reached the point of opposition and ceases to be friendly.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. S. A. Seegers, pastor at Rayne, La., passed our way upon his return from a trip to the Chicago Fair.

On another page you will notice an article from the Congo. This report comes from Dr. W. B. Lewis, a Mississippian.

"It was easily done," writes Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor, Franklin, La., concerning his list of subscriptions just received.

Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., writes of good meetings on his charge, Brother Henderson pastors our people at Bernice, La.

Rev. A. S. Oliver, Prentiss, Miss., and family are among our pastors and parsonage families attending the Chicago Fair.

Mrs. N. B. Hunter, Waterproof, La., tells of a very old and prized copy of the Advocate which came from the press about 1860.

Another guest of the past week was Mr. C. M. Clegg, of West Enterprise, Miss. He is the father of Rev. R. H. Clegg, Hattiesburg, Miss.

We welcome the new readers of the Advocate who have joined us for our EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY. We trust that they will enjoy the company of the Advocate readers.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

In a news sheet recently released we observe that the students of Millsaps College enjoy a very fine rating. That is gratifying, though not unexpected.

Rev. D. B. Boddie, pastor at Pineville, La., and Chaplain of the Veteran's Hospital, was a caller at the office the other day. Sorry we did not get to see him.

Rev. E. W. Day, Greensburg, La., with his wife and children, was in the city a few days ago where one of the children underwent an operation for tonsil trouble.

Rev. W. N. Dodds, pastor at Batesville, Miss., says all goes well on his charge and invites the editor for a visit. We shall be on hand, Brother Dodds, the first chance.

Rev. Chas. E. Downer, Terry charge, Miss., reports: "Our work is moving forward. I have had helpful revivals and we feel hopeful of closing a successful year's work."

Congratulations to Rev. and Mrs. R. R. Branton, and a big welcome into the VERY HIGH ORDER OF PARENTHOOD, Louis Ray, weighing eight pounds, arrived August 29.

Rev. B. W. Walfrum, pastor at Baker, La., reports a great meeting at Blackwater, on his charge, with forty-two additions, thirty-seven on profession of faith. We rejoice.

From a letter from Dr. W. L. Boss, Jr., presiding elder of the Ruston District, we see reflected the hard work of the pastors and under the leadership of a man who loves them.

Conversions, family altars erected, and other good, marked the revival on Pecan Island, La. Rev. C. J. Thibodeaux is the pastor. Rev. M. W. Beadle, pastor at Lake Arthur, did the preaching.

A number of pastors wrote us that they did not have the time they desired for their campaigns. Now that the period has been extended through the month of September that difficulty is removed.

Rev. J. A. Wells, pastor at Glendale, Jackson, Miss., is running strong. He is now in a good meeting assisted by his son, Morelle, a graduate of Ashbury College, who is leading the singing for the meetings.

"Everything is moving along fine with us here. We have had thirty-one additions to the church this year. There is excellent interest in our church work in all departments. S. H. Caffey, P. C., Tunica, Miss."

In case pastors do not find mention of their lists of subscriptions here, let them turn to the back page where they will find the score board. By reference to it you will be able to see how the game is going.

"We have just closed a fine season of revivals on the charge with twenty-seven additions to the church," writes Rev. W. F. Roberts, pastor at Dubach, La. (And there was his fine list of subscriptions, too).

Rev. Geo. H. Jones, our pastor at Montrose, Miss., has been assisting Rev. S. C. Moody, pastor at Rosehill, in a meeting. Brother Jones is another preacher who took our celebration seriously and doubled his quota.

Rev. R. A. Allums, wide awake and going pastor of the Ellisville, Miss., charge, sends in a great list of subscriptions and then goes over to help Brother Allen in a meeting on the New Augusta charge. Success to the meeting.

"Please renew my subscription to the Advocate. It has been coming to our family since my father was a boy. My grandfather was one of the first subscribers. I cannot afford to discontinue it. Miss Bettie Simpson, Balatusha, Miss."

Mrs. Ida C. Doxey, Grand Cheniere, La., who has been a member of the church for sixty-two years, and a regular reader of the Advocate, writes a happy letter telling of her religious experience and the triumphs of grace in her heart. We wish her joy.

"I have done my best. Am always glad to recommend the Advocate." That is the good word that comes from Miss Lillie Mae Nelson, Stonewall, La., along with a list of subscriptions. Young ladies also are helping to celebrate our anniversary.

Rev. J. L. Neill, pastor at Gulfport, Miss., has made a number of trips recently to Vicksburg, to be with his sister, Miss Ruby Neill, who is quite ill in the Sanitarium of that city. Also Mrs. Neill has spent much time this summer with Miss Ruby.

We join Rev. L. J. Power, our pastor at Main Street, Biloxi, Miss., in sympathy and prayers in the extended illness of his preacher boy who spent forty-six days in the Methodist Hospital at Houston, Texas. He is now on the road to recovery.

Rev. W. B. Alsworth, pastor at Picayune, Miss., comes in with a great list of subscriptions, and doesn't seem willing to stop with that. I stopped on a former charge of his and one of his old members was talking about him. What was said would not cause him to blush.

But a steward can be of great assistance to the pastor in seeing that the Advocate gets to the people. The ladies also can do a big part. Mr. J. E. Blackwell, a steward of First Church, Baton Rouge, assisted by Mrs. O. H. Detertis, sent in a good list of subscriptions.

Rev. A. Y. Brown, Calhoun City, Miss., has had Rev. W. R. Crouch, Guntown, Miss., in a meeting. Large crowds attended the services. A number were received on profession of faith while there were others reconsecrating themselves to God and his work.

Rev. H. N. Harrison, a superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, has been appointed pastor of the Second Methodist Church, this city, succeeding Rev. R. L. Armstrong, who resigned to accept the appointment of Louisiana State Manager of the League of American Youth, an interdenominational organization, with headquarters in Dallas, Texas.

Rev. R. H. Clegg, Hattiesburg, Miss., has gone 300 per cent on his quota to the Advocate. He says, "Please mail me a list of the Hattiesburg subscribers. We pastors will look after them." Can you beat that? And the presiding elder, Dr. J. T. Leggett, is working the same way.

Mrs. W. G. Ebersole, member of our good church at Itta Bena, Miss., pastored by Rev. R. G. Moore, sends a list of subscriptions for her church. The editor was royally entertained in the lovely home of Mrs. Ebersole at the time of the Greenwood District Conference which met in that city.

Rev. A. T. McIlwain, pastor at First Church, Columbus, Miss., made a strong appeal for the Advocate in his bulletin of August 27. Since, he has sent in a good list of new readers to the Advocate. We note that his topic on that evening was, "Does the Bible Foretell the NRA?"

Signing off with "Yours for the success of the Advocate," Rev. S. S. Bogan, Bonita, La., sends in his quota of subscriptions and threatens more than that. Brother Bogan is one of those subscribers who reads the Advocate closely enough to discover errors and to find the good it contains.

"Baptists, Presbyterians, Christians and all others join the Methodists in entertaining the Conference at Winnfield in November. Everybody is looking forward to it with unusual pleasure." That is from our pastor, Rev. Ellis Smith, Winnfield, La. We hope our delegates will measure up to this hospitality.

Rev. H. N. Brown, pastor at Lafayette, La., arrives with his quota for the Advocate. That quota idea seems to have great value. It gives is something definite to do. It takes on the form of plan and purpose. "I'll do something" and "I'll do my best," neither look like "I'll secure 25 subscriptions," or whatever the number is.

The bulletin from First Church, Lake Charles, La., indicates that that congregation is going right strong for NRA. Topics of two talks were as follows: "The Principles of the NRA," Homer Kirkwood; "Labor and the NRA," T. F. Blaylock. And the pastor, Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, had as his theme, "The Church and the NRA."

"I have been very busy in revival work since the first Sunday in July. I have held six meetings, and have begun another on Sunday, August 27. Closed a meeting here in Noxapater, Friday night with twenty-five additions, seventeen of whom were by baptism and vows." That is Rev. W. W. Milligan, Noxapater, Miss. He, too, sent in a good list of subscriptions.

"I had ninety-one at the mid-week service last Wednesday evening. Do you beat that with your city church? Arcadia will have a fair report to make to Conference." That is Rev. J. H. Bowdon, pastor at Arcadia, La. The pastor has a very great deal to do with the kind of a report that goes to Conference. Brother Bowdon is in the habit of making those "fair" reports.

"On Sunday, September 10, at 7:30 p.m., all couples whose marriage ceremonies were performed by the Rev. C. C. Wier are respectfully invited to attend a special service as honor guests of the congregation of the First Methodist Church, Franklin, La. These couples and their families will sit in the white ribbon section."—The Silent Preacher, Bulletin of First Church, Franklin, La.

Rev. J. B. King is at West Laurel Church, Miss. In a letter he says, "Up to this time there has not been a subscriber among my members in a long time." In that letter there was a list of subscriptions, a check for $14.50, including ten cents for exchange. Brother King has stuck up a flag by that paragraph of our Discipline that tells about a pastor's responsibility regarding the literature of the church.

"Our local Standard Training Class for Children's Workers," writes Rev. J. L. Carter, pastor at Crystal Springs, Miss., "had its opening session Tuesday evening, September 5. This class will meet each Tuesday evening for six weeks. The attendance included almost every worker in the Children's Division, plus several prospective workers. The spirit of this class could not be better. Mrs. J. L. Carter is teaching the class."

Dr. Jas. H. Felts, pastor at Grenada, Miss., writes a good line every now and then. The Pacific Advocate recently published his article on the Presiding Eldership. He is interested in the New Orleans Christian Advocate. A recent word from him is this: "The pastors and the pastors alone can put it over." A goodly number of the pastors of our three Conferences have gone beyond that. From the fine lists of subscriptions sent in we hear them saying, "And we will."

"I have just returned from a very fine vacation in Chicago and in the Ozarks. I have not yet had time to get up my quota of 20 subscriptions which I promised; but I want you to know I shall be personally responsible for them and shall send them just as soon as possible." That is the voice of Rev. Guy M. Hicks, pastor at Mansfield, La., and it sounds perfectly natural. Either Chicago or the Ozarks would have been enough vacation for any ordinary preacher, but when you get beyond that grade it takes two vacations.

Rev. Andrew J. Boyles, pastor at Flora, Miss., was among those fortunate preachers who got to attend the Exposition at Chicago. He had ten days there with his family. It is interesting to hear people tell about "what they saw." Brother Boyles saw and heard Gipsy Smith preach several times at Moody Memorial Church, and visited Hull House. In addition to all this he has sent in his list of subscriptions and has held a meeting for Rev. T. C. Cooper at Seminary. And listen: "I am now busy for the next few weeks holding meetings at my afternoon appointments, doing my own preaching under the shade of the trees."

Lucedale, Miss., has a pastor by the name of Rev. N. S. Loftus. He has seven churches. Of course no ordinary man could do all that work. But many of the Methodist circuit-riders were not ordinary men. Brother Loftus is in the succession. He has been having great meetings. Forty-four have been received on profession of faith. Capacity crowds have attended his ministry, and there have been other evidences of the presence of the Spirit. Shall we excuse such a busy man as that from the Advocate campaign? We do not have to. He will not excuse himself. He has gone beyond his quota. One statement in a fine letter explains it all. "I go after them."

Rev. Melville Johnson, Cleveland, Miss., announces a treat for his church and the people of his community. The Methodist churches of the county are cooperating in what seems to be a four-day institute during which attention is being given to adult religious education in the church. The great feature of the institute is Dr. Thomas Carter, Vanderbilt University and member of the Louisiana Conference. Dr. Carter will deliver addresses upon the following topics: "The Bible in General," "The Life of Christ," "The Development of the Canon," "The Rise, Development and Culmination of Prophecy" and "The Gospel of Experience and Expression." We should like to see such a program duplicated in all our church communities.

STORM WRECKS HOME OF REV. BEN. P. JACO

We received the following telegram just after we had closed our forms for this issue of the Advocate but have stopped our presses in order that Brother Jacob's many friends might learn of his plight and lend him whatever assistance possible: "Message from Ben. P. Jacob, Raymondville, Texas, says, 'Everything swept away by hurricane; house, library, goods, crops. I was wet from Monday until Wednesday evening. Water eighteen inches deep. I am exhausted.' Brethren, send Brother Jacob a check. This is a time to show your love for a brother." Signed: D. H. Hall and J. H. Holder.

A WORD OF APPRECIATION

Dear Brother Raulins: Will you kindly write a few words of thanks and deep appreciation to our many friends for their many expressions of sympathy in the loss of our precious boy. I will certainly appreciate your doing so. About twenty-five or thirty first-class letters were taken from my post office box the night before we returned from Ruston. The postmaster told me that one was from your office and one from Brother Vaughan. You may make some statement also about this.

BONITA CHURCH TO BE DEDICATED

Bonita church, situated in the town of Bonita, a suburb of Meridian, Miss., will be dedicated Sunday, September 24, at 7:30 p.m. The public is cordially invited to attend the dedicatory service. All former pastors are urgently requested to attend.

THE PAPERS SAY THAT---

Two rival congregations of the same faith have been in a state of war for some days at Jonesboro, Arkansas. The factions seem to be led by the pastors of the two groups. The attack of one faction, 500 strong, was turned back by the sheriff as they attempted to storm the entrance of the tabernacle, scene of the major hostilities.

This is a most regrettable situation and one that fails completely to commend Christianity to a needy world. Every Christian church suffers when a thing like this occurs. When selfishness and factionalism supersede the religion that both profess the cause of Christ must hang its head in humiliation. Church forces that are so lacking in the spirit of the Christ they profess to serve that they thus contend one against the other are much better instruments of Satan than are the forces of the world. If any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his.

Three boys have been marooned on a two-foot ledge on the face of a mountain, from which ledge it was 225 feet to the top and 400 feet to the bottom. They were unable to advance or return. Hasty and excited efforts were mobilized for their rescue. Many people and organizations volunteered help. Aeroplanes and expert climbers were among the volunteers. After twenty-four hours they were saved from their threatening position.

All of us would have just as eagerly joined in the effort to save these boys. It is easy for us to imagine them our own. But why is it that we are so complacent about the thousands of boys, some of them living in our own homes, who are spending their days upon the narrow and crumbling ledges of vice and wrong-doing? Just why is it that parents will not live as Christians before their children, ignoring the practice of family prayer and thanks before meals? Why is it that parents do not accompany their children to Sunday school and church? Why is it that Sunday school teachers come late with unprepared lessons?

Who will join us for the thousands of boys on the slippery moral and spiritual ledges of our day?

One hundred and eighty two convicts go on a strike down in one of the state owned mines at Petros, Tenn., announcing that they will not come out of the mines till a certain warden whom they dislike is discharged. The commissioner says the only thing to do is just to keep them in the mine until they get hungry enough to come out.

Does look foolish, doesn't it? On a strike down in a mine without arms or food or daylight. Well, practically all strikes and lockouts are foolish, yea, stupid. I tried to hold a bumble-bee imprisoned in a cotton bloom. This was a lock-in. Well, the bumble-bee backed up suddenly. Can't handle bumble-bees or men this way. How stupid.

PROTESTANT HOSPITAL ASSOCIATION

The Protestant Hospital Association, at its annual meeting in Milwaukee, Wis., September 9-11, had three speakers from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Dr. W. W. Alexander, Atlanta, Ga., spoke on "The Medical and Hospital Care of Negroes." Dr. Alexander is well fitted to discuss this theme.

Miss Lake Johnson, Superintendent Good Samaritan Hospital, Lexington, Ky., spoke on "Economies in Hospital Management." Miss Johnson is also Third Vice-President of the American Hospital Association.

Dr. Chas. C. Jarrell, General Secretary, General Hospital Board, spoke on "Rethinking Hospital Practice." This address will appear shortly in the Modern Hospital (Chicago). Dr. Jarrell has appeared frequently on this program.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE YOUNG PEOPLE'S NEWS

Well, your Publicity Superintendent has returned safely from Chicago's blowout, all ready and anxious to give you all the news—all that you give him to give you! And the address now is Natchitoches instead of Hammond. Don't forget!

Mildred Mall of Ruston writes to tell us of the mass meeting held by the Ruston District Young People at Clay, La. Dr. Turner and Professor Phelps of Shreveport were the morning speakers. They gave inspiring talks on the part that young people should play in the prohibition movement. Then lunch was served on the grounds, and everyone re-assembled to enjoy a program on "Soul Winning" by Edith Skinner. The fact that they had a good time goes without saying!

And Happy McRight from Glenmora sends us news of the meeting of the Grambling Union last month at Oakdale. The program was based on Recreation, and after several talks on the necessity of worthwhile play, the "Exchange of ideas" began. Successful parties of the past year were discussed, and everyone got the benefit of the other fellow's experiences. Then followed the business session, with election of officers as follows: president, Olin Quinn, Glenmora; vice president, Miss Myrtis Garlington, Oakdale; secretary and treasurer, Goldie Smith, Elizabeth; publicity agent, Happy McRight (right on the job), Glenmora. And these leaders, with the help of District Director Velma Butcher, are planning to make this year one of the greatest in their history. Here's hoping!

From Haynesville, William Rankin tells us of the Christian Culture Institute held there last month. It was sponsored by Haynesville Young People for the All For Christ Union. He tells us. There was an enrollment of about eighty-two, with fifty-six receiving credits! Course we don't know, but that sounds like a record to us. Mrs. J. R. Beville served as Dean, and ten Young People's groups were represented. Congratulations to Haynesville, to Mrs. Beville, and to the entire Union!

On our return from the Fair, what should we find but a card from Jack (Jolly) Rodgers, written at the Fair, at the same time we were there! It's a shame we didn't meet, as you'd agree if you know Jolly. And you probably do; who doesn't?

Young People all over Louisiana were shocked and grieved at news of the tragic death of Bro. Grambling's son, Jimmie. Many of us knew Jimmie personally, and it is with a deep feeling of the inadequacy of words that we extend our sincerest regrets to his family. May the Lord be ever near you in your grief.

And so good-bye until next week, when you'll hear all about the Conference Council meeting held in Alexandria. Let us hear from you!

RUSTON YOUNG PEOPLE MEET

The all day meeting for the Young People of the Ruston District was a great success. It was held at Clay, La., on August 19, and was attended by more than a hundred live, wide-awake young people who were raring to go.

Louise Trussell of Antioch, who is the president of the Ever Ready Union, was the very efficient leader for the morning's program. After the singing of several hymns, Mary Dring of Antioch led in a word of prayer. Jack Madden of Simsboro read the scripture lesson.

The speakers for the occasion were Dr. Turner and Prof. Phelps, both of Shreveport. The leader introduced Dr. Turner who in turn presented Prof. Phelps. His talk, short but very effective, was on "The Challenge to Youth." It dealt with the attitude of young people toward the liquor question.

Dr. Turner strengthened Prof. Phelps' talk by adding a few words before he gave his address, which was "Good Citizenship." He pointed, in very glaring terms, the satisfaction one should receive from being a good citizen and gave his idea of the requirements for good citizenship.

The congregation joined in another hymn after which it was dismissed by Dr. Turner and the Doxology was sung.

During the noon period an ample lunch was spread on the church grounds and a jolly hour and a half was swiftly passed away in good fellowship and fun.

The afternoon session was conducted by Edith Skinner of Antioch. The prelude was played by little Martha Jean Barnard of Clay and was followed by a short poem which was recited by the leader. "Throw Out the Life Line" was sung and Thesta Walker of Ruston led in prayer. Clyde Nugent of Wesley Chapel read the scripture which was very appropriate for Edith's talk on "Soul Winning for Christ."

After quiet music by Mrs. Walsworth of Clay, a chain of sentence prayers were rendered by young people.

Louise Trussell then took charge of the program, introducing Miss Grace Jones of Downsview, District director, who had been unable to attend the morning session. She spoke words of encouragement and praise of the work that was being carried on in the district. Then Louise called for a rising vote of thanks for Mrs. John Paul Jones, formerly of Clay, now of Simsboro. It was largely due to her efforts and hard work that the meeting was possible.

The meeting broke up with the league benediction.

FROM LAKE WALES, FLORIDA

Dear Doctor Raulins: I must get in on your Birthday offer—please move my date up $2.00 worth. I would be lost without your good paper—it is like a letter from home. When I left Mississippi ten years ago, I knew personally every preacher in the Mississippi Conference. Many changes in that time—new ones coming in. Many of the older men and some of the younger ones have been promoted. It would not seem like the same Conference with men like Watkins, Kelley, Jones, Lewis, Chambers, Morse, Hayes and others gone. As well as laymen like Marvin Enochs and his father not there.

We have a wonderful crop of fruit coming out and it will be about six weeks earlier than last year. Come down and help us save it.

Sincerely,
H. F. TOLLE.

SHUBUTA, MISS., HAS REVIVAL

Revival Meeting was recently held by Rev. H. L. Norton at the Shubuta Methodist Church. The community was unusually fortunate in his having the assistance of Dr. C. C. Norton, Professor of Religious Education in Wofford College, whose gifted intellect drew and held a continuous interest, and whose quiet, forceful talks awakened widespread concern for spiritual development.

Great good was accomplished; steady, growing, lasting. Nine were added to the church, six by profession of faith and three by letter. Among them was Dr. Norton's son, Howard Blanning, who, by a pleasant coincidence, united with the same church his father had joined years before. Dr. Norton is the son of the pastor, Rev. H. L. Norton, who had previously served Shubuta charge thirty years ago, and reared here a family of six genuine boys, all of whom became distinguished college men, three professors, one in Wofford College and two in Louisiana State University. All six sons, with their families in reunion at the time of the revival, greeted their many childhood friends in Shubuta.

Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Norton have an unquestioned right to be justly proud of their family's unusual distinguished educational achievements.

AN OLD TIME HOLY GHOST REVIVAL

Dear Editor and Brother: It is very gratifying to report to our paper of the wonderful soul-stirring revival just closed at this place under the leadership of our pastor, Rev. C. W.

Greatly Relieved By Black-Draught

"Constipation caused me to have a tired, worn-out feeling and a dull headache," writes Mrs. J. W. Alverson, of Danville, Va. "I was anxious to find something to help me for I would not feel like doing my work. I found that by taking small doses of Black-Draught at night I was greatly relieved. It makes me feel just fine. I am glad to tell others about it." * * Children like the new, pleasant tasting SYRUP of Black-Draught.

Lahey, assisted by his son, Rev. C. Rodger Lahey, of Centenary College, doing the preaching.

The interest was good from the start and the house was full to overflowing each night. Altar calls were made and same was filled to full capacity and Christians stayed with the pastor until ten to ten thirty each night praying and the old time power of the Holy Spirit prevailed and sinners were saved for the Kingdom of God, and back sliders reclaimed.

The meeting closed with some eight or ten additions to the church, and a score of back-sliders reclaimed.

Bro. Rodger Lahey, who is a young preacher just finishing up his third year at Centenary College, Shreveport, preached some wonderful sermons, and we feel he has a wonderful future and pray God's blessing on him in the work he has been called to do.

Yours very truly,
J. M. GRADY,

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

IF YOU feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c.

If you are not satisfied with the way you feel, send this coupon for your free copy of this extraordinary book entitled "The Interesting Story of What Makes You Feel Good—The Most Glorious Thing in the World is to Feel Good." With it we will also send you a free sample of Carter's Little Liver Pills. If you would do the best thing you ever did for yourself and your family, send for this free book before you forget it.

CALL THE CHILDREN

Mrs. Clichlow is untiring in her efforts to bring the little ones to Him and will you co-operate by organizing the children in your church and train them to take your place in this Missionary field of service?

Once upon a time there came a big storm on the coast of England. The people in a little fishing village cast anxious looks out at the sea. They piled the driftwood on the fires, and the men sat about the hearth and listened as the gale rose high. The waves thundered on the rocks, the wind blew with a long dull roar, and the salt spray dashed against the tiny windows. "Tis a bad night," said the old sea captain and then he held up his hand. "Listen!" "Tis but the rush of the wind," said one of the younger men. But again he held up his hand, and above the shriek of the storm they heard a distant "boom! boom!" "A ship! a ship!" cried the men and ran down to the beach. It was night and very dark, but again above the noise of the storm came the sound of the gun, and then came the red glare of rockets going up into the sky. "She's headed for the rocks," said the captain, "but we'll have to wait till morning. Go back, men, and get a bit of sleep if you can, and a warm bite to eat, and meet me here with the dawn's light."

The day had hardly begun to break

Build Up that Skinny Child!

Enrich His Impoverished Blood

Sickly, weak, underweight children are usually lacking in rich, red blood. When blood becomes poor, a child becomes rundown. Already weak, he loses appetite, which makes him still weaker. Take no chances on a child gaining strength by himself. Start giving him Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic right away. This famous tonic contains both iron and tasteless quinine. Iron makes for rich, red blood while quinine tends to purify the blood. In other words, you get two effects in Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. Put your child on this time-proven tonic for a few days and see the difference it makes in him. Good appetite, lots of pep and energy and red roses in his cheeks. Children like Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic and take it eagerly. It is absolutely harmless and has been a reliable family medicine for half a century. Get a bottle today at any store.

when the village was astir, and men, women and children had rushed down to the shore. The sea was running mountain-high, but the sky was clearing and the breeze was blowing strong and fresh. "Look! She's on the rocks and the waves are pounding her to pieces," they cried. "We can't keep a boat afloat with this wind and tide. See, they are going to shoot a line. Get ready." Once, twice, three times came the shot, but the line fell into the water and was carried out of reach. Then a young fisherman tied a rope about his waist. "Here, men, hold the end," he said, "I'll swim out as far as I can and try to get it." He plunged into the sea and the old captain signalled to the ship. "Now." Again the cannon boomed, the young fellow caught the line and swam to shore with it. Hand over hand they drew it in, and after it the heavy rope to which it was fastened, and after that a steel cable came over the swelling waters. "Get in line, every man and boy," shouted the captain. "We'll try to pull her off. She'll not last an hour out there. Wait till I give the word. Now, pull!" Strong men and old men, young fellows and boys strained every muscle and every nerve as they bent to the cable. But the ship did not move and the waves were running high. "Call the women," the captain said. The women came, mothers and grandmothers and girls. They fell in behind the men and the captain said: "Pull!" They pulled and tugged and strained together. But the ship did not move, and the waves were running high, oh, very high. "Call the children. Quick!" the captain cried. And the children came, thin and fat, pale and rosy, weak and strong, and put their little hands on the great steel hawser. And the waves were running high, oh very high. "Now, all together, PULL. Again! Again! Again! She's moving! Steady there now. All together again. Pull. Once again. Now slow and steady, a long pull. Thank God, she's off!" the cry went up. The waves were running high, oh, very high, but the good ship came slowly in to shore, drawn by the hands of men and women and boys and girls and little children.

And I'm thinking, children, that if you will but lift up your eyes and look, you will see your Captain standing just as in other days he stood by the sea of Galilee, when the children came and slipped their hands in his and lifted up their faces to his smile. And I'm thinking that if you listen, you will hear the voice of Jesus saying: "So long, so long, my kingdom waits to come on earth. CALL THE CHILDREN!"

Listen, listen in your hearts and you will hear him say: "Call the children."

In Memoriam

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

MRS. YANCY JONES died May 27, 1933, at her home seven miles north of Aberdeen. Her maiden name was Mamie Kelley. Her parents died when she was young and she was reared by her uncle, Mose Kidd, of New Hope Community, six miles north of Aberdeen, Miss.

She leaves a husband and three sons: Kelley, Joe and Paul. She was a consistent member of Tranquil Methodist Church and will be greatly missed by all. May we strive to emulate her godly life.

MRS. ALICE SHELL GLENN died in Monroe County, Miss., and was buried at Tranquil church, eight miles north of Aberdeen, Miss., August 10, 1933. She was the daughter of Mary Word and Thos. Coke Shell. Her father lost his life in the Civil War. She was reared by her grandparents, Lethe (Lewis) and Tom Word, who came to this county from Mecklenburg, Va., as pioneer settlers. Her paternal grandparents came to Monroe County, Miss., about 1845 from Laurens District, S. C., Martha (Dugan) and Lemmon Shell.

Her husband, J. D. Glenn died several years ago. She leaves two sons: Jimmie D. and Tom Shell Glenn and one brother, Thos. Lemmon Shell.

IN MEMORY OF J. R. BINGHAM

One by one our friends are going
To that land so bright and fair.
Some day there'll be a glad reunion
In the beautiful "Isle of Somewhere."

A joyous welcome he received
From friends and loved ones gone before.

For he, too, on the Lord believed,
And now rests on that happy shore.

Lonely hearts his memory cherish,
For his place no one can fill.
We miss the clasp of his friendly hand
And the sound of a voice that is still.

Our hearts go out to his loving wife,
Who stood by him these many years.
Though the clouds are dark and gloomy,
May she see the rainbow through her tears.

With sincere sympathy,
MRS. LEE LIPSCOMB.
Louisville, Miss.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas the Supreme Ruler of the Universe has removed from our midst our beloved Treasurer, Friend and Sister, Mrs. J. S. Dick, July 17, 1933. Whereas, her death has taken from us one of our most faithful members and one who was universally beloved by all; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Missionary Society of Hawkins Memorial Church, Meridian, Miss., extend our sympathy to our departed Sister's family, and be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to the bereaved family and a copy be spread on the minutes of this meeting, and a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Mesdames:

S. D. Parker,

J. H. SHUMAKER, General Secty.
303 Broadway, Nashville, Tennessee

1920, and was called to his heavenly home August 19, 1933.

His going has caused a deep sorrow in the hearts of the entire community. He united with the church, along with the other members of his Sunday school class, at Hammond, La., Easter morning, March 31, 1929, under his father's ministry. Later he had a decided experience, answering the call for re-consecration under the evangelistic talk of Rev. W. C. Scott at an Epworth League Institute, held at Bluff Creek Camp Ground.

We miss "Jimmie," as he was affectionately called, in the home, in the church, in the Sunday school, and in the community, and will keep him in loving, grateful remembrance.

Not dead—no, no; but borne beyond the shadows into the full, clear light;
Forever done with mist and cloud and tempest, where all is calm and bright.

Not even sleeping—called to glad awakening in Heaven's endless day;
Not still and moveless—just stepped from earth's rough places to walk the King's highway.

Not silent—just passed out of earthly hearing to sing Heaven's sweet, new song;
Not lonely—dearly loved and dearly loving, amid the white-robed throng.

But not forgetful—keeping fond remembrance of dear ones left awhile;
And looking gladly to the bright reunion, with hand-clasp and with smile.

Be it resolved, That we express our love and sympathy to his loved ones, that a copy be sent to the family, that a copy be kept in the records of the Sunday school, and that copies be sent to the Bastrop Enterprise and the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT STILL LEADS

This week finds the Hattiesburg District, Mississippi Conference, Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder, still leading all other districts in number of subscriptions secured. However, the Seashore District, Rev. Otto Porter, P. E., has gained considerable ground, and threatens to pass the leaders if it continues to gain at the rate it has the past week. The New Orleans District, Rev. W. L. Duren, P. E., has passed the 100 mark, the goal set for each district, and occupies third place. The Monroe, Rev. H. T. Carley, P. E.; the Columbus, Rev. V. C. Curtis, P. E., and the Vicksburg, Rev. H. G. Hawkins, P. E., are other districts nearing the 100 mark.

Following is a report of subscriptions received through Monday, September 11:

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

WHAT I DESIRE FOR OUR SCHOOLS.

A thoroughgoing search for facts, and a fearless facing of those facts.

An unabated quest for truth, and life on the campus in keeping with that truth.

A comradeship between students that shall issue in lifelong friendships on a high level; and a comradeship between teacher and student that shall issue in confidence that shall result in effortless control and creative effort.

The discontinuance of all teachers whose chief qualifications consist of their degrees from great universities, but who are blind to the major issues of student life, taking the laissez faire attitude toward the student and his personal problems.

Such a program of life on the campus as comprehends all life's larger interests, mental, moral and religious.

A courageous effort to acquaint the student with the complex and trying conditions of our time, and to acquaint him with a religious faith with which he may adequately meet these conditions.

We HAVE WITH US today Presidents Few, Sealeman, Cline, Key, Winfield and Countiss. We have invited them to our platform for our special College Day Number of the Advocate. They are here to tell us what they desire for their schools this year.

Did you ever take a look into the head or heart of a college president, especially one from our own schools? Now is your chance. They are telling us what they want for their schools.

But let us not, as a great church, continue our favorite blunder of speaking of these great schools as though they belonged to these presidents. They belong to us. Presidents may come and presidents may go, but the schools are with us all the while. We have a way of electing a man to the presidency of a school, or other church institution, and thereafter speaking of it as "your school," as though we turned it entirely over to him, and resigned all responsibility for it. Very well. These men should become so identified with these schools that they feel that they are almost their very own as they put sacrifice, toil and sleepless nights into them. We ask that they live and die for our schools, but we must not ask that they do it alone. Graduates speak of the schools as alma mater. But there is an alma mater of these colleges and that is the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

We not only ask that you read what these men have to say, but put them and our colleges on your prayer list for the session of 1933-34, and help them realize what they wish for these schools.

A YOUNG MAN, candidate for the ministry of our church, stands before a group made up of different faiths and calmly declares that he will have no part in the butchery of any war of the future. And with equal calmness he states that he is aware of the difficulties involved in such a position and the probable embarrassments incident to such an attitude. He has counted the cost.

This young man finds justification for

IMPORTANT TO SUBSCRIBERS

If every subscriber to the Advocate whose subscription has expired and is running on grace would take advantage of the large saving made possible through the Eightieth Anniversary Special Low Offer of $1.00 per year, the Advocate would be entirely free from debt and in position to report "everything in full" at the approaching sessions of the patronizing Conferences.

The address label on your paper denotes the date of expiration of your subscription. If it reads "September 1933," or any date prior thereto, your subscription has expired. If such is the case may we urge you to forward $1.00 by return mail to cover your renewal for another year? By doing so, you will save fifty cents on the cost of your renewal and greatly assist us in making the best report to Conference since 1928. Thank you.

his stand in the facts of the indispensable folly and futility of war as an instrument of national or international policy; and in the Pact of Paris, which clearly states that our country, with more than fifty others, has repudiated war and outlawed it as an instrument of international relations and has adopted pacific methods instead; and the life and teachings of a certain Carpenter who lived at Nazareth some nineteen hundred years ago.

Strange, is it?

Do we want this kind of a man for our ministry? Does the church owe any such ministry to the world?

Regardless of our method for dealing with the war problem we do find something here essential to any ministry that is to be worthy of the name for the days that are lying immediately ahead.

Here is conviction arrived at after study, some experience, observation and prayer. Here is the calm facing of a major issue of our time and a definite position regarding it. Here is a counting of the cost in meeting the consequences of alliance with an unpopular cause. And here is the taking of Jesus Christ seriously, both for individual and social redemption.

The church and its ministry must face afresh their responsibility to humanity, and must sacrificially and fearlessly measure their plans accordingly, if they hope to have a share in shaping the future.

I AM TIRED of the newspaper reporter who feels called upon, in rendering his account of the most recent, spectacular and harrowing murder, to tell how comely the woman is who is now in jail for the crime committed, a crime that seems to have climaxed a series of night-shade and clandestine relations which had their rootings in a miserably sordid background. The reporter seems to feel that it is his business, by a few deft touches, to make the one in jail as attractive as possible. Are the facts that she has curly eye-lashes and peachy cheeks important? He portrays a jail bird of tropical plumage.

I say I am tired of it. It is like wading through an alley of putrifying garbage perfumed with rose-water.

The practice is akin to that of those soft, shoddy and sentimental souls of a community who bring flowers and sweets to the young man in jail, who, a short while before, got away with bank funds that represent the honest and hard-earned savings of many years.

And I am tired of the reporter who feels compelled to color his report of happenings to suit the editorial policy of the paper he represents. This also is a weariness of the flesh and a pain to the soul. Such reporters seem to take liberties with the facts. They cease to be unbiased reporters of facts and become miserable interpreters of half guessed matter. Is it their business to tone down or up, or modify the major facts they are reporting?

While writing this editorial I was interrupted by a phone call from my friend who has had twenty years experience in the reportorial work of a newspaper. I drove over and we went out together. So I told him what I was writing. He replied, "That is what the people want, They like it that way."

Somewhat abashed by the reply I turned to my steering-wheel, and in a voice my friend could not hear, asked: What people like it this way? How many of the people like it this way? Is a paper never obligated to give the people what they need? Has the newspaper no responsibility with reference to facts and the future?

WHAT I DESIRE FOR DUKE UNIVERSITY THIS YEAR

By President W. P. Few

THAT IT BE DEDICATED TO TRUTH

My supreme desire for Duke University this year and every year is that it be dedicated to truth and disciplined in the hard services of humanity; that science and religion may stand here side by side—science and scholarship completely given to the full, untrammelled pursuit of the truth, and religion with its burning passion for righteousness in the world.

Can this ideal be realized in our world and can religion and education in its highest forms ever engage successfully in a great formative, common undertaking to make this a better world than man has yet known?

Duke University, is founded in that faith; and I earnestly desire that this year and through all the future the University may continue to proclaim the beautiful hope that righteousness and truth, gentleness and strength, goodness and beauty can live together, and, living together, can build a world that will sustain a civilization with great and enduring qualities.

WHAT I DESIRE FOR S. M. U. THIS YEAR

By President Chas. C. Seelman

STUDENTS OF CAPACITY AND AMBITION

Our desire for a student body has a double foci, old and new students.

The return of students is perhaps our major point of interest. It is more important to carry on systematically with last year's Juniors, Sophomores and Freshmen, than to attract new upper classmen by transfers from other institutions. In other words, it requires a full four-year period of teaching and fellowship to adequately transmit to a student the spirit of an educational institution. In no other way can he become the full-orbed intellectual and spiritual offspring of his Alma Mater.

As the foundation for future work we always look with much concern to the new Freshman Class. We are interested in its quantity to be sure, but most of all, we desire quality; by which we mean capacity and ambition to be good students. An educational institution has no remedy for mediocre capacity. But when a student comes with a good average brain and a strong ambition to learn, we are encouraged.

We also desire the intelligent and hearty co-operation of the alumni, ex-students, our ministers and churches generally. This includes confidence helpful suggestions, aiding local young people to solve their financial problems, and directing them to our church schools.

Finally, we could wish that our financial resources, particularly our endowment, might be substantially increased by gifts, annuities, bequests, or life insurance policies in our favor. Our endowment, which is now two million dollars plus, should be five million dollars or more. In the midst of her growing wealth, the Southwest should endow S. M. U. more adequately.

WHAT I DESIRE FOR CENTENARY COLLEGE

By President Pierce Cline

A Stream of Graduates Whose Minds Are Quickened and Informed

In an era when the minds of men are torn with doubts and fears as to the stability of the social order and when economic, political and religious problems beset on every hand, it is the right of the public to expect the institutions of higher learning to attack these problems with all the force at their command. It would be unreasonable to expect a cut and dried solution. Indeed, such solutions are not only impossible but would be useless in a moving, growing world. From the colleges the public is entitled to a stream of graduates whose minds are quickened and informed, and whose purposes are raised to the highest levels of Christian service and social responsibility. To measure up to this expectation the colleges must themselves maintain high ideals and wholesome standards of intellectual and moral integrity. It is not enough to be merely intellectual. It is not sufficient to be morally good. The men and women who are to fight the battles of the future must be wise as serpents and as free from viciousness as a dove. They must be intellectually able to measure arms with any of the forces that menace human welfare, and at the same time so noble in purpose that all their efforts shall uplift.

Thought is the mighty motive power that drives mankind to higher and holier achievement. Colleges should be places not where youths only learn to repeat the thought of others but where the thought of others shall be used to stimulate the student to do his own original thinking. When the students graduate and take their places in the world conscious alike of ability and responsibility, then the college is fulfilling its mission.

Centenary College can look upon the past unashamed and upon the future unafraid. Her past record justifies appreciation and confidence. Her objectives for the future must deserve commendation. It is our purpose that during the coming year no ideal shall be dimmed and no worthy tradition forsaken; that all shall work with a full consciousness of the importance of the task and with an eye fixed on permanent and higher values. In the language of the great Bishop Haygood, "We shall hold to that which is good and make it better if we can."

WHAT I DESIRE FOR MILLSAPS COLLEGE THIS YEAR

By President D. M. Key

Fullest Service With Resources Available

First. The opportunity for the fullest service with the resources now at our disposal. This involves a student enrollment about equal to last year's, i.e., 450 boys and girls. I hope, also, that these young people will measure up in earnestness, intelligence, and character to the best of recent years; some brilliant, inspiring and challenging the faculty with their potentialities for extraordinary achievement and leadership; many, average, that is, good, sound, human material, responsive to ideas, capable of intellectual growth, filled with the energy of youth and willing to toil systematically at their program of self-development; at least a few who will tax our patience and ingenuity by limited training and intellectual capacity.

Second. A certain number of individual benefactors who may come to know and share the exhilarating responsibility for undergirding and increasing the financial resources that are necessary if Millsaps is to continue and broaden the sound academic development of its past. Millsaps' income from endowment and from church contributions is now drastically reduced. The time has arrived when the College must have new streams of financial support or begin that retrogression that has characterized the slow and painful passing of so many church related colleges. These streams of financial support must come (there is no other source) from alumni, from Mississippi Methodists who have the ability to make some contribution to the social well-being, and from the citizens of the local community.

Third. The favor of God for faculty and administrators, His blessing and approval. The guidance, strength, and assurance that comes from vital spiritual life; the contagious serenity and good humor of those who have achieved a full commitment to the will of God, and the enthusiasm for spiritual and intellectual life which has always characterized the Methodist peoples.

Fourth. The sympathetic understanding and support of all our clientele, parents, pastors, alumni and especially the local churches, a feeling that the College is a part of the church life and of its program of Christian training for intellectual and spiritual development.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE AIMS FOR 1933

By President Geo. F. Winfield

To Fit the School to the Student

Our first purpose during Orientation Week is to conduct so thorough an investigation of each individual student's capacities, interests, and inclinations as that we may be of genuine help in enabling the student to select the junior college course that will be of most value to her. This investigation begins weeks before school opens and is conducted through questionnaires sent to a number of different persons. It is continued at the college by intelligence and achievement tests, placement tests, a speech clinic, lectures on college work, and the reading of a book the first week on "How to Study."

Our second objective this year is to train the girls for the presentation of a pageant, "A Century of Progress in the Higher Education of Women," on Mississippi Day at the Chicago World's Fair, in the Court of States, September 23. During the first week of school the play has been cast, the principal characters have learned their lines, and already the pageant gives great promise of success. It is the story of Elizabeth Academy, the first institution to confer a degree—Mistress of Science—upon a woman; Whitworth College, which is this year celebrating the 75th year of its founding; and Mississippi State College for Women, the moving spirit in whose founding was a Whitworth graduate and member of the Whitworth faculty, Anne Coleman Peyton. Mississippi State College for Women is the oldest tax-supported college for women in the world.

This thrilling story has been very beautifully written in poetic form by Mrs. Janie Drake Cooper, of Church Hill, Miss., grand-daughter of Dr. B. M. Drake, the most outstanding president of Elizabeth Academy. Mrs. Cooper was for 23 years connected with Whitworth College and is, therefore, the most logical person to produce this pageant. The pageant was originally written to be staged in the quadrangle on the Whitworth College campus, November 17, during the session of the Mississippi Annual Conference at Brookhaven, and just 115 years since Elizabeth Academy of the Methodist Episcopal Church was opened at old Washington, just one year after the state of Mississippi had been admitted into the Union.

Whitworth's opening with a decided increase over last year is rejoiced in by all the friends of all Christian education, and it looks now as though she will graduate something like fifty young women next spring who will constitute the first sophomore class to take the comprehensive examinations similar to those administered by the University of Chicago for admission to the upper division. She has the largest freshman class she has had for two or three years.

A COLLEGE MAN WISHES

By President J. R. Countiss

For Hungry Minded and Noble Minded Youth

Just now I wish for Grenada College a full enrollment of hungry-minded youth, eager to know the sky above, the earth beneath, the people about, the heroism and heartaches of the past, the visions and hopes of the future. I desire to assemble a group in whom the edge of intellectual appetite has not been dulled nor the focus of curiosity blurred—curiosity, the endowment of the child, the bane of the mother, the delight of the teacher. What a joy to find the few who have preserved its pristine freshness in the midst of a dumb generation "whose eyes see not and whose ears do not hear." What unspeakable boredom to stand daily before bored youth too blasé and sophisticated to be enamored or even interested in any treasure the teacher may have found in library, laboratory or life! Was the heart of the Master ever more keenly pierced than when he met that indifferent multitude who would lament to no mourning and dance to no piping, but who drowed on the side-lines utterly unresponsive to the thrills of the game? When the millennium arrives only the hungry-minded will attend college and the thousands who are now "sent" because it is the fashion, or "sought" because they play ball, will be left on the rock-piles where they belong. As Gideon eliminated those more interested in comfort than in conflict, so I would eliminate all those able to find peace and contentment outside college walls.

Furthermore, I should like for my hungry-minded youth to be noble-minded. I should like to close college doors on all who do not seek wisdom and skill for noble ends and worthy purposes. I would maintain no schools to train the self-seeking or predatory. Let those whose chief desire is to be rich enter the marts of trade and leave the halls of learning to a nobler breed. Let those who would lord it over their fellows be left to use the rotting club of the cave dwellers, while the finer tools of science and civilization are given to those who desire to serve. As the opening day draws near, it is my wish that our little college may be honored and blessed with the presence of those who are willing to toil that they may attain; to dig deep that they may find the blessed treasure which endures the fiery test of the years, enriches age, makes responsibility a joy, and sacrifice a sacrament. Give me this and I shall be happy.

CYCLONE ADDS TO THE TROUBLED WATERS IN CUBA

The following letter, addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Chas. O. Chalmers, parents of Miss Clara E. Chalmers, Director of Colegio "Irene Toland," one of the mission enterprises of our church under the direction of the Woman's Board, located at Matanzas, Cuba, gives some idea of the many hardships and sacrifices under which our missionaries are laboring in their efforts to spread the gospel in foreign fields:

"Dearest Mother and Dad: Well, here we are trying our best to get over the effects of the recent cyclone. It was terrible and left so much destruction in its wake. Things like these just seem to take all the ambition and enthusiasm out of one. We just had everything fixed so nice at the cost of much sacrifice and then up comes a cyclone and wipes it all out. Our dormitory is roofless again, the walls are water-soaked and dirty, and the furniture warped and disfigured. It is very disheartening. I wish our secretary could find enough money so that we might put a storm-proof roof on our dormitory, then the roof would be on once and for all. Our school building and main building have storm-proof roofs and suffered no damage whatever, neither in this cyclone nor that of 1926, but our dormitory has suffered each time. This cyclone business is getting worse and worse here in the tropics. The cyclone that hit us went to Texas, and the day after this awful cyclone another was announced to strike us at three in the afternoon, but God was good; he turned it East toward the Florida coast and poor Miami and Palm Beach got it. When that second cyclone was announced to hit us the day after the other had done all the damage it could, I just said I haven't ambition enough to bar the house again and fight like I fought yesterday. I'll just sit down and let it do its worst. I guess I wouldn't have done that, though. I would have had to fight in spite of myself, for I do like nice things and a nice looking house, and I have worked so hard for the splendid library we have that I know I would have done something to save it all again.

"As far as government troubles are concerned, we take little part in them. We stay in our house, which is the wisest plan to follow these days. We hope everything will come out all right in the end, and I believe they will. There is no danger as long as we mind our business and don't take part in political things. The folks that are doing things now know what they are doing, and if they don't go to fussing among themselves everything may turn out all right. The happenings are certainly extraordinary, but let's see what they will do. They have their chance; let's see what they will do with it. Things were beginning to pick up under Cespedes but now we have gone back a little as a result of a change in government. There is a certain lack of confidence in the government as it is, but everybody is patiently waiting to see how things will turn out.

"I am well and fine and am trying to carry on with the school just as best I can. Our attendance is small, but good for the times through which we are passing. There are still strikes and many of our pupils are kept home for that reason. I am inclosing several pictures of the school, taken after the cyclone, which will give you some idea of the damage done our buildings.

"I send just lots of love to you and dear mother.

"Lovingly,

Matanzas, Cuba.

"CLARA."

BISHOP DOBBS DEDICATES SEXTON CHAPEL

The new Methodist church, built following the destruction of the Community Church at Harmon, La., during the storm, was dedicated Friday night by Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, assisted by Dr. George S. Sexton, presiding elder of the Shreveport District. The new church was named Sexton Chapel, in honor of Dr. Sexton.

Preceding the dedicatory service, there was a community meet at the church and a picnic dinner was served at 6 p.m. to a very large congregation. Preceding the dedicatory service, and immediately following the picnic dinner, there were three group community meetings, one for the ladies, that was addressed by Mrs. George S. Sexton, Jr., President of the Louisiana Conference Woman's Missionary Society; the Young People's group was addressed by Randle T. Moore of Shreveport; the group of the church officials from the entire charge, served by Rev. L. W. Smart, the pastor, had a conference with Presiding Elder Sexton, in which they discussed plans for closing out the year's work.

The program for the dedicatory service, which was conducted by Bishop Dobbs, was as follows:

Opening song, "We're Marching to Zion," by choir and congregation; prayer by Dr. George Sexton.

Scripture reading, Dr. George Sexton; "History of Methodism in Harmon," by Mrs. W. C. McDonald; a review of the work at Harmon for the past three and a half years, by Rev. L. W. Smart, pastor.

A thanksgiving offering was made in appreciation of the co-operation of the people and of the blessings of God in helping them to rebuild the church upon the wreck and ruin of the storm. The choir sang "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

Following the song, Bishop Dobbs made a short address on the place of the church in every-day life, and then entered into the formal dedicatory program. The church was presented by the officers of the church to be set apart from all common and unhallowed services for the worship of God. By formal action of the officials and members of the Harmon church, the name of the church was announced to be Sexton Chapel.

The service was closed with the congregation singing and benediction by Rev. Guy M. Hicks, pastor of the Methodist church at Mansfield.

There were representatives from many of the surrounding churches, among whom were Rev. J. M. Alford from Coushatta, and Rev. Guy M. Hicks of Mansfield. Messages from former pastors were received and read. Dr. W. W. Holmes, pastor of the Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, sent a letter of congratulations. W. C. McDonald, president of the board of stewards of Sexton Chapel, formerly Harmon church, represented the official board in making the presentation of the church to Bishop Dobbs.

WHY NOT?

By Rev. Chas. E. McLean, Pastor

The Daily Vacation Bible School at Franklinton, La., never consumes a lengthy period of time. This year it required four hours each of five early August days. The work was under the expert direction of Miss Stella Pierce, who packed into the five mornings a wonderfully fine program of instruction and practical hard work. In three departments the following courses were taught: Bible, Missions, Temperance, and Music. The peak attendance was 137 and all ages were represented on the rolls.

At the Sunday School Day service, which served as a send-off to the school, seven children were baptized by Brother C. C. Miller and the pastor. The school closed with an exhibition of its work in connection with a reception for the members of the church and a pageant exemplifying the trends in religious education ideals from Moses to the present.

A special feature of the school's activities was the handwork done by the adult department. Machines were brought to the church and busy hands wrought swiftly in making a shipment of garments for the Orphanage. Five dozen and three garments were made to specifications furnished by Brother Vaughan and sent to Ruston as an expression of the interest and devotion of our people. Of course, the ladies did not confine their activities to the busy work period allotted to each day, but worked after hours and, in some cases, at home, in order that the whole list of garments could be completed on time.

Perhaps there are other churches who have taken up this practical type of helpfulness, but if not, we suggest it as a pleasant and not too difficult "go-between" activity to keep us Orphanage-minded from Easter until Harvest Day.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. A. M. West made an address at the opening of the school at Sturgis, Miss.

Rev. H. D. Suydam has Sunday schools running in six of the churches on the Macon Circuit.

Rev. E. M. Sharp will conduct a revival meeting at Rienzi, Miss., beginning September 10.

A good word comes from Rev. W. H. Lewis, pastor at Mass Point, Miss. Thank you, Brother Lewis.

"More to follow," says Rev. T. F. Sartain, pastor at Chester, Miss., as he sends in some subscriptions.

"We should feel lost without the New Orleans Christian Advocate coming to our home every week," Mrs. B. F. Lewis, Jackson, Miss.

Rev. J. A. George, will conduct a revival under a tent at Smithville, Miss., during a week in September. Rev. J. V. Stewart is the pastor.

Dr. C. M. Chapman, pastor at Tehula, Miss., is making an urgent call for all of his people to come to their usual place in the church.

Rev. J. P. Bonnacarrere, our good pastor at Donaldsonville, La., was in our office the other day. Sorry we were out. He sends a list of subscriptions and threatens to send more.

"With all my heart I wish for the success of the Advocate campaign," writes Dr. E. Nash Broyles, presiding elder of the Greenville District. Thank you, Doctor Broyles.

If Mrs. James J. Gordon or Miss Mary S Gordon should chance to see this, will they please write to Mrs. J. F. Redmond, Box 173, Sumrall, Miss. She wants to hear from you.

A Christian Culture Institute for Young People was held at Central Church, Meridian, Miss., August 28-September 2. Mr. W. D. Hawkins was the Dean.

Rev. J. H. Felts, pastor at Grenada, Miss., urges his people to be loyal to the Church. In his notes he gives a vivid picture of the church as it struggles ahead on the basis of freewill and goodwill.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, pastor at Winona, Miss., preached a fine sermon to a full house recently on the subject: "Is the Church a Divine Institution?" Wish I could have heard that sermon.

Rev. A. F. Moore, an honored superannuate of Coldwater, Miss., renews his subscription and sends a heartening word. "I feel that our church papers are badly needed," he says.

Rev. S. M. Hemphill, pastor at Mashulaville, Miss., had Rev. J. A. George of Macon, Miss., to assist him in a revival at New Hope church the last week in August. Much interest was shown in the revival.

Rev. J. A. George, pastor at Macon, Miss., stresses a thirty-minute mid-week prayer meeting. A good interesting thirty-minute sermon is much more attractive than a long drawn-out, uninteresting meeting.

New Albany, Miss., is having another simultaneous revival this year. It was so successful last year that all feel it is the best type of revival. Rev. J. H. Holder, our pastor, is always ready to join with the other churches for any good cause.

Pontotoc was host to the Young People from Northeastern section of Aberdeen District, September 1. Miss Virginia Tomas gave the inspiration address. A picnic lunch was served to the young people.

Rev. S. L. Pope, our pastor at Belzoni, Miss., contributed a fine article on "Church Going" to the Belzoni Banner. Brother Pope is urging the people to go to church for the benefit of their souls.

Rev. S. E. Ashmore recently conducted a revival at Belmont, Miss. His sermons were very much appreciated. At stated times he talked to the children. Much good resulted from the revival.

Rev. J. L. Nahors, pastor at Holcomb, Miss., made an address at the opening of the public school at that place. He used the figure of a race ing, a good Sunday school and young people's organizations. Brother Bennett is closing his fourth year on this work.

"I have delayed in order to try to double the number of new and renewal subscriptions that I promised, and I have done better." That is clipped from the letter of Rev. T. B. Cottrell, pastor at Fayette, Miss. Brother Cottrell is one of those "second mile" pastors.

Rev. J. M. Alford, pastor at Coushatta, La., reports progress on his work. Eighty-seven members have been received since he went to the work. The Missionary Societies are doing exceptional work. And the church has received a new coat of paint.

"The Golden Rule or the NRA" was the topic of a recent sermon by Dr. L. L. Cowen, pastor Central Church, Meridian, Miss. Seems to me he had a live subject. This great church observed September 17 as "Home Coming Day."

T. F. Dumas, a layman of Lucedale, Miss., sent a letter with several things in it, among them, his renewal, a word of commendation for the Advocate and some very fine things about Rev. J. M. Corley, pastor, and Rev. Otto Porter, presiding elder.

Five Young People's Unions have been formed, and are functioning in various parts of the Vicksburg District, Mississippi Conference. The last of these organized was of groups from the Gloster and Centerville charges, Revs. J. H. Morrow and E. A. King, pastors.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan, professor of chemistry, Millsaps College, and Mississippi Conference Lay Leader, spent a few days at the Century of Progress Fair. We know he must have seen a great deal as he took along a pair of eyes that see. He sees back of and beyond.

Kilmichael church was the host to the zone meeting of the W. M. S. August 28. Rev. J. R. Murff, pastor-host, was present, as were many of the church workers from the surrounding territory. Mrs. Dewitt Forrest and her daughter Miss Matty Keith rendered special music for the occasion.

Some time ago we quoted a message about the Advocate from Rev. H. A. Gatlin, pastor at Columbia, Miss. Well, he showed up just as we expected with a good list of subscriptions. He took the time to go in person and secured these subscriptions. People usually begin to think important that which their pastor thinks important.

Mrs. William Franklin Rogers, widow of Rev. William Franklin Rogers, who passed to his reward in the early summer, has moved from Horn Lake to Grenada, Miss., where she will make her permanent home, together with her daughter, Miss Tryphena Rogers, prominent church worker, and her son, Marvin LaGrone Rogers, publisher of a tabloid daily newspaper in Grenada.

"Come up to see us October 12-15 on the Fiftieth Birthday of Ruston; October 15-20, Standard Training School; or October 29-November 5 inclusive, when Bishop A. Frank Smith is to hold our revival; or just whenever it suits you." That message to the editor is from Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor Trinity Church, Ruston, La. I think I'll just take them all in. Who could miss it?

Announcing the arrival of a boy, born at 2 a.m., September 6, weight 12 pounds and 6 ounces. Rev. and Mrs. P. M. Caraway. Brother Caraway is the hard-working pastor of East End, Meridian. I call that a good sized start for the lad. And his name signifies strength and action. It is Stone Walker. Congratulations to parents and son.

Do you know Mr. John A. McLeod, 802 Main Street, Hattiesburg, Miss? He has read the Advocate since 1899, forty-three years. His sight is now failing him. Brother McLeod attended his first annual conference as a delegate in 1893 and missed very few after that until recent years. He was a member of the General Conference which met in Asheville, N. C., 1910.

Dr. W. N. Duncan, presiding elder of the Greenwood District, says, "Next week I shall send to each pastor a notice of the extension of time and ask him to press this matter." We greatly appreciate this cooperation of our presiding elders. Subscriptions are still coming in. Words of thanks for extension of time have come from a number of our pastors.

Now is your time, Louisiana preachers, to drop that line to Rev. L. W. Smart, our good pastor at Pelican, La. Recently he suffered a collapse. In spite of this he sent in his subscriptions. We pray that he may have speedy and complete recovery. Elsewhere you will find an account of the dedication of a new church on Brother Smart's work.

urging the children to run a good race to the goal of right education.

Through error, our columns last week stated that Rev. H. N. Harrison, New Orleans, had been appointed to succeed Rev. R. L. Armstrong at Second Church of this city. Rev. Martin Hebert has been assigned to the charge.

Chaplain A. F. Vaughan, member of the Louisiana Conference and brother of Dr. R. W. Vaughan, superintendent of our Orphanage at Ruston, La., has been assigned to Barksdale Field, Shreveport, La., appointment to take effect November 4.

"I read your editorials with great interest. Thank you for the vital, up-to-date messages." This encouraging word comes from the Dean of Candler School of Theology, Dr. Franklin N. Parker.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Coahoma and Jonestown, Miss., sends subscriptions and says, "It looks as though there is a brighter day ahead for us." Brother Gladney carries a good part of that brighter day inside of himself. Thus it should be.

Rev. J. T. Abney, pastor at Osyka, Miss., who has given the Advocate a large place on his summer schedule, tells us that the Southern Group of the Brookhaven District Pastor's Conference met with him at Osyka on September 12.

Rev. J. V. Bennett is announcing five themes for his sermon subjects during September and October. Boonville, Miss., has a fine church build-

He does not let the grass grow where he is pastor.

The Methodists joined in with other churches in a successful union revival at Duck Hill, Miss. A complete survey of the town was made showing that 119 people over eight years of age were not members of any local church. Fifty were not professed Christians. Rev. R. O. Bolling preached during the revival. Forty united with the local churches. The services were held at the High School auditorium.

Rev. W. E. "Kentucky" Thomas, general evangelist, has just closed a very helpful meeting in our church at McDonoghville, La. While in this territory Brother Thomas is available for other meetings among the brethren of this section. He was formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference and held appointments in the city of New Orleans. His present address is Westminster Apartments, Nashville, Tenn.

Do you want to know what our college presidents desire for our institutions? Then be sure to read the material on the second page of the Advocate. You will find a message from the presidents of Duke, Southern Methodist, Centenary, Millsaps, Whitworth and Grenada. Did you ever write one of our college presidents to commend the work being done by our schools? Try it. These colleges are opening now. Let us help to make it a great year.

Rev. F. J. Jones, pastor of Washington charge, Mississippi Conference recently assisted Rev. H. S. Westbrook, pastor of the Florence, Miss., charge, at a meeting, in which nineteen members were added to the roll. Brother Jones is serving his third year on his charge, which is composed of Washington, Stanton, Natchez Mission, Kingston, Mars Hill, Washington and Kingston are among the most interesting places of Methodism in all the Southwest, from historical standpoint. Tobias Gibson and Lorenzo Dow are names connected with both of these places.

Do you have a good book you can send Rev. Ben P. Jacob? You saw a notice in last week's Advocate about his fearful loss in the recent storm out in his section. But let him speak: "Dear Raulins: Please say in the Advocate that our house was blown to pieces during the thirty-hour storm, but wife and I were unhurt. I ask this because my many friends in your territory may know our condition and rejoice with us in our escape. 'My distressing loss is my books.'" I read about another preacher who was in jail because of the faith. He wrote to his young friend to bring him some books. Boys, send Brother Jacob a book, and put a check in it.

Rev. W. L. Duren, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, has accepted an invitation from the Mississippi Conference Historical Society to deliver, on Wednesday evening, November 15, preceding the opening session of the Mississippi Conference in Brookhaven, Nov. 16, an address on, "The Life and Character of Bishop Galloway." Dr. Duren is the author of several unique biographies, the last of which, published in 1932, was his book on, "Charles Betts Galloway, Orator, Preacher, and Prince of Christian Chivalry." This address will have added interest because Bishop Galloway was a Mississippian and was once the preacher-in-charge of Brookhaven.

"When the writer was a boy too small to mount a horse without assistance, his father used to lift him to the back of 'old Nellie' and send him to the post office to get the mail. The mail consisted principally of 'The Advocate' and the weekly newspaper. That night the entire family gathered in the big front room to hear sister Berta read the paper to us. That was a long time ago. The paper is twice that old now. No one can begin to estimate the good this paper has done. Next to Centenary College, it has been the strong arm of the church. The paper is needed in every home. It will assist parents in discharging their moral and spiritual responsibilities. It is the best Pastor's assistant ever devised. It will help the stewards raise money necessary to run the church. It is continually striking telling blows against the greed and lust of the liquor traffic and other organized evils. You can get this paper for one dollar during the Anniversary Celebration."—Rev. Robt. M. Brown, P. E., in the Minden District Messenger.

There are ways and ways of securing subscriptions to the Advocate. Those that secure the subscriptions are right ways, and those that do not are wrong. Which are you using? Rev. J. C. Rousseaux, pastor of the Mary and Zwolle, La., charge, put on a contest between two competing teams at Mary. The result was 22 subscriptions. He says he will use the same plan at Zwolle. When a pastor uses his ingenuity the subscriptions usually show up. There are some wrong ways that good pastors are still trying to use. From these pastors we are not receiving many subscriptions. One of these ways is just to do nothing about it and let those renew or subscribe who may "happen" to. Another way is to announce it in the pulpit or bulletin and let it stop at that. Some of the larger churches are using this method, and we are still receiving very few subscriptions from them. This is not consistent. We have not found one of these pastors using this method with reference to anything of any great importance or any matter in which he is greatly interested. They do not depend upon it for their Benevolences, the Budget, or the winning of men to the Kingdom. The way to secure subscriptions as well as converts is not only to make announcements, but to "go after them." The Advocate is interested in the success of every phase of the work of the local church.

Did you have the honor of knowing, or of meeting even for one time, that princely Presbyterian preacher, Dr. C. W. Grafton of Union Church, Miss.? I found this in a Brookhaven paper a few weeks ago:

"The serious illness of Dr. C. W. Grafton, for many years moderator of the general assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, at his home in Union Church, is the cause of much alarm among his countless friends throughout the State and South.

"Suffering from a chill during the early part of last week, Dr. Grafton, who is more than 85

ATTENTION, PASTORS

But nine days remain in which to secure the quotas on the EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY campaign of the Advocate. Quite a number have gone far beyond the quotas accepted. Others have secured part and will have the balance in before October 1. A few who have accepted quotas have not been heard from thus far, but it is hoped that their lists will be in hand before October 1, the date the campaign closes.

The Publishing Committee launched this campaign on the strength of the quotas accepted by the pastors in reply to the referendum conducted in July. Success is assured if every pastor "does his part" and secures his full quota by the end of this month. By making the most of the time left we can go over the top.

years of age, is said to have grown weaker during the past several days.

"Dr. Grafton's long life of service as a minister of the gospel has endeared him to everyone whose life he has touched. Graduating as first honor man from the University of Mississippi, after having previously served with distinction as a boy Confederate soldier, he then studied at Columbia Seminary in Columbia, S. C.

"His first and only pastorate was at Union Church, where he has been for sixty years. In addition to his church there, he also had a school and as pastor and teacher has wielded a wonderful influence.

"Offers of the chancellorship of Southwestern University in Memphis and of numerous professorships at leading educational institutions, have failed to take Dr. Grafton from his country post in Mississippi."

DR. DUREN APPOINTED MEMBER OF PUBLISHING COMMITTEE

Dr. F. L. Wells, Chairman of the Advocate Publishing Committee, has authorized us to announce the appointment, by Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, of Dr. W. L. Duren, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, to fill the vacancy on the Publishing Committee from the Louisiana Conference caused by the recent death of Dr. W. W. Drake.

WINNFIELD IS READY

Baptists, Presbyterians, Christians, and others are joining the Methodists of Winnfield in entertaining the Annual Conference which meets here on November 23, and all are looking forward with much pleasure to its coming.

ELLIS SMITH, P. C.

THE PAPERS SAY THAT---

Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, evangelist of Angelus Temple, California, now plans to enter the movies with her message, giving as her reason for resorting to the movie stage the opportunity this platform offers for reaching multitudes of people who never attend church.

That the unchurched should be reached by the Gospel message, and that the movie theatre holds a large per cent of such, we agree. What troubles us is the messenger. We do not see how Mrs. Hutton, who has been such a failure in the little realm of her own home can be of much benefit to the movie crowd. One of the things kept continually before them on the screen is the poison that tends to break down home and family life. And from day to day, in the press, they observe how the gospel of the screen is being practiced in the Hollywood Colony among the movie stars. May we not send a better Missionary to the movie continent?

A woman of Toledo, Ohio, takes a safety pin and gouges out her eyes, because, said she, they caused her to sin. "If thine eye offend thee, pluck it out." That is what Jesus said. She was entirely satisfied with the operation.

One of the most serious bars to a proper understanding of the Scriptures is the literalistic mind. Jesus deplored it. And one of the most serious obstacles to spiritual regeneration is the failure to take sin seriously. This woman took her sin seriously, but adopted the wrong method for its removal. Many who have a better understanding of the Bible are little concerned for its message and regard sin lightly. Let us take both the Bible and sin SERIOUSLY.

REV. R. O. BROWN CALLED HOME

The following letter, bearing the sad news of the death of Rev. R. O. Brown, honored superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference, was received from Rev. C. T. Floyd, our pastor at Amory, Miss., just in time to be included in this issue of the Advocate:

"I have just this minute received a message saying that Rev. R. O. Brown had passed away on Sunday, September 17, at Jackson, Miss., and that his body would be brought here to-morrow, Monday, for burial either Monday or Tuesday. It seems that the plans have not been completed at this time.

"Brother Brown was one of our beloved superannuates. A faithful servant of God has passed to his eternal reward."

MT. OLIVE AND COLLINS YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION

The second meeting of the Young People's Union, consisting of Mt. Olive and Collins Leagues, was held at Collins the second Sunday in July. Young People from the churches took part in the program. The subject for discussion was, "What Makes A Missionary?" After a song service and the devotional, a business meeting was held, during which officers were elected as follows: Ethel Dee Gatlin, president, Mt. Olive, Miss.; Severna Herschel, vice-president, Collins, Miss.; Marla Pope, secretary, Collins, Miss.

Interesting talks were given on "What Makes A Missionary," "Life Of A Famous Missionary," and "Witnessing for Christ."

Refreshments were served before and after the meeting.

thusiastic and all worked as never before.

Rev. J. B. Cain, pastor of Main Street Church, and Rev. C. A. Schults, pastor of Court Street Church, were present, ready to do everything in their power for the success of the school.

Rev. R. H. Clegg, pastor of Broad Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., besides being Educational Director of the Training School, was a very capable member of the faculty.

The presiding elder of this district, Rev. J. T. Leggett, was present, giving his thoughts and time for the cause of this great work.

There were three courses offered in the school. They were:

"Teaching Children."

"The Church and Its Work."

"The Young People's Work and Organization."

Mr. A. L. Gilmore, Director of Christian Education at Galloway Memorial, Jackson, was a splendid teacher of "The Young People's Work and Organization." He thrashed out the many problems that confronted the different ones and gave perfectly grand new ideas for a successful year for all. Mr. Gilmore was very interesting and even the most serious-minded people enjoyed his humor and his supply of clever stories he told from time to time. Everyone who had the privilege of taking this course was deeply benefited and are anxious to have him back at any time. Twenty-two received credits in this class—and two have made application for office credits.

Rev. R. H. Clegg, pastor of Broad Street Church, was the competent teacher of the course on "The Church and Its Work." This subject is a very important one, and as one of the members of that class stated, it is a subject that every church member should know thoroughly. Brother Clegg has been a teacher of some class in The Standard School for the past three years. Seven received credit in this course and each one stated that they were glad to have the opportunity to learn more about their Church and what they should do to become the kind of member that would mean the most to them and the community as well as the Church.

Teaching children is a very important work of the Church today, and realizing the fact that it is, a great many took advantage of the opportunity of taking this class. P. J. Rutledge, of Millsaps College, was put at the head of this class as instructor and fifteen received credit and they all agree that with the information and good sound judgement that was given them by Mr. Rutledge that they can conduct their classes with more ease, patience and intelligence than ever before. Mr. Rutledge not only taught them methods on teaching, but gave them good advice and practical ideas that will have the greatest effect on the youngsters. It was indeed a pleasure and a great benefit that he could manage to be instructor of this class.

There were three persons present, Mrs. K. B. Allsup, Mrs. J. G. Barksdale, Mr. H. Ogden, who have received a credit each year since 1925, the year of the first Standard Training School in Hattiesburg.

The Worship period between the two class periods was enjoyed very much.

The total number that received credits was forty-four and two made application for office credit. There were a great number who were present for three meetings, but did not apply for a certificate. Two came every night, attended all classes, handed in all written work, but were under age and therefore were barred from getting their credits.

Every one received the greatest of pleasure and good from this school, and are looking forward to September, 1934, when again a crowd will be gathered to learn more about the advancement of the Kingdom of God through the different subjects that will be taught.

FROM GLOSTER, MISS.

Dear Dr. Raulins: Just a word from the Gloster charge concerning the work of the church. We have had fine revivals in every church. Dr. Joseph A. Smith assisted me at the Gloster Church. He preached to good congregations each morning and to a full church every night. The entire town was blessed by his preaching. I was assisted at the Mt. Vernon Church by our mutual friend, Brother Delas Cassels. This meeting also was a wonderful success. Brother L. P. Anders assisted at Union, and Dr. H. G. Hawkins at the Hopewell Church.

With the naming of these brethren you can understand why our meetings were so successful. We have received fifty-three members so far this year, forty-nine of whom were on profession of faith. I am sending you a cashier's check for eleven dollars ($11.00) which is to pay for eleven subscriptions to the Advocate. Two of these subscriptions were contributed by the Gloster and Centreville Union for the tubercular patients at Sanatorium, Miss., as a memorial to Louise Preston.

Why Liquid Laxatives are Back in Favor

The public is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that the properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. A child is easily given the right dose. And mild liquid laxatives do not irritate the kidneys.

Doctors are generally agreed that senna is the best laxative for everybody. Senna is a natural laxative. It does not drain the system like the cathartics that leave you so thirsty. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid laxative which relies on senna for its laxative action. It has the average person's bowels as regular as clockwork in a few weeks' time.

You can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drugstore, ready for use. Member N. R. A.

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY

Whereas, it has pleased an All-wise Creator in His wonderful wisdom, to remove from our midst our friend and co-worker, Mrs. Tishle Robbins, who labored earnestly as a member of the Monticello Missionary Society, be it

Resolved, that in the person of Mrs. Robbins the Society has lost one of its worthiest and most useful members, one who was always ready to do her part whenever she was called upon, and be it further

Resolved, that we bow in humble submission to the will of an All-wise and Provident Creator, supreme in the confidence that she is now basking in the sunlight of His love. Be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this society, a copy furnished the family of the deceased, and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

MRS. I. H. SMITH,
MRS. G. H. HAYES,
MRS. H. J. PATTERSON,

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, on the 7th day of September, 1933, death called our beloved friend, Mrs. Mollie Calhoun. Therefore be it Resolved by the Woman's Missionary Society of Rayville, La., Methodist Church, South.

That while reverently bowing to the will of Him who "doeth all things well," yet our hearts are burdened with sorrow and we sigh for the "sound of the voice that is hushed and the touch of the hand that is stilled."

That in the death of Mrs. Calhoun our Society loses a valued member, this community one held high in esteem by all who knew her and her children a fond, faithful and devoted mother, and to them we extend our heart-felt sympathy and condolence.

That we pray the Comforter will lighten our burden of sorrow and grief that we may feel that she is not dead but sleeping.

That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this society, a copy be sent to the family of the deceased, one be furnished to the Richland Beacon News and one to be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

MRS. G. D. CAIN,
MRS. W. D. COTTON,
MRS. F. B. HATCH, JR.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas it has pleased God in His infinite wisdom on August 27, 1933, to call by death our beloved sister, Mrs. Ira A. King; therefore, be it Resolved, by the Woman's Missionary Society of Nebo Methodist Church, while we sigh for the "sound of the voice that is hushed and the touch of the hand that is stilled," that we bow in humble submission to the will of Him Who doeth all things well.

That in the death of Mrs. King our church and society has lost a faithful and valued member, and the community one held in high esteem, and her loved ones a faithful companion and devoted mother.

That to us and all others to whom she was dear, there is sweet comfort in the knowledge that she did not fear death, and was willing to suffer and prepared to answer, "I am ready," and that she found comfort in the words, "No matter what the world says, no matter for its frowns, no matter for the storms, no never; if to Jesus you are true, there's a glory waits for you, in the beautiful the bright forever."

And that to her companion and children we pray the Comforter will care with healing in His wings and so lighten their burden of sorrow and grief that they may indeed feel she is not dead but sleepeth.

That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this society, a copy be sent to the family of the deceased and a copy be mailed to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

A HIGHLY SATISFACTORY MEETING

I speak of the meeting that closed at Glendale, Jackson, Sunday evening, September 10, beginning Sunday, August 27. It was the decision of the membership in general that the pastor and son be the human leaders and they accepted it seriously and heartily. Cottage prayer meetings were held two weeks and one week of prayer meetings were held in the church, prior to the beginning of the meeting proper. Before the regular meeting began the revival was on.

Weather conditions were against us the first week and the heat was intense throughout the meeting with the exception of two or three days, but the interest and enthusiasm kept growing clear through the meeting and resulted in the most satisfactory meeting I ever held for my own people. Some of the results are as follows: Twenty-one accessions to the church, with half of them on profession of faith; some of the brightest conversions and reclamations I have ever seen, some (with many seekers) testifying to having obtained the blessed experience of sanctification; the church wonderfully revived; twenty subscriptions to the Advocate; a substantial voluntary offering for our son, Morelle, who left on the morning of the 11th for Ashbury College Seminary; Conference collections in full, in cash and subscriptions, with a like amount in like manner, on the church debt; the very best of co-operation on the part of the Baptist pastor and his people, with the largest "pay-day" the pastor has received during the year, with the most serious, solemn, and undivided attention to the old-time gospel I believe I've ever seen, and the meeting closing with the sweetest and most brotherly fellow-

Cardul Good For Run-Down Condition

"I have found Cardul a good medicine to take for a run-down condition," writes Miss Hazel Anthement, of Houma, La. "I had pains in my sides. This made me nervous, and I felt I should take something for this trouble. I was with my sister. She was taking Cardul, so I took it, too, and found it very helpful. I am glad to recommend it to others."

Cardul is safe and wholesome for women of all ages. At drug stores.

Campaign Closes October 1

With but nine days remaining before the close of the EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY campaign, only 4% of the charges in the three patronizing Conferences have been heard from to date. However, since a number of pastors represented in this group have over-subscribed their accepted quotas, these charges have secured a total of 60% of the total number of subscriptions pledged by the pastors of the three Conferences. Therefore, with those pastors who have not as yet sent in their quotas as indicated by them during the referendum conducted in July, making the most of the remaining time, and securing their quotas by October 1, the success of the campaign is assured, and since this campaign was launched on the strength of these pledges, we have no doubt as to the final outcome.

Following are subscriptions received through Monday, September 18, at the special $1.00 per year rate:

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

CAN THE PASTOR be saved?

One of my teachers at Vanderbilt said to the class one day, "You seldom hear of a backslidden Methodist preacher's being saved." And he followed the declaration with this explanation: "They never seem to find out they are backslidden."

Up to that time it had never occurred to me that there could be such a thing as a backslidden Methodist preacher. I did not grow up of preacher stock, and I always looked upon the Methodist pastor as certainly the one man in the community who did know God. The Vanderbilt teacher seemed to think that there might be backslidden Methodist preachers still serving charges and filling pulpits.

That is not exactly the line I intended to follow, but I have never been able to shake off that question of my teacher. A Methodist preacher can no more effectively do his immeasurably big and noble task without the religion of Jesus than a Ford car can run without gas, except down hill.

While these pressing days, about which you have heard, are bringing up a great many things for re-examination and re-valuation we Methodist pastors had just as well come up and get our measure. Our task has greatly expanded and become more complex and challenging. There have always been some giants in our pulpits, but we have now reached a day when we shall have to have whole conferences of them if we get the job done.

I used to hear my pastor preach his sermon on, "The Call to the Ministry." He emphasized the need for preachers both for the home field and our mission stations. In that day almost every young man who considered the "call" also considered whether or not he should go to the mission field. Preachers seemed to be scarce. Now we have more than enough. Some conferences are closing their doors for awhile. We boast that in our church every pastor has a charge and every charge has a pastor. But what must we do when we have more pastors than we have charges? Shall we keep young men waiting?

SINCE IT IS no longer a matter of quantity we certainly should begin to give serious attention to quality. Each year, with increasing difficulty, bishops and cabinets face the problem of "placing" the pastors. They, of course, are eager for the organization of new charges but surely this is not the primary problem just now. How well they know when they make certain assignments, that neither preacher nor charge is going to make much progress.

We have been accustomed to laying great emphasis upon religious experience as a qualification for the ministry. Surely this is fundamental, but it is not the whole requirement or qualification. We have hardly been as faithful as Wesley in some other requirements, neither have we been quite faithful to Wesley along these lines. We have believed in education for the ministry in a kind of left-handed fashion. And this is no argument that colleges and degrees will cover the case.

Can the pastor be saved? Let us not forget that it takes an exceptional man to meet the requirements of a Methodist ministry as laid down in our Discipline. Some call him the "key man." If we discharge effectively this ministry it is going to take super-men. Are we going to find and build them?

First, continue to insist upon religious experience cut to a large mold. Can any man have a religious experience except in terms of and according to the measure of his personality? Let us go back to Jesus and see how he asked the whole personality and that expanded to its fullest; not just emotional and "heart-felt religion." And there is no conflict here. We need the whole man and we need men that are whole.

Second, let us provide more and better training schools and pastors' schools and require our pastors to attend them. This will help those who have discovered their limitations and desire to improve their ministry. When the medical, teaching and other professions require that men and women continue to take training; additional training, will the church limp along with poorly equipped men?

Third, let us have a physical as well as spiritual and educational qualification for our ministry. We are particular at this point in selecting missionaries, but just what questions along this line do we ask our candidates for the ministry? This is not entirely answered by the mortality record of the ministry, nor by the claim that a man's effectiveness in the ministry is not effected by his physical condition. Certainly there are exceptions, but we cannot project our plans for the ministry upon the exceptional case.

Fourth, let us raise the educational requirements. If we are going to measure our ministry by that of any other church let us not overlook those who demand more than we do. Not overlooking the shining exceptions again let us frankly face the fact that a junior college graduate is not a match for the situation today, especially when even that again and again suffers defeat at the hands of the "two-thirds rule." A college diploma and even seminary training are not too much to ask for a ministry that demands so much. Let the educational standards be raised.

Fifth, let us abolish the "two-thirds rule" or at least raise it to "four-fifths." If we have exceptional men let us see to it that they be trained first. Those exceptional qualities should show up there as well as in the itineracy. The exceptional man should be willing to secure training and manifest some energy in securing it. How many of those exceptional men have you met who would not be worth a great deal more with proper training?

Sixth, Extend the period of "admission on trial." Two years is hardly sufficient time in which to get the true measure of a man. The claim is not being made that even seminary education will meet the demands of our ministry. Physical health, religious experience and education all combined do not equip a man for the Methodist itineracy. There are still some intangible but essential qualities that must mark our ministry if it is to be fully effective. With a longer period of trial we shall be able to detect these qualifications or lack of them. The major requirements we must insist upon while we neglect none of the minor ones.

Seventh, let us not forget that it is not wholly and exclusively a matter of the membership of the Annual Conference in determining those who shall be admitted. We are trying, with God's help, to make Methodist pastors for congregations of people. Therefore let us have a laity with a keen intelligent and sympathetic demand for a higher and better type of pastor.

MY PRESIDING ELDER came to preach for me, and his sermon has made my life and preaching better.

He used as his text John the Baptist's question as to the validity of the claims of Jesus to the Messiahship and Jesus' reply to that question. "Art thou he that should come, or shall we look for another?" "Go tell John what you see and hear." Do not give an honest prophet in prison for his heroic defence of righteousness and his uncompromising declaration of the claims of the clean life any abstract or theoretical answer to that question. Be practical in your reply. We cannot afford to trifle with the greatest of those born of women. Open your eyes, take some measures of what is being done day by day, and carry John no guess-work answer.

He said that we have three approaches to the Christ: the ecclesiastical, the doctrinal and the practical. He hinted strongly that our religion must be put into the retort of the practical and be tested out there.

He said that the church, the ecclesiastical, approach was a most interesting one, and that he allowed no one to surpass him

"EXPENSIVE ANTIQUES"

By Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., D. D.

Our good friend, Dean Smith, says that the presiding elder is an expensive antique. He says that the presiding elder does nothing that could not be done better without him and also that he is in the way every time you step. He seems to have in mind only the historical when he reminds us that the presiding elder formerly found himself much in need for the administration of the sacraments and for holding the work together while new preachers were being broken in to take the places of those who had located because of a lack of support. He does not realize that the work of the presiding elder has expanded with the passing of the years, nor does he know anything at all about the multitude of duties and responsibilities now resting upon those who occupy this office of the Church. The Dean just does not know some things about the work of a presiding elder. That is all.

A presiding elder went to a district in which there was located a suburban church near a Government hospital for soldiers. That church was being served by a local preacher who operated a garage in the town and who had an assessed salary from the church of $300, which was never paid. The presiding elder was able to get the people to make an effort to pay a salary in some measure adequate. When he left that district, this church was paying a salary of $1,400, had built and furnished a parsonage and was in connection with the Veterans' Hospital for which latter work the Board of Missions had been persuaded to make an annual appropriation of $600. From what was almost an impossible situation, the church had passed to one of self-support. The work was built up, people were brought into the Church and dying soldiers found Christ.

In that same district was a group of country churches being served by another local preacher who lived thirty odd miles away from them. This presiding elder secured a missionary appropriation which was used to spring the churches. Help was also secured for the purchase of a parsonage in the local community. A preacher was sent to live among those people. Meetings were held that transformed communities and families. People were swept into the Kingdom. Since that time and until now there has been a resident pastor among those people.

A section in the marsh lands of southern Louisiana had been without the services of the Methodist Church for years. Here were to be found Methodist people and many people of no church. From this community in the past had come at least one minister to preach the Gospel and to serve God and man throughout the Conference. To reach that section it was necessary to take a long and tortuous trip in a gas boat. The presiding elder went. He also went into the homes of the people. He held a meeting there. In every charge on his district and also at the District Conference he raised money to send a preacher into this region. From that time until now there have been two organized churches with Sunday schools functioning in that region. At one point, which is a parish seat, and where there has never yet been a church building of any kind, it now appears as if it may be possible to erect a Methodist church. Since this presiding elder went into this region there has been regularly a preacher-in-charge going there under the appointment of the presiding bishop.

In a great city of the South there was a large section into which Methodism had not gone. Our people were uniting with other communions and being lost to Methodism. At the request of the presiding elder, the pastors of the city with the help of their people made a survey of this section. They found some two hundred unattached Methodists beside the members of the city churches living there. The presiding elder visited these people in their homes and also held a prayer meeting there for six months until a preacher was sent to the people. The presiding elder looked that section over for a place in which to hold services. Then he raised in the churches of that city money to pay the rent of this place for a Sunday school and a prayer meeting. In this section of that city we now have an organized church with a Sunday school and other church organizations functioning. Under the leadership of this same presiding elder again money was raised throughout the city for the purchase of a location for another new church in another section of the city. He secured help from the General Board of Church Extension. The lot has been purchased and today there is a Methodist church building, of modest proportions, standing on that lot.

A church was blown away by a storm. The people hardly knew just what to do. The presiding elder stepped in to encourage them. He also aided them in securing funds and materials. Not long after the storm the people dedicated a new church building free from debt under the leadership of this presiding elder.

A great industrial corporation built a plant costing millions within the bounds of a certain district. The leading officials were not of the Methodist faith. The presiding elder of that district went to see those corporation officials about Methodist work at that plant. Today there is a Methodist preacher there doing effective work for God and for humanity because there was a presiding elder who opened up an important field.

A young preacher came to his presiding elder saying that he felt that he had done all that he could in his church and that he was about at the end of his row there. Conference came. This young preacher went to another church that had taken a backward step. Before allowing him to go there the presiding elder insisted that the church take a forward step again. This was done. A church was helped to move forward and a preacher went to a new field with new zeal and vigor.

A hoard of stewards in a prominent church was about to embarrass themselves, the presiding bishop and their pastor by making a request that the pastor be moved. The presiding elder functioned. Neither preacher nor people were embarrassed. A worthy man went to another field of labor and the church received a new preacher with whom they were in every way pleased and who immediately began an effective ministry there. The preacher who left the church knew nothing about what had happened. The presiding elder had labored when others knew nothing about it.

These are just some of the things that are not written in the book of directions for the presiding elder, but things that he must know how to do and that he must do. They are some of the things that await him in this new day in the Church. No, he does not any longer only administer the sacraments. Nor does he any longer merely hold things together while new men are being broken in. The Dean just does not know about these things. That is all. Hence he has allowed himself to join the stampede against one of the most useful arms of our Church organization and the faithful men who are filling this office at the command of the constituted authority of the Church. It is easy to throw stones, but difficult to do constructive work. Stones thrown into the machinery make constructive work even more difficult.

OLD NOTES ON THE 51st PSALM

Dear Dr. Randles: In looking through some of my grandfather's papers (Col. S. L. Pope, of Fort Valley, Ga.), I found the enclosed notes on the 51st Psalm. The notes say that this Psalm was used in what was called "The Morning Sacrifice" of the General Conference. It is also stated that Psalms 24, 48, 82, 94, 81, 93, 92 and 51 were used in the 16th General Conference. There is no record on the notes as to who led these devotionals.

The enclosed notes on the 51st Psalm, I think, are unique as well as suggestive. I have copied this, and I wish you to do just as you please about using them in our Advocate.

Sincerely your friend,

Beizoni, Miss.

S. L. POPE.

THE FIFTY-FIRST PSALM

The Penitential Psalms are 6, 32, 38, 51, 102, 130, 143.

How could David be a man after God's heart and be a murderer and an adulterer?

1. Sin troubled him. He was the only monarch of his day who regarded such things as worthy of sincere regret and sorrow.

2. He stands before God with confession of sin and appeals for mercy. He was not too proud.

3. No monarch of his day, and few others of any day, so honored God in his thoughts.

(a) To David God was not Power, Vengeance, Selfishness, but Love. He makes the character of God the whole ground of his plea for forgiveness.

(b) The profound appropriateness of his plea has become the voice of the penitent soul of all ages.

(c) One generation after another has found by experience that its works fit into every fold of the human heart and supplies us with language that the revelation of the Gospel has not superseded in meaning. (See Rom. 8:26).

Mercy involves:

1. An offence.

2. An offender.
3. A violated law or standard.
4. One who stands for the dignity of that law and its enforcement.
5. A confession of the offense by the offender to the offended. The Publican's prayer in the temple.

6. It asks forbearance and extension of time (Hezekiah).

7. It asks forbearance consistent with righteousness. The fact of the righteousness involved in the forbearance is alone sufficient to show that mercy and justice are not, and cannot be, opposed.

Any such thought, as that true mercy can wholly remit the penalty that sanctions the law is false.

Such displacement is not righteous forbearance, and so is not true mercy.

But weak indulgence of wrong that upholds license and makes injustice.

True mercy forbears, whatever legal forms may allow; to exceed or to abate the claims of natural justice.

Mercy, then, is righteous forbearance toward the offender.

In other words, the sphere of true mercy finds its proper limit at the boundary of justice, and never crossing that boundary.

To transgress that boundary would be not mercy, but sin. If God is to be the justifier it is because He is also just. (See Rom. 3:26).

THE MEASURE OF THE MERCY FOR WHICH HE PRAYS

Nothing in himself, nothing in his conception; he made his measure in God—"According to Thy"—etc.

He asks not that he may escape punishment; not that he may receive reward, but he wants to get rid of his sin and transgressions.

Blot Out. He does not want the indictment quashed, but blotted out.

Luther says: "In true repentance, acknowledgment of sin and acknowledgment of grace must combine. It is this double knowledge which inspires this Psalm and is revealed in clearer light in Jesus Christ."

Psalms used in the 16th quadrennial General Conference devotionals: 24, 48, 82, 94, 81, 93, 92.

GRENADA COLLEGE NOTES

By Rev. James H. Felts, D.D.

In every way the opening of Grenada College this year was in advance of last year. However, the actualities are not in keeping with the prospects of a few weeks ago. The student body is larger, local attendance better, and enrollment continues to increase. The uncertainty of finances is keeping girls from registering who will yet come here if they are able to go anywhere.

The local Methodist Church gave an "open house party" in honor of the public school teachers of Grenada High School, and the faculty and student body of Grenada College, Friday, September 15, eight to ten. It was largely attended. More than two hundred people were served light refreshments. It was in every way a worth while occasion.

President Key, Business Manager Burton, and Rev. J. M. Bradley, P. E. Corinth District, were present at the opening hour, and quite a large number of patrons and well wishers. Brother Bradley conducted chapel, Dr. Key made suitable remarks, and Dr. Countiss made necessary announcements and statements, and the work of the year began.

Grenada is an ideal place for such an institution. The school measures up to the highest standards in every way. The maintenance of such a school should appeal to our people with such force as to guarantee crowded dormitories. No better facilities are to be found. Nor is there a Junior college in the state offering like advantage at less cost.

Dr. Countiss has put his life's best blood in this school. I have known no more sacrificial offering in my day. No pastor, not even among our mission workers, has given himself to his task with more devotion or self-denial. His personal financial investment has been in keeping with his investment of himself.

Miss Laney, so long associated with the college, is missed. Miss Virginia Thomas, her successor, winning approval and praise. That she had equipment and character for the place we all knew. That she would fit into a situation like this all but perfectly was not known. She holds the respect of teachers, the confidence of Dr. Countiss, and is establishing a comradeship so fine as to provoke heartiest commendation. I doubt if it were possible at any price to have secured a better dean.

Brethren of the North Mississippi Conference, this school should live and prosper. It is making a definite and constant contribution to the life of our church, to say nothing of our citizenship. Her graduates are filling places of responsibility, making homes, teaching the young life, working intelligently and helpfully in our churches, and constantly witnessing in her behalf. Whatever else betides during these eventful days, this institution is worthy of the most heroic and unquestioned support of which we are capable.

Grenada, Miss.

REPORT OF NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT

SEPTEMBER 1, 1933.

By Rev. W. L. Duren, P. E.

The report of the work in the charges of the New Orleans District for the quarter ending September 1, 1933, is not without encouraging features. Three hundred forty-seven members have been received on profession of faith; there has been a net gain in the membership of 473; cash reported on the Benevolences amounts to $1,720; for Sunday School Day $201; for Memorial Home $298; the Eightieth Anniversary Campaign has netted 109 subscriptions to the Advocate; and two new church buildings have been erected.

COVINGTON CHARGE has had two good revivals and has observed all the special days, but makes no report of collections for the Benevolences.

DONALDSONVILLE has not had revivals as yet, reports 4 received on profession of faith, $20 in cash on Benevolences, and all special appeals cared for.

HOUMA AND FRENCH MISSION reports additions on profession: Houma 9, Lockport 55, and Bayou Blue 31; Collected for Benevolences: Houma $166, Lockport $10, and Bayou Blue $18; Special appeals have been responded to; a new church has been built at Golden Meadows; and a splendid Cokesbury training school, and Vacation Bible schools held by the workers of MacDonell School in Houma.

FRANKLIN reports 14 accessions by profession; $51 on Benevolences; and finances a little slow, but expects to make good report in the end.

MORGAN CITY has had 43 accessions on profession of faith, paid $10 on the Benevolences; but other interests not reported on. The pastor has had quite a difficult year owing to illness and operation.

ALGIERS has received 18 by profession of faith; has paid $28 on Benevolences; and is carrying the full program of the Church.

CARROLLTON AVENUE has received 16 on profession of faith; paid $100 on Benevolences; and payments on salary are up to date.

CHALMETTE AND GENTILLY has added 29 by profession of faith; paid $28 on Benevolences; carried the entire program of work; and a new church has been erected at Chalmette.

EPWORTH has received 25 by profession of faith; collected $40 on the Benevolences; and is carrying the work of the year in an entirely creditable manner.

FELICITY has had rather hard sledding, has had small increase, is much handicapped by paying debts and repair needs; but they are struggling on in a truly heroic way.

FIRST CHURCH has received 10 by profession of faith; collected $610 for Benevolences; the salary schedule is slightly in arrears; but they are caring for the whole work in a hopeful and encouraging manner.

LOUISIANA AVENUE has received 19 by profession, paid $20 and is carrying the program of work on a modest but aggressive plan.

MCDONOVILLE has added 6 by profession; paid $46 on Benevolences; is carrying the entire program of work and will make a good report at the end of the year.

PARKER MEMORIAL has received 11 by profession; paid $250 on the Benevolences; salaries are in full to date, and everything is moving forward with smooth and effective strides.

RAYNE MEMORIAL has added 32 on profession; salaries are in full to date; every detail of the program of work is attended to; and the indications are that the final report will be very gratifying.

ST. MARK'S has received 11 on profession; paid $65 on Benevolences; and the work has kept step with the calendar throughout the year.

SECOND CHURCH records 4 on profession, $146 on Benevolences; and it is making every effort to complete the year satisfactorily. Brother

Armstrong has been released for other work and Brother Martin Hebert will direct the work for the remaining weeks of the Conference year.

ST. MARTINVILLE has received 3 on profession of faith, and has carried the responsibilities of the year under great difficulties, but there are signs of hope that the conclusion of the year may be better than what has gone before.

SLIDELL has had 4 accessions on profession, paid $58 for Benevolences; and has been in an excellent revival recently; but much remains to complete the financial task. We feel sure, however, that they will not fail to make every effort to bring their work through to success.

DOWN IN ALABAMA

By Rev. E. S. Lewis

We have just returned from a very delightful little visit down among the verdant hills of middle Alabama. Our journey took us to Tuscaloosa, Greensboro, Demopolis and Livingston. We sighted many other places but stopped to visit only in the places named. We have relatives in all these places, and what are relatives for but to make life a little fuller and a little happier? Our main visit was with Rev. B. F. Marshall and his good wife at Greensboro. In the long ago Frank and I were schoolboys at old Southern University in the days of Dr. Allen S. Andrews and Dr. John C. Keener. Frank has come up considerably or gone down, according to the way one looks at it, for he is now the presiding elder on the Greensboro District. He is a Mississippi product, having grown up in Carroll county. He went into the Alabama Conference after finishing his course at Greensboro and he has done well. He married well, his wife being a niece of Mrs. S. M. Thames, whose memory is like sweet incense poured forth throughout all North Mississippi.

They are having the same hard struggle in Alabama to keep the church going that we are having in Mississippi. Everywhere and all the time it takes sacrifice, it takes hard work, it takes faith and prayer. Alabama is very much worse off in her state finances than we are, but the church is having the same hard struggle. But they will win out if they stand by their guns.

The old building which is so dear to all old Southern University boys is still standing and is being used to house a small Military Academy. The University itself was moved to Birmingham and is now a part of Birmingham-Southern. This is the pride of Alabama Methodism, and is one of the great schools of the south.

We visited relatives at Tuscaloosa and while there drove over the attractive grounds of the State University. This is a really great school, not only for its football team but for the work it is doing. At Livingston we saw the State Normal, standing like some of our Mississippi schools, with some of the buildings closed up. If we had now the cash in hand that has been expended by the schools and churches in this country where they have overbuilt it would be no small sum; but this problem is always with us.

Mrs. Lewis, her sister and I, had a most delightful trip, but are glad to get back into harness again and are ready now for the fall campaign. Winona and Winona people are not to be surpassed and we are expecting a great closing up of our first year here.

Winona, Miss.

LIQUOR SCHOOL TAX OPPOSED BY JUDGE WHITE

Opposing the imposition of a tax on liquor for the support of the public schools of the State, Judge H. H. White, widely known attorney of this city, and president of the State board of education, declared in a statement issued by him today, that while he deprecates the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, which he concedes, he favors the imposition of taxes on liquor for "liquor control," and not for revenue.

"The same reasons which actuated the State in refusing the offers of the Louisiana State Lottery, to support the public schools, care for hospitals, pay pensions to Confederate Veterans and support the State levee system, apply to the support of such institutions by revenue derived from the sale of liquor," Judge White declared.

The full text of Judge White's statement, which was addressed to the editor of the Alexandria Daily Town Talk, follows:

"Please do not misunderstand my views as a citizen of Louisiana and not as a member of the State Board of Education."

"The papers of September 12th carried the substance of the recommendations of the Tax Reform Commission relative to reducing the tax load, readjusting the tax system and providing adequate support for the public schools. The press dispatches of this morning indicate that special session of the Legislature will be called for an early date to make provision for repealing the 18th Amendment and enacting a liquor control law—the proceeds of the liquor tax to go to schools and hospitals.

"I deprecate the repeal of the 18th amendment, but conceding the fact that it will soon be repealed, I favor the imposition of taxes on liquor for liquor control and not for revenue.

"In my opinion whatever revenue is derived from the liquor traffic should be devoted to its control and not to the support of either the schools or hospitals of the State.

"The same reasons which actuated the State in refusing the offers of the Louisiana State Lottery to support the public schools, care for hospitals, pay pension to Confederate Veterans and support the State levee system apply to the support of such institutions by revenue derived from the sale of liquor.

"I do not think that it is to the best interest of the characters of our youth to have them taught that their chances of education are dependent upon the sales of intoxicating liquor.

"The plan of the Tax Reform Commission or casual reading appears to be wise and comprehensive. Of course, the bills which may be presented to a special session if and when called will have received careful consideration by their authors and should receive equally careful consideration by the citizens of the State.

"The urgent needs of the public schools for prompt relief are recognized on every hand. I hope that wise adequate and prompt relief will be given, but I hope that it can and will be given by means, more consonant with character building than taxes on liquor imposed for revenue and not for control."—Alexandria, La., Daily Town Talk.

RESOLUTION

The passing of our beloved friend and brother, W. Winans Drake, D.D., presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, which took place on July 27, 1933, leaves a vacancy not only in the Lake Charles District and the Louisiana Conference but in all Southern Methodism.

For forty-four years he was a most consecrated minister, and many are the lives that have been touched and blessed by his ministry. Truly he was a man of God.

First, we greatly appreciate his consecrated life and his great interest in the salvation of humanity, which he so earnestly desired, and his loyalty to the Church.

Second, that we join with his loved ones in their great sorrow, and pray God's richest blessings upon them.

Third, that we shall miss his timely counsel in all things pertaining to the Church and its activities.

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be sent the family, and a copy spread upon our minutes.

Respectfully submitted,

Board of Stewards, First M. E. Church, South,
T. L. FREEMAN,
LONNIE CLARK,
Committee.

In devotion to the church and all its magnificent work in the world. He, with a few well-directed words, paid a tribute to it that once and for all set it apart from all other phases of institutional life however benevolent and pretentious. Yet he called attention to some very foolish things of which organized Christianity has been guilty, pleading that we remember the great characters of the church with greater appreciation better than we do church history.

He paid a tribute to the doctrinal approach to Christ, betraying a liberal familiarity with the history of the development of the great creeds and the cost of their coming. His words evidenced an appreciation based upon something more than hear-say evidence. But with all the glory of the creeds and the unforgettable names connected with them, they are not the real test of Christianity.

Then he turned the curve and came toward the home goal with an insistent, earnest and determined setting forth of the practical claims of the Christ. He set forth with prophetic vigor the right and compelling appeal of the life and teachings of the Christ as the real test and the necessary approach to Christ.

He closed his sermon with this solemn declaration: "The church today, Catholic and Protestant, is weighted down with people who have accepted the ecclesiastical and the doctrinal approaches to Christ, but who know little of him practically and personally."

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Our friend of Slaughter, La., Mr. L. L. Ppton, sends a word of greeting and commendation.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, recently returned from Chicago where he spent some days at the Century of Progress Fair.

"Home-Coming Day" was observed at Central Church, Meridian, Miss., on September 17. Dr. L. L. Cowen, the pastor, reports progress in the life of the church.

Eight of our churches in Florida were damaged in the recent storm in that section. A relief offering of $1,800 was asked for on Sunday, September 17.

About ninety Freshmen of "Ole Miss." have enrolled in a Sunday school class in our church at Oxford, Miss. Prof. Fox, of the Law School, teaches the University class.

Rev. K W Dodson, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, still picks times when the editor is out to visit the Advocate office. Brother Dodson's pastors are making an effort to raise fifteen per cent more on Benevolences this year than last.

Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor at Franklin, La., reports a great response to his special Wedding Anniversary program. The auditorium was more than filled, overflowing into the Sunday school rooms.

Rev. Roy Wolfe, pastor of Sardis, Miss., is the kind of "wolf" that chases the others from the door. A list of subscriptions came in from him with this echo, "Hoping to be able to send in more before the first of October."

We are hoping to have reports from our colleges as to their openings and prospects for the new year. Let us back these schools and give them our best co-operation. It is going to take all hands of us to stem the tide for God and the Church.

Our church at Crowley, La., under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. C. K. Smith, turns with enthusiasm into the final weeks of the Conference year. The subjects of the pastor's sermons last Sunday were: "The Divine Use of Money" and "The Thoughts of God."

Bishop and Mrs. Paul B. Kern are on their way to the Orient, planning to return to this country the latter part of next March. In Bishop Kern we have an excellent leader for a difficult time. Let us keep him and Mrs. Kern on our prayer lists while they go to the mission field of the East.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

Rev. W. M. Sullivan, pastor at Natchez, Miss., is working for the Advocate. He sends one renewal that goes to a brother who has been reading the Advocate for forty years. He is having the paper changed to his wife's name, hoping, as Brother Sullivan supposes, to have his wife take it for forty more years.

The Y. M. and Y. W. C. A., with fraternities, sororities and other organizations at Millsaps College, have been giving a big welcome to the new and old students of the 1933-34 session. Already the wheels of the new college year are beginning to turn, and prospects for the year are bright.

September 17 was observed as Home-Coming Day at First Church, Lake Charles, La. Dr. Jno. G. Snelling, Superintendent of the Memorial Mercy Home, New Orleans, was the preacher at the morning service; the pastor, Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, delivered the evening sermon, the theme of which was, "He Came to the Home."

Dr. E. N. Lane, professor of Geology of the faculty of the Mississippi State University at Oxford, died September, 12. Dr. Lane was a member of our church and is greatly missed. He was buried at the old home cemetery ten miles from Crystal Springs with Revs. W. H. Mounger and L. M. Lipscomb conducting the funeral.

Rev. A. P. Stevens, Conference Evangelist, assisted Rev. G. W. Robertson in two meetings on his charge. Chapel Hill and Shiloh churches on the Courtland work. In these meetings forty-one were received into the church, thirty-nine on profession of faith. Brother Robertson very highly recommends Brother Stephens' leadership in meetings.

Superintendent Jno. F. Gibson of the McComb Schools delivered the opening assembly address at Millsaps College at the beginning of the Forty-Second Session of the College. On the following Friday Dr. J. Lloyd Decell, president of the Jackson Ministerial Association and pastor of Galloway Memorial Church, gave a welcome from all the churches of the city. Other ministers were heard at the same time.

Rev. A. Y. Brown, pastor at Calhoun City, Miss., invites the editor to a meeting of the Ministerial Association of the Aberdeen District which is to be held at Calhoun City, October 3. (Wish I could come, Brother Brown). Without any special effort, Brother Brown tells us, his Men's Bible class, a few Sundays ago, was larger than it has been since January 1. The total attendance of the Sunday School was the largest of the entire year.

"Rally Day" was observed at our church at Oxford, Miss., on September 10. Seven young people from this good church attended Young People's Assembly at Grenada College in June. Thirteen girls, with two sponsors, attended the Christian Adventure Camp at Castalian Springs. On the occasion of "Rally Day" four of the boys who attended the Fair at Chicago gave impressions of their trip.

President D. M. Key of Millsaps College delivered the address at the opening of Grenada College. A good enrollment somewhat in advance of last year with students still coming in is the very gratifying report. Did you read in last week's Advocate Dr. Countiss' wish for Grenada College? We congratulate the President and the students of Grenada. Look elsewhere in this number for an account of the opening sent in by Dr. Felts.

Look out, Bowdon! Rev. J. A. Wells, pastor of our Glendale Church, Jackson, Miss., replies to the question about prayer meeting attendance raised by Rev. J. H. Bowdon, pastor of our church at Arcadia, La. "Yes, Brother Bowdon, we beat that at Glendale, Wednesday, September 13. We had ninety-six present at this 'revival desert' and expect one hundred next Wednesday night. While we are not such a citified church, we do have 'avenues and streets' in this part of Jackson."

On Sunday, September 10, Dr. Geo. W. Truett, widely known and much loved Baptist pastor-preacher, began his thirty-seventh year as pastor of First Baptist Church, Dallas, Texas. Dr. Truett ranks as one of America's greatest preachers. People of different faiths bear his warm and appealing sermons with great profit. His pastorate of First Church, Dallas, is one of the outstanding pastorates of the country.

I met a Baptist preacher from Laurel, Miss., the other day, and he was speaking generously and warmly of Rev. W. J. Ferguson, our pastor in that good city. Then we had a letter from Brother Ferguson: "Herein I hand you my check to cover eleven subscriptions. Hope to make it twenty more. We are hoping, praying and working hard for better days." That schedule, I believe will bring the better days, and I know it will make better people.

Rev. W. H. Mounger, pastor at Oxford, Miss., after an illness of several months, is fully recovered in health. For this we rejoice. During his absence from the church only one service was missed. A number of fine and capable laymen conducted the services in the absence of the pastor. A class of eighteen was received into the church on Easter Sunday. Many new families have moved into Oxford, uniting with the forces of our church.

Mrs. Martha Elizabeth Ragland, aged 94 years, recently passed away at Pittsboro, Miss., the funeral being conducted by Rev. W. M. Jones, pastor. Her husband who died in 1932 was 98 at the time of his death. This couple lived together for 71 years. Of Mrs. Ragland the paper said, "She was a member of the Methodist Church for more than half a century, and was a Christian who lived her religion daily, shedding sunshine and good cheer and being a good neighbor and a true friend."

Rev. M. L. Burton was among those attending the 1933 opening of Grenada College. Brother Burton is the Business Supervisor of the Millsaps System. Misses Virginia Thomas and Jane Adams of Tupelo, Miss., succeed Misses Corine Laney and Sophie P. Alston, respectively, as dean and head of the Home Economics Department. Miss Laney was dean for twenty-eight years, and Miss Alston has been with Grenada for a number of years. They both go to the Berry School in Georgia.

Mrs. Jno. L. Sutton, wife of Rev. Jno. L. Sutton, Superintendent of the Mississippi Child Home Finding Society, recently passed from her home in Jackson, Miss., to her heavenly reward. Brother Sutton was, for a number of years, a member of the Louisiana Conference and Superintendent of the Burton Memorial Boys' Home in New Orleans. In all of Brother Sutton's magnificent and exacting work Sister Sutton was a most valuable and efficient ally.

Prof. Hunter D. Farish, formerly Professor of History in Westminister College, New Wilmington, Pa., is spending awhile with us in the Advocate office doing research work on his Ph. D. thesis. Prof. Farish is from Beatrice, Ala., and has recently completed the resident requirements for his Degree in the Department of History, Harvard University. His subject is: "Methodist Factors in the Social Policy of the South." He tells us that he is finding valuable material in our files of the Advocate. 1865-1900 is the period in which he is interested.

Sam Stone, Jr., successful architect of New Orleans, brother of Mrs. W. W. Holmes, wife of our pastor at Rayne Memorial Church, recently passed away in this city. Mr. Stone was very active in the Masonic fraternity, having designed the Masonic Temple in New Orleans, largest in the South. He also drew the plans for our splendid church building at Carrollton Avenue. He was widely known and appreciated for his interest and activities in civic affairs. At the time of his death he was a member of the Audubon Park Commission.

HAVE YOU A SON

Or daughter in one of our state colleges? Then, listen.

As a church, we are anxious to keep in helpful touch with our boys and girls in our state schools. You can help in that by sending the name of your boy or girl to our pastor in the town where the school is located. Also write to your boy and girl telling them about the church there and encouraging them to attend.

You don't know our pastors in those towns? Well, that is just the reason I came out to make this announcement.

Dr. R. H. Harper, with Rev. Joe Brown Love as student pastor, is our pastor at First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, La. Do you have a son or daughter at Louisiana State University? Write to them.

Rev. H. L. Johns is our pastor at Ruston, La. If your boy or girl is in Tech, write him.

Rev. B. C. Taylor is pastor at Natchitoches. If your boy or girl is in State Normal, write them.

Rev. H. N. Brown is pastor at Lafayette. If your boy or girl is in Southwestern, write him.

Rev. J. A. McCormack is pastor at Hammond. If your boy or girl is at Southeastern, write him.

Rev. W. H. Moulner is pastor at Oxford, Miss. If your boy or girl attends "Ole Miss," write him.

Dr. H. F. Brooks is pastor at Starksville. If your boy is at Mississippi State College, let him know.

Revs. A. T. Mellwain and C. L. Rogers are pastors at Columbus. Is your girl in MSCW? Write them.

Revs. R. H. Clegg, C. A. Shultz and J. B. Cain are our pastors at Hattiesburg, Miss. If your son or daughter is at Normal, write one of these men.

MRS. L. M. LIPSCOMB PASSES

Dear Dr. Raulins: Mrs. L. M. Lipscomb, the wife of our pastor of Louisville, Miss., died after a brief illness early Wednesday morning, September 20. The funeral services were conducted from the Wright-Ferguson Funeral Parlor of Jackson, Miss., Thursday afternoon, September 21. The writer was assisted in the services by Rev. J. W. Ward, of Greenville, Miss. A large crowd of relatives and friends were present. Let Brother Lipscomb be remembered in prayer in this trying hour.

A more extended notice will be given later.

10:50—"The Pastor's Part in Meeting the Situation: His Opportunity and Responsibility," Rev. W. H. Lewis.

IMPORTANT TO SUBSCRIBERS

If every subscriber to the Advocate whose subscription has expired and is running on grace would take advantage of the large saving made possible through the Eightieth Anniversary Special Low Offer of $1.00 per year, the Advocate would be entirely free from debt and in position to report "everything in full" at the approaching sessions of the patronizing Conferences.

The address label on your paper denotes the date of expiration of your subscription. If it reads "September 1933," or any date prior thereto, your subscription has expired. If such is the case may we urge you to forward $1.00 by return mail to cover your renewal for another year? By doing so, you will save fifty cents on the cost of your renewal and greatly assist us in making the best report to Conference since 1923. Thank you.

11:20—Rev. D. B. Raulins, D.D.

12:15—Picnic lunch.

1:15—Devotional, Rev. Roy Wolfe.

1:35—"The Responsibility of the Woman's Missionary Society," Mrs. E. T. Riegan.

1:50—"The Responsibility of the Officers of the Church," Dr. J. E. Colley.

2:05—"The Responsibility of the Church Member," Dr. B. Z. Welch.

2:20—"The Pastor's Annual Conference Report: How to Make It," G. P. McKeown.

The pastors and their wives and the laymen and their wives are requested to bring a basket lunch. This can be made a pleasant social occasion as well as one of inspiration and spiritual help.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES— GREETINGS

It has been my privilege to hold some good revival meetings for many of my brethren during the past few years. Even this year, though many of the evangelists have not had a full slate, including myself, I have helped in some meetings where God richly blessed our efforts. It is hardly necessary to say that while I am dependent upon the free-will offerings for my living that are received from these meetings, I do not desire ever to press the material side to the hurt of an effort to win men and women to Christ.

I am now holding some meetings in New Orleans, and may be reached by mail at 815 Washington Avenue, in New Orleans. If you want a meeting this fall or winter, why not write me now? I will be glad to help and plan with you spiritual blessings for your church.

Respectfully yours in the work,

REV. W. E. THOMAS.

LOUISIANA METHODISTS

Keep your memories, hearts and pocket-books open for Sunday, October 8.

Why? That is "Harvest Day" for our Orphanage at Ruston.

Dr. R. W. Vaughan, through a most difficult year, has kept the institution out of debt and operating on schedule. Your Orphanage stands alone in its financial rating among such institutions of our entire church. And there are some other things to be said about it.

Remember Harvest Day, Sunday, October 8.

BISHOP A. FRANK SMITH

Will conduct the revival meeting at Trinity Church, Ruston, La., October 29-November 5.

THE PAPERS SAY THAT--

"Dresden, Germany, September 21.—The Evangelical Church of Saxony has banned 'hallelujah' and 'amen' from its services because they are Hebrew expressions."

Thus Germany proceeds on her way of folly. The government takes over the Evangelical Church and makes it the servant of its limited ambitions. When a country cuts its religion to fit its own nationalistic scheme it heads toward religious and national suicide.

Jesus Christ is Hebrew, descended from Abraham and David. Will they take him out of their services? It would be just as logical to do so. Yea, they are doing so when they take such foolish steps as this. Jesus Christ cannot be cut to fit a nationalistic pattern. His own people tried that once, but he escaped by way of the cross. To set nationalistic bounds about him we shall have to blot out the Resurrection and the Cross and a life and words such as no man has lived and spoken.

It is possible, though, to take Christ out of things without altering the vocabulary. There's where you and I must watch.

"On a mammoth scale unprecedented in history, the story of the Jewish race through the centuries, under the title, 'The Romance of a People,' was dramatized in pageantry and song before 125,000 people at Soldiers' Field in Chicago in connection with the World's Fair—From first to last the powerful theme was Israel's monotheism—God is one!—The failure of Judaism to claim Jesus of Nazareth as not only a hero but the consummate hero of its ancestral story is the supreme tragedy. His name was not mentioned in this majestic tale of Israel's glorious tragedy."

Do you see any connection between what these two papers say? Can you suggest another title for "The Romance of a People" pageant? Would it do to call it, "The Colossal Tragedy of a People?"

He came unto his own, and his own received him not. He comes to his own, and his own receive him not. The supreme omission.

The Jews, in telling the story of their history, "The Romance of a People," have attempted to erect an arch without the keystone.

But let us Christians pause before declaring our faith superior. Yes, we use his name. We repeat it often, too often. We wear his cross. But our failure to complete our arch of education, religion, economics, politics, social life, the structure of our civilization, is due to the fact that we have not yet dared to lift the Keystone to its place. It still lies covered almost, only partially exposed, in the scraps and debris of our defeated efforts.

For there is none other Name given under heaven among men.

ASPIRIN

BECAUSE of a unique process in manufacture, Genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablets are made to disintegrate or dissolve INSTANTLY when taken. Thus they start to work instantly. Start "taking hold" of even a severe headache; neuralgia, neuritis or rheumatic pain a few minutes after taking.

And they provide SAFE relief—for Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN does not harm the heart. So if you want QUICK and SAFE relief see that you get the real Bayer article. Look for the Bayer cross on every tablet as shown above and for the words GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN on every bottle or package you buy.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Louise Green

The biggest Union meeting of the year will be held at Broad St. Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., on the 28th of this month. Read all about it next week.

Welcome back, Harvey T. Newell. We are anxious to know all about your trip to Lake Umbagog. We are sure Mr. Newell, president of the Young People's Assembly, has lots of new ideas and plans for us the coming year.

The Young People of the League of Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, feel very much the absence of their president, John R. Woodruff, who has recently gone to Purdue University for the winter. His duties will be taken over by the vice-president until new officers are elected.

Don't forget the treasurer, Paul Ramsey, Jr., and his address is 304 Millapa Building, Jackson, Miss. He welcomes all the money he can get—and who doesn't?

No new is good news. In that case practically every League is moving along in a great way, but why not let your fellow Leaguers read about it. You will find me at 900 Main Street, Hattiesburg, Miss., ready to welcome all news.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE YOUNG PEOPLE'S NEWS

Hello! Your Council Meeting was held the ninth and tenth of this month; did you know it? That's right; the Louisiana Conference Young People's Council Meeting was held in Alexandria with an attendance averaging about sixteen. After Taking Five Bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I am a registered nurse. For three years I was too run-down to work. My condition improved wonderfully after taking five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It increased my appetite, quieted my nerves, improved my digestion and relieved sleeplessness. I am glad to tell any woman what a splendid medicine this is."—CLARA A. Mrs. Lipscomb writes that the outstanding experience for the summer in the W. M. S. work has been the Treasure Hunt. Nearly 1,200 packages have been sent in. As it will be some weeks before the final disposition will be made we are urging that every church that has not made the effort do so even yet. The treasures are distributed by conferences and Baltimore is leading with 72. The Fellowship luncheon seems to be making a beautiful feature for the summer program.

Mrs. J. C. Bennett, secretary of the zone composed of Kilmichael, Winona, Vaiden and Columbiana, reports a good meeting held at Vaiden, August 28. Among the principal features of the program was A. B. C.'s of Stewardship given by the children of Kilmichael and a playlet, "Mission Study Land" by Kilmichael Young People. A review of the book, "Christianity and Industry in America," was given by Mrs. Townsend of Grenada. Mrs. Armstrong gave a report of the work done for the Negroes of Vaiden. A poem, "Social Relations" was read by Mrs. C. G. Boyett. Several selections of music were rendered. The next meeting will be in November at Winona.

The project, "Coaching day," has proven very successful in the Sardis-Grenada District. Batesville was hostess to one for the southern end of the district, August 29. Mrs. Morris Wells, of Grenada, planned and led the program for that day. She had every detail of a plan for teaching the book, "Christianity and Industry in America," by Taylor, well worked out. Miss Mary Lee Stewart and Mrs. Roy Grisham presented the same book at Horn Lake, August 31, for the northern end of the district, with Horn Lake acting as hostess. Fine interest was manifested at both meetings. There were fifty representatives present at both meetings from the following auxiliaries: Grenada, Charleston, Oakland, Courtland, Batesville, Danis Chapel, Sardis, Senatobia, Horn Lake, Hinds Chapel, Marks, Belen, Robinsonville and Lake Cormorant.

MRS. ROY GRISHAM,
District Secretary.

Alcorn County Zone held its third meeting, September 5. Rev. E. M. Sharp led the devotional. A welcome was extended by Mrs. D. W. Jumper, and Miss Frances Vivian Brady gave the response.

Written reports were read from each church represented. Mrs. Brady stated that only two auxiliaries in the zone were on the honor roll last year; these were Saltillo and Gaines Chapel. A letter of thanks was read from Miss Cora Hoover thanking the zone for the gift presented her from this zone. Miss Floy Smith, Miss Annie Kemp, Mrs. Maxey were the main speakers in the morning session.

The presiding elder, Brother Bradley, led the devotional for the afternoon. His subject was, "Stewardship of Talents." Special music throughout the day was enjoyed. A playlet given by Belle Bennett circle of Corinth First Church added interest to the program. The next meeting will be held at Kossuth.

The week of prayer offering for 1933, will be devoted to the work at Paine College, Augusta, Ga. Dr. Channing H. Tobias, international secretary of Y. M. C. A. in charge of the colored division of that great organization, says, "There is no work in which the Council has engaged that is fraught with more significance than Paine College. Not only as a place of missionary work, but as having a bearing on conditions all over the world. For the supreme test of whether we are worthy of bearing the Christian message across the seas is how we cope with problems that try us at home."

Margaret Billingsly reported that the Social Evangelistic Center in Seoul, where Northern and Southern Methodists and Presbyterians work co-operatively, are in dire need of help in the way of money for new buildings, since the old structures, some of them four hundred years old, are tumbling down. She believes while union effort may make it harder to secure money for needed improvements, it makes it easier to interpret Christ to a people who are learning the way.—Council Bulletin.

In Memoriam

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

In the memory of MRS. W. E. CAMPBELL, who laid down this life and passed into eternal rest at her home in Silver City, August 30, 1933. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Lumbley, pioneers in state and church, a worthy daughter of godly parents. In early life she joined the Methodist Church and was a true follower of the teachings of her blessed Saviour.

She was happily married to Mr. W. E. Campbell. They walked beside one another, meeting every obligation of life, every joy and every sorrow with faces steadfastly toward right and with Christian faith. Their home was not only a refuge of peace, but their hospitality was offered with generosity. Sweetest of all their Prophet's Chamber was always ready, and God's ministers found inspiration and welcome in this home. She loved church work, taught in Sunday school, and was a charter member of her Missionary Society. Her Missionary Society honored her with a Certificate of Life Membership, and she valued it highly.

She was kind in her judgments and never critical. Her influence lives on. She was preceded in death by her husband and one son. Two daughters, Mrs. Victor Montgomery and Mrs. Albert Heidelberg, and one son, Mr. Edward Campbell, survive. She also leaves three brothers and two sisters and a host of friends.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, it has pleased God in His all-seeing wisdom, His ever tender mercy and infinite power to remove from our midst our beloved Presiding Elder, Rev. William Winans Drake.

Whereas, in his passing, a devoted husband and father, an ideal citizen, and earnest and devout member of the ministry, a truly great leader in the cause of Christ has gone to his reward thereby causing an irreparable loss to his family, to the church and to the community. Greatness is goodness; Rev. Mr. Drake was great as he was good and he did leave behind him footprints. Footprints on the sands of our hearts that neither wind, nor rain, nor sun shall erase, until we like him shall meet our Saviour face to face. Therefore be it

Resolved, that we, the members of the Woman's Wesley Bible Class of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Lake Charles, Louisiana, do hereby extend to his devoted wife and sons, our sincere and heart-felt sympathy in their bereavement and pray that God will sustain and comfort them in the days to come. Be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to his wife and sons, one to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and one to the Lake Charles American Press.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reasons?

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can be controlled. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative brings a perfect movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, or after.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated as long as you keep on using it! And the habitual use of irritating salts, or of powerful drugs in the highly concentrated form of pills and tablets may prove injurious.

A week with a properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will tell you a lot. A few weeks' time, and your bowels can be "as regular as clockwork." Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists keep ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative; effective for all ages, and may be given to the youngest child. Work-Worn Women

Find New Youth and Bloom In This Amazing Tonic

Women often fade fast because they have to bear the cares of the whole family. They become rundown, tired and haggard looking. Strength is needed—strength from the inside. There is no finer source of strength and vitality than Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. It contains both iron and tasteless quinine in highly concentrated form. Iron, as you know, builds blood, the source of all life and strength. Quinine tends to purify the blood. Thus, in Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic, you get two extremely valuable effects.

Start taking this famous, time-proven tonic today and see how quickly you pick up strength and vitality. Mark the improvement in your appetite, in your pep and energy. Note the new youthfulness you feel and show. Three days will tell you wonders! Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is pleasant to take and contains nothing harmful. 40 years of use attests to its merit and safety. Get a bottle today at any store.

FROM REV. S. W. MILLER

Campaign Closes October 1

Kind Editor: I got a very kind letter from Rev. E. S. Lewis sometime ago requesting me to give him some data of the organization of the North Mississippi Conference in 1879, as J. J. Brooks and I are the only clerical members living; and Brother Howell and J. J. Streater, are the only lay delegates. They and Brooks are expected to be there, and he requested me to meet them if I could. Of course, it would be the delight of my life if I could only do so, and it may be possible that I can make it. As to my health, unless it fails before then, I can make it all right, but having lost so much in bank failures, and small conference appropriations I may not be able to go.

I have a few good friends living in Water Valley yet, and it is there that I gained the greatest victory preaching under very trying circumstances. It was in the Presbyterian church in the presence of my father who opposed my being a Methodist preacher; one brother, two sisters, and a host of old friends. I spent the evening on my knees and when I got to the church I found it crowded. I said, I have no apologies, only I am a boy. I took my subject: (Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice), and when I closed I walked down in the altar and invited penitents. We had an altar full, and eight conversions, with a shout. I had only been preaching fourteen months. I have never felt the presence of God's Spirit more forcefully in life. It was not I, but God that gave me the victory.

I will be there if I can.

Yours in Christ,

S. W. MILLER.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

THE NRA WITH ITS BLUE EAGLE must meet the test and carry the weight of criticism. Let us be thankful that this war against depression, unlike other wars, permits criticism. It is too big for us fully to understand and involves too much for us fully to appreciate the magnitude of it all, but that will not keep us from criticizing it. But let us try to be intelligent and sympathetic in our appraisals. We cannot stand apart from it or detach ourselves from it. It is our country. As citizens we cannot stand aloof.

I am very frank in my feeling that opening the floodgates of liquor can do nothing short of serious damage regardless of the revenues that may accrue; that the effort to build up a treaty-sized navy, even though it be for the purpose of providing labor for unemployed men, cannot promote amicable international relations; and that the tendency toward national exclusiveness can do little toward the settlement of issues that have no complete or permanent solution apart from international cooperation. I intend to keep my eyes open to what seem to me to be defects.

On the other hand it is my purpose to support with the greatest possible vigor the many features of the NRA program that do look definitely toward reconstruction and reformation.

Many of the criticisms are trivial. One calls attention to the fact that one of the figures on the NRA postage stamp is out of step with the others. Surely we did not expect all to catch step at once. This is a period of discipline and training for a new kind of life in this country and the world. If we were all able to keep step at once there would be no need for the schooling. And isn't it enough to ask, for the present, that all be marching in the same direction whether they are in step or not? The direction we are going is of tremendous importance right now. Another has found some fault with the Blue Eagle. He has more feathers in one wing than in the other. What can that mean? I can appreciate the complaint about the Blue Eagle. I have never been able to find his tail feathers at all. Blue Eagles may not have tails. But that does not bother me. I am trying to get at what that Blue Eagle symbolizes. And those religious people who spend much time on "beasts" and "numbers" in the Bible have been given a new task in assigning the NRA and the Blue Eagle to their proper niche in the scheme of prophecy and revelation. But let it be.

Had you noticed that the NRA program includes three or four items for which the Protestant churches of the Federal Council have been contending for twenty-five years? That is interesting and arresting. Better look into that. Groups of Jewish and Catholic people also have been working for some of these things.

Get down your 1930 copy of the Discipline of our church, turn to page 259, Section IV, Paragraph 524, and read what is there called the, "Social Creed of the Churches." Then turn to General Johnson's statement about the NRA which came out in full page in the newspapers recently. The abolition of child labor, minimum wage, reduction of hours of labor in industry, economic justice to the farmer, and the right for employee and employer alike to organize for collective bargaining, you will find incorporated in the two plans.

Now we people of the churches who have given most of our time to religion as it relates to the individual life have not given the time we should have to this matter. It is gratifying in the highest degree that our government is actually attempting to try out some of these things for which the Christian church has been contending for a quarter of a century. In an emergency like this the Federal Government, consciously or unconsciously, turns to a big part of the program of the churches. This should encourage the churches greatly as they see that their labors have not been altogether in vain. Furthermore, they should support the government in its attempt to realize those things for which its great leaders have been contending for these years. They are of the essence of brotherhood.

THE FACT THAT THE government has incorporated in its NRA schedule those items found in the "Social Creed of the Churches" should cause us as church people to think again upon the place of the church in our country. It brings up this question of the relationship of church and state.

Again we should be reminded that the relation of the two in this country is rather interesting and wise. Our government, through its founders, did not ignore religion and the church, and did not propose to get on without them. Church leaders and religious people had too much to do with the making of our country for that.

Certain recognition was given to the place of the church and religion. Freedom of worship is guaranteed, freedom from taxation for church property, the oath of office and witness taken upon the Bible with the injunction, "So help you God;" and our coins bear upon their surfaces not only an eagle and "United States of America," but "In God We Trust."

The church has a great obligation to the government, an obligation that it can discharge only so long as it is free from government dictation and control. Germany is plucking out her own eyes when she seeks to subject the Christian church to the dictates of the government. No longer will the church be permitted to speak its word of guidance to the government. The hired prophet may, at times, speak the truth still, but he is not likely often to be dependable.

The government is not supreme and our loyalty to it does not come first. Loyalty to God is first. And in this way alone can the church render its service to the government.

The church, therefore, should regard with deepest appreciation this independent relationship to the state, and should protect it with all earnestness and vigor. The Christian conscience, cultivated by the church, must continue to be eyes and moral support for the state. This, too, is necessary to patriotism and good citizenship. With reference to great moral issues and those issues that are just now coming into that realm the church must be free to speak its word of guidance.

A NEWSPAPER BOOK REVIEWER was discussing Dan Poling's "John Barleycorn: A Caricature." Several words of commendation had been said, but nothing much to indicate that reviewer had much sympathy with the cause represented by Dr. Poling. Then this statement leaped straight at me from the column. "Of course, the author is too deadly serious in his underlying purpose to create an intensely humorous word."

There it is. "Too deadly serious." And it is deadly serious business, this matter of strong drink. And it is because of his deadly seriousness that Dr. Poling, for awhile, resorts to this ridiculous picturing of the fallacies of this symbolic figure of intemperance.

"Too deadly serious." Apparently a great many of those once supporting the cause of prohibition have cooled in their "deadly seriousness" while those seeking repeal have adopted that attitude.

But it was not my intention to discuss that matter, but this matter of "deadly seriousness." Are we marked by that attitude? Is our religion a matter of deadly seriousness? Are our political responsibilities matters of seriousness? Hasn't there gone out of our lives something of this deadly seriousness regarding most of life? Haven't moral obligations ceased to speak at the point of a deadly seriousness? Have not ideals been tarnished and fallen to second-rate interest?

But this matter of seriousness or lack of it is not in itself the disease but rather the symptom of a malady that is not to be cured by any attempt at a show of seriousness. We are serious about the things that we count of importance. It is because

THE HYMNAL REVISERS AT WORK

By Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes

Member of the Joint Commission on Revision of the Methodist Hymnal

(This article was prepared by Bishop Hughes at the request of the Joint Hymnal Commission, of which he is a member, in order that the members of all three of the Churches involved might have authoritative information of the character and status of this work, which is of epoch-making significance.—Fitzgerald S. Parker, Secretary of the Commission).

This article is written to give the Church a look into the Room which has held the meetings of the Joint Hymnal Commission. That Commission is composed of duly elected representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church; the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and the Methodist Protestant Church. The "Room" has been varied—now in Cincinnati, now in Asheville, now in Chautauqua. Speaking musically and theologically, the Commission represents cross-sections of the Churches, and the three communions can fully believe that no one viewpoint has had a monopoly;

I.

But, lest this last assurance should give any wrong impression, let me add that the fellowship of the Commissioners has been a constant reminder of the Psalm that begins, "Behold how good and pleasant." Some of us have met the men who labored on the Hymnal over thirty years ago and can recall how often they commented upon the friendships developed in the meetings. It has been just so with the present Commission. Lasting fellowships have been formed. Scatter the mood of our meetings over the three Methodisms and unification will arrive with holy speed. All this points forward, as we trust, to the merging influence of a Common Hymnal.

II.

I have never heard better congregational singing than our sessions gave. Remember that we made a fair-sized audience. Remember, too, that some of the finest and most artistic singers in our three-fold ranks were in our membership. When Harrington, Harper, Houghton, Lyman, McCutchan, Riemenschneider, Sage, and Washburn sang, and the rest of us "helped them out," congregational singing came to its best. Indeed, in this case it had its peril. Our fine singers made some hymns sound so entrancing that we had to guard our votes lest we be deceived. This may appear humorous, but it represents a real danger. Some of the men sang so well as to deceive the very elect.

III.

I think that all three Churches were anxious to have a varied list of members. If decisions had been wholly in the hands of musical artists, we might have had the experience of an overseas Church whose Hymnal was so edited away from the people as to require an early revision. But I must record here that our "artists" on the Commission voted most reasonably and again and again subordinated their own tastes and desires in the interest of a democratic and efficient Book.

IV.

Democracy went even further in our work. It gave heed to denominational and sectional demands. Hymns and tunes that were not used in one Church, or two Churches, were often sung in the third Church. We Northerners had our list of "frequencies;" so did the Southerners; and so did the Protestants. Sectional and local considerations had to be considered. A Hymn never sung in Massachusetts was often sung in Texas. New York did not desire to defeat the preference of Georgia, and Georgia frequently "yielded to New York." Those who have been demanding a Hymnal that would contain only two hundred or three hundred know not what they ask. We must not deprive other people of Hymns because we do not use those hymns. The preacher who has developed a narrow taste that leads him into a peck-measure habit need not think that his slender diet represents the world. Indeed, one of the pitiful things about the old Hymnal has been that some of its finest treasures were never introduced to our congregations because pastors became "twenty-hymn-men." A singing book prepared for as many as twelve million people of different moods and territories cannot be formed on narrow lines. It must be genuinely catholic.

While no hymns couched in dialect were adopted, due regard in other respects was given to racial quality. In several instances hymns were retained because they are so often used by our colored people. God's sable folks will still find and sing that

"Joy is a fruit that will not grow
In nature's barren soil."

Let all our brethren be careful lest they wrongly affirm that such and such a hymn is "never sung." In the Commission we discovered that hymns that we thought were never sung were constantly used by many thousands of our people.

V.

Democracy, also, went deeper. One man said to me almost fiercely that to retain a certain hymn in the book would be an "unpardonable outrage." The hated poetry, if a referendum to our people were possible, would be retained by a vote of nine to one. I myself do not care for it and have never "given it out" to my congregations. But I am not a believer in musical and poetic imperialism—especially when later freedom is possible. No one can well make a preacher announce a hymn that offends his taste or his conscience; and, of course, singing a hymn that destroys your integrity cannot be forced on the individual. The reports that hymns based on a certain figure of speech would all be rejected never had any warrant. To carry out such a process consistently would rob the Hymnal of some of its greatest treasures and largest persuasions. While the members of the Commission have sought to regard standards of literary taste, they have had no desire to use their appointment for thwarting the desires and convictions of the great majority of the people called Methodists. Oddly enough, some of the outside protestants most strenuous for a revision that would satisfy their personal preferences are most insistent on democracy in other matters.

VI.

So the Hymnal will remain a Methodist book, as well as an ecumenical one. Due regard has been had for our history. The verses that have figured in the critical hours or moods of the Wesleyan movement, such as "Wrestling Jacob," have been retained. Charles Wesley will still easily lead in the Index of Authors, though some of his unused hymns will be eliminated and some other of his hymns dropped in the revision of the Nineties will be brought back—as, for example, "Christ, whose glory fills the sky."

VII.

But along with this recognition that Methodism has "flourished on its own peculiarities," there has been the recognition of changed emphasis. The "Religious Education" feature has greatly enlarged the number of children's hymns, and the Church will be grateful for the additions in this important section. A constant and earnest attempt was made to secure more and better hymns of the "social gospel." But the men who were most insistent about this were not able to suggest many worthy poetical candidates. Of course, some wonderful features of this gospel cannot well be put into verse—as for instance, the eight-hour day and the second-hand clothing shop and store. Yet the heart of these good things was secured, and Gladden's "O Master" and North's "Where Cross the Crowded Ways" will be joined by some worthy companions. Yet it may truly be said that the social gospel has not yet captured the Hymnal. It has its fine poetry, but "The Man with the Hoe" did not apply for admission to our new pages. Rauschenbusch himself felt that it was necessary to write a book giving the "Theology of the Social Gospel." It still remains for some poet to catch the psalm quality in social verses, so that the gospel of personal and industrial relations may advance as far in hymnology as it has in other literature, and in conviction and preaching.

After all, poetry, like oratory, seems to have its limitations. One amusing episode in the Commission's discussion illustrated this fact. An episcopal member contended for the adoption of two excellent hymns for air-travellers. Another episcopal member wished to know why we should have versified prayers for the sky-ways and not for the automobile ways. But thus far the motor-coach has not been welcomed into the garage of poetry. Emily Dickenson did achieve some wonderful verses about a railroad train, but even these would not be at home in a hymnal. Later in the day the protesting Bishop urged the adoption of a hymn which begins "O workman in the toilsome shop," when his opponent in the earlier debate playfully declared that he could not vote for the "shop" hymn unless we could adopt one that began with "O clerk within the grocery store." Now will someone tell us why the one vocabulary lends itself to poetry and the other does not? It looks as if the Lady Muse was still a bit finicky in her insistences.

VIII.

The department of Gospel Hymns will be decidedly increased. While there are differences of opinion as to what should be included, there was unanimous agreement that both the genius of Methodism and the need of our present day called for hymns that persuaded toward a personal acceptance of Christ. So "The Ninety and Nine" will be in the new volume, as will many other songs that remind God's wayward ones that the Good Shepherd still searches for the lost. It was fine to see how the most technical musicians on the Commission supported this evangelistic emphasis. I am personally confident that the popularizing of this section will not only work well in the outreach of our gospel, but that it will tend to increase the circulation of the Hymnal and so to bring our people to the acquaintance and use of the portions of the book that are the finest from the musical standpoint. If our Hymnal be overly classical, many local societies will drift into the adoption of the cheaper issues that have in them much suggesting jazz and ragtime. As its form will be, the forthcoming Hymnal will give ample scope for the finest taste even as it will give a spiritual chance to those of us who cannot claim to be artists. The index of the new tunes in the projected Hymnal will show that some melodies have been called in from the secular or semi-secular world and that an attempt will be made to naturalize them at the altar of God. "Auld Lang Syne" and "Londonderry Air" will be in the list. Doubtless we shall discover that tunes, like persons, may be regenerated and even sanctified. This has been done, and done repeatedly. The new Hymnal will continue the saving process and will provide a religious environment for melodies that in their essence really belong to the Lord of Harmony. If the ancient psalmist said, "How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?", the modern one may be enabled to say that he has learned to sing a strange song in the Lord's land.

IX.

The Commissioners were greatly impressed by the colossal nature of their task. It is no little thing to prepare a Hymnal that many millions of people will use for more than a quarter of a century. While the fellowship of the men was jovial, and people in the hotel lobbies must often have wondered whence came the gales of laughter that followed upon some lively quip, the meetings have been most serious, and, at times, deeply and solemnly religious. I shall never forget some of the prayers offered, some of the memories rehearsed as a member would say, "That hymn was used at my father's funeral;" some of the prophecies that peopled our small meeting places with the multitudes who would sing the songs of our selections. Many a time I said, "It is good to be here."

X.

Here is the Tenthly. The churches are waiting for their new Hymnal. The book is approaching. The work has been and will be incalculable. The initial cost in places and materials will be immense. The three Book Concerns will have to make inconceivable financial outlays in advance.

But while the Book is being made ready, cannot the pastors and people be made ready? Why should not our preachers try to secure some of the forthcoming new hymns and announce them for the services? Perhaps in its far-reaching influence, the greatest thing in this Methodist decade, will be the issuing and using of the new book of holy songs. So let us be prepared to welcome it as a friend, and then to employ it as a friend of Christ.

PRESIDING ELDERSHIP, SALARIES, ETC.

By Observer

Let the presiding-eldership be abolished without delay, provided we want to change from episcopal form of government to congregational government. All offices in the church should exist for one purpose, and one purpose only, and that is to furnish the gospel to the people. The presiding-eldership is an indispensable part of our plan of government, and no other feasible or practicable substitute has been suggested. So, if congregational government is all we need to insure spiritual progress and financial prosperity, let the presiding-eldership be abolished, constitution or no constitution. However, that will mean that a good many who are attacking the eldership publicly and privately will be without "jobs." Hundreds of ministers in other denominations who are just as well qualified and whose characters are above reproach, have been waiting a long time for the call that has not come.

Let the presiding-eldership be abolished without delay, providing the resources of the membership are being drained to pay the enormous cost of the office. The membership paid last year on an average, the widow and the millionaire included for the support of the elders, approximately thirty-eight cents per member. That would have paid half the price of a Sunday dinner at a Greek restaurant.

But we are told that amount would keep so many missionaries in the foreign field. Let no one be deceived. When the price of the presiding-eldership is estimated, the individual members will reduce their contributions in proportion. Furthermore, when the elders are dispensed with, and there is no one to assist the pastor in urging the people to pay the benevolences, the benevolences as well as the pastor's salaries will be reduced.

If the eldership is to be retained, let no one be continued in his office for a longer period than one year, or two years in exceptional cases, so that every member of the conference will have an opportunity to serve in the capacity, provided it is regarded as nothing more than a sinecure and a special opportunity that is given the appointee to rest a year or two; but if it exists for the advancing of the Kingdom, ability and efficiency of the appointee should be the first consideration. Offices should not exist merely to honor men or to give them a support, but to promote the Kingdom of God.

Let the eldership be abolished without delay, provided it is ruining some of our best men. They are selected from the pastorate and must return to the pastorate, and are usually those who have been successful in that field, and if the office of presiding elder is of such a nature as to transform them into indifferent pleasure-seeking mendicants who are imposing on both preachers and people, and are in the way, "because the pastor can do the work better without him than with him," according to the testimony of a college professor, let the office be abolished and not wait for any constitutional change. The church should not permit any office to exist in its organization that has such a disastrous effect upon some of the most successful pastors that we have.

For the sake of immediate relief the pastors should organize at once against these elders and defend their rights and the rights of the people against these erstwhile friends who have been changed into drones and parasites, and let them know that they are no longer members of the brotherhood, but are to be treated as the Jew of old who betrayed his people and became a publican or tax-gatherer. The cause is so urgent, it demands immediate action.

No one who has ever been a member of a General Conference should be elected again, provided the General Conference meets merely to honor its own members and give them a pleasant vacation. These honors should be passed around; the church should not be taxed with the expense of a General Conference just to honor a few, but the honors should be distributed. But if the Conference is to advance the work of the Church and the business of the Conference is of primary importance, the delegates should be selected with regard to their ability to serve in that capacity. The interest of men as individuals should be lost sight of and the first consideration should be the good of the church.

The salaries of the preachers should be equalized or at least a minimum should be fixed so that no pastor would receive less than that stated figure, provided a law be passed and enforced compelling the laymen of the larger appointments to accept pastors from the mission charges as their pastors. These mission preachers are as good men as those who serve the larger stations. Equalizing salaries means the equalizing of the appointments. If the brethren will proceed to have this law passed and enforced at once, this plan can be put into operation. And if the arrangement cannot be made to apply all down the line, it can be made to apply to the smaller stations and circuits. Great good can be derived in this way. If we can not get a whole loaf let us take half the loaf. For instance, within recent years, a certain pastor (one among many of his kind) who is a college graduate and has done post-graduate work, served a certain charge and the remuneration was distressingly small. The presiding elder used all his resources in trying to get the people to increase the pay of that pastor, but they would not. That brother was moved to another charge which is paying about the same amount he received from the former charge. He was succeeded on the former charge by another pastor who had not received the degrees his predecessor had received, and they paid him practically twice as much as they paid the other one. Of course these laymen did not know what they wanted and did not consider the equipment of the first brother and in this did very wrong and were not just, but their excuse was that the last brother gave them service and the first did not. The former brother is still embarrassed. It will be a great relief to him to have these salaries equalized so that the brother will have to pay over a part he is receiving to his predecessor. So let us equalize all these and have all on the same basis, provided, the church exists to support men; but if it is in an organization to establish the Kingdom of God on earth, let us give every man an OPPORTUNITY to serve and an OPPORTUNITY to earn his salary.

IS PERSONAL EVANGELISM OUT OF DATE?

By some curious twist, there are many Christians today who seem to feel that evangelism is unnecessary. We even find the Laymen's Appraisal of Foreign Missions suggesting that evangelism, in the sense of the spoken word, has been overdone. Let us have a moratorium, it says in effect, on preaching, and confine our missionary effort to living lives of Christlike service. That is a deceptive half-truth. The report is clearly right in insisting that in the last analysis it is the evangelism of deed rather than of word that counts the most. But why separate the two? Why expect a man to be tongue-tied about something that is a vital reality to him?

Surely we do not expect that to happen in other realms of a man's experience than religion. In Germany today, do men refrain from being Nazi evangelists and content themselves with simply letting you guess their faith from their deeds? Far from it! Almost every man you meet in Berlin insists on trying to convert you to believe in Adolf Hitler as the savior of Germany if men can be passionate evangelists for nationalism (which a discerning English writer has lately described as "man's other religion"), shall we be less evangelistic about our Christian faith?

Or look at Russia today, where Communism has become a sort of substitute for religion in the lives of millions. You do not find the Russians saying, "We will practice communism but we will not preach it or interpret it to non-communists." On the contrary, the communists are probably the most flaming evangelists in our modern world. Are we to be less evangelistic about our faith than the communists about theirs?

Our hesitation about evangelism today, so far as it does not spring from a lack of clear Christian convictions, is due to the fatally false assumption that somehow we can get a better society without getting better individuals. We talk about a Christian social order without realizing that there cannot be a Christian social order without truly Christian men. We need to hear again Thomas Huxley's warning that there is no magic by which to get golden conduct in society out of leaden motives in the individual. We need a healthy impatience with all schemes for solving our social problems by some mass attack upon them without ever getting to the root difficulties in the human heart. Take war, for example. As Ernest F. Tittle has reminded us, "it is easier to hate war than it is to hate in ourselves those things that make for war." So when we witness such a spectacle as modern militarism, we tend to think of it as some vague impersonal evil that is let down upon us, as it were, like a black cloud from the heavens. But militarism, in the last analysis, arises from the fact that we, and other men like us, have an uncontrolled desire for things which lead to war—markets, raw materials, territory, power. The best definition of militarism of which the editor has ever heard is simply that it is the trampling instinct in his own breast, writ large and organized.—Federal Council Bulletin.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott, Contributing Editor

One of the best habits to cultivate is that of reading the Bible. It has a message for the mind and heart of people which no other book can supply. As we continue to read it we learn to appreciate the language of the Bible and rejoice in its truths. Too often we avoid its message because our lives are not in accord with its teaching, and that is where we make such a grievous mistake for our own spiritual life. When one has filled his mind with the fundamental truths of the Bible he has a basis from which to work out life's ways. It does not yield its fruit so much to the critical reader as to the sympathetic believer. The student who is delving into its detailed meanings often misses its richest gifts, for, like the eating of choice foods, we receive more benefit when they are eaten with an abandon of joy. Our churches could do no better work than to begin to initiate a revival of reading the Bible. Not under a law of regulation—so much today and so much tomorrow—but reading as if one loves the truths and wanted them in our minds. For instance, let the reader take his Bible and read the letter to the Philippians. Do not stop at the chapter divisions. Go right on through. It will raise your thoughts for a whole week.

The adult who learns how to greet children has gained much for his life. You just watch this as you go along daily in your life. Many children are offended in their delicate nature by adults. You see adults speak to children as if they were some little animal. It is either condescending or patronizing or frequently repulsive. The door of the heart of a child is closed quickly to repelling adults. They will sense immediately whether you are a friend or foe by just the manner you use in greeting them. Children do not like for adults to be too familiar. They want us to be just natural people and not to use voice affectation or be too gushing. The key which will unlock the heart of most any child is for an adult to be respectful of the personality of the child.

The "Trinity of Trust" is trust in ourselves, in our fellowman and in our God. Trust and faith are words having nearly the same meaning. We live by them. Confidence in ourselves gives us some assurance of success; with it there is hardly any method known to man to remove the difficulties. To possess a trusting nature may frequently lead one into unhappy experiences, but there are so many joys to counter-balance. Trust seems to bring forth the best in the one trusted. It is a life-giving quality, whereas suspicion is death. There is still much in human nature we can trust implicitly. All the faithful men and women have not passed away in our generation. But best of all is to trust God. The sun still shines as it did when we were children. The natural forces are as alive as ever. God's love is as true and as overshadowing as in the days gone before us.

The audience has gathered. The time for speaking has come. The speaker may be a teacher or preacher or lecturer. The audience is a live, pulsing reality. Hundreds of situations are right before the eye. Now the cruelest procedure at all is for the speaker to imagine some other audience and speak to it. It is the height of folly to do that, yet how often have leaders been guilty? To fail to look at them, to get suggestions from imaginary situations rather than the real one right here is a loss which can never be regained. These minds before the speaker are to be gripped, directed, fused, enlightened and inspired. How often have we seen speakers speaking and not a mind following the words? The reason for that was the speaker had forgotten them and not that they had gone from him. Jesus spoke directly to the people as if they were living personalities who could understand what He was saying to them.

WORLD DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE

The World Disarmament Conference will resume its work on October 16. It is generally understood that the organized Christian forces of the world will urge upon the Conference the importance of taking a very decisive step toward disarmament. On the eve of the session of the Conference a great world disarmament meeting will be held in Geneva.

The Geneva meeting will be preceded by a thousand disarmament meetings in Great Britain and France. There should be at least as many more in the United States. The great task of checking the present race in armaments will be considered and urgent messages will be sent to Geneva. Norman H. Davis, ambassador at large for the United States, says: "If by a great act of faith each and every nation will now summon the courage to take a decisive step in general disarmament, conditions throughout the world will so improve that we can henceforth face the future with a real feeling of security and confidence."

The General Staff of the General Board of Christian Education suggests that our people everywhere join in a concert of prayer that the desired results may be achieved in this great Conference. Cablegrams and petitions sent to Geneva are important. Perhaps messages sent by way of the throne of grace will be far more effective.

the same day the preacher takes as his subject, "Taking Christ at His Word."

The last group meeting for the Western group of the Hattiesburg District will be held at Williamsburg church on Tuesday, October 10. The laymen will have charge in the morning. Hon. W. H. L. Carruth presiding. The hours will be 10 a.m. until 3:30 p.m.

"Six Tests of Marriage" is the title of a beautiful and splendidly written booklet by Dr. Leland F. Wood, Secretary of the Committee on Marriage and the Home, Federal Council of Churches. It is published in two editions, one costing ten cents; the other, a beautifully bound gift edition, is twenty cents. It is just the thing to give to each couple whose marriage the pastor performs. Write to 105 East 22nd Street, New York City, enclosing ten or twenty cents, and look it over.

The recent passing of Mrs. L. M. Lipscomb, beloved wife of our pastor at Louisville, Miss., came as a shock to the readers of the Advocate. Sister Lipscomb was a gifted woman in the literary field, having contributed numerous poems for publication in the Advocate and other periodicals. The last contribution from her pen was a poem dedicated to the memory of Mr. J. R. Bingham, and was published in our issue of September 14, just six days prior to her death, which occurred on September 20.

Rev. B. C. Taylor, pastor at First Church, Natchitoches, La., reports increased responsibilities and opportunities with the students of the State Normal College. Profs. Ropp and Maddox of the Normal faculty are on the teaching staff of the church. On a recent Sunday when the temperature was trying to wreck the thermometers there were 107 present in the College Division at the church. If you have a son or daughter at State Normal, let Brother Taylor know about it. He is anxious to give special attention to the boys and girls who are away from home.

A Golden Jubilee Anniversary at Pharr Chapel, our church at Morgan City, La., was celebrated on the evening of Monday, September 25, honoring Mr. John A. Pharr, who has, for years, been such a support to the church. For fifty years he has been the faithful organist of the church. Among special guests on the occasion we note Dr. A. M. Serex, pastor at New Iberia; Rev. H. N. Brown, pastor at Lafayette; and Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor at Franklin. We acknowledge invitation to be present and express our regrets at inability to attend. Rev. S. J. McLean is pastor. Mr. Pharr rendered a favorite organ number.

✓ Mrs. Frances H. Hoover, 89, widow of the late B. T. Hoover, who passed to her reward recently, and was laid to rest in the Dickens, Miss., Cemetery, following funeral services from the Methodist church, was the oldest member of the church, her name appearing first on the chronological list. She joined the church in 1872 under the pastorate of Rev. R. J. Jones. Her husband was one of the pioneers of the section and was, for a long time, a steward in our church. Her son, Jno. R. Hoover; and her daughter, Mrs. Clyde Maxwell, are loyal members of the church their mother so deeply and loyally loved.

"This is my pledge fulfilled, and I hope to send more before the time is up." That is the way Rev. J. F. Dring, pastor at Haughton, La., writes. With every pastor who pledged a quota doing what Brother Dring has done we would have had just 2900 subscriptions when the period closed, October 1. Brother Dring reports good progress on his work, and the support of a very loyal people. They have had hard times up there, but this is the spirit that turns defeat into victory and keeps the sun in the heaven and a song in the heart: "Our crops were badly damaged by rain and floods, but we are trusting God who is still on the throne, and we are pushing straight ahead." Then he says there will be a good report for Conference. We cannot doubt it.

In a letter from Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor Trinity Church, Ruston, La., who is erecting the first unit of a new church plant, we take this paragraph: "We are building for the orphans, wards of the Conference, and for Tech students, children from Methodist homes over the state; and we are building without any outside help." But, in my capacity as editor of the Advocate, I dare any friends of the Orphanage, or parent of Methodist boy or girl in Tech, to see the importance of the provision being made by this good church for these interests to send a great contribution to the Building Committee. Seems that some man or woman might say: "Here's a contribution to help build the rooms for the College Young People;" or "Here is our way of saying we want to stand by our children in Dr. Vaughan's care," enclosing a good clean check to help do it.

The World Conference for the Promotion of Holiness was held September 7 to 17 in the Fitzgerald Auditorium, Chicago Evangelistic Institute. There was a representative attendance of several hundred from all sections of America and from many other nations. A committee from the various evangelical denominations, under the Chairmanship of Rev. John Paul, had devoted three years to preparing the program, which was of a high order. It was the most comprehensive survey of the world-wide achievements of definite holiness evangelism and an expression of unification of all branches of ministry seldom paralleled, with commissioners of the Salvation Army, leading Methodists of the various branches, and Nazarenes, Presbyterians and Baptists, all emphasizing the deeper life. Very naturally it was a fruitful evangelistic season, with many forward for prayer and large numbers entering into definite spiritual blessing.

Shreveport District, under the enterprising leadership of its presiding elder, Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, is making hay during these closing weeks of the conference year. I wish you could see the fine dodger they got out announcing the great community meetings to be held at various points in the district. On the staff of speakers we note the following names: Dr. W. Angie Smith, pastor First Church, Shreveport; Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, presiding elder; Rev. Guy M. Hicks, pastor at Mansfield; Prof. I. C. Strickland, principal of Mansfield High School; Mr. R. T. Douglas, planter, and deaconess Grace Gatewood of First Church, Shreveport. This staff is supported by Mrs. Guy M. Hicks with a great missionary play, and a group of music students from Centenary College and Prof. Lawrence Quattlebaum, instructor in Voice at Centenary College. In the center of the dodger stands the cross. Dr. Sexton remarks, "You will notice that we have a banner that is better than the blue eagle."

✓ REV. H. S. JOHNS CALLED HOME

On the afternoon of Thursday, September 28, after a few weeks of ill health, Rev. H. S. Johns, our faithful pastor at Greenwood and Bethany, La., went home to God.

After a brief funeral service in Shreveport the body was sent to Baton Rouge, his former home, where services were conducted at First Church, 3 o'clock, Friday afternoon.

Brother Johns is survived by his wife, Mrs. Stella Bonner Johns; a daughter, Miss Mary Bonner Johns, student in the State University; Dr. Foster M. Johns, New Orleans; and Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor Trinity Church, Ruston.

For twenty-one years Brother Johns was Chaplain of the State Penitentiary where he rendered a great service to both prisoners and their families.

A fuller account of this noble life will appear later in our columns.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

It would be delightful to have all the preachers bring their wives to Conference with them, and Water Valley wishes so much that we might be able to have them here, but for lack of room we will have to forego that pleasure, except in the cases where a preacher's wife is a delegate to the Conference.

The people here are now making preparations for the Conference and are looking forward with much pleasure to the coming of every preacher and every delegate. We are not promising you large mansions to stay in, but we are promising you a large welcome.

About hotel accommodations would like to say that we have only two small hotels. Some of the pastors have requested that they be placed at a hotel and insist on paying their way rather than send to the Conference entertainment fund. Now I will have to assign you to hotels like going to mill. The first that request it will be served first and so on till the rooms are taken up. So if you come in that class you better write at once.

Conference entertainment fund. The church here wishes me to say to you pastors that we appreciate very much the help that your charges are going to give us. Of course, it is understood that those are the terms on which Water Valley asked for the conference, and it was on that basis ONLY that we felt able to take it. But we do not want you to strain other collections in order to raise this fund. If each charge sends in something we feel sure that we will get by beautifully. Do not send the money to me but to Mr. R. W. Sharp, Grenada, Miss.

J. D. WROTEN.

BISHOP HOYT M. DOBBS AT MINDEN, LOUISIANA

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs conducted revival services at First Church, Minden, La., October 1-4. Subjects used by the Bishop: "The Foundations of Society," "The Church's Credentials," "The Cross in Christian Experience," "The Christian View of Life," "Creative Christianity," "One Increasing Purpose," "Religion in Theory and Practice," "The Last Supper."

Dr. A. S. Lutz is pastor of our Minden church.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE GROUP INSURANCE

Dear Brethren: You will recall that some months ago I mailed to each of you a letter explaining the reason for the increase in rate, and requested a prompt reply, though the third call was sent, to those who did not reply and there are about a dozen that have not replied yet, but finally got a majority for continuing the Group, and am ready to do so, but in the meantime the delay brought about some conditions that I have not been able to satisfy the demand of the Insurance Company, and the checks or P. O. that have been received have been held, and are now being held pending a final adjustment of the matter, and if we can not get the Company to continue the membership of those who want to continue, your money will be refunded. Some of you have written, but had nothing definite and that explains why you have not had a reply to your letter, or why I have not written those who did not write, but expected to hear from me.

I will advise you definitely about the matter as soon as I can.

Yours very sincerely,

W. D. HAWKINS, Treasurer.

CONCERNING EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY CAMPAIGN

Because of the last minute deluge of mail containing subscriptions on the Eightieth Anniversary campaign which closed on October 1, the Business Manager was unable to prepare the usual report on subscriptions received in time to be included in this number of the Advocate. He promises, however, to have a complete report of the results of the campaign ready for publication next week.

Whether or not the total number of subscriptions pledged have been received we are unable to say at this time, but it is expected that pastors who have taken subscriptions prior to October 1, but have not yet forwarded them to our office will do so in time to be included in the final report next week.

We are deeply grateful for the splendid manner in which our pastors and laymen cooperated with us in this campaign and want to again thank each for their interest and valuable assistance.

Be on the look-out for the final report in next week's Advocate.

A POEM AND ITS ANSWER

(This is a copy of "Jade Pendant," by Mary Carolyn Davies):

The feel of jade
Makes people less afraid
Of death. I wear
A pendant on my bare
Throat. There
My fingers, frightened, run for comforting.
Today I learned a strange breath-stopping thing.
The carved white pendant, delicate and frail,
Like a small petal, bravely cool and pale,
Is imitation. I unclasped it, then
I thought awhile and put it on again.

"An Assurance Recovered," by Lela May Mims.

The feel of God
Makes people afared not
Of death. I own
A Bible, a small loan
From Heaven.
There my soul, aghast, flies for comforting.
Today I learn a grand, life-quickenng thing.
The printed Word reveals, convincing, sure,
There is no dying spirit, vital, pure;
But liberation. I read further, then
I thought awhile, never to doubt again.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Mrs. C. H. Brookshire, secretary of zone 2, Lake Charles District, reports a meeting of the zone in Lake Arthur, September 12. Talks made on International Christian Citizenship as an aid to World Peace, Christian Citizenship and the Depression and the Memorial Home of Mercy.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference publishes a bulletin of their work. This in itself shows that there are wide-awake workers in this Conference. They are conducting a Life Membership Campaign and Ruston District is leading. This is a good example for Mississippi and North Mississippi to follow. To the Auxiliary World Outlook and Publicity Superintendents of the Mississippi Conference:

We are coming to the close of the third quarter and your Conference superintendent will be expecting reports that according to past record will not come, as only about one-fourth of the auxiliaries have reported this year. Won't you please send one this quarter

ZONE MEETING

Zone 5 of the Jackson District, composed of Brandon, Fannin, Galloway Memorial, Holly Bush, Morton, Pearl Chapel, Pelahatchie and Shiloh; met in Pelahatchie, Miss., September 14, 1933, with a good attendance, even though only three of the eight auxiliaries included in this zone were represented.

The programme, which was an unusually good one, was arranged by Mrs. Chas. A. Neal, of Jackson, zone chairman.

After the devotional conducted by the local pastor, Rev. S. F. Harkey, assisted by Mrs. Tatom and Mrs. Adams of the Pelahatchie Auxiliary, Mrs. S. L. McLaurin, of Brandon, was elected secretary in place of Mrs. Robert Pennington of Pelahatchie, resigned. The feature speakers of the meeting were Miss Ida Anderson, returned missionary from China. Brother Fred McDonald, superintendent of our orphanage, Miss Susie V. Powell, who gave a stirring temperance talk, and an earnest and helpful short address by our recently elected district secretary, Mrs. Norman Taylor, of Jackson.

The same wonderful hospitality and cordiality which we have learned to expect from the Pelahatchie Auxiliary, was extended.

After a pleasant and profitable day, we came home all feeling, "It is good to have been in this place."

Why the Sudden Change to Liquid Laxatives?

Doctors have always recognized the value of the laxative whose dose can be measured, and whose action can be controlled.

The public, too, is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that a properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated as long as you keep on using it.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is at all druggists. Member N. R. A.

Stop Chills and Fever!

Rid Your System of Malaria!

Shivering with chills one moment and burning with fever the next—that's one of the effects of Malaria. Unless checked, the disease will do serious harm to your health. Malaria, a blood infection, calls for two things. First, destroying the infection in the blood. Second, building up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and to fortify against further attack.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic supplies both these effects. It contains tasteless quinine, which kills the infection in the blood, and iron, which enriches and builds up the blood. Chills and fever soon stop and you are restored to health and comfort. For half a century, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic has been sure relief for Malaria. It is just as useful, too, as a general tonic for old and young. Pleasant to take and absolutely harmless. Safe to give children. Get a bottle at any store.

A DIURETIC FOR THE KIDNEYS

Society observed their birthday on the morning of August 14 at the home of Mrs. Peach, the treasurer.

Hospitality and good fellowship, music and flowers, made of this a gala occasion. In the living room was an attractive "make believe" cake with an aperture for receiving the birthday dollars.

Mrs. Peach named the months of the year, and as those having birthdays in each particular month came forward in turn, she told every group under which constellation its members were born, their characteristics, the flower of the month, and their birthstones. This was a unique and pleasing feature, and awakened some merriment. After all had presented their gifts, about forty dollars were found in the birthday cake, which will do service again at the September meeting for the absentees who did not send their birthday gifts. Cards of invitation had been mailed to all members. This may prove a good plan for any missionary society.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF BRANDON, MISS.

Whereas, God in his infinite love saw fit to transplant to, "An house not made with hands" the spirit of our friend and faithful co-worker, Mrs. Lizzie Harper Waddell, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society realizing our great loss, but rejoicing that we were permitted to have many years of intimate association with her, Grandma Waddell, thereby learning to know and appreciate her gentleness, kindness and deep spirituality; therefore be it

Resolved, that the Woman's Missionary Society of Brandon extend deepest sympathy to the family of the departed one, but knowing full well, "Ye sorrow not even as other which have no hope." Be it further

Resolved, that Prov. 31:10-31 be read at the next meeting of the Missionary Society as a fitting tribute to the life and character of our departed friend. Be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be kept in the records of the Missionary Society and a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, on the 31st day of August, 1933, the death angel entered the home of our beloved sister and co-worker, Mrs. Fannie Capps, and said, "It is enough, come up higher."

Whereas, she was always faithful in all her relations to her church, to her friends, and to her loved ones. Therefore be it

Resolved by the Choudrant Missionary Society:

That the Methodist Church, the Sunday school, and the Woman's Missionary Society has lost one of its most faithful members.

That we mourn our loss but rejoice in her eternal gain.

That we commend her loved ones

In Memoriam

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

VETERAN PASSES

William A. King, aged ninety years and five months, a Confederate veteran and prominent citizen of Southwest Mississippi, died early Tuesday morning at his home at Auburn, Lincoln county after a lingering illness of several months.

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at the Methodist church of which the deceased was a member, conducted by his pastor, the Rev. Linus P. Anders, assisted by several ministers who were intimate friends.

Veteran King was the last survivor of Company "H," Dixie Guards, Thirty-ninth Mississippi regiment of the Confederate army. His gallant company, commanded by Capt. J. R. Wilson, Lieutenant John J. White (father of the well known Hugh White) and Sergeant John P. Caruth, withstood the siege at Port Hudson till after all other defenses on the Mississippi River had succumbed to the enemy.

Mr. King was of the pioneer families, King and Terrell who have been conspicuous leaders of the section for more than a century.

He was the father of two daughters and five sons. Surviving him are his wife (formerly Mrs. Sally N. Bufkin), four sons, James D., of Natalbany, La., J. Hugh, of Johnston Station, W. Edgar, Auburn, and the Rev. Enoch A. minister at Centreville, Miss., a stepson S. L. Bufkin, Auburn, a large number of grandchildren and great grandchildren.—McComb Enterprise.

The Best GRAY HAIR REMEDY IS MADE AT HOME

You can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy, by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained.

Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, makes it soft and glossy and takes years off your looks. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. Do not be handicapped by gray hair now when it is so economical and easy to get rid of in your own home.

A TRIBUTE WELL DESERVED

By Rev. H. S. DuBois, P. C.,
Pilot Grove, Mo.

This article is not concerning some one who has departed this life and of whom it is befitting that words of tribute be written. It is well to "say it with flowers" in the terms of the florist, perhaps, but words of commendation to the living may be better.

You have a man in your midst still fighting for God and the right for justice, honor and integrity who has been on the battle front for the church for many years, and if the Lord spares his health will not find himself retiring from the front. In early life he dedicated his life to the Lord, receiving the inspiration to be of service to the world, and after having assisted his father in removing a debt from the farm walked thirty or more miles to Cooper Institute, where he commenced his education, finally going to the old Southern University, where he made a record as a self-sacrificing student, teaching summer school and borrowing money from a kind friend to pay his board while he continued his education. Returning to his native state he joined the North Mississippi Conference, where he held many hard pastorates, finally filling the best in the Conference as well as being presiding elder for three terms. Not only has he succeeded himself, but has educated seven children, giving each one the very best. Among these are four alumni of "Old Miss.," one of these an outstanding attorney of Jackson, Miss., and the youngest of the seven a promising young physician, graduate of North Western University.

Dr. Lee M. Lipscomb has always stood for the highest ideals; his mind was never besmirched with the low things of life, and while he knows the power of the Christ to lift men from those low levels his great success has been among the best type of people. Men who know him intimately love him for his genial personality and admire him for his intellectual and spiritual gifts. In the great work which he has done, not a little is due to the consecrated companion who occupied the parsonage with him.

How Precious are Memory's Pictures!

WHAT a blessing is memory—especially to those who live in the gentler evening of life—alone. To see and live again the vivid moments of romance—when youth and love and two beating hearts made life all sunshine and ecstasy.

For many years it has been our privilege to serve people like the dear old lady in this picture; to help them face forward alone—to re-live the past more happily because the proper things were done when he finished this life's work and went Home.

Just the implicit faith that within the sacred precincts of the CLARK Vault all is immaculately serene—isolated from every outside intrusion by its impermeable walls and inviolable air-seal, brings a peace of mind and comfort that are past all expression.

Especially when wild winds rage and the earth is drenched with water, this assurance is a priceless blessing.

The CLARK Vault is today an essential part of the well-planned service—as important in the part it plays as the roof is to the house. And not the least of its value is to those who "carry on" more happily because of their deep faith in its lasting protection. Think of this when a friend or kinsman calls for you in his time of need. Do him a kindness by suggesting the use of a "CLARK."

A BEAUTIFUL GRECIAN DESIGN IS NOW OFFERED BY CLARK...

Its flowing lines and curves add immeasurable strength and beauty....It is the first and only one-piece metal vault...

CLARK pioneered the metal grave vault. Years ago CLARK introduced the water-proof metal grave vault with the famous CLARK Air-Seal. For nearly two generations this principle of water-proof protection has proven its soundness. A whole nation knows and respects CLARK—and the service for which it stands.

Today CLARK offers a new and improved design—a truly revolutionary achievement. The only one-piece metal vault in the world.

Through the use of curves instead of angles, further strength and rigidity have been secured. The architecture is distinctly the beautiful Grecian Ionic. This new CLARK Vault is called the "Custodian."

CLARK Vaults are of rust-resisting metals—that afford protection against seepage and crumbling. Each CLARK Vault is finally tested for water- and air-tightness under 5000 pounds of water. The tiniest pinhole leak would be discovered by this test. Every

CLARK Vault is warranted for fifty years or longer. Any funeral director can supply a CLARK Vault without delay. You have a choice of the CLARK Custodian, the CLARK Standard, or one of the CLARK All-Copper Vaults. All models come in appropriately colorful finishes. Prices are always reasonable.

See that the CLARK trade-mark is on the end of the vault. It is there to protect you. Look for the name CLARK. No honorable funeral director ever attempts substitution. The Clark Grave Vault Company, Columbus, Ohio. Western Office and Warehouse: Kansas City, Missouri.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

HAVE YOU PREACHERS ever noticed that inclination to substitute goodness for intelligence and hard work? I am afraid it is one of the temptations peculiar to our business.

I believe I saw a little bit of it in college when the fellow pled his Y or other religious work as the explanation of his failure to bring up the work assigned by the professor. There seemed to be the presumption that one's failures should be overlooked or dealt with more leniently, provided he had been engaged in religious work. And I believe I have felt it coming on me when I faced some particularly hard or baffling piece of work, or something a bit dangerous?

It is that lackadaisical trusting of Providence to do something that you should do. No, I don't suppose it is laziness. We are busy enough and consuming a lot of energy in rushing around to many things. Surely it is not laziness, indolence. Of course those things will bear looking into while considering the matter. And the question of cowardice might be looked into. But I am of the impression that it is something a little more subtle and devastating than these.

Goodness is just a bit intangible anyway. It is hard to objectify and make concrete. Goodness is rather general and abstract and otherworldly. Almost anybody, too, can be good. It does not require much intelligence or effort. Why should one get excited about it?

You see this attitude manifests itself as a kind of consecrated fatalism. We come up against a difficult and discouraging concrete situation. It baffles us. We do not see through it. It is hard to meet. We do not want to take hold of it. It is like taking the handle of your pine-axe when there is frost on it. So we either decide that it is foreordained to be that way, or that "it will come out all right."

Seems to me that is one thing goodness is suffering from these days. It seems to be lacking in ethical content and sacrificial daring. It limps and is limp. It prefers to be let alone. It takes refuge in the abstract and theoretical and tiptoes by the real and practical. It prates of "spirituality" and the "religion of Jesus" while ignoring the implications of these, and would be frightened speechless should it meet with the real implications of these terms and other pious phraseology.

Maybe our goodness does not amount to much. Maybe it is a kind of refuge from real life, a kind of furlough from tough fighting. Jesus and Paul and some of the others were good. No mistake about that. But their kind of goodness got them into trouble. Jesus had to bear a cross and died on it. Paul got "beat up" and got his head cut off. Life with them was exciting and dangerous.

But do you not long for religion to come alive again? We try to pump up our camp meetings, our revivals, our prayer meetings. We want to have a meeting like we used to have. We want "old time religion." And with many of us that means a good time and a bath in sunshine.

RELIGION IS GOING to come alive some of these days. I feel the impulse of its coming. And I believe I see some points at which it is going to come alive. Of course we can keep our old model if we so choose, but we are not going to be able to call it Christianity much longer.

Now I am not going to say that Christianity is the answer. For either what we have is not Christianity or we do not know much about what it means.

Religion is going to come alive at the point of the race question. Take your parachute and drop out if you wish. But if you expect to make the stratosphere of religion we are going to have to face it. I feel it coming on. I am a southerner, bred and born. I am familiar with our attitude generally. Of course we do not propose for northern people to tell us how to deal with the matter. Furthermore, there is trash in their front yard anyway. But what I am getting at is the necessity of our getting at it in our way and doing something about it. Let us have grit enough to face it. Let us not go off on a vacation now saying, "Better let that alone. It is dangerous." I am for the southern way of getting at it, but I don't know yet that we have any. I am not very much impressed with what we have accomplished. The early Ku Klux Klan seems to have served a valuable purpose in an emergency for which the South was not altogether to blame. Slavery, "carpet baggers," "sklawags," the Civil War, "reconstruction," and a few other factors went into the makeup of our attitude toward the Negro. But I am beginning to want to get out of the Civil War zone.

Come on. Let us face it.

Religion is going to come alive at the point of war. The issue is joined. Are we to continue to have war? Is there always to be a "next war?" Is it a biological necessity? Is it foreordained in the nature of things? Will everything come out all right?

Are we getting too high for you? Here is your parachute if you want to go down. We are headed for Mount Everest. It is going to be cold and there will be storms. Do you want to go to the cellar? Gideon's band shriveled when it faced the real issue. It is no dress parade. The enemy is right over there and already have our range.

Now it is not going to be enough for us to resolve that we shall take part in no more wars. That course is open to you. But if all men of soldier age should take that stand we should still have the devils of greed and hate to slay and racial superiority to battle. But come on. Let us get up there where the shells are beginning to fall.

Religion is going to come alive at the point of nationalism. Some people are already having to choose between Christ and country. Is any country qualified to dictate to conscience and speak before Christ? Which is to be first, Christ or Caesar? The early Christians went to the lions because they declined to worship the Emperor. It was all right for them to keep their Christian faith, just so they worshiped Caesar. But they did not see how they could worship the two. They did not know how to serve twin-gods. It was all right for the three Hebrew children to keep their Hebrew faith just so they worshiped the golden image. But they did not see how they could entertain two deities if either meant anything. One must be supreme. They preferred Jehovah and they went to the furnace not knowing they would come out alive.

Religion is going to come alive at the point of the relationship of producer and consumer, at the point of the production and use of wealth. Here's your parachute if you wish to go down. Here is your chloroform if you wish to sleep it off. But we had as well face it. This matter of a very small per cent of the population of the country owning and controlling practically all of the wealth is here. We cannot dodge it. It is not ours to say that the capitalist is sinner above those upon whom the tower of Siloam fell. The word to all is, "Repent, lest ye all likewise perish." It is not ours to exalt the virtues of poverty. Paupers may be the victims of greed. All I can see is that an angel stands in the way with a sword drawn. We cannot get by. Something is desperately wrong when there is a world of goods in one quarter and a world of suffering and poverty in another. Of course you may crawl away and hide your face from it. It is not the ostrich that hides his head unless he learned it from men.

THE REPEAL OF THE EIGHTEENTH amendment seems assured. Thirty-one states, wet and dry, without a break, have indicated their willingness to see prohibition pass away. Out of some 3,000 proposed amendments only twenty have been passed and become a part of the Constitution. Never has one been repealed. But it seems that in a very short while that can no longer be said.

With all the promises of the great day

THE NATIONAL RECOVERY MOST URGENT AND MOST IMPORTANT

By Bishop W. A. Candler

Our country is now intensely engaged in a scheme for the recovery of the nation's material welfare, or perhaps we should say in a group of schemes touching every branch of industry and commerce, from the worker of the small farm to the business of the largest financial institutions.

It is not necessary to discuss the merits of this bundle of plans for economic recovery, although it is difficult to see how any system containing socialistic tendencies can bring permanent prosperity.

It may be said, however, that all these plans of relief are concerned exclusively with matters of material prosperity and that they utterly ignore the spiritual forces which make and promote the welfare of nations.

It is gratifying to note that the President of the Republic has recently declared that even these economic plans cannot succeed in default of spiritual life. His words we may well lay to heart.

The worst depression upon the country is moral rather than financial.

Following the World War the American people fell into a veritable frenzy for getting wealth, and apparently they forgot all else. They have come to a period of depression by this unprecedented pursuit of gain; and no economic schemes will bring them out of the disasters which they have brought upon themselves. We must come out of our troubles through the way by which we entered into them. They did not come so much from lack of earthly goods as from excess of material things and inordinate thirst for getting more.

Fifty years ago, when Mr. Matthew Arnold was visiting America, he was shown some of the excessive wealth accumulated in one of our great cities, and was asked his opinion concerning such conditions. With brutal frankness he replied, "America is too beastly prosperous." At that time our national wealth did not aggregate more than one-eighth of the figure at which it is now estimated.

As we have gotten gain, we have increased all forms of self-indulgence and have renounced the higher things of the Spirit to an alarming degree. The frenzied pursuit of wealth has become the greatest peril to the nation. Opulence means the gratification of desires, and gratified desires are the fruitful source of all sorts of moral disorders. Our national trouble, therefore, is moral rather than economic. During the World War and the frenzied boom which followed it, the nation lost, to a great degree, its moral sense; and today its material conditions are the direct results of its demoralization. It is worse than idle to minify these statements of fact and decry them as what some call pessimism. No pessimism, however dark, can over-state the evils of the present situation.

We must have not a recovery of material prosperity, but a recovery of spiritual life; and the evidences of this great need appear on all hands. We need to recover faith in the Word of God which has been impaired in the public mind by pulpit utterances and magazine articles, issuing from some who call themselves preachers. In the days of Josiah, the High Priest Hilkiah found that the divine revelation possessed by Israel had been long lost in the Temple; and in our day God's Word has been lost too often in the Church. The Bible has not been explained so much as it has been explained away. We must turn back to the Word of the Lord, or continue to walk in darkness and distress.

The impairment of faith in divine revelation has been followed most naturally by prevalent lawlessness. When the laws of God are despised, we need not be surprised that the laws of man are set at naught.

It is especially notable and distressing that the sanctity of human life is minified by the excessive concern for the acquisition of mere money and the things which money can buy. We see a new profession arising, called kidnapping, and it is ready to defy all laws, state and national, in order to get large sums of money as ransoms for its victims. The men of greatest wealth find it necessary to have their children guarded against this daily threat which besets them; and yet the men of largest wealth in our financial centers have set the example of the inordinate love of money, which inflames kidnapers and all others who follow in this train of mammon.

Closely akin to and allied with kidnapping is the mania for gambling. The places of stock gambling are crowded by both men and women, and the tables of private gambling are past numbering.

Murdering for money is a matter of daily occurrence. To slay a human being, in order to snatch treasure from the victim's hands, scarcely excites more horror than the killing of an insect. Human life is held so cheap that its sacrifice for money no longer startles the public mind, and the acquittal of murderers, secured by unworthy practitioners of law, awakens little or no indignation.

Many other manifestations of disorder in the moral life of the nation might be mentioned. Prosperous times promoted these disorders and hard times have not corrected them. They cannot be corrected by any devices of government, however ingenious or strongly enforced. The difficulty lies deeper than in mere outward conditions; it is located in the hearts of the people; and the people must be regenerated in order to secure any real reformation of external conditions.

The supreme recovery act, therefore, which our country needs is a revival of religion of continental extent. Nothing less than such a great and pervasive regenerating force will secure the real recovery required for the nation's welfare.

Of course, multitudes engaged in this frenzy of disorder look upon religion as a matter of indifference, if not as a thing of fanaticism. They do not wish any cleansing process within themselves, but some financial relief for themselves. They want something done for them by the government rather than something done in them by the Holy Spirit.

This is no new delusion. Into the same snare the nations have fallen throughout the centuries.

In the days, when our Saviour appeared in the flesh, the nation to which he belonged taught that it needed only the expulsion of the Romans from its territory to bring every form of good. The Jewish people did not see that the trouble was in their hearts, not in their circumstances; they failed to perceive that the establishment of the Kingdom of God was of far more importance than their deliverance from Imperial Rome. Their priests and Levites (as many preachers in our own day) were chiefly concerned about outward conditions rather than the inward needs of the nation's life.

In like manner today multitudes of men in the pulpit are crying for laws rather than promoting life through the life-giving Gospel. But we have more laws than we observe. What is really needed, and most urgently needed, is the recovery of religious life, issuing from our life-giving Redeemer.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE AND THE CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

By Rev. Henry Bascom Hines

I have had much pleasure, through the year, in reading the discussions on the finances of the Church, and especially on the Conference Collections and the "Special Drives." I wish that I had time and space to quote from some of them, but the facts are to the effect that

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE HAS A GREAT RESPONSIBILITY ahead of it, in the adjustments of our Benevolences. The action taken at the next session will mean much toward our continued progress or toward a further setback. The psychology involved in the method of taking our Benevolences has as great an influence on our Church finances as does the "Depression," and, even though the depression is soon to be overcome, the Church will still suffer a great loss in its finances, in its membership and in its moral status, unless some improvements are made in our financial system.

We took one of the greatest steps forward when we gave our laymen such broad representation in the management of our Church affairs, but, through that fact, they stand at the lever of control in our financial system. The local church is entirely subject to the pleasure of the laymen in receiving its financial support for the overhead expenses and for the local budget.

Our General Church has had just cause to complain, during the past few years, of the great loss of membership. My experience on the statistical force, for several years, has brought me face to face with the seriousness of the problem in its different phases. My experience as a pastor has caused me to have to grapple with the other angles of the great problem.

We pastors stand between two scorching fires—the lawmakers and the supervising agents of the law on one side and the local officers and the church membership on the other side, and these two fires burn pretty hot these days most all the time.

Now, as to the psychology and the remedy: The General Conference usually asks for nearly twice what it expects to receive, hoping that the larger asking will produce a large receiving, but the result is the reverse. The Local Board receives its apportionment, and, in its astonishment and resentment, it throws up its hands, and says: "Why no, we can't pay that much!" And the result is, they are discouraged in the beginning, and are satisfied to bring one-fourth or a little better; whereas if the amount were about one-half the stipulated figures, the exact amount of the expectancy, the response would be, "Yes, we can do that," and most every fellow would go to work expecting to bring it up. Therefore, the result would be more money, easier money and a finer spirit.

Then, the laymen know that these overhead expenses are based on the amount of the pastor's salary, together with the number of members in the church, so why proceed to reduce the pastor's salary and to purge the roll of membership. The pastor can counsel against the undue purging of the roll, which counsel may be partially heeded or altogether heeded, but he can have nothing to say about the reduction of his salary. Sometimes the pastor is asked to submit to a reduction in salary on condition that he will be paid a bonus to make up for the reduction in salary so that a reduction in overhead expenses may be obtained. Since the annual revenue, making up the Conference Collections, has been reduced it has been found necessary to put on so many extra "drives" that the year is filled with financial intensiveness, and the people become so vexed that the income is being shortened at all points in the line. May we not look to the next General Conference to eliminate some of the special drives, and to reduce the budget to the amount which we really expect to get? Then, the revenues will increase all along the line, the membership will be better preserved and the moral tone will possess a healthier vitality.

We know that the General Conference needs every dollar that it asks for, but it does not expect to get that much; therefore, it makes out its expense schedule for a much smaller amount, an amount corresponding to what it expects to get. Let us ask for the expectancy, and the fires of enthusiasm and confidence will burn towards the accomplishment of the full task.

We love the cultural processes for better financial support, better morality and better spirituality; and we love to conduct them the year around; but when we are putting on a cultural period for a special drive, and every one recognizes that fact, it is bound to lose much of its force. Pastor and people concentrated all the time to a general cultural campaign for a greater salvation, for a richer kingdom, for a fuller accomplishment of God's will within the lives of His people!

Shall we not, then, put ourselves, with full strength, to the task of getting our full budgets for this year and for the present time conditions, and, then, in the same spirit of progress and determination let us have the needed changes brought about at the next session of the General Conference.

Lake Providence, La.

THE PASSING OF MRS. L. M. LIPS-COMB

By Rev. W. S. Shipman

I feel that I should speak gently and walk softly. A gentle, sweet spirit has been taken from us; so quickly was the tent taken down, folded and laid away. We can but see the shining light as we look toward the upward way. While we see the light of her trail we look about us and make the inquiry, Is it a fact that she has gone? Alas it is too true; we shall see her face no more until we see it in our Father's house.

She was a true woman in all the relations of life. She seemed to love everybody. For nearly forty years I had had the privilege of knowing her, and calling her friend, and if she ever spoke evil of anyone I do not recall it.

As a wife I am quite sure she was all any man could expect, or deserve. She had reservations of sunshine for the drab days, for "into every life some rain must fall." When her husband's heart was tired and burdened with the strong currents of the world, and the cares of the Church, and turned his face toward the home circle, he knew that there was an eye that brightened at his coming, and brighter when he came.

She often put the rhythm of her thoughts in verse and sang for the weary world.

Her joy was in serving others, and dispensing good cheer.

As a mother, because of the tenderness of her very nature, maybe she was too indulgent.

Her living among friends and loved ones was her loudest admonition; she endeavored to train the young vines about the cross. Her success is daily manifest in the fine young lives that went out from under her tender touch and gentle voice.

More and more will this be appreciated as these young lives push further and further out into that untried sea looking for an unknown shore. Doubtless mother taught them that there was only ONE who could rightly direct the frail little boats. Dear children, you will often fancy you hear the same sweet voice speaking to you in the midst of the storm of life, saying the sea is wild and the breakers are many, but your pilot knows the shore line, and you can make a safe landing.

Lambert, Miss., October 2, 1933.

WHAT I EXPECT OF MY CHURCH PAPER

By Rev. T. F. King

The question I have asked refers to the contents of the paper and not to quality and style. It is foolish and unjust to think about improved appearance when the paper is so financially crippled. But with the limited means that the paper possesses, I am taking the liberty of offering a few suggestions. I am writing, of course, as a reader, and as a reader I ask, What is it that I expect in my church paper?

1. I want news of my Conference, and in this respect I am convinced that the Advocate is trying to supply too large a territory (but please, Mr. Editor, don't ask me what to do about it). However, the Advocate does render excellent news service; but I have always felt that the individual pastor hates to send in news about his work because he has an idea that the brethren will think he is bragging.

2. In my church paper, I would like to read one devotional article each week. I am not thinking about a sermon that some brother has preached, and that he feels must be printed. What I have in mind is a short article, just a paragraph or two, but something that will lift my mind up to God and make me pray. Don't you think, Mr. Editor, that you could leave out something and find room for a devotional article—an article written right out of the depths of a man's soul? We seem to need it so much in these days.

3. I want my paper to stand for the great things of the faith. For example, in the September 21 issue, I notice that you comment on the stand of a young candidate for the ministry in his opposition to war, and in your remarks you state that, "Regardless of our method for dealing with the war problem we do find something here essential to any ministry," etc. But all this does not tell me what my church paper thinks about this question. What stand is the church taking? What does the Advocate think about it? Are you for war, or against it? If you are against it, then let us know. Tell us plainly in big letters that the New Orleans Christian Advocate is utterly and absolutely opposed to war as being un-Christian, and that you positively favor the stand that this young man has taken. I want a paper that has a backbone, and that stands for something big. Everybody who has heard me preach a few times knows where I stand in this matter; but, for the life of me, I cannot tell yet what the attitude of the Advocate is. What about it, Mr. Editor? Either war is wrong, and against Christ, or it can be made righteous; which is it? Where does the Advocate stand?

And so I might go on; but I have said enough. But we are facing big issues, and awful problems, and, as Bishop Candler has said recently, "We are either going to have a Christian world, or no world at all." Some of us are up in the front line for the sake of the Kingdom of God; and personally, as you know, I have sacrificed citizenship for the sake of my Lord, and occasionally we would like a little backing. We get lonesome at times. Come up into the front line with us and get in the fight. It's a glorious fight, and we need your help.

BUGS

There are bugs that I like. Maybe you don't like bugs—bugs of any kind. You just have an aversion for bugs. You have no interest in the "creeping things" that God made. They give you the "creeps." Where the writer of Genesis speaks of "creeping thing," I always think of bugs. This, of course, is unreasoned. I just thought of them the first time I read it and have been thinking that way ever since. The word seemed to suggest bugs. Some bugs (about all of them, I suppose), fly as well as creep. An alligator creeps. A baby creeps. These are not bugs.

But we shall not fall out about these details. All who like bugs will get on with me. Those who do not will not have to take up the matter with me. I meet these on other levels.

Of course, I should be a little more discriminate in my use of the word, "bugs." There are some things that fall into that category that gather little admiration from me. I am not strong for ants. They are too meddlesome. They go places they have no business. Howbeit, they have survived the centuries while the huge dinosaurs that once stalked the country have passed away, notwithstanding their great size and strength. Furthermore, the Wise Man urges the sluggard and others of us to go to school to the ant and learn wisdom. Wisdom is a virtue to be prized both because of its value and scarcity.

I know nothing about bugs from a scientific standpoint. I am no entomologist, therefore handicapped by technical and unpronounceable names for my bug friends. There may not be much in a name, but I certainly should lose much of my interest in bugs if I were forced to identify them by those highbrow labels.

I find bugs wrought into the symphony of the seasons. They come at certain periods of the year, like wild flowers. In my memory I have them connected with the seasons of the year.

I like spring-bugs and mellow-bugs. (If any reader is unable to locate these bugs, a personal letter will bring more detailed information). A beautiful spring bubbled at the foot of the hill upon which my boyhood home stood. At certain seasons of the year spring-bugs came to the spring. His particular shape and position on top of the water always excited my interest and curiosity. It was such a thrill as Columbus must have felt when he saw land that I felt when I discovered that this bug swam and floated upon his back. (You do not believe this? Go to the spring-bug, thou doubter, and learn.)

The mellow-bug. What boy in the "old swimming hole" has failed to meet him? They go in beehives, schools, crowds, groups, herds, gangs, flocks, according to your wish. Mellow, yes they are mellow. Did you never scoop up a few with your hand and smell of them? Then you have missed something it is almost too late for you to enjoy.

I was always bothered about how these friends of mine got from place to place. Did they crawl all that distance? Ah, no. This was my second discovery. One day I scooped up one each of these. There they lay floundering on the leaves for awhile. Then all was still. I was sure that death was soon to follow. My conscience smote me. But surely two bugs less would not materially change the destiny of the world and they might help, by their deaths, the destiny of a boy. Eureka! A slight motion of the body. A tiny slit down the center of the back from stem to stern. Then! Then the bugs cracked open. Wings, filmy and fine, were spread, and away they went, navigating the air as readily as the water. Amphibious. Ah, I did not intend to use hard words.

One reason the above-mentioned bugs are regarded by me as friends, these periods of investigation: at the old spring saved me from the monotony of those long periods at the end of a hoe-handle along the long cotton rows.

I like grasshoppers. Yes, I know those damaging reports that have been circulated on them. Their part in history is not so enviable. But I like the way certain members of the tribe can suspend themselves in mid-air about four feet from the ground out yonder in the middle of the cotton field, fluttering their wings and chattering a strange Indian chant, weird and rhythmical. They hop. That helps to account for their name. That is their regular mode of locomotion. But this aerial performance is something special. O, yes, I know they chew tobacco. But better let them chew than men.

I like bumble-bees—some bumble-bees. I have special reference to the ones with a white spot in the forehead. I care not for the other varieties. Their contacts with me have been unpleasant. When you see a white-headed bumble-bee buzzing in a single spot for minutes at the time you may be sure that spring is coming in earnest. He is as fixed in my memory as the stars in the sky. What worthwhile boy has not moved quietly up behind one of these fellows and with a quick swipe scooped him up? And did you tie a thread to his leg and let him buzz at the end of it for your entertainment? A greater thrill than flying a kite.

I like katy-dids. They come along in June, you know. Some say if you will go and put your hand on the tree in which they insist so steadily that "Katy-did" they will stop. I did not have the courage to make the test, as they sing at night. Perhaps it was some great thing that Katy did. Who wants them to stop, anyhow? They do not chirp in the daytime much except in the woods, where it is more or less dark.

I like the yellow butterfly that appears in late August. Have you noticed him? He is flying eastward and comes not back. He will retrace his course for a short way to take a few hasty sips from the cup of a flower, but soon he is on his way. He is a harbinger of autumn. Some say that certain days after his coming and going there will be frost. Of course that is so. At least frost has always come after they have passed.

I like lightning-bugs—fire-flies, if you like. But for me, lightning-bugs. Something in a name. Have you ever noticed them at dusk in early summer after a warm shower of rain? Just look out across that old cotton field. Like many stars blinking and blinking, breaking the night into sparkling blackness, while the chuck-will calls from the edge of the clearing, breaking the night into sound and silence. (I like birds, too).

I like another bug. I am not sure of his name. He looks like a locust, and I would call him that, but there are some doubters. Some call him "Jolly fly," some "dry fly." I am against flies, so don't much like that name. But the name doesn't seriously matter. To me he is known by his season and his song. Usually in August he begins. You will hear him crying, "we-u, we-u, we-u," late in the evening on into September. When he calls you may know that summer is waning and wild geese will soon be going south. He sings as days shorten and color begins to mount to the leaves.

I like crickets. Of all my bug friends, to whom I have erected this little monument of appreciation, the cricket has made most enviable history for himself. Yea, he has found for himself not only a place on the hearth; he has climbed or hopped or sung his way into literature. Do you know of anything so gripping, so captivating as the strumming of the crickets on those cool nights when frosts have loosened the acorns and they begin to let loose and fall when there is no wind moving?

Eat holes in clothes? Ah, well. There are always pessimists. You could spare him a coat or a pair of stockings occasionally and still he would be poorly paid for his song. And if you have never paused to hear a cricket sing, all the coats in the world will fail to cover the nakedness and poverty of your soul.

"When I come from the country
I shall miss the pure, sweet air,
And I shall grieve for many things
That make it pleasant there.

"I shall miss the acorns dropping
Upon the roof at night,
And the miracle of morning,
When the sun is soft and bright.

"But the cricket on the hearth—
It almost breaks my heart
To think that we two troubadours
Shall ever have to part."

LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY AND THE WESLEY FOUNDATION

By Joe Brown Love

There will be approximately 300 Methodist students in L. S. U. this year. The Wesley Foundation, which is the Methodist student organization, will provide an ample opportunity for these to participate in and to benefit from a meaningful church program while they are in college. The First Methodist Church of Baton Rouge is cooperating with the General Board of Christian Education in making available a university pastor as a special worker for the university and the young people of the church. Also they will attempt to furnish such facilities and program as will be most beneficial. On Tuesday, September 26, the church gave a banquet for the students, with an attendance of 175. Dr. J. M. Smith, president of the University and Dr. Irby C. Nicholls, chairman of the Board of Stewards, were the principal speakers. The people of the church provided transportation from the campus to the church for this banquet, as well as for each Sunday morning and evening.

Many of the Methodist students registered in the university live at home in the vicinity of Baton Rouge and so continue to attend their own churches. Of the others a large percentage have attended at least one church service during the two weeks since the opening of the university. The Wesley Foundation or Young People's Department has an enrollment of 200 and many of the others have attended the regular services or the banquet at the church. Special student classes have been organized and the evening young people's program is designed to meet the variety of need and interest found in such a student group, worship, recreation, Bible Study and various educational and inspirational features are included in the total program.

that is to dawn with repeal we have seen no provision for control. For let it not be forgotten that the wets even have acknowledged the evils of liquor. We now find the wets showing great interest in control. They are at every counter that offers any type of control trying to select the particular kind suited to our country. Prohibitionists are betraying little interest in the matter.

What does it mean? It means just this: With the passing of prohibition the dries again take the offensive, and even now the wets are being compelled to take the defensive.

As we face the problem of control we need to go back and face some facts that remain facts regardless of prohibition or repeal. Two important ones will continue with us for some time. First, liquor itself defies control. The very nature of alcohol is to break down control. When taken into the system it begins to dismiss all the safeguards and to dismantle all moral fortifications. A God-given nervous system relaxes and physical out-lawry and disorder announce that anarchy has been set up as the state of things. Second, those who handle liquor are of the same character as liquor. They partake of its nature. The vast majority of those who engage in the liquor business abandon regard for law and order. The sacredness of the law becomes a washed out issue.

These two facts make efforts at control a farce. It was this that the late Senator Carmack of Tennessee observed and led him to say that the saloon business cannot be reformed, therefore it must be destroyed. Of course he did not mean merely the institution of the saloon. He meant the sale of liquor. This being the case, we are unable to muster any optimism with regard to any proposed control. We feel that all of them are foredoomed to failure.

Let us take a look at this matter of control.

The wets have promised us that the saloon must not return. But what do they offer as a substitute or improvement? One great prohibitionist has already spoken quite frankly of his preference for the saloon to what it appears that we shall have in its place. He says that the saloon was marked as such. Children might avoid it. Now it appears that drug stores, grocery stores, and restaurants will be dispensers of liquor. In the city of New Orleans legitimate restaurant keepers complain that every place where beer is now sold has become an eating place as well. Hence the restaurant business suffers. Will not those beer joints sell hard liquor? How is the sale of liquor to be isolated and so advertised? In other words we seem destined to see liquor made respectable.

We have been promised that the release of beer and stronger drinks would come to the relief of the budget. It is to be a measure for revenue. How can this be? If it is very materially to effect revenue it will have to be sold at a price that will cause bootlegging to continue to thrive. This defeats another promise, for, say the wets, repeal means the end of the bootlegger.

We have been promised that repeal will reduce crime. Prohibition, say the wets, let loose upon the country such crimes as were never known before. Repeal will make people law-abiding. But it is not laws about liquor that make people law-abiding, it is the liquor.

We have been promised that dry territory will be respected. We all fail to see how that can be done when we think of the improved highways and aeroplanes and the radio. And we remember how dry territory was respected and protected before we had national prohibition. Some of us were so foolish as to think that the attitude toward dry territory was one of the main reasons for national prohibition. Were we wrong?

We have been promised that liquor and politics will be divorced and that that alliance of death and agreement with hell will nevermore curse our existence. Liquor and politics can no more be divorced than the Siamese twins. When severed they both die.

Wets, we have heard your promises. We now call upon you to make good. You offer us something better than prohibition. And we respect our citizenship enough to cooperate with you in everything that promises to do that for the country.

But we keep hearing the echo of that late Senator: The liquor business is not subject to reform; therefore it must be destroyed.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Mr. S. V. Wall, Greenville District lay leader, commends the Advocate's efforts to keep the people aware of the menace of liquor.

Rev. J. W. Faulk, pastor at Abbeville, La., is projecting plans for a Sunday school annex. More than half the money required has been subscribed.

Thirty additions, twenty on profession of faith, with the outlook for closing the year in great shape, is the word from Victoria, Miss., Rev. W. I. White, pastor.

Rev. J. B. Grambling, pastor at Mer Rouge, La., accompanied by Wallace White, Louisiana State Worker of the Young People's Division, were appreciated callers at the office recently.

Rev. E. M. Shaw, pastor Byhalia, Miss., reports good progress on his charge and tells of the excellent work of his presiding elder, Rev. W. L. Stormont, Grenada-Sardis District.

Rev. R. C. Nanney, pastor Kossuth, Miss., is closing out his twelfth year as a member of Conference, having served three charges. He tells of advancement on his work.

A revival in which Rev. J. B. Grambling, pastor at Mer Rouge, La., is doing the preaching is in progress at Delhi, La., October 4-13. Rev. Carl F. Lueg is the pastor.

Rev. H. C. Norsworthy, local preacher of Hattiesburg, Miss., reports good work at Broad Street where Rev. R. H. Clegg is pastor. A number of good revivals have been held in the section.

Rev. W. S. Shipman, over at Lambert, Miss., is looking forward to shaking the hands of his brethren again in the Conference at Water Valley. He has been in the ministry more than fifty years.

From Mr. L. P. Brown, great layman of Meridian, Miss., we receive words of commendation for the editorial, "Can the Pastor Be Saved?" Brother Brown is nearing his eighty-fourth birthday.

Rev. Jas. T. Harris, our pastor at Rayville, La., is in Baptist Hospital, New Orleans. It is hoped that shortly he may be making rapid progress toward recovery. Address your letter, or card, to New Orleans, care of Baptist Hospital.

We rejoice with and congratulate Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Meridian District Lay Leader, who says, "The Meridian District has already reached 100% on the observance of Layman's Day, and some charges had it at each church."

"Sixteen additions, four active Sunday schools, four active Missionary Societies, and three fine Young People's Divisions doing active work; and the Lord has been gracious to us this year," is the heartening word from Rev. E. M. Sharp, pastor Rienzi, Miss.

Rev. G. D. Anders, well known to many of us, formerly of Biloxi, Miss., is now with his daughter, Mrs. B. L. Sutherland, wife of the presiding elder of the Jackson District. Brother Anders' health is very delicate. Have you written him that letter?

Good meetings are reported by Rev. E. D. Hutchinson, pastor on Kreole, Miss., charge. Seventeen infants have been baptized during the year, thirty-two members have been received on profession of faith, ten by letter, and a class of twenty remain to be received.

Rev. E. S. Lewis has had a very successful year at Winona, Miss. Brother Lewis has served a number of the larger stations as well as circuits of his Conference. His experience as presiding elder has been extensive and varied. This is his first year in this important charge at Winona.

Rev. J. T. McCafferty, at Kosciusko, Miss., has a difficult task to face in the closing of this year. That town has been deeply hurt financially during the past few years. Every effort will be made by the pastor and his loyal laymen to carry forward the work of the church to a very successful closing of the year.

Let something be done about it. Rev. T. A. Ferguson, pastor at Riverview, Fla., renews his subscription, keeping in touch with his old friends. He sounds off with, "Come down to see me and pull the fruit fresh from the trees, and you will see just how fine it is to live in Florida." It is this last statement that requires attention.

Rev. Jasper L. Smith, pastor of Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, Miss., is doing the preaching in a revival meeting at Montrose, Miss., which opened Wednesday night, October 4, and will continue through Wednesday night, October 11. "He is doing good preaching and we trust for a gracious revival," writes Rev. Geo. H. Jones, pastor.

We wish we could mention all those who have been sending in such good lists of subscriptions. Their records will be found on the Score Board. We thank all who participated in the campaign. Mr. B. M. Stevens, Richton, Miss., gives credit to the pastor, Rev. W. A. Terry, for the long list from that charge.

"Allied Youth" is ready to lead out in an all important program of education against all forms of liquors. The platform is: "We stand for the liberation through education of the individual and society from the handicaps of beverage alcohol." Do you know about this non-sectarian organization?

The New Orleans Standard Training School, with Dr. J. H. Hicks, Southern Methodist University; Dr. D. B. Raulins, editor New Orleans Christian Advocate; Mrs. B. F. McMahon, Mrs. W. W. Holmes and Miss Freddie Henry, as faculty, is being held at Rayne Memorial Church, October 8-13. This is the thirteenth session.

Here is a story about the Eightieth Anniversary Campaign. I was talking with a presiding elder who had "stretched" himself for the Advocate. Calling one of his preachers by name he said, "He has received $300 salary this year. He promised five subscriptions as his quota, saying that if he did not secure them he would pay the five dollars. He secured eight subscriptions."

"Things are moving along nicely up here. We are in the midst of a financial campaign with our goal 'everything in full.' So far we are quite confident of reaching that goal." That is Rev. John Rasmussen, pastor at Bunkie, La. Is there anything that gives a pastor just exactly the thrill that comes when he can stand "in his place" at Conference and say, "Everything in full. Bishop?"

A good report comes from the Florence, Miss., charge. Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook, pastor, has had the following pastors with him in revival meetings: Dr. J. Lloyd Decell, Rev. H. A. Wood and Rev. F. J. Jones. There have been thirty-two accessions to the church. A good report will be made at Conference.

Rev. J. A. Wells, successful evangelist-pastor of Jackson, Miss., began a "Family Revival" at the Court house in Hazlehurst, Miss., on Monday, October 9. The pastor, Rev. W. O. Sadler, requests that the readers of the Advocate pray earnestly for the success of this important meeting.

Rev. L. P. Wasson our pastor at Clarksdale, Miss., is leading that large congregation to the close of his second successful year. Clarksdale is one of the thriving little cities on the Mississippi river, in the heart of the Delta. Methodism was on the ground as soon as the people came there and we have had a representative congregation there all through the years.

How good it is to hear from Rev. Geo. H. Thompson, pastor Yazoo City, Miss., again. A few disasters have struck the community during the year with two for the church building. The damages have been repaired and climaxed with a revival conducted by Rev. B. L. Sutherland, presiding elder of the Jackson District. Twenty-nine members have been received into the church with nine others to follow.

The congregation at Amite, La., has planned revival services for October 22-29. The pastor, Rev. R. S. Walton, will be assisted by the neighboring Methodist pastors. The paved highway that runs through Tangipahoa Parish has brought five pastoral charges very close together, and the pastors of these charges, assisted by other nearby pastors, have maintained a Ministers' Association for two years.

In addition to his cultivation of the "moral vineyard" Rev. J. W. Lee, pastor at Colfax, La., has grown a most excellent garden. His description of it makes you reach for your hat and start up that way. He has successfully triumphed over Johnson and coco grass. And just now beans and tomatoes stand where once the enemy held sway. And there are rows of canned vegetables and fruit on the shelves.

The congregations at Water Valley, where the North Mississippi Conference will convene November 2, is making plans to entertain the Conference in a very hospitable manner. The Conference has met in that city in 1870, 1879, 1895, 1908, 1922. This time they plan to serve the noon meal in luncheon fashion to the Conference in a body at some convenient down-town location. The fellowship from such a method is very fine indeed.

The Men's Bible Class of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, New Orleans, together with the Board of Stewards and laymen of the church, will conduct a Laymen's Revival, beginning Sunday, October 29. Mr. Wm. H. Black, Cashier of the Federal Reserve Bank of this city and teacher of the Bible Class, which is the largest of its kind in New Orleans, has been selected to do the preaching. More than sixty laymen have volunteered to cooperate in every way to assure the success of the meeting. Rev. B. F. Rogers, pastors this live congregation.

The fourth Sunday in October will be observed as "Home Coming Day" at Tranquil Church on the Becker Circuit, located between Aberdeen and Nettleton. Contrary to many rural churches this church has kept a good history of its activities from its organization. The first pastor at this church was a well known Methodist preacher by the name of James Hampton. He lived in Calhoun county and traveled over all that territory. This circuit rider was well known for his effective singing, praying and exhorting. His delight, until his death at the home of relatives at Kilmichael, Miss., 1903, at the advanced age of eighty-seven, was to sit out on the porch with one of the small hymnals in his hand and sing to his heart's content the grand old hymns of the church.

Those of our territory who knew Rev. Hal T. Cunningham, formerly of North Mississippi, will be interested in the following item taken from the Kerrville (Texas) Times: "An interesting meeting was held at the Methodist church Sunday night in honor of Rev. H. T. Cunningham, the occasion being the conferring upon him of the degree of doctor of divinity by the College of Chaplains of Los Angeles, California. Mr. Cunningham is a native of North Mississippi, and came to Texas many years ago. While in his teens he was a student at the A. and M. College, Starkville, Miss., afterwards completing a four-year course at Cooper Institute, a classical school operating under a state charter, and the year following was a member of the faculty, teaching the classes in Latin and Greek. Later he attended Emory College in Georgia. Still later he attended Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., where he received his A. B. degree. Since his retirement from active service three years ago, he and Mrs. Cunningham have been living in their cottage home here on the Methodist Assembly Grounds." Doctor Cunningham is a brother of the late Rev. Jas. E. Cunningham. The father was a member of the North Mississippi Conference and is buried at Tupelo. Rev. Hal T. Cunningham, Jr., is pastor at St. Luke's Church, Houston, Texas Conference. Brother Cunningham is now a superannuate of the West Texas Conference. He speaks with appreciation of W. H. Saunders, R. H. B. Gladney, W. L. Duren, J. R. Countiss, H. T. Carley, and others.

OUR SCHOOLS

Centenary College reports the best enrollment since 1928. Work is getting under way smoothly and the year opens with great encouragement. Whitworth College reports a ten percent increase in attendance. We overheard Dr. Winfield say, "We took eighty-five to the World's Fair, staged our pageant, 'A Century of Progress in the Higher Education of Women,' in the Court of States. The performance was witnessed by several thousand people and was broadcast to several thousand more. The management of the States and Features Division of the Fair said they regarded it as the most successful performance that had been put on by any state."

HIGH POINTS OF EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY CAMPAIGN

To Dr. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, goes the laurel wreath for leading all the districts in our territory. His total was 306 subscriptions. Then to Rev. Otto Porter, presiding elder of the Seashore District, goes a rosette of blue ribbons with long streamers for second place, with 211 subscriptions. Better than honorable mention goes to Rev. H. G. Hawkins, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, in third place with 135 subscriptions. We hear these elders saying, "Divide the honors with our pastors and their helpers," and it shall be.

The Mississippi Conference led the van with 1013 subscriptions, Louisiana following with 722 and North Mississippi with 499. Total 2234.

A chair on the platform and a big cheer for his excellent work go to Rev. C. C. Clark, pastor at Waynesboro, Miss., for the largest individual list. His number was 43. Rev. W. A. Terry and Mr. H. M. Stevens, Richton and Piave charge, come up second with 37, while Rev. J. B. Cain, Main Street, Hattiesburg, is only about a half a nose behind with 36 to his name. These three largest individual lists come from churches in the Hattiesburg District.

Other pastors securing more than 30 subscriptions each are: Dr. R. H. Harper, First Church, Baton Rouge, who was assisted by H. E. Blackwell, 33; Rev. W. B. Aisworth, Picayune, Miss., 31; Rev. J. C. Rousseaux, Many and Zwolle, La., 31. Many pastors, however, though they did not secure as many as 30, went considerably beyond their quotas, and in comparison to size of membership did equally as well as those who secured the larger lists.

Had every charge responded with an average similar to those that did, practically all our indebtedness would have been entirely wiped out.

Again we heartily thank all those participating in our anniversary celebration. The Publishing Committee of the Advocate will meet in the office of the Advocate on Thursday, October 19, following which we will carry an official report of the campaign.

HAVE YOU A SON

In Tulane University, or a daughter in Newcomb College, New Orleans? Then you are interested in their religious welfare and their church relationship while in the city. But who are our Methodist pastors near these two schools?

Dr. W. W. Holmes, 1421 Constantine St., is the pastor of Rayne Memorial Church. Dr. B. F. Rogers is pastor of Carrollton Avenue, and his address is 1125 Fern Street. Dr. M. S. Monk, 1125 Eleonore Street, is pastor of Parker Memorial Church. These are our pastors who serve the territory adjacent to these colleges. Drop them a line telling them the name of your boy or girl and giving them the address where they may be found.

SAY IT IN WRITING

Letters and cards are coming every day telling about some student from the old home town who is in college at the State Normal. We appreciate this thoughtfulness on the part of pastor friends, and we urge other pastors who have young people here to do the same. This information enables us to give many of these fine young workers a place of service in our church organizations. Keep on telling us.

MISS RUBY NEILL CALLED HOME

Dear Brother Raulins: Miss Ruby Neill, sister of Rev. J. L. Neill, of Gulfport, and niece of Rev. M. L. Burton, also of Gulfport, died Wednesday afternoon, October 4, in the Vicksburg Sanatorium. Funeral services were held in Montrose Friday afternoon, with Rev. T. Barton West and Rev. Geo. H. Jones, Presbyterian and Methodist pastors at Montrose, officiating. Beautiful tribute was paid by two laymen. P. L. Blackwell, of Newton, read a newspaper clipping from the Clarksdale Register concerning her fine character and sterling qualities. Mr. Heidelberg, Superintendent of Clarksdale, Miss., School System, spoke quite effectively concerning Miss Neill, who had taught in the Clarksdale schools for the past fourteen years.

She is survived by her mother, Mrs. C. F. Neill, of Montrose, and by five brothers—Rev. John Lambert, of Gulfport; George T., school superintendent of Woodville, Miss.; M. Luther, of Montrose; Lamar, of Ellisville, and Alex, of Texas.

Twelve ministers were present at the funeral, including four from the Mississippi Coast—Otto Porter, J. L. Power, G. E. Allen, and Roy Wolfe. Also J. W. Thompson, Bay Springs; C. M. Crossley, Newton; J. L. Smith, Vicksburg.

Sincerely,

GEO. H. JONES.

ATTENTION, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE PASTORS

Arrangements have recently been made with the business manager of the Advocate to print a goodly number of Benevolent Collection Envelopes for use in assisting our pastors in raising their Conference claims.

These envelopes can be had without cost by addressing a card to Mr. C. M. Chalmers, care New Orleans Christian Advocate, 512 Camp St., New Orleans. In writing, state clearly the number of envelopes desired, name of charge, and person to whom envelopes are to be forwarded.

J. G. SNELLING,

President Conference Board of Missions.

COMMITTEE ON ADMISSIONS, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Committee on Admissions, North Mississippi Conference, will meet in Water Valley Methodist Church on Wednesday p. m., 2 o'clock, November 1. It is imperative that all candidates be present at this session.

C. L. ROGERS, Chairman.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Some of the brethren of the Mississippi Conference, very correctly sensing the fact that the entertainment of an Annual Conference is no easy task these days, have written that they plan to bring their wives with the understanding that they pay for their entertainment. In order to accommodate these and other brethren who desire to do likewise, Dr. Winfield, President of Whitworth College, says he can give room and board in the dormitories for the wives, provided they bring their own bed linen and blankets. This applies only to those not regular delegates or Board members. Nor does this apply to those personally invited by some hostess.

The two hotels and restaurants have also promised to give reduced rates.

Your brother,

Brookhaven, Miss

O. S. LEWIS.

THE CREED OF DEAN INGE

"We stand for theism against pantheism, for belief in a God who is transcendent as well as immanent, the creator of the world, not a being organic with it, growing with its growth and dying at its inevitable death. We stand for belief in a Divine Christ, a living and indwelling Spirit, once incarnate in Jesus of Nazareth, but the same yesterday, today, and forever. We stand for citizenship in a heavenly country as against that secularity which Professor Gardner has said, is the one temper with which Christianity can make no terms. We stand for discipline and self-denial against the indulgence of every appetite. We stand for the family against all who would destroy it. We stand for peace and good will between nations and between classes. We condemn greed and acquisitiveness in all sections of society. We believe in democracy as a form of society—that is to say in equality of consideration; we regard it merely as an experiment to be judged by its results. And we believe that disinterestedness is the supreme social virtue."—Exchange.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Sardis-Grenada District

Led by the presiding elder, Rev. W. L. Stormont, we held recently a series of educational institutes in the Sardis-Grenada District. All of the pastors but six were present and more than 100 other workers, despite the very busy season of the year. Rev. O. W. Moerner, of the General Board, was with us and gave very helpful advice in the work. Among other things that were done at these meetings, a check up of the work of the year was held. It was revealed that 8 Cokesbury classes have been taught in the district this year, one Standard Training School held at Grenada, 7 daily vacation church schools taught, 3 new Sunday schools organized and many others revived, 12 new Epworth Leagues, or Young People's organizations, organized. In almost every charge there has been an increase in attendance in the Sunday schools and other church work. With six charges not reporting, the district has had over 300 additions to the church on profession of faith this year. This district leads the Conference in amount contributed for Sunday School Day and is near the top in the amount contributed to missions in the Sunday school and young people's organizations.

Led by Rev. Roy A. Grisham, the young people's work of the district is forging ahead. There are four active unions in the district now that have regular meetings. This makes it possible for every local church to be in the union. With 12 new organizations this year and with others to follow, it is easy to see that this district is going to stand at the top in this work.

Much credit is due to the able, sympathetic and consecrated leadership of the presiding elder, Rev. W. L. Stormont. The pastors and workers are responding to his leadership and this district will take its place close to the top in every phase of the work of the church.

Marks of Progress

Rev. H. D. Stuydam, of the Macon circuit, has taught a Cokesbury class in every church on his charge. This busy pastor is doing his usual fine work on this charge.

On the Salem and Friendship circuit Rev. Noel Hinson is doing a remarkable piece of work. He has completed a full survey of his charge, organized two new Sunday schools, organized the young people in every church, taught Cokesbury classes in all of his churches, held daily vacation schools in two churches, and good revivals in all of the churches with a large ingathering.

There are plenty of marks of progress on the Mt. Pleasant charge, where Rev. E. F. Tucker is pastor. He has two live Sunday schools well organized, led by active local church boards of Christian education. One of the schools has grown more than 100 per cent this year, having developed a plan for transportation of the people to the church.

From every side there come cheering reports of progress that space will not permit mentioning this time. We are encouraged to go forward by these reports.

Training Schools

During last week a very fine Standard Training School was held at Greenwood First Church. This school was well attended by workers from Greenwood, Itta Bena, Cruger and Schlater. The way had been well prepared for the church by the pastor, Rev. E. H. Cunningham, and his faithful and effective workers.

On the dates of October 15-21 a Standard Training School will be held at Ruleville. This school serves for that part of the Greenwood District. The courses to be offered are: "Christian Education in the Local Church," Rev. R. G. Lord, instructor; "Teaching Children," Prof. P. J. Rutledge, instructor; "A Study of Middle and Later Adolescence," Mrs. W. N. Duncan, instructor.

Your Reports

For the convenience of pastors in making their reports for the year 1 will send out, just after the 20th of this month, a statement giving the amount shown by my records given to Sunday School Day and to Missions, as well as some other items.

Have you reported your vacation school yet? We are anxious to get these reports in order to make up our report for the year. If you need a blank, write me.

We will have charts at Conference showing the record of the charges and districts for the year. Other interesting and helpful exhibits will be shown.

Pray for us and for the work.

R. G. LORD.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Hello! How are you? Since we missed week before last, there's news all over the place. So take notice! We'll try to make it short and snappy.

The first thing that must be told is about the Young People's organization in Natchitoches. Know how they do it in a college town? Here's what was done here: Each of the churches in town gave a party for the young people of their denomination one night during the first week of school. Everybody had a chance to see just who was at college from their church. The Methodists had Uncle Van Carter to lead their good time, and it was a good time! Everybody was invited to come to Sunday school on Sunday—and they came! In the Methodist Church the main auditorium had to be used to seat the crowd. Over one hundred Methodist young people from all over the state—and probably other states—were there, and a group perhaps larger attended church! That's attendance, isn't it! At the close of a most appropriate and effective sermon by Rev. B. C. Taylor, all young people who were members of the church at their home were invited to join as associate members. Thirty joined! The following Sunday election of officers was held, and Obie Hoyt was elected president. What a group! Come up and see us sometimes!

From the Live Wire Union comes news of election of officers, with Dorothy Jones as president and Bernadine Haggart as publicity supt. They decided to really make their name mean something this year. And we're requested to ask if anyone has seen a collie dog, and if you have, please take good care of it, cause, Yee-Whiz, all of 'em love it so! Don't blame us; blame Mig Wolf of Hammond. She started all that!

Speaking of getting blamed, yours truly has really been getting an over share of it since one fateful week when an autobiography of our Conference President was published in this column. Yee-Whiz, he's bigger than me, isn't he? Doesn't that prove that I wouldn't have called him all of those names he called himself? An' it said AUTOBIOGRAPHY, didn't it? An' it was in quotations, wasn't it? All of which simply means that I didn't call him no names; so please quit accusing me of slander!

Back to news—the Grambling Union met at Oakdale, says Happy McRight, to discuss education. Have you tried that "Help-One-Another" idea in your Union? It's good! And maybe you'd like to know how they score for their banner award. It's like this:

Highest attendance Union meeting	50%
75% of Leaguers attending morning service	25%
Mission pledges sent in	15%
Pastor present at Union Meeting	10%

How about it; is your method better, or worse?

Black-Draught For Gas After Meals

"About five years ago I suffered at my stomach quite a good deal," writes Mr. M. H. Venable, of Persia, Tenn. "I would smother, have a lot of gas, and bloat. A friend asked me why I didn't take Black-Draught. I took little doses after meals and my stomach trouble was over and has not come back. Now I only take a dose once in a while."

Why Doctors Favor a Liquid Laxative

A doctor will tell you that the careless choice of laxatives is a common cause of chronic constipation.

Any hospital offers evidence of the harm done by harsh laxatives that drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be controlled. It forms no habit; you needn't take a "double dose" a day or two later.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the average person's bowels regular as clockwork in a few weeks' time. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry. But there is little "convenience" in any cathartic which is taken so frequently, you must carry it with you, wherever you go!

Its very taste tells you Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. All druggists, ready for use, in big bottles. Member N. R. A.

WORLD PEACE

The question comes to us o'er and o'er,
How can we have world peace,
And suffer the carnage of war no more?

Jesus said, in teaching us "the way,"
"Do good to them that hate you
And love your enemy."

This spirit is mightier than the sword,
The spirit of love;

Love, the eternal theme of God's word.
"Peace should be made with all mankind,"

Said Socrates before Jesus came,
Then lived a life to prove his mind
With Jesus' teaching was in tune.

Edith Cavell this spirit did express
When her execution was drawing nigh.
She said: "I must have no bitterness Toward any one; patriotism is not enough."

Almost numberless is the host
Who have this spirit in their hearts.
But yet our nation at any cost
Must keep her sword and armor bright.

Oh, could all rulers know and see
That love is mightier than the sword!
Perhaps we then would have world peace,
And war would be no more.

Somehow we feel the time is near
When this sense of universal need
Will permeate all mankind
Regardless of his creed.
And "nation with nation, land with land,
Unarmed shall live as comrades free;
In every heart and brain shall throb
The pulse of one fraternity."—Editor.

LOUISIANA AVENUE, NEW ORLEANS, CELEBRATES EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY

Members of the congregation of the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church on a recent Sunday joined in celebrating the 80th anniversary of the founding of the church.

At 11 a.m., a special anniversary service was held and an anniversary sermon was delivered by Dr. W. L. Duren, presiding elder of the New Orleans District. At 7:30 p.m., Rev. John Lancaster Williams, pastor of the church, was principal speaker.

The building which housed the first congregation of the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church now stands to the rear of the present church building, and is used for educational purposes, and as a community center.

It was the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church which first carried on social service work in the city, the pastor explained.

"Long before social service work was inaugurated in the city," the pastor said, "our church was carrying on a social service program. The church administered to the poor in our city and to dependent mothers and children in the days when there were no social agencies to help."

During the life and history of the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church, more than 6,000 persons have held membership in the congregation. Many other congregations have started as outgrowths from the original congregation of this church. And during the long course of its history, many distinguished ministers have served as pastors of the church."

FROM PACHUTA CIRCUIT

The Pachuta circuit is composed of five churches. We give half time to Pachuta; three churches, two services each Sunday and two churches one service each month. We have five Sunday schools, three Woman's Missionary Societies and three Young People's Divisions. We have organized one Woman's Missionary Society and one Young People's Division. Quitman, DeSoto and Pachuta charges have organized a Young People's Division Union. Our last meeting was at McKowan Chapel, with above one hundred in attendance.

We have held a meeting at each church with some real good results, especially at Salem, where our presiding elder, Rev. T. J. O'Neill, assisted us. His preaching was extra good and he was very helpful in various other ways.

During the year a number have agreed to erect a family altar. Some have been converted and we have had twenty-five additions to the church.

experience at Camp Kl Ro Li, out from Monroe. They enjoyed a wonderful program, and are raring to go for next summer. About twenty-five or thirty were in attendance. And along with this news Rev. Carl Lueg breaks down with the news! The big day is on the sixteenth of October! What big day? Why, Carl and Margie's wedding, of course! Congratulations to you both! We're pulling for you!

If it's safe to quote Ernest Mickal (oboy!), we'll close with an open letter from him to Louisiana Young People. Here it is—in Ernest's words!

"I have just returned from Alexandria, where the Council of the Louisiana Conference Young People's Organization was in session planning the year's activities for this Conference, and I am highly enthusiastic over the prospects for the coming year.

"Never have I seen a more spirited group of Young People—Young People who are ready and anxious to promote the growth of the youth in this state.

"Particularly am I pleased with the exceptional quality of the District Directors. Young People, your District Directors are capable and willing to help each one of you individually, and I appeal to you—urge you—to use them as much as you can.

"I am expecting great results from the Young People of this Conference, and I know that I shall not be disappointed."

"Yours for service,
"ERNEST MICKAL,"

MISSIONARY BRIEFLET

The fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Soochow Hospital, China, will be celebrated some time in October, 1933. Medical work in Soochow was inaugurated in 1882 with the establishment of a hospital clinic by Dr. (later Bishop) W. R. Lambuth, assisted by Dr. W. H. Park. The hospital was built in 1883 and formally opened in November of that year.

THERE ARE NO NEW HEATHEN TEMPLES

On returning from a trip around the world, a Methodist bishop was met at the pier in New York by a company of newspaper reporters who asked him to state the outstanding impression made on his mind during the trip.

"The outstanding fact is this," declared the bishop, "I belted the globe, but I did not see one new heathen temple, but I saw Christian churches, schools, and hospitals rising everywhere."

There are no new heathen temples because there is no demand for them. The call of the world, even the non-Christian world, is for Christ.—Exchange.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

SUMMER IS GONE. Shortening days with earlier sunsets declare it. And there is, in a sense, a feeling that we have bidden farewell to a friend that we shall see no more. O yes, it was hot and disagreeable, and we remarked many times upon the stifling heat. That is our habit. The weather has to make the subject of conversation many, many times, in season and out. We can lay it on the weather when our stock of information is too poor to discuss other topics.

There will be another summer, of course. The cycle and symphony of the seasons provide for that. But we shall not be the same when another summer comes and goes. Therefore the summer just gone, though we found much fault with it, we feel, has taken something from us that cannot return.

The wayside shrubs, weeds and flowers, have blushed with their blossoms and have borne their seed. In this way God has been accustomed to provide for his woods children of birds and small animals. Consider the birds of the air, said Jesus. They sow not, neither do they reap nor gather into barns. And yet your Heavenly Father feedeth them. Have you seen God going out to feed the birds? He cares for them and us.

The going of summer should cause us to pause, take off our hats, lay down our tools, and seek a quiet and secluded spot for meditation: a kind of mental and spiritual stock-taking and a making of an inventory of life. Haven't we been going a little too fast? Have we not been rushing from engagement to engagement and meeting each with the feeling that we left something behind, and that we were not all there when we arrived? Have we not lost the art of waiting? And is not patience a forgotten virtue?

Summer is gone. Some friends, perhaps, who walked and talked with us and stopped awhile with us in our shade will not be with us when another summer comes. Seasons, years, friends come and go; but God stays. So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.

A BISHOP BALKS. Bishop J. Ralph Magee (Methodist Episcopal Church) of the St. Paul Area declined to serve on Governor Floyd B. Olson's liquor control commission, and gave his reasons in an open letter.

"I have been an ardent dry from my earliest memories," said the bishop. "I have seen tried every scheme that is now advocated. They have all failed more ingloriously than Prohibition ever did. I travel much, and our so-called non-intoxicating beer makes me see each week more drunks, and disgusting near-drunks, than I saw during the entire period of Prohibition.

"The men who have led the people back into this period of debauchery now have the problem of control in their hands, as far as I am concerned, until they have shown the utter falsity of all their pious utterances about temperance, by producing what is destined to be the most debauched age America ever knew.

"I know this looks like poor sportsmanship, but the people have voted to turn this matter over to the wets. I believe in giving the people what they want.

"When within five years they have produced an impossible moral situation, then the much misrepresented and maligned dries will lead our nation step by step out of its shame and ruin to more Prohibition than we have ever had."

I sympathize with Bishop Magee. He has it about right, I suppose. But I am not quite willing to come out of the game, even when the wets are winning. All of the people did not vote to turn this matter over to the wets, even those who voted. And there were many who did not vote at all. We have been caught in a jam. An administration attempting the tasks of recovery and reformation all at the same time has exercised pressure that could not have succeeded in normal times. "I believe in giving the people what they want," says the bishop. Well, I do not. Sometimes we have it to do. We have that kind of government. Sometimes the people want the wrong thing.

Then I shall spend some time in repenting of fumbles of us Prohibitionists. We leaned too strong on legislation, didn't we? And we lost our zeal, put up our tools and our trumpets and went off on a vacation. And I shall do everything I can to alleviate the inevitable that Bishop Magee anticipates. Jesus died for all those fellows who will go staggering home to a wrecked family life. We must stand by.

WALTER LIPPMAN, newspaper correspondent, says that President Roosevelt is attempting two colossal tasks at this time, recovery and reconstruction. He is driving two horses and they have not learned to pull together. And sometimes he uses the whip on one when the other should have it. But let us remember that he has not had very much experience in driving such a team, and let us not forget that we are in the wagon. He didn't promise that he would make a perfect driver. So, as we bounce over these rough places, occasionally tumbling from our plank, let us be conservative with our suggestions and strong with our cooperation. If he goes in the ditch we shall be in the crash. Back-seat driving is bad, even in government.

Let us examine that thing a little. Recovery and Reconstruction. We must admit that either constitutes a formidable undertaking. Two different types of mind are having to be dealt with. The unemployed and others who have been hurt in the crash are crying for relief. And they must have it. Winter is coming on again. And the granaries of many are empty. Their fingers are being mashed; they are caught under the load, and it must be lifted off. They become impatient. They cannot hold out much longer. There must be recovery as rapid as possible. The demand is insistent, immediate, heart-breaking. We cannot wait.

But when we pause a little bit to look around, we ask ourselves, How did we get this way? And, Is this to be expected? Is there no way of avoiding such a mess, such a breakdown? So, during a breathing spell in our relief work, we stroll back down the road to locate the cause of it. If we must put Humpty Dumpty back on the log and make him stay there, let us know how he fell off and why. Upon investigation we discover that the whole system under which we were operating, the road we were traveling, led inevitably, inescapably to this. And even though we patch things up and give relief now, it will all have to be done over a little farther down the road. So we must take a new road.

And there is where the problem of reconstruction and reformation arises. The administration faces a task similar to that of tearing down an old station and building a new one, and all the time keeping the trains moving on schedule with as little dust and noise and confusion as possible.

On the one hand there are those who are blind to anything except the need of immediate relief. They cannot be called upon for much assistance in reconstruction. They may even hinder, or possibly defeat it. On the other hand there are those, the fortunate ones who profited by the old road and the old system, trying to hold up reconstruction by insisting that the old road is all right, and that this accident does not amount to much. But Lawyer Pecora has kept on gouging into them so that we cannot have much faith in their suggestions as to how things should be done.

WHERE DOES THE CHURCH come in? What is its part in salvaging the wreck? Isn't its business rescue and reconstruction? Has it not a big stake in this debacle—that is so deep, depressive and threatening? Will it join the Priest and Levite and pass by on the other side? If it attempts any such method at such a time as this, organized Christianity need not buy a return ticket. It may pass by on the other side, drawing its robes about it, refusing to touch the poor broken and bedeviled civilization because somebody may

PRESIDENT'S GREETINGS TO THE STUDENTS OF CENTENARY COLLEGE

(President Pierce Cline opens his administration and the new college year with the following message to the students).

It is a pleasure to greet you here at the first chapel. A great many of you are unacquainted in a personal way with this institution. I want to remind you that you have not enrolled in just an ordinary college. You have enrolled in a college that has ideals and purposes; that stands for service and culture. We deserve to fail and will fail if we ever stand for anything else. You will be expected to stand for these things and to imitate the spirit of the institution. Nothing I have heard in a long time has been more impressive to me than a statement made by Dr. Sexton some time ago when he said, "I would be happy to know that my bones might rest on the soil of Centenary campus." Former students look back to this campus of hallowed memories with feelings of deep affection. You are in an institution that stands for something and while you are here we want you, too, to stand for something. I would deem it unfair and neglectful of my duty if I failed to tell you that there is but one rule or regulation at Centenary. While here you must be a gentleman or a lady. If you live up to that there will be no restraint placed upon you. You must be loyal to the institution that is endeavoring to serve you. That will be easy when you understand it.

I would like to remind you first that Centenary College was founded by the Methodist Church and remains a church institution, but there is nothing that is narrow or sectarian in our purpose. Our charter says that the children of ministers shall be given a free tuition scholarship, and the children of ministers of every denomination are recognized.

We do not have a law requiring you to attend any church, but we lay emphasis upon the fact that if you are an ideal student you will find the church of your choice and attend it. It is not our desire that you attend the church that founded this college, but the church that you are associated with, and we want you to attend that church on the Sabbath day.

You are at a place where the training to the mind is a primary function. This training takes place mainly in the classroom; not entirely. Every member of the faculty stands ready to help you in every way. No member thinks his work is over when he has met his class. Our purpose is to secure the greatest development of the student; but classroom attendance is necessary; in fact, it will be insisted upon. Strangely enough some students are not in the same mood at college as they would be at a grocery store or a moving picture show. No one thinks of getting a ticket for the theatre and then playing a trick on the management by not appearing when the performance is put on.

Remember this: Every class that you are scheduled to attend is costing somebody fifty cents. Somebody else may be paying for it but it is costing that much just the same and if you are scheduled to attend and are not there you are losing somebody's money. You seldom see anyone arguing with a merchant that is trying to give him value for his money. Frequently you find students who are anxious to pay more for less. Looking at it practically, if good money is spent for your education you should attend classes. If you stay here and keep in good health you will attend. I am a great believer in the absorption process. I confess that I could hardly ever hope to separate a student from this institution even if he were not passing if the records showed that he was there being exposed to it. But having watched from the vantage ground of the Disciplinary Committee, I find that there is a close relationship between failure to attend class and failure to make a "pass." We shall watch that relationship.

Again I would remind you on this opening day that we desire to be fair to all; we desire that the rules of the game be observed by all. We want no short cuts to glory. Above all things we want to teach you to rely upon yourself; we want to teach you responsibilities. Would that we had more responsible citizens in the country today. May Centenary College never graduate any other kind than those who can rely upon themselves and be responsible. To that end it is a law that absolute honesty be observed in class and on examinations. Failure to observe this law hears one and only one penalty—separation from the institution.

Not only do we want absolute honesty and integrity but high standards of virtue and morality. Any person in this institution that practices immorality or makes himself a moral menace will not be tolerated here when discovered. That policy is fixed and immutable. Though the country may repeal the eighteenth amendment, all the votes on earth can not repeal the effects of alcohol upon the human system, and he or she who indulges in alcoholic beverages or brings it to this campus will not be tolerated when discovered.

Pardon me if those remarks seem a bit blunt; I want to put them in plain English. It is the only language I shall know in dealing with you. We speak in plain English so you may understand. In driving through a little town in Georgia I saw a sign which read, "The limit is twenty miles, if caught don't cry." You know what that means.

As I said a while ago I served thirteen years on the Disciplinary Committee. During that time I made many interesting observations. One of the most interesting was the affection a student has toward his mother when caught breaking a college regulation. I have seen strong, stalwart young men bow their heads and say, "For myself I do not care, but this is going to break my mother's heart." I want to close that whole discussion by saying, remember your mother now.

Those of us who have been reading the newspapers find that it is just an old custom at Centenary to shave heads. We deny the statement, and defy the editors or reporters to prove it. It is a practice that is absolutely frowned upon by the Centenary College authorities. Any person who coerces another to clip his head would not last fifteen minutes if his identity is known. If, as the papers say, some of the Freshmen have of their own accord performed this operation, maybe their purpose was noble and uplifting. I wish the newspapers would say this: that honorable distinction at Centenary is obtained by demonstrating something on the inside rather than of the absence of anything on the outside. I would not want the feelings of anyone hurt whose purposes are good, but I would like to tell you if there are those who try to contribute strength to the College in the form of Samsonian hair, they have made the same mistake of the two old maids who went to Mount Vernon to see the home of George Washington. Coming to a little building and kneeling down they began weeping. The caretaker upon observing them and questioning their actions received this reply, "We just wanted to come and weep at his tomb;" to which the caretaker replied, "My dear ladies, this is the ice-house."

No one contributes to his institution by trying methods of that kind. It is the demonstration of character and culture, industry and effort and integrity that will distinguish Centenary students. We appreciate highly their desire to improve themselves. The greatest amount of improvement that can come to you is the greatest amount that can come to your institution. Remember who you are and where you are. Remember the ideals of the institution that has enrolled you. Remember our desire is to help you. Learn to struggle upward.

"THE SAME OLD CROWD IN THE SAME OLD WAY"

American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation

(Only partially quoted in the weekly and monthly advertising publications, and receiving scarcely a line in any daily paper throughout the country, the following interview with Wilfred W. Fry, President of N. W. Ayer and Son, Inc., was released in Philadelphia, August 24, 1933. Because of its outstanding importance and because the contract referred to, according to good authority, is one which involved a million dollars a year for the past five years, with every apparent prospect of continuing and expanding beyond that figure, the American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation secured direct from Mr. Fry under date of September 14, the following complete text of the statement originally issued, significant sentences of which have not appeared in any of the reproduction heretofore printed. As N. W. Ayer and Son, Inc. is recognized as one of the largest advertising agencies in the world, the importance of this testimony, challenging the very heart of wet argument on behalf of the liquor traffic, needs no additional emphasis.)

N. W. AYER and SON, INC.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 14, 1933.

American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation, Chicago, Ill.:

As requested in your letter of the seventh, there is enclosed a copy of Mr. Fry's statement regarding the cancellation of the Canada Dry account.

(Signed) ALICE P. KIMBERLINE,
Secretary to Mr. Fry.

Mr. Fry's Statement

"We have cancelled our ten-year-old agreement with the Canada Dry Ginger Ale, Inc., a highly valued client, following that client's decision to engage in the manufacture and distribution of beer and whiskey after repeal. We regret, of course, the condition which necessitated this step, but on a strictly business basis we are certain we are right.

"The return of liquor will divert an important share of America's mass purchasing power from essential commodities. This diversion may run as high as twenty per cent. based on pre-prohibition experience and the trend of economic and sociological conditions since the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted.

"The moral question involved in repeal can be left out entirely, but from a purely business standpoint, we still cannot see a very happy result in the return of liquor.

"It is true that revenue from alcohol will contribute many millions of dollars to Federal, State and local treasuries, but this contribution, in the main, will be made by that class of the public which can least afford to make it. This was true before Prohibition, and will unquestionably be true when Prohibition is repealed.

"The liquor business has not changed. When the thirty-sixth State has been lined up, it will be run by the same old crowd in the same old way.

"Many decades ago my firm adopted a policy of not advertising alcohol. The reason for this is simply that, as an advertising agency, we must identify ourselves so closely with the affairs of our clients that we are, in effect, a part of their business.

"In the case of a client who manufactures or distributes alcoholic beverages, this would create for us an impossible situation, since we would then be in the position of making alcohol attractive to the youth of this country. Furthermore, we do not wish to classify our other clients with the liquor business."—American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The annual meeting of this society will be held in the First Methodist Church, Water Valley, Mississippi, Wednesday evening, November 1, at 7:30 o'clock. A paper concerning Water Valley Methodism, prepared by Judge J. G. McGowan, will be read by the Judge or someone designated by him. Brief papers will be read concerning the first Conference at Water Valley in 1870, at which time the North Mississippi Conference was organized. Rev. J. J. Brooks and Rev. S. W. Miller of Frisco, Texas, are the two surviving preachers and they will furnish a brief paper. Four laymen are still alive who attended that Conference and as far as we can ascertain these are all who are still living. If there are others we will thank anyone who will furnish me with their names. We hope to have all four of these laymen there. They are: J. B. Streater, F. A. Howell, J. L. Collins and P. A. Dulin. These laymen will either read brief papers or speak briefly concerning that great Conference session.

ORGANIZATION OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, 1870

On November 30, 1870, at Water Valley, Miss., the first session of the North Mississippi Conference convened with Bishop David S. Doggett in the chair. Bishop Doggett had been elected Bishop by the General Conference which was held in May preceding his presidency over the North Mississippi Conference. This was one of the very first conferences he held, and he came to the Conference in the full strength of his noble manhood and was an eloquent preacher. His sermon in the Methodist church on Sunday morning made a profound impression.

John Barcroft was elected Secretary and served in this capacity for twenty years. Fourteen young men were admitted on trial, some of whom achieved considerable distinction. Among these were T. W. Dye, debater and scholar; E. H. Moon, eloquent preacher; J. M. Boon, strong and successful; A. J. Foster and L. D. Worsham, eloquent and powerful at times and at other times more commonplace, and other of varying talents. This class served the Conference long and well, but they have all passed over the river.

There was a class of seven who remained on trial, and of this number two are still living and will either attend the next Conference session or will send a paper to be read at the meeting of the Historical Society on Wednesday night, November 1. These two are J. J. Brooks and S. W. Miller, who years ago went to Texas. He now lives at Frisco, Texas. There are four laymen still living who attended that Conference, J. B. Streater, Black Hawk; F. A. Howell, Durant; John L. Collins, Coffeerville, and P. A. Dulin, Aberdeen. Capt. Collins is 95 years old and we are hopeful that he will be able to attend the Conference session. Brother Dulin was only a lad seventeen years of age and was present only on Sunday. The Conference made a profound impression on him, especially the sermon Sunday afternoon by Dr. J. B. McFerrin. All these men whose names I have given will give us recollections of this great Conference session at the meeting of the Historical Society. There will be some spice and some interesting reminiscences.

The Conference was small in 1870, there being only 21,757 members. Last year at Tupelo the reports showed a membership of 70,110. That is a gain in sixty-three years of more than 300 per cent. Pretty good, don't you think? That Conference sixty-three years ago had a number of interesting things about it as we look back upon it. For one thing there were 746 infants baptized that year, and last year we baptized 290. What do you think of that? It means one of two things: our people don't have children any more, or else they don't have them baptized. Five men located at the Water Valley Conference sixty-three years ago. That seems a pretty large number. There were nine who took the supernumerary relation and ten who were superannuated.

There were giants in those days and many of the presiding elders were of that class. Philip Tuggle, J. H. Brooks, E. E. Hamilton, J. B. Stone, T. Y. Ramsey, A. C. Allen, Amos Kendall, W. P. Barton and J. W. Knott, were the presiding elders. These were outstanding men, most of them great preachers, and they certainly left their imprint upon this Conference.

They did not report very much money raised, but we are not hurting ourselves in that particular field. I notice from the minutes of that Conference that they paid in full the assessment for the superannuated preachers. We are not doing that well.

The Conference met in Columbus in '71, at Corinth in '72, and at Grenada in '73.

Bishop Galloway was transferred to the Mississippi Conference at this session of our Conference, he having been pastor at Black Hawk for the year 1870.

OLD AGE; HOW IT MAY BE MADE HAPPY AND ITS HAPPINESS MADE ENDURING

By D. W. Heidelberg

Assuming that husband and wife were happily married, their happiness can be made enduring if a line of conduct herein suggested is followed. First of all and without which husband and wife cannot remain happy, they should remain true to their marital vows.

They should be kind and gentle in their conduct towards each other. If in a fit of passion the one should speak unkindly to the other they should never fail to ask forgiveness. They should never censure each unkindly or use words which imply a censure. They should never discontinue their expressions of admiration of each other. We not only live to be loved, but like to be told that we are, and these expressions of admiration of love have a tendency to foster it. The affectionate kiss so often indulged in in the early part of married life should never be neglected, even after the hair becomes white and the forehead furrowed from age and sacrifice.

The personal appearance of husband and wife after marriage should not be neglected. Before they were married and when they were sweethearts, how careful they were of their personal appearance. For the same reason it is important after they become husband and wife, and it should never cease. It is inexcusable in the husband to go unshaven and to keep his working clothes on on the Sabbath, the only day he is able to spend with his wife. He should never be slovenly in the home. A husband who does so makes it difficult for the wife to love him. Nor should the wife neglect to adorn her person even when she is not expecting company. It is easy for the husband to love and admire the wife when she is tastily, even if plainly, dressed. It is difficult for him to do so if she is untidy in her dress. A beautiful flower we all admire and love. It is impossible for us not to do so. It is its mission to look pretty. It is partly, though not exclusively, the mission of a woman to look attractive. By so doing she makes it easy for the husband to love her.

The wise husband will recognize the fact that upon their marriage he and his wife became equal partners with equal rights and privileges. The husband, when possible, should furnish the wife with a monthly allowance proportionate to their means and his ability. In order that he may make the amount sufficient, both should be economical and industrious.

They should steer clear of debt, for in incurring debts they are selling themselves into voluntary servitude. Has not the wise man said that the borrower is slave to the lender? To keep out of debt does not mean to pay your debts, but to have none to pay. It was Spurgeon, the great Baptist divine, who said that to keep dirt, debt and the devil out of his home had been his greatest effort. The husband and wife should not be ashamed of their hoary locks. A hoary head is a crown of glory when found in the way of righteousness.

"SOME NEEDED READJUSTMENTS"

By Rev. J. C. Wasson

Many brethren have put forth their views on the above topic. And I now give my opinion. I think there is serious thinking needed in the ranks of the Methodist ministry on the subject of the use of tobacco.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has spoken against the use of tobacco by its ministers. I think, therefore, that no Bishop has a right to preside over an Annual Conference, or sit in a General Conference, who uses tobacco in any form: that no Presiding Elder has the right to superintend a district, or sit in cabinet meetings, if he uses tobacco; and any preacher guilty of the use of the filthy and obnoxious weed should receive no appointment from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. With no exceptions to any of these, except where the use is under the prescription of a physician.

Now there are two reasons for drawing this conclusion:

First: The Southern Methodist preacher who uses tobacco under the present law of the Church does so because he wants to and is therefore in rebellion against his Church, or,

Second: He uses it because he says, "He can not quit the use of it" and thereby he denies the power of the Gospel of the Son of God.

Think it through, Brethren, and see if we do not need a readjustment. I do not expect to vote for any delegate to the General Conference that uses tobacco.

REV. R. O. BROWN—AN APPRECIATION

By Rev. C. T. Floyd

It is with sorrow that we record the death of our brother and co-laborer, Rev. R. O. Brown, a veteran member of the North Mississippi Conference, and one of our honored superannuates. He died at the home of a daughter in Jackson, Miss., at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, September 17, 1933.

Brother Brown was admitted on trial in the North Mississippi Conference in 1889. For nearly forty years he was in the active ministry. He served his Church faithfully and well. During all these years of service, with a heart full of the love of Christ, he "visited from house to house," instructing the children, helping the weak and comforting the bereaved. He was a man full of faith and the Holy Ghost. He looked after every interest of the Church. He possessed all the elements of a successful itinerant Methodist preacher. The key to his character was his absolute and continual recognition of God.

In all the conditions and relations of life the spirit of kindness, gentleness and patience was manifested in his demeanor. With a sunny countenance and words of good-will, cheer and comfort for everybody, his presence, whether in the church, home or social circle, was ever pleasant and inspiring. His going was a triumph. Well did he know that the end was approaching, and the coming of the death angel was a source of joy to him.

After appropriate services at the Methodist church in Amory, conducted by the writer, assisted by the following ministers: Revs. T. E. Gregory, T. H. Dorsey, W. R. Lott, A. T. McIlwain and M. E. Scott, a large number of friends followed the remains to the cemetery, where the services were concluded by the Masonic fraternity, of which the deceased was a faithful member.

Servant of God, well done;

Thy glorious warfare's past.

The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last.

NRA CODE FOR THE CHURCH

By Rev. Jas. B. Grambling

NEW
ADVANCE

"Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."—Phil. 3:13-14.

Believing that national recovery is dependent upon the moral and spiritual life of our people, we propose a Code which we feel will bring about a New Religious Advance in our church and community, as well as national recovery in our material values.

Jesus Christ said, "This is my commandment, that ye love one another, even as I have loved you." Therefore,

1. "I Will Do My Part" in living a life consistent with this commandment and strive to "Do unto others as I would have others do unto me."
2. "I Will Do My Part" by some daily act of helpfulness to my fellowman.
3. "I Will Do My Part" by praying for my State and national officials, that righteousness may have a chance to exalt a nation.
4. "I Will Do My Part" by devoting some time each day to Bible reading, prayer and spiritual meditation, constantly striving for New Religious Advance.
5. "I Will Do My Part" by putting God and my Church first in all considerations.
6. "I Will Do My Part" by giving financial support to my church regularly, and to other Kingdom enterprises to the very best of my ability.
7. "I Will Do My Part" by inviting someone to attend service each week.
8. "I Will Do My Part" by being prepared at all times to bear witness to Christ and His Church, by refusing to sanction any word or act not in harmony with the life and teaching of our blessed Lord.

My acceptance of this Code will be evidenced by my promise to attend at least one service of worship each week, unless prevented by circumstances beyond my control.

New Religious Advance means National Recovery.

"GIVE A THOUGHT TO AFRICA"

The following poem, sent from Africa by Mrs. C. P. M. Sheffey, wife of the doctor in charge of medical work at Wembo Nyama in the Methodist Episcopal Congo Mission, was written by a native of Uganda, East Africa. This young man, Hosea K. Nyabonga, is the oldest son of a native king and is heir apparent to his father's throne. He is a devout Christian and is preparing himself at Clark University, Atlanta, Ga., to return to Africa as a Missionary to his own people:

"Give a thought to Africa;
'Neath the burning sun,
Hosts of weary hearts are there
Waiting to be won.
Many idols have they,
But from swamp to clod
Many a voice is crying out
For a living God.

"Breathe a prayer for Africa:
O Thou God of love,
Send thy blessing on the tribes
From thy home above."
Swarthy lips when moved by Grace
Can most sweetly sing;
Pray that Africa's heart may be Loyal to our King.

"Give your love to Africa:
There our brothers call,
Bring release from slavery.
Break sin's bitter thrall.
White shall love the black man,
Each forget the past;
In the Father's house above
All will meet at last."

direct the church back to the "gospel" and to "keep out of politics," but Jesus Christ will not be with it.

The main problem of recovery and reconstruction is not plans and methods. Certainly they are necessary; But many of them will fail, and none of them can succeed without that which the church alone can furnish. The problem is whether or not we have spiritual resources sufficient to stake the program of recovery and reconstruction. And the church is the one institution set up for that purpose. We are supposed to be the custodians and dispensers of spiritual vision, courage and perseverance in dealing with the situation.

May the Church in our country never forget what became of the Church in Russia. The Church in Russia went by on the other side. We can spend a big part of the time berating the Russians for repealing religion and abandoning the church. But let us ask at least one simple question: Why did they do it? The answer is not far to seek. The church became the agent of the exploiter rather than the agent of Christ.

Let Christianity in this country, with a clear-brained and warm-hearted leadership, have a big share in recovery and reconstruction.

THE CITY OF MEMPHIS, famous for its homicide record, wakes up with a shock to find that it is the birthplace and home of "Machine-Gun" Kelly. But he was not "Machine-Gun" Kelly then. He was Geo. F. Barnes, Jr.

He was a student in Central High School and under his name on the school record this information is said to appear: "He made poor grades in English, Geometry, Science and Latin. He did well in Elocution." Isn't that an interesting record? So far we have not received the names of his teachers.

Do cities and schools realize to what extent they are responsible for our criminals? Will parents ever learn that a fraction of the tears they shed and the anxiety they feel in the courtroom as their boy or girl is tried for life would have made such a thing impossible?

An automobile is not necessary equipment for a boy in high school or college. The responsibility of home, school and church is, first of all, character. No teacher, no coach, for our schools, should be employed until it is clear that his contribution to the institution, to the life of the students, first of all, will be an influence for good conduct and right living.

The church itself has a feeling of shame when it finds the same name on its register that is recently found over a criminal record. Christian education must go beyond Biblical and ecclesiastical information. All that is of any serious value is that that appears in Christian conduct and useful living.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. W. H. Giles, pastor at Tallulah, La., was an appreciated visitor in this city last week.

Rev. W. E. Akin, our pastor at Simmsboro, La., got up such momentum in the Advocate campaign that he went beyond his quota.

New Albany, Miss., reports a wonderful two-weeks revival under the leadership of Rev. J. V. Bennett, pastor at Booneville.

Rev. S. A. Seegers, pastor at Rayne, La., came in on a late train, but his pockets were bulging with subscriptions. He did not stop with his quota.

A League Union, composed of Calhoun County Leagues, was recently organized at Calhoun City. About sixty young people were present for the organization.

Twenty-six students, members of five different churches, make up the Ministerial League of Millsaps College, which has begun its regular program of meetings and service for the present year.

Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor of Trinity Church, Ruston, La., announces that he has secured Bishop A. Frank Smith to conduct a series of revival services, beginning Sunday, October 29.

Holding his own meetings during the year, Rev. R. A. Allums, pastor at Ellisville, Miss., has received fifty-four into the church, the great majority of them upon profession of faith.

In the recent death of Dr. E. N. Lane, the University of Mississippi has lost one of its most capable faculty members, and the Methodist Church at Oxford, Miss., one of its leading laymen.

Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Carter, formerly of our church at Ruston, La., have transferred to our church at Franklin, La. Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor, with the church there, has given the Carters a big welcome.

"The New Orleans Christian Advocate will stand on its own merits. Personally, I find the safest and sanest method of securing subscriptions is to go after them. Success to our good paper." That is from Rev. N. S. Loftus, Lucedale, Miss.

Dr. B. F. Jones, Brookhaven, Miss., carried the Advocate banner in the recent campaign and brought in a good list of subscriptions. Dr. Jones is a valuable man in our church. His pastor, Dr. O. S. Lewis, speaks most generously of him.

"Bonhomie keeps up with the 'better world.' Eighty children in Sunday school at the Camp. Three regular prayer meetings, two day schools, all teachers Christians. Forty-eight have joined the church since Conference. W. T. Griffin, Hattiesburg, Miss., Route 3."

Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor Brookhaven, Miss., and host to the 1933 session of the Mississippi Conference, much improved in health, is back at his post. He expresses great appreciation for the many letters and expressions of sympathy and goodwill.

Under the leadership of Miss Georgia Woolman, Lake Charles, our people, with their friends, enjoyed a great musical treat on the evening of October 8. Misses Bertha Moss, Lorena Leithead and Josephine Kissler were among those rendering parts on the program.

Rev. Ellis Smith, pastor Winnfield, La., host to the coming session of the Louisiana Conference, has enrolled himself among those who call at our office when the editor is out. We ask him to be a little more careful next time he calls. He came our way last week.

A good letter from Mrs. A. R. Killgore, Mangum Memorial Church, Shreveport, tells of her work for the Advocate. Through her splendid efforts her church led the district in subscriptions.

Delta State College, Cleveland, Miss., is to be host to one hundred and fifty delegates when the Mississippi Methodist Student Conference meets in that city for a three-day session, October 27-29. Rev. Melville Johnson, pastor of our First Church, has charge of the arrangements. Malcolm Guest, Y. M. C. A. Secretary at the University of Mississippi, is a prominent speaker on the program.

"We began our revival here in the West Monroe (La.) church last Sunday, to run two weeks. Last year we had Brother Harry S. Allen and the folks were so well pleased with the results of the meeting that they were unanimous in wanting him back again this year. We are now off to a fine start. Pray for us, Louis Hoffpauir." Let us remember Brother Hoffpauir and his loyal people in our prayers.

"Go to Church Day" was observed by the churches of Lake Charles and throughout the parish on Sunday, October 8. The movement met with an enthusiastic response from the people and a fine spirit prevailed among the churches. The American Press, Lake Charles paper, carried a page of publicity concerning the celebration. Other cities might follow the example. Why not advertise the church and its work?

The readers of the Advocate will be pleased to learn that Rev. W. H. Moulner, our pastor at Oxford, Miss., has sufficiently recovered from his recent illness to resume his duties as pastor of this important University center. In one of the classes of the Sunday school at Oxford, ninety freshmen from the University of Mississippi are enrolled and others are active in the various departments of the church.

"We received a copy of the letter recently sent out by Rev. R. H. Clegg, pastor of Broad Street Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., and his Board of Stewards. It is a good strong letter carrying important fact information about the church and breathing a spirit of faith and optimism. The church has made steady progress under Brother Clegg's leadership. The financial condition is being handled effectively.

The Men's Bible Class of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, V. R. Patterson, President, and Wm. H. Black, Teacher, are in the midst of a membership drive with 200 new members as a goal. The drive is a part of the plan of the class to contact and interest every non-church member in the community and will culminate in a Laymen's Revival in which more than sixty men have pledged their full cooperation in making the meeting a success.

Can you beat it? "We transported our own magnolias and pines from Mississippi—one hundred and fifteen of them—to Chicago for our pageant. This attracted a great deal of attention and favorable comment," writes Dr. G. F. Winfield, President of Whitworth College. And he says further, "We are now in the midst of our campaign to increase the endowment of the College by $75,000. $25,000 has already been raised in Brookhaven and the campaign is now on in some of the districts over the Conference. We expect to succeed in raising the amount."

We note from the appointments of the Baltimore Annual Conference, published in the October 12 number of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, its official organ, that Rev. Nolan B. Harmon, Jr., has resigned as editor of the Conference Organ and has been appointed pastor of the Greene Memorial Church, Roanoke City. Rev. Frank M. Richardson, D.D., has been elected editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist to succeed Dr. Harmon. An assessment sufficient to cover the needs of the paper was voted by the Conference, and the members pledged their support to the paper during the coming year.

Come on. Let's have Open House and a Party. "We moved into the new parsonage Thursday. Come up and take a look! But help us keep the Mississippi Conference preachers from seeing it until after the meeting at Brookhaven in November." That is Rev. P. M. Caraway, pastor East End, Meridian, Miss. Then more: "Who are those fellows talking about Prayer Meeting attendance? Wednesday evening attendance here has averaged above 100 for this Conference year. 142 were present last Wednesday evening, and a group of lady workers who had been appointed to the task a week before brought in $476 in cash to be applied on the new parsonage debt." Now we had not tried that. But there is a mark to shoot at. Don't let him off with it. He would never quit talking about it.

FROM SANATORIUM, MISS.

In the name of the three hundred patients in the Sanatorium, I want to thank all who have contributed to this worthy cause. The information that we have from all over the Conference is that whenever this cause has been presented the people have responded willingly and liberally. We feel sure that if all the preachers will carry out the instruction of the Mississippi Conference this cause will not only be supported this year, but will give to the Conference such evidence of interest in the work that the Conference will be encouraged to continue the work at the Sanatorium another year.

We want to thank the Epworth Leagues of the Conference for the thirty-six copies of the New Orleans Christian Advocate given to the patients through the Louise Preston Memorial Fund.

If we go God will go with us. If we do God will help us do His will.

BAPTIST CHURCH COMMENDS WORK OF THE LATE REV. H. S. JOHNS

We, the members of the Bethany Baptist Church, want to extend our heartfelt sympathy to the children of Rev. H. S. Johns and his noble wife, who so faithfully helped him in his duties to his churches.

Truly we live in a world where solemn shadows are continually falling upon our path, shadows that teach us the uncertainty of all temporal blessings and warn us that "here there is no abiding stay."

Whereas it has pleased God to remove from us this noble man of God who so beautifully performed his work, and has called him home to rest from his work to his reward.

Be it resolved, That a copy of this be sent to his churches, Greenwood, Flournoy and Bethany. And be it further resolved, that a copy be sent to Mrs. H. S. Johns, and a copy be spread upon the minutes of the church.

Respectfully submitted by the committee:
REV. E. G. HANCOCK, Pastor;
MRS. MARY BRUMBLE,
MRS. EVA MATLOCK,
MRS. J. B. JOHNS.

WORLD TEMPERANCE DAY

By Rev. A. W. Turner

Will you please call attention to World Temperance Day, October 29, requesting pastors to co-operate with Sunday school superintendents in putting on a temperance program in the Sunday school the fourth Sunday in October?

I believe the Louisiana Legislature will meet within the next 30 days. Please talk with your legislators about saving our local option laws and the parish unit. I see no reason to believe I will be able to attend the Legislative session. If any one reading this feels able to attend and do the work and pay his own expense, I will gladly give him all the facts I can assemble if he will write me.

NEW PAGEANT-DRAMA ON THE BIBLE

"Let There Be Light!" is the title of a new pageant-drama consisting of skilfully arranged music, hymns, Scripture passages, episodes, and tableaux, prepared by Elliot Field and published by the American Bible Society for churches and religious groups desiring to present a message in dramatic form on the value and significance of the Bible. An attractive feature of this pageant-drama is its unusual flexibility, for by modification it can be adapted to the use of small churches having only a minimum of equipment while larger churches will be able to use it in its entirety.

This pageant-drama especially suitable for Universal Bible Sunday, to be observed on December 10, will be mailed postpaid, for twenty-five cents in stamps or coin, to anyone addressing the American Bible Society, Dept. U. B. S., Bible House, Astor Place, New York City.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Your attention is called to the standing rule adopted at our last session of the Conference, Journal, page 111, and you are earnestly requested to conform strictly thereto. You will please make your reports for tables 1 and 2 by churches, being as accurate as possible, and mail them on Monday, November 6, to Rev. S. F. Harkey, Brandon, Miss. Failure on your part will defeat the intention of the Conference, and greatly hinder the progress of the preparation of the statistical tables for our next Journal.

Faithfully,

W. B. JONES, Secretary.

THE PRAYER ROOM—NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Dear Brethren: Brother Wroten, our Conference host, has assured me that a room has been set apart for the holding of our morning prayer services. As formerly, these services will be held a half hour before the opening of the morning sessions of the Conference.

If we come together in the right spirit and attitude, the prayer-room can be made into a Power-room. I trust many of us will be able to attend.

Fraternally,

H. P. LEWIS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE

The Committee and Class of the Fourth Year will meet in the First Methodist Church, Water Valley, Miss., at 8 a.m., Thursday morning, November 2.

GENERAL CONFERENCE AND LAY OFFICIALS

By S. E. Carruth

Among the flood of panaceas (nostrums, appropriately label some, we fear) to be offered for the ills of our Zion, real or imaginary, at the forthcoming session of the General Conference, the following suggestion should receive consideration:

There should be disciplinary provision for a ritual form for induction into their sacred positions of the lay official upon their election, or re-election, at the fourth quarterly conference. The details should be worked out by competent minds; but the idea embraces a procedure akin to this order: All the chosen officials would be assembled before the bar of the conference. The presiding elder delivers to them an extemporaneous charge, in conclusion putting the disciplinary questions, the response to which would be a voluntary assuming of the respective duties imposed and a pledge to fulfill the same.

As a constant incentive to living up to the covenant, the question would be asked at each session, Are the officials blameless in their lives and faithful in the discharge of their duties?

The reasons rendering the enactment of such measures well nigh imperative are too voluminous for available space and are too obvious to the experienced to require mention. This writer thinks that he is familiar with opposing arguments, but he thinks that these are dimmed into secondary considerations by the arresting emergency of the situation.

Outlining this suggestion to his presiding elder recently this porponent was agreeably surprised to learn that said administrator's experience and acumen had led to the discovery of the need and that he has already introduced the innovation of holding what he fittingly terms a consecration service. But not all elders are endowed with the insight and courage as characterize the able supervision of our Dr. Crisler and therefore require the backing of ecclesiastical authority.

Summit, Miss.

THE PAPERS SAY THAT---

The suffering and the heroic devotion to duty to a young married couple was revealed here recently with the death of Mrs. Katherine Warren, missionary worker for Christian Missionary Alliance.

A little more than three years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Warren, just married, set out for South Africa. No ordinary honeymoon journey, this; they were bound for a lonely mission post at Popayan, far up into the jungle interior of Colombia.

There the devoted couple planned to spend their lives in bringing the Christian faith to the natives of the jungles.

But as their boat crawled up the sluggish Amazon, the husband became afflicted with the deadly tropical fever.

At Iquitos, Peru, he was carried from the boat, and died shortly after. Grief-stricken, the young bride heeded the advice of her superiors and returned to Pittsburg. But in three months she grew restless.

"I must go back," she said. "He would have wanted me to. My duty lies there."

And so she returned to her post at Popayan. There she found solace for her grief in the work of her religious duties.

But just about a year ago she fell ill with fever. Symptoms were similar to those suffered by her husband. She ignored the pleas of friends that she leave the tropics.

So it was that she followed her husband in death. In the bare report of her death, received here, the dual tragedy lies hidden.

And so the volume of the martyrs is not closed. The Christian church still produces those brave souls who do not count life dear unto themselves. There are those among us in this cynical and suicidal age who go forth without the shout of trumpets to stamp the brow of our faithlessness and cowardice with the mark of its foolish futility.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE YOUNG PEOPLE'S NEWS

Hello! And how do you like your new officers? You've installed them by now, haven't you? Here's hoping they turn out to be the best yet!

There's all sorts of Union news this week. The Union, in my opinion, is certainly the key organization in our whole program, and as such should be made worth while. Anyhow, from the Elizabeth Langford Union in Baton Rouze District. Aralynn Hastings writes to tell us that Mary Eva Stewart has been elected president. James McCormack, vice-president; Elizabeth McCain, treasurer and Aralynn Hastings, secretary and publicity agent. Do you know any of them? Three have been to Mansfield. They plan to have an Institute after Christmas.

We move to Monroe District next, and find that the Earnest Workers Union met, with about thirty present, and elected Mrs. Babbs, of Lake Providence, as president. Then the Service Union met at Bastrop with one hundred and five present, and elected Miss Louise Norsworthy of Collinston. They also presented two one-act plays, with Union talent. We read this in a clipping from the Monroe News Star, which was sent us by Miss Eleona Brinsmade, the publicity agent. That's furnishing publicity to the town, isn't it?

The Walter Towner Union, too, has met and elected. Their president is Miss Commander of Ferriday. By the way, in case you're not familiar with them, they're in the Minden District. They're including paid-up pledges as factor in the banner award system. Good idea, hey?

And Yee-Whiz Haggart of the Live Wire Union writes to say that they're planning an Institute for their Union to be held as soon as she leaves town—which is somewhere around the first week-end in December. She intimates that this terrible act was committed absolutely with malice aforethought, and that they didn't even try to deny it. Oh, cruel world!

Edith Skinner, whom many of you know, writes of the Ever-Ready Union meeting at Ruston, held at the Orphanage. We quote from her "News": "As we entered the assembly room of the Orphans' Young People's Department, we were affected by the quietness that reigned. . . . We picture the business session: Someone rises and proceeds with the business. They tell us that it is the president, Louise Trussell. Six churches represented, and eighty-one present. Would you believe it? Everyone seems pleased with the report of the nominating committee. The election is over so quickly that we can't remember many officers, except that they kept the same president and vice-president."

We also learn from Edith that Grace Jones, the district director, was present, and spoke about the training school in Ruston, October 8-13, and also about the importance of securing charters for Young People's Divisions for paying Mission pledges.

In their recreation period they read letters from some of the Union boys and girls about their ideal boy friends and girl friends. That ought to have been good!

As usual, we must move on as quickly as possible. There's still a copy of Unionews on the desk. We learn from it that the New Orleans Young People's Union no longer has its usual Union meeting—they now have UN-usual meetings! they presented the play, "Ba Thane," at the last meeting. Then, they're having a round table for the new officers—local and Union. Are you? It's a fine way to start the new year! Continuing in Unionews, we find reports from six local chapters announcing election of officers and special activities, and also jokes and personals. Our Conference Director should be interested in any personals from New Orleans—or any jokes, too!

We simply must close. But wait! Do you get anything out of this column? Do you have ideas that would improve it? Please, everyone of you, write and tell me what to leave out, and what to add, to make it better. Remember, it's your responsibility, too!

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Jackson District is to have their big annual Young People's Standard Training Conference, October 29-30-31-November 1-2-3. They are really planning a fine time. Professor P. J. Rutledge, Prof. C. F. Nesbitt, Rev. L. E. Alford, Prof. A. P. Hamilton, and Mr. A. L. Gilmore will have charge of the courses that will be offered. The Conference is being sponsored by the Jackson Young People's Union and October 29 will begin a very interesting week for the alert and active young people of that district.

And speaking of Unions—Simpson County has a very fine Union meeting combined with a picnic on the banks of Strong River near D'Lo. Here is a new Chartered Union that is headed for a big future, with Fred Thompson at its head. Hattiesburg City Union is picking up too. They had a fine meeting in Hattiesburg recently and great plans were made for the coming year. This is also a new Union, but just watch these young ones grow.

Meridian City League Union started off their New Year, Monday evening, September 25, with a rally and social meeting, which proved to be very successful in every way. The entertainment was in the form of an "Election Social." Miss Madiyn Seeger, Election Manager, with her several committees planned the social, which was a very clever, enjoyable affair. There were ballots prepared, and each voted for one of the two or three candidates that were suggested by nominating committees. All the votes were not counted and ballot boxes were locked and it was agreed upon that they complete the count later.

The Union is the oldest Union in the Conference. W. D. Hawkins was their first president, and they have very clever ideas for successful programs and good times.

Scott County Union had a delightful time at their meeting in Forrest, Miss. This Union among many others have begun planning for a big Assembly this coming Spring.

Miss Lilla Mills had a great part in leading the Young People in their Union meeting in Leake County.

All Unions help to make successful Leagues and bigger and better Assemblies.

Publicity Supt.

SOME RELIGION

I have it scribbled down on my notebook that some one some place suggested:

If you could get religion like a Methodist, and experience it like a Baptist, and be positive of it like a Disciple, and be proud of it like an Episcopalian, and pay for it like a Presbyterian, and propagate it like an Adventist, and enjoy it like a Negro—that would be some religion.—Exchange.

MISSIONARY BRIEFLET

"I think our churches in Cuba," says the Rev. G. Y. Hopkins, pastor of the Central Church in Havana, "are more firmly established than they have been since they were founded. There is more of the spirit of sacrifice for the cause than ever before, but Cuba has never seen anything like the present crisis in her economic world. The suffering on every hand both in the cities and the country is unspeakable."

The Stephenson Memorial Hospital, Changchow, China, is our Foreign Special for the 1933 Week of Prayer. This hospital was carried on for a number of years in old Chinese buildings hard to make sanitary and poorly lighted for the work. Through the influence of Bishop Kern, Mrs. Ida Stephenson, of San Antonio, Texas, made a liberal gift of $25,000; and friends, both in China, including the gentry, and in our church at home added to this gift until a large enough sum was secured to erect a new, up-to-date hospital.

Stubborn Coughs Ended by Recipe, Mixed at Home

Big Saving! No Cooking! So Easy!

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It takes but a moment to prepare, and costs very little, but it positively has no equal for quick, lasting relief. From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with granulated sugar syrup, made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's so easy! Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made, and you get four times as much for your money. It never spoils and children love its taste. This simple mixture soothes and heals the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing. Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, the most reliable healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Why Liquid Laxatives Do You No Harm

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can be controlled. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement, and with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated as long as you keep on using it!

An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is syrup pepsin. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help, as they do in the case of cathartics containing mineral drugs. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Member N. R. A.

I scowled:
"The members unfriendly, the sermons too long.
In fact, it seems that everything's wrong.
I don't like the singing; the church—a disgrace.
I'll quit going there, I won't give a dime;
I can make better use of my money and time."

Then sez my conscience to me, sez he,
"The trouble with you is, you're too blind to see
That your church reflects you, whatever it be.
Now come, pray and pay and serve cheerfully;
Stop all your fault-finding and boost it up strong;
You'll find you'll be happy and proud to belong.
Be friendly and willing and sing as you work;
For churches aren't built by members who shirk."

"Friends and Foes" of the Christian Home," was the subject discussed in a meeting of Zone 2 at Castor, Minden District, Louisiana Conference. Several members took part on the program, giving different phases of the subject, and prayer was made for the return of the family altar. A number of women pledged to erect family altars. Music appropriate to the subject was rendered. A delightful lunch was served, giving the new members a chance to get acquainted. Five auxiliaries were represented with 78 members present. Mrs. Woodard is president of the zone and Mrs. Dwight Blake is the secretary.

"Ever since the first sad broken-hearted family looked for the first time upon the cold, pallid face of its first dead, the longing of the human heart has been to know 'Shall we meet again?'"

"The old patriarch expressed this endless longing by saying: 'If a man die shall he live again?' Left in the night of man's ignorance and the darkness of man's sin, he has not been able to answer.

"But the yearning to meet again remained. So that one of our great poets exclaimed:

"Tell this soul by sorrow laden
If within a distant Alden,
It shall clasp a saluted maiden,
Whom the angels call Lenore?"

"But thank God that question has been answered. One came from the land of life and light who has assured us that, though 'One dies he shall live again.' Jesus came and did more than just teach a philosophy of life after death, but demonstrated that man does rise again, by Himself going into the grave and on the third day bursting asunder the shackles of death and coming out victoriously over the grave and lived anew. The bodily resurrection of Jesus is the best attested fact of history. That Columbus discovered America is no better attested fact than that Jesus bodily rose from the grave. That Washington defended America is not a better attested fact than that Jesus bodily rose from the grave. So he authoritatively declared to the world that He was the Resurrection and the Life, and boldly affirmed that: 'If a man lived and believed in Him though he were dead yet shall he live again.' We do know that our brother shall rise again, and come forth from the grave, and we shall meet him and greet him, and live with him in that long day that has no sun-down nor twilight nor night to follow."

The above words were spoken at the funeral of the late D. McMullan of Lake, Mississippi.—Editor.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, God in His merciful providence has called to our heavenly home our beloved sister, Nannie DuBois Lipscomb, wife of our esteemed pastor, Brother L. M. Lipscomb, be it resolved by the Methodist Woman's Missionary Society of Louisville, Miss.:

1. That in her death our Society has lost one of its most lovable members, who by her short residence had endeared herself to each and every one.
2. That our church has lost a valuable member, whose consistent, righteous living was an inspiration to all.
3. That our town has lost one of its most revered and cultured citizens because of her contributions of lovely poems and sincere appreciation to the beautiful and worthwhile things of life.

4. That in view of such an irreparable loss to husband by whose side she walked for over forty years, daughter and sons, we tender our expression of deepest sympathy.

5. That we request the publication of these resolutions in The Winston County Journal, The Christian Advocate, The World Outlook, The Missionary News, The Jackson Daily News, The Jackson Clarion Ledger and a copy be spread on the minutes of the Woman's Missionary Society, also a copy be sent to the bereaved family.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. W. L. LUKENS,
MRS. LEE SUBER,
MRS. C. G. BLUE,
Committee for Woman's Missionary Society.

In considering the life of MRS. ARIE GORRETH KING one cannot but be impressed by the fact that it is strikingly typical of the American mother and wife.

It runs true to form and is representative of the best traditions of the church, home and state.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Barrett. Parents, who early in life captured the ideal of life in Christ. Her life was but the continuation of the structure on which her parents bulled and now that she is gone all who knew her call her blessed.

The life of Mrs. King was laborious, devoted and happy, and its happiness had its inspiration not in the honors that came to her but in the friendships that enriched her life.

From the earliest period of her life she won people to her and on through her very wonderful life she continued to win and draw people until when the end came. All who knew her loved her.

Mrs. King was fifty-six years of age and the mother of seven children the eldest of whom died at the age of one year.

This little girl whose name was Lola Winifred made a great impression on the mother and her loss was a great shock.

Two boys and four girls together with the husband survive her.

For several months Mrs. King suffered from cancer and finally gave over to this dread complaint at 8 p. m. on Sunday, August 28, 1933.

She was a Methodist and was buried from her old home church, Nebo by her pastor, Rev. W. B. Hollingsworth.

We laid her to rest at Union Church in that quiet place where so many have slept these years.

We miss her for "she lived to bravely take her share of toil and strife, and for her weaker fellows' sake made every burden less."

W. B. HOLLINGSWORTH, P. C.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. J. RHODE SMITH

If we had seen you at the last,
And heard the last sigh from your heart,

We would not feel so bad.
We did not know the pain you had.
We did not see you die.

We only knew you went away
And we could not say good-bye.

How calm the end, how peaceful is her sleep.
Why should we mourn, and in our sorrow weep?
The flowers which we place upon her grave
Rebuke our grief and bid our hearts be brave.

She kept the faith; her sword was ever bright
And wielded in the cause of truth and right.
But she has laid her shining armor by
And gone to live with Christ on high.

Here we all have pain and sorrow.
In these reunions here below
The Saviour is our Captain
He will guide us as we go.
O may our sleep, like hers at last, be sweet.
And may we awake our Saviour's smile to meet.

MRS. JEFF NAPPER.
Simsboro, La.

When I heard of the death of SISTER J. H. ANDERSON I was deeply moved, for it is my sincere belief that she was one of the most noble souls that has passed across the stage of life. Of inflexible character, of unbending integrity, she instinctively inspired respect, while at the same time winning the most devoted affection by reason of her nobility and generosity. She was modest, without affectation; energetic without ostentation; possessed of an agreeable address; she knew how to harmonize rectitude with graciousness, and all who came in contact with her instinctively felt the influence of her personal charm.

She was a cultivated spirit, wise, prudent, and discreet. She was not actuated by anger or sudden impulse, but by moderation and love. Her acts were always guided by sympathy, reflection, and love.

Therefore, be it resolved by the quarterly conference of the Mashulaville Charge, in session at Vernon Church, on October 5, 1933:

First. That in the passing of Sister Anderson, Mt. Hebron Church has lost one of its most consecrated, devoted and useful members, and that the charge has suffered the loss of one of its most active and enthusiastic officers.

Second. That the community of Fern Springs has lost a citizen who was devoted to those principles which make for a better place in which to live.

Third. That the home of Mr. T. Anderson has suffered the loss of a kind, true, sacrificial and loving mother.

Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, that a copy be spread on the Minutes of the Quarterly Conference, that a copy be sent to The Macon Beacon for publication, that a copy be sent to the Winston County Journal for publication, and also that a copy be sent to our New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

S. W. HEMPHILL,
Committee and Pastor of the Mashulaville Charge.

WHAT PARENTS CAN DO

By Roger W. Babson

"The immediate task of parents is to help their young folks to choose and get started with the right sort of people. The immediate task of the young people is to get themselves started in the right channel. For example: In all my years of business experience, I have never come across a person who was equally fitted to be a scientist, and a merchandiser. It is nothing short of a tragedy for a young man possessed of a scientific temperament to get switched into business, or for a young woman with authentic business capacity to enter one of the learned professions. Some young people love outdoor work and would never be happy at any other kind. Of course, outdoor work may not pay salaries equal to some other modes of livelihood, but what of that? Success in life does not depend upon one's salary, but upon one's happiness. It is far better to be a happy forester, or ornithologist, or landscape gardener, than to be an unhappy clerk, or salesman, or lawyer. Some young people are born leaders and possess qualifications for manufacturing and for handling large groups of employees; others are natural "lone eagles," and cannot cooperate with their fellows."

MISSIONARY BRIEFLETS

The Belgian children in the Thursday school at Ecaussines, Belgium, have been doing some fine work for the people in the Methodist hospitals of the Belgian Congo. The boys have been cutting out pictures and making scrap books, while the girls have been cutting and rolling bandages. Many of these children also attend the Sunday school at Ecaussines, which contributes every Sunday to the Leper Special carried by the members of the Methodist Sunday schools of Belgium. The Thursday school is to get these little folks acquainted with the books of the Bible and its contents; there is also one hour of manual training work.

In the Central Council (formerly Conference) of the Methodist Church of Brazil there are five districts, 42 pastoral charges, 74 congregations, 26 itinerant preachers, of whom 10 are missionaries; 22 local preachers, 6,417 members, 126 Sunday schools with 634 officers and teachers and 7,014 pupils, 67 Young People's Societies with 283 members and 50 Methodist women's societies with 1,514 members and 50 children's societies with 907 members. This Conference (or Council) is located in the State of Sao Paulo, which has an area of 75,000 square miles and a population of seven million. Our church looks small in the midst of this great State, but the opportunities for spreading the work are many.

"Brazil, with its forty million inhabitants, and its more than eight million square miles of territory, with its intelligent, warm-hearted and very hospitable people, and its ever-enlarging place among the family of nations, offers a strong challenge and a great opportunity to our Methodist missionary work," declares Prof. J. E. Moreland, director of Porto Alegre, Porto Alegre, Brazil. "The doors of opportunity are being opened more and more despite the supposition of an increasingly intolerant Roman Catholicism."

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

ON THE MORNING of Thursday, November 2, Bishop Denny is scheduled to call the North Mississippi Conference to order for its Sixty-fourth Session. This will mark Bishop Denny's fourth successive year as president of the conference.

The conference was organized at old Wood Street Church, Water Valley, in 1870, with Bishop David S. Doggett as president. This will be the sixth session of the conference held at Water Valley, 1870, 1879, 1895, 1908, 1922 and 1933, with Bishops Doggett, Kavanaugh, Fitzgerald, Morrison, Ainsworth and Denny presiding at the respective sessions.

In all, twenty-six different bishops have been president of the conference, Bishops Galloway and Candler each serving five years, the others ranging from one to four years each.

The conference has had only four secretaries, John Barcroft, J. S. Oakley, T. W. Lewis and J. R. Countiss; each serving as follows: Barcroft, 20 years; Oakley, 9; Lewis, 4; Countiss, 30. Lewis and Countiss are still living, Lewis now a member of the Memphis Conference.

According to records in the files of the New Orleans Christian Advocate the appointments to the Grenada District (Water Valley being in this district), and Water Valley Station were as follows: Presiding Elder, A. Kendall; Water Valley Station, W. L. Harrison.

At the first session of the conference in 1870, a class of fourteen young preachers were admitted on trial, among these were E. H. Moon, T. W. Dye, J. M. Boon, A. J. Foster and L. D. Worsham. The above mentioned, after having served the church and the Kingdom well, have fallen on sleep.

A class of seven remained on trial, and of this number two are still living, and will attend the session of the conference. They are Revs. J. J. Brooks and S. W. Miller. Brother Millier now lives at Frisco, Texas, while Brother Brooks continues in Mississippi. These brethren will have parts on the program of the Historical Society of the conference which holds its meeting Wednesday evening preceding the opening of the conference session.

Four laymen who attended that first session in 1870 are still living: J. B. Streater of Black Hawk, F. A. Howell, Durant; John L. Collins, Coffeeville; and P. A. Dulin, Aberdeen. Captain Collins is ninety-five years old, but hope is expressed that he may be able to attend the conference session.

This anniversary at Water Valley will be a fitting time for the conference to show its regard for the glorious leaders of the past by making a great forward movement for the momentous days that are now at our hand to be shaped for the Kingdom of God.

ANNUAL CONFERENCES ARE here again. Are they to be routine with the usual order of things? Will there be more anxiety about appointments than about time. Then we will vote to adopt without a word of debate or discussion. Seems that we Methodist preachers would vote a resolution to have ourselves shot at sunrise without noticing anything incongruous about it. What if the firing squad should show up?

There is no excuse this year for a dull and routine conference. Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment is practically assured. What program has our church for meeting the ancient enemy? The world is in turmoil and the jingo is abroad in the land trying to trump up a war. What plan has our church for combating international strife and spreading goodwill among men? Our government is in the midst of a vast effort of relief and recovery, of reconstruction and reform. What place does our church propose to take with reference to these matters? Has it any stake in the outcome? Doubt, cynicism and a rather general disintegration of personal faith is upon us. What program of evangelism has our church for the winning of men to the Christian faith and the Christian way of life? Our foreign missionary work is in peril; what is to be done about that?

General Conference meets within the bounds of our territory next May. What kind of delegates are we going to send to that great law-making body of our Methodism? Shall we send some of our favorites and make their election a compliment rather than the serious assignment of a very sacred responsibility to be discharged at a critical time? While we are interested in the platform of a candidate for public office we seem little concerned about the delegate to General Conference. It certainly would not be out of order to know something about what our delegates intend to stand for. Surely we should be as much interested for our church as for our government.

Let us approach our conference sessions with a careful searching of our hearts. Grave issues are before us. We are making church history or blindly surrendering our opportunity to do so. Let us not keep God waiting.

* * *

CAN THE METHODIST LAYMAN be saved? We are not speaking of his personal salvation or his chances of heaven, but rather his usefulness to the church? We are thinking of the working end of his faith, the operative side of his religious life.

We do not see how he can be saved if left the Kingdom? Or will our conferences have the grace and grit to rise to the challenge of the hour? We shall not be able to atone for our failures by religious services during the conference sessions even though they be led by our best evangelists. Many of our best men are away in board meetings at the time anyhow. And the others are much occupied with thoughts of the appointments.

The appointments should be divorced from the rest of the conference in time and place. With that out of the way the bishop, with the presiding elders, should call the preachers together for reports and real counsel and planning for the work of the various charges. Just what objectives do our conferences have? And what opportunity do we have to get these before the conference with the preachers in the proper mood to do anything constructive about them? Why, some of the greatest problems at all can be brought forward in reports of committees, but we can hardly wait to hear the report, if perchance, we happen to be in the conference at all at the

IN MEMORIAM—WILLIAM WINANS DRAKE, D.D.

By Franklin N. Parker

William Winans Drake was born at Magnolia Springs, near Natchez, Miss., June 19, 1871. He passed to his eternal home in Lake Charles, La., July 27, 1933. He was buried in Shreveport, La., from Noel Memorial Church, which church he had served with eminent success for a period beyond the regular term. The service was conducted by Bishop Dobbs assisted by brethren of the conference. It is fitting that the last resting place of his mortal body should be in the city where he labored much and near the college he loved so well.

He was a son of Rev. William Winans Drake, a devoted member of the Mississippi Conference, and a grandson of Dr. Benjamin M. Drake, one of the most distinguished pioneer preachers of the Southwest and one of the first men to effect a permanent position for Methodism in New Orleans. Brother Drake bore the honored name of William Winans as did his father, no doubt, named for the famous Dr. Winans, the comrade of Dr. B. M. Drake in the heroic days of Methodism in Mississippi.

His mother, Mrs. Alice Gorton Drake, was a woman of extraordinary Christian character and notable for her high qualities of mind and heart and social grace, and gifted with rare administrative ability. Being left a widow in early womanhood with a family of sons, she moved to Jackson, Louisiana, when Brother Drake was nine years of age, in order to place her sons in school and remained there until her sons had graduated from Centenary College. Besides her own sons many other young men felt the influence of her noble life in these college days.

Brother Drake graduated from Centenary College, June 6, 1888, before he was seventeen years of age. He was licensed to preach on the seventh of January, 1888. He preached his last sermon in Benton Church, Claiborne county, Miss. It appears from this that he was under the influence of definite religious convictions very early in his youth, and this is what we would expect. He was reared in a home permeated with a most genuine Christian life; his mother's influence every day of his life was a gospel, a witness to the truth and power of a genuine Christian experience and Christian purpose in life. He indicated his steadfast religious convictions in his student days, as a youth in Centenary College.

He was admitted on trial in the Mississippi Conference, December, 1888, and appointed to the Springfield charge, in the Woodville District. He served Bentonla charge, Jackson District, in 1889. His next appointment was to Raymond with Rev. L. S. Jones. During this year he went to Vanderbilt University. He was ordained Deacon by Bishop Charles B. Galloway at Canton, Miss., December, 1890. He located at the Conference which met in Brookhaven, December 9, 1891. In a personal letter from Dr. Thomas Carter to the writer he states that Brother Drake was a superior student in every respect.

He was re-admitted into the travelling connection in the Louisiana Conference, held at Lake Charles, La., December 14-19, 1892. Bishop Charles B. Galloway, of Mississippi, was the presiding bishop. He was ordained elder by Bishop Joseph S. Key at the Conference which met at Homer, December 17, 1893. While stationed at Crowley, La., he was married to Miss Nora Collier, September 19, 1895. His wife and two sons, Marlin W. and Walton, also a brother, Dr. B. M. Drake, of Jackson, Ga., survive him.

Dr. Drake was assigned to Crowley, 1893-1895; Franklin Station, 1896-1899; Felicite Street, New Orleans, 1900-1903; presiding elder of the Crowley District, 1904; again pastor at Crowley, 1906-1907; pastor at Lake Charles, 1908-1910; First Church, Baton Rouge, 1911-1913; Carrollton Avenue, New Orleans, 1914; Minden, 1915; Noel Memorial, Shreveport, 1916-1921; presiding elder, New Orleans District, 1922-1924; Ruston Station, 1925-1928; First Church, Monroe, 1929-1930; presiding elder, Lake Charles District, 1932-1933. From this record it will be seen that Brother Drake had a notable ministry in the Louisiana Conference. He received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Centenary College, an honor worthily bestowed and modestly worn.

From the beginning of his ministry he exhibited the qualities and characteristics that marked him as a man, a Christian and a preacher to the end of his more than forty years service. He was faithful to the details of his ministerial responsibilities. Whatever task was committed to him he accepted seriously and did not shrink from the inconvenience and difficulties involved. Always modest and retiring he was, nevertheless, indefatigable in the pursuit of the task committed to him. Throughout his ministry he had this definite characteristic of steadfast devotion to duty, not as a servant, but as a son, and one who loved the ministry of the Lord Jesus and did this work because he loved it, and felt that the love of Christ constrained him to make full proof of his ministry. He was not combative, but always took his stand on one side or the other of the varied questions that arose in the developing of Conference business and Conference-wide enterprises. He was particularly effective as a member of the Conference Board of Education and gave a great deal of his time to matters relating to our schools, and especially to the more difficult problems connected with their maintenance and extension. He was wise in counsel, patient and considerate in dealing with business matters, but adamant in his convictions of what was right and best. He served most faithfully as trustee of Centenary College, and as president of the Conference Board of Education, and also as one of the trustees of Southern Methodist University, at Dallas, Texas, where his service was highly appreciated by the authorities of that great denominational institution. No one can speak too highly of Brother Drake's service in this connection. I was a member of the Board of Education when he also was an officer of the Board, and I gladly express my high appreciation of his work in that capacity. Dr. Drake rendered conspicuous service as an accredited instructor of the General Board of Education.

BISHOP COLLINS DENNY
President of the North Mississippi and Mississippi Conferences.

It was the same on any committee to which he was assigned—you could depend upon Brother Drake to be there and do his part. If elected to an office, he would accept it even though it involved heavy demands upon his time and his mind and his heart. Although quiet and retiring, he was one of the most courageous men I ever knew. He also served as a member of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and was in constant demand for membership on boards and committees of his Conference.

As a pastor he excelled. I was intimately acquainted with his pastoral work in the city of New Orleans, and also in Baton Rouge. No man was ever more faithful in visiting his people and, from their testimony, he was looked upon as a man of spiritual sympathy, gracious counsel and steadfast friendship. As a preacher he was much above the average. I heard him often; his sermons were scriptural, were marked by deep spirituality and characterized by a very unusual gift in the use of effective language. Indeed, he excelled in his mastery of his mother-tongue. Whenever he wrote or spoke he exhibited this fine quality of genuine intellectual culture. During his pastorate in Baton Rouge I happened to spend several weeks there and heard him repeatedly, morning, night, and at prayer meeting, and I never heard an inferior sermon. He was instructive, stimulating and devotionally most helpful. I doubt if we have had a more successful, all-round pastor in the Louisiana Conference during the period of my association with that body in much over forty years.

Dr. Drake was a reader of good literature. Always a student he sought, as opportunity offered, the best and the strongest literature connected with the work of the ministry. He read to purpose, knew what to assimilate and what to reject. He was well acquainted with a wide field of the modern approach to religious doctrine and religious work. His mind was open to the new life of our day, but he remained steadfast in his devotion to the things that do not change. He was naturally gifted with a fine mind and applied himself to all the opportunities he had for improvement and the effective use of his powers in the work he loved so well.

His personal character was exceedingly attractive. He was a devoted husband and father. No one who has ever been in his home can forget his constant care and attentive interest in every member of his household. All of this was accompanied by a spirit of deep personal piety. In his early ministry he sought and obtained a deep enrichment in his Christian experience. His spiritual life throughout the years bore the abiding impress of the fact that he walked with God. He was a man deeply permeated with a spirit of prayer. In his private life he prayed much; his prayers in public were marked by a spirit of gracious devotion and intimate intercourse with God. He struck me, always, as fundamentally a religious man.

As I look back upon a friendship begun more than forty years ago, it seems to me that he always exhibited a high conscientiousness of purpose and an earnest desire to do the will of God, and was unfailing in his testimony to the keeping power of the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ. He was steadfast in his friendships. All who knew him cherished a conviction of the faithfulness and unselfishness of his friendship. But of this the memories of his fellow-workers bear witness, and I need not add to what all of his comrades in the ministry know so well. His last years were disturbed, at times, by ill health, but he went on cheerfully, toiling, doing his best, in season and out of season, unchanged in the daily conduct of life. He carried in his own heart whatever burdens he had and gave to the world and his friends the cheerful word, peace and service and tireless courage. In the last months of his life he pursued the course that we would expect, not willing to yield to the infirmity of a weakened physical condition. He toiled on as though nothing was the matter. Whatever may have been the thoughts of his heart in these last weeks, he kept it largely to himself, scattering sunshine and cheer in his home, endeavoring to spare everyone any burden or anxiety, as he always did. God gave him a buoyant and hopeful nature which triumphed by grace in all his greatest trials and sustained him during the severest burdens he was called upon to bear. During the last week of his life his strength failed rapidly. It was evident that he was conscious of the presence of Christ, and even after speech failed him he was conscious and hummed certain hymns through at different times. One was, "Close to Thee," another, "The Light of the World is Jesus," and there was still another great hymn in his mind and faintly on his lips as his life was ready to burst into the new and eternal life of the unseen world. So the end came to a man who was never too tired, or too busy, to do something else when called upon. His work was a joy; his consecration had come to be the natural atmosphere of his life. Let us thank God for his noble life and take courage, and carry on as he did.

REV. R. O. BROWN—AN APPRECIATION

By Rev. W. S. Shipman

Richardson Owen Brown, son of Judge Stephen Albert and Mary Owen Brown, was born at Columbus, Miss., May 9, 1860. He received his education at Franklin Academy, the local city high school. He was converted at the age of nine years and became a member of the Methodist Church. He was licensed to preach April 2, 1888, and was admitted on trial in the North Mississippi Conference at Holly Springs in December, 1889; was received into full connection and ordained deacon by Bishop Hendrix at Macon in December, 1891, and was ordained elder by Bishop Hargrove at Columbus in December, 1893. By a singular coincidence, he had been baptized at the hands of Bishop Hargrove, who was the family pastor in Columbus in 1860.

He was married to Miss Ada Smith Cicene, of Russellville, Ala., on Oct. 29, 1890. There were born to this happy union five daughters—Mrs. J. S. Mayfield, Amory, Miss.; Mrs. S. J. Berrier, Birmingham, Ala.; Mrs. W. H. Collins, Birmingham, Ala.; Mrs. J. P. Perkins, Jackson, Miss.; Mrs. G. C. Shelton, Clarksdale, Miss.

Two sisters and two brothers mourn the loss of this dear brother—Mrs. H. C. Pilkerton, May-hew. Miss.; Mrs. Mary Brown Tate, Columbus, Miss. The brothers are Rev. S. A. Brown, Sardis, 1891, Shaw and New Salem; 1892, Courtland; Miss.

Brother Brown served the following charges in the North Mississippi Conference: 1890, Belen; 1891, Shaw and New Salem; 1892, Courtland; 1893, Ethel; 1894-5-6, Wall Hill; 1897-8, Como; 1899, Lexington; 1900, Water Valley, Main St.; 1901, Prairie; 1902-3-4, Brooksville; 1905-6-7, Batesville; 1908-9, Indianola; 1910-11, Amory and Nettleton; 1912-13, Holly Springs; 1914-15, Macon; 1916-17-18, Clarksdale; 1919, Corinth; 1920, P. E. Durant District; 1921, Senatobia; 1922-23-24, Ruleville; 1925, Ackerman and Weir. At the Conference of 1925, he was granted a superannuate relation and remained on that roll till the end came.

Brother Brown died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. P. Perkins, Jackson, Miss., September 17, where the last administrations were tender and sweet. His body was taken to Amory and rested in state at the home of another daughter, Mrs. James S. Mayfield, and from there borne to the Methodist church, where funeral services were conducted by the pastor, T. C. Floyd, assisted by a number of the brethren.

Brother Brown was a Thirty-second Degree Mason, and at the close of the church services the Masons took charge, directed by Past Grand Master J. H. Johnson, of Ackerman, Miss.

The body was borne away amidst a great throng, prayers, songs and flowers to the Amory Masonic Cemetery, and the last sad rites were said, and his body laid to rest; but may we not fancy the real man walking the high hills of heaven?

To all of the above-mentioned appointments he went, served and worked faithfully, and some of them were very hard and poor circuits that took much grace and consecration to stay with, especially one reared as was R. O. Brown, but he worked on, doing the best he could under the circumstances. Then he was often called by the church to serve the best she had to give.

His work was usually highly satisfactory to his people; they loved him, and the manner in which he broke the bread of life to their hungry souls, but this was not surprising to many of us who knew him well; the people loved him because he first loved them.

His personal appearance was rather striking. To me it was salty. The stranger would be likely to ask, who is that meek and gentle-looking man? The pulpit was his throne of power; maybe not as ornate and as evangelistic as some, but always sound, instructive and often highly interesting; oftentimes the arrows went from his bow with such earnestness and pathos that they would fasten themselves like steel-barbed darts in the hearts of his auditors. By nature and culture, he had a voice that was delightful to hear; he seemed to have learned that his hearers appreciated the protection of their ear drums, something that many of us have not learned.

We say he is dead, but is it not true that from his own holy torch flame others, yes, many, have been lighted, and others, until we may fancy we can see the whole arch of the skies a flame of light and glory? Is this not what we mean when we say God buries his workmen but carries on his work? How blessed the righteous when he dies, when sinks a weary soul to rest, and passes his torch on to others.

That faithful little wife that he loved so tenderly he had to give up the 21st of August, 1904. As a father he was tender, gentle and kind, always a gentleman at home or elsewhere; and among his daughters he moved like a tender mother and noble father. His little grandchildren he was wont to love and fondle on his knees as long as he was able. To me he represented almost a perfect representative of the Master whom he loved with a very great love. A dependable man was he; you could trust him; he would not fail you.

A calmness and peace seemed to fill his soul as he neared the border land; he was not afraid, but bounded out into the great beyond with the gladness of a schoolboy to the playgrounds.

Dear Brother, we will soon catch up with you, for we will soon be a passenger on an untried sea, looking out for an unknown shore.

Lambert, Miss.

Our greatest difficulty is in that, while a small proportion of our laity practice Christian stewardship faithfully in the use of their annual income, a large majority keep far from it. If fifty per cent of our membership could be induced to practice tithing for twelve months the value of the experiment would be invaluable. If this number would also read the Conference organ, the Methodist Layman and the World Outlook a new day would dawn in the spiritual life of the Church.

J. M. SULLIVAN.

OUR BATTERIES DOWN

Dear Mr. Editor: The quadrennial tinkers are sure that if we would take out several "parts" from the Methodist Machine that it could run a lot faster and smoother. The main contention is, that it takes too much gas and oil to run it economically. It looks as if we would leave off a few bishops and presiding elders, do away with several of the boards and most all of the secretaries, that we might save a big sum of money, good money, that would be sure to go to other and more worthy causes, for instance the worn out preachers and to missions. I can't help but wonder how far we could travel without any steering gear. It seems to me that our batteries are run down and we do not know how to recharge them. If everything were to be done that has been suggested we would have a wreck that it might be impossible to repair. Just suppose we leave the dear old machine as it is, with one addition, a fresh baptism of the Holy Spirit. If the delegates and visitors to the next General Conference would spend ten days in fasting and prayer, we would not need many new laws, but we would have a new Church. We may talk about "a new deal," a new day and all that sort of thing, but all we need is the fullness of the Holy Spirit upon our leaders. God filling us would settle our money problems, our salary problems, and all else that needs to be straightened out. When will we ever learn. "It is not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts?"

HABAKKUK AND JONAH TRANSLATION

By S. L. Dubberly

Southern Methodist University School of Theology was recently presented with a copy of a new translation of the book of Habakkuk and Jonah.

The translating was done collectively by Arthur P. Monk, Donley Emberson, Lance Webb, Ephraim Conway, Kenneth R. Hemphill, and Ennis B. Hill under the supervision of Dr. Hicks, Professor of Old Testament. The Introduction and commentaries to this work were written by Mr. Hemphill and Mr. Hill. These two students had the translation of the two books bound in one volume and in this fashion presented an evidence of their research and study to the Theological library. This gift, which was dedicated to Dr. Hicks, was officially received by President Sealeman, Dean Hawk and Mrs. Warnick, librarian.

MONROE DISTRICT EXPECTS GOOD YEAR

Every Charge Reports Progress; 577 New Members Enrolled.

By Rev. R. R. Branton

According to reports given at a meeting of ministers and laymen at Monroe on October 12, the Monroe District is pressing toward the completion of a very successful year's work. All phases of the church were reviewed as to progress during the year, and in no case was there lacking evidence of forward movement. The addition of 577 new members to the various churches of the district is evidence that the spiritual side of the church has not been neglected. Reports also showed that the financial interests of the church have received due consideration during the year. Although the district has labored under what is perhaps the most trying financial stress of its history, ministers and laymen alike were optimistic as to the final report. There seems to be enthusiasm plus a spirit of sacrificial giving that will meet the needs of our church. Encouraging reports came from all charges of the district with reference to both benevolences and pastor's salaries. There is no charge that has not already made progress along both lines. Special emphasis was placed upon getting all claims "in full." Some of the pastors are sure that the goal is already in sight, and all others pledged themselves to make an "Honest Endeavor" to have all financial claims in hand for the final report.

In ignorance of the meaning and work of the church as we face the difficult duties and overwhelming opportunities of our time. The pastor is not to be excused for ignorance of his task, nor for withholding necessary information, training and guidance to his laymen. How many of our members, even the officials, have a profitable, edifying and working knowledge of the Bible? How many know anything of the history and doctrines and discipline of our church? How many are familiar with the spirit and genius of Methodism?

How can he be saved if he remains aloof from the official meetings of the church? Of what use and value are laity rights if they be not matched with an active sense of laity responsibility? How may the layman remove the complaint that it is a preacher-controlled church? The remedy lies close to his own hands. Where are the laymen at a quarterly conference, a district conference, an annual conference? Does the layman not presume that he has business matters of more importance than the business of his church? And does not his pastor encourage him in this presumption?

Certainly the layman's time is valuable and he does not care to sit around an annual conference when nothing of importance seems to be going on. Then the bishop, with his advisors, should so arrange the conference schedule as to make it more convenient for the laymen to be there at the particular time they are needed.

Surely he cannot be saved so long as he regards his church as a self-operative organization able to get on and render effective service without the same intelligence and effort and sacrifice as are required to make any other business a success. We have many laymen who are excellent executives and business administrators, men of splendid mental gifts. What percent of this ability and energy is being employed in behalf of and through the church?

The layman cannot be saved without becoming thoroughly incorporated with the church, its programs, its purposes, its ideals, and with a relentless sense of responsibility for their survival and high consummation.

The layman cannot be saved without a religious experience in his personal life expressing itself after the Christian pattern in his business and social relations. This is being brought home to us more painfully every day. Numbers of laymen of Christian churches have tried to be loyal to their churches with one hand and loyal to the world with the other. They have tried to serve God and Mammon. Jesus said, It cannot be done.

But the layman is not entirely to blame for this. Have we not failed the layman by preaching to him a truncated gospel? Have we not led our laymen to feel that a certain type of church loyalty was sufficient? Have we helped him to pioneer his way into the more complex fields of Christian social responsibility? Can we say with Paul, For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God?

Finally, the layman cannot be saved without his pastor, and the pastor cannot be saved without his layman. But bound together by the same realization of Christian experience, intelligence and purpose, they will not only be saved but they will prove invincible in this day of exceptional peril and abounding opportunity.

ADVOCATE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE MEETS CHALLENGE OF THE DEPRESSION

Subscription Price Placed at One Dollar

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate met for its annual session at the office of the Advocate in New Orleans, Thursday, October 19. North Mississippi Conference was represented by Drs. J. H. Felts, V. C. Curtis and L. M. Lipscomb; Mississippi Conference by Dr. J. T. Leggett, Rev. Otto Porter and Mr. J. O. Emmerich; Louisiana Conference by Drs. F. L. Wells and W. L. Duren. Dr. A. M. Serex alone being absent.

The most optimistic meeting for quite a season was justified by the very gratifying reports for the fiscal year. Through the splendid co-operation of the presiding elders and pastors the financial report indicated that, notwithstanding the difficult times, there was, for the year, an income of $2,464.32 over expenses. This amount, the result of the recent Eightieth Anniversary Campaign, reduced the deficit of the previous year from $2,971.91 to $1,506.58, quite an accomplishment in the face of the strenuous economic year just passed.

By unanimous action of the Committee the price of the Advocate was put at one dollar per year. It is believed by the Committee that our people will respond to such a price with the best subscription list that we have had for years, wipe out the remaining deficit and put the paper back on a self-sustaining basis.

Resolutions commending the work of the editor and business manager were passed.

Resolutions honoring the memory of the late Dr. W. W. Drake, a member of the Publishing Committee, were drafted, to appear shortly in the Advocate.

Rev. D. B. Raulins, D.D., was re-elected editor and Mr. C. Milton Chalmers was re-elected business manager.

Dr. W. L. Duren was elected chairman of the Committee, Dr. J. T. Leggett, vice-chairman, and Dr. V. C. Curtis, secretary.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, made a call to the office last week while on business in the city.

Rev. H. B. Hines, pastor at Lake Providence, La., accompanied by his son, while on business in the city, called at the Advocate office.

Fifteen new men are trying out for the Millsaps College band. The band is a unit of the 106th Engineers, Mississippi National Guard.

Mr. Lennie Dubberly is our reporter for Southern Methodist University. Be on the lookout for items of interest from this great institution.

Mr. E. Clay Milby will assist Rev. H. B. Hines, pastor at Lake Providence, La., in revival services beginning November 8.

Mrs. J. Henry Bowdon, wife of our pastor at Arcadia, La., has just been operated on for appendicitis at Schumpert Sanitarium, Shreveport. Latest reports are that her condition is quite satisfactory.

Rev. Geo. H. Jones, pastor at Montrose, Miss., an accredited instructor in the Cokesbury Course, recently completed the study, "The Christian Religion, Its Meaning and Mission," with two classes on his charge, a total of twenty-six credits being issued.

Rev. A. P. Stephens, evangelist of the North Mississippi Conference, recently conducted a successful meeting at Sees' Chapel in the Logtown, Miss., charge. Ten were added to the membership of the church and the church greatly strengthened.

Rev. J. C. Rousseaux, pastor of the Many and Zwolle charge, Louisiana, recently delivered a series of sermons on the Logtown, Miss., charge for the pastor, Rev. J. D. Ellis. Brother Rousseaux was received generously and met with good

A number of people have expressed a desire for greater spirituality in the Advocate. Some have wanted to find an altar in its pages. Look in this number for a column called, "The Tent of Meeting." If you like the material found there, or similar material, let us know.

Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth, reporting progress on the Brookville, Miss., charge for the year, tells how a fine class of young men in his Sunday school are having the Advocate sent to the local barber shop so the boys can read while they wait for a hair cut. That seems to be a new and excellent place for the Advocate.

On the evening of October 16, Prof. W. G. Phelps, Department of Classical Languages, Centenary College, was on the air at Station KWKH, Shreveport, with a message on "Vergil, the Religious Teacher of Rome." Mr. Joe B. Hamiter was on at the same hour, 9 p. m., October 23, discussing "American Youth Organization."

We have received a copy of the program of the American League Against War and Fascism. We beg to suggest that, while it is well for us to oppose many things, it might be wise for us to develop an intelligent and heroic support of democratic and Christian principles in our American life. We need a positive program.

On the second Sunday in October, Centenary College students, with the faculty and Board of Trustees, were guests of First Methodist Church, Shreveport. Bishop Dobbs delivering the sermon, the subject of which was, "The Privilege of Responsibility." President Cline preceded Bishop Dobbs with a word of thanks to First Church for its excellent cooperation with the college.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs preached for our congregation at Lake Providence, recently. Following the service the Bishop was the guest of the laymen of the church, together with Dr. David Amacher, at a dinner in the local hotel. Dr. Jno. G. Snelling, superintendent of the Memorial Mercy Home, New Orleans, was the preacher for the evening hour.

Word has just reached us that Dr. H. T. Carley, presiding elder of the Monroe District and former editor of the Advocate was stricken with an acute attack of appendicitis on Friday of last week and was immediately rushed to the Hospital at Monroe, La., for an emergency operation. The latest report on his condition is that he is doing as well as can be expected. Let all our readers remember him in our prayers.

On October 12, Camp W. J. Conerly, Jr., a Boy Scout Camp, five miles west of Gloster, Miss., was dedicated. Rev. J. H. Morrow, our pastor at Gloster, who has taken a leading part in securing the ground for this camp, was master of ceremonies. A splendid lake is a prominent feature of the camp. Civic and religious tone was given to the program and the launching of the camp by the appearance of both lay citizens and the pastors of the churches on the program.

What a great meeting we had at the Advocate office the other day. It was the occasion of the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee. Drs. F. L. Wells, W. L. Duren, J. T. Leggett, Otto Porter, Mr. J. O. Emmerich, Drs. J. H. Felts, V. C. Curtis and L. M. Lipscomb were here. Only one member, Dr. A. M. Serex, was absent. The meeting was cheerful, constructive and forward-looking. More extended notice of the meeting will be found elsewhere.

Rev. Carl F. Lueg, pastor at Delhi, La., reports splendid crowds and good interest at the meeting in his church being conducted by Rev. J. B. Grambling, pastor at Mer Rouge, La. An interesting feature of this meeting was the advertising. A card of a different color each day, bearing the subject of the sermon and other announcements, was passed out each day. Some of the subjects were, "Why a Revival," "We Do Our Part; Wall Builders," "The Mirror of Service," "The Crime of Consent," (Young People's Night), "The City That Voted God Out," "The Answer to Your Present Day Problems."

The School of Theology of Southern Methodist University recently had the high privilege of an address by Dr. Edmund D. Soper, president of Ohio Wesleyan University. The occasion was chapel exercises on October 13 and the subject, "The Task of the Minister." Dr. Soper said that his subject was threadbare, but perennially new. Said he, "The ministry of today has more opportunity to stabilize the thought life of the people concerning religious matters, including belief in God and an unselfish spirit in their duty toward man." Dr. Soper was formerly a member of the faculty of Candler School of Theology, Emory University, Atlanta, Ga.

Occasionally we have carried jokes in the Advocate, perhaps in more ways than one, and we have been criticized for wasting valuable space. Well, perhaps it is not best to put them all down in one column. One hates to take one hearty laugh right after another, and digestion does not require it. We may put one in occasionally in this column as a joke is in order at a party. And if we can pull the wrinkles out of your face for even one second you should be grateful. "An old Negro visited a doctor and was given definite instructions as to what he should do. Shaking his head, he was about to leave the office, when the doctor said, 'Here, Rastus, you forgot to pay me.' 'Pay you for what, Boss?' 'For my advice,' replied the doctor. 'Naw, suh! I aint qwine to take it,' and Rastus shuffled out."

THE TENT OF MEETING

DIVINE DISCONTENT

By Rev. T. F. King

One of the effects of sincere, and earnest communion with God is the development of a strange discontent. God is a great disturber of soul serenity. The Bread of Life, whilst satisfying the profound desires within me, creates at the same time new unrest, and a new hunger. As my life in God deepens and grows, new depths, which I knew not existed, are opened up within me, so that I cry out in passionate longing for greater fellowship with God, and greater fellowship with man.

Here is a paradox: the paradox which truth in its profundity ever presents. That which satisfies also dissatisfies, by creating new longings, and greater hopes. Thus I find, that abiding in Christ I can not remain on a low level of spiritual attainment. I must press forward, onwards and upwards to God. Abiding in Christ and seeing myself, my sins, and my shame, I must strive to the heights of holiness which God has revealed in Christ. Abiding in Christ, there is created within me, a dissatisfaction with the world in which I live. Mere condemnation however is of no avail, for denunciation without love is wrong. God calls me not only to fellowship with Him, but to fellowship with man. In this fellowship I in a manner I cannot fathom, enter into oneness with all humanity. So that the sins of my brother become my shame. The awful evils of the world are a load which I must stoop to bear. I, in Christ, am a sin-bearer, and the world thrusts upon me a cross, which I must carry. But Divine Love is omnipotent in its strength, and the burden is a joy.

So out of the dissatisfaction within me, and out of the great longings of my soul, I pray for the coming of a greater day when the Will of God shall be done on earth, even as it is in heaven.

NOTICE CONCERNING OPENING OF LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE

After conferring with the presiding elders, I wish to announce that the Louisiana Conference will meet Wednesday evening, October 22, at 7:30 o'clock, in the First Methodist Church of Winfield, La. Immediately after the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, the Conference will be organized and the schedule made for the following day.

All examining committees are requested to be ready to make their reports on Thursday morning among the first items of business.

HOYT M. DOBBS,
Bishop in Charge.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

In accordance with the Conference resolution passed at the last session of the Conference the Circuits of the Conference are to report the totals for the charge only in making their statistical report to the Conference.

Due to the fact that our Conference session lasts only three days it will be a physical impossibility to do the statistical work of the Conference unless the preachers give in their reports by the first day of the Conference Session. It will be of very great assistance to the statistical secretaries if the preachers will mail their reports for Tables 1 and 2 to me at least ten days before the Conference Session opens. By so doing we can have these two tables compiled and it will leave us only Table No. 3 or the Finance Table, to complete during the Conference Session. I will greatly appreciate the assistance of the preachers if they will mail these tables to me, as requested above, and if they will be sure to have Table No. 3, and any corrections for Tables 1 and 2, ready to hand in on the morning of the first day of the Conference Session.

Thanking you for your full cooperation and assuring you that we will give the very best service possible in preparing the Statistics for the Conference, I am,

Cordially,
ROBT. W. VAUGHN,
Statistical Secretary.

ATTENTION. LOUISIANA CONFERENCE PASTORS

Arrangements have recently been made with the business manager of the Advocate to print a goodly number of Benevolent Collection Envelopes for use in assisting our pastors in raising their Conference claims.

These envelopes can be had without cost by addressing a card to Mr. C. M. Chalmers, care New Orleans Christian Advocate, 512 Camp St., New Orleans. In writing, state clearly the number of envelopes desired, name of charge, and person to whom envelopes are to be forwarded.

MRS. HENRY H. HARRIS—AN APPRECIATION

Mrs. Henry H. Harris was Miss Minnie A. Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Young, of Marshall County, Miss. She was born March 29, 1849.

Mrs. Harris grew to womanhood in the county of her birth, and at the age of 22 was married to Dr. Henry H. Harris, who practiced medicine at Loosahama, Victoria and Tyro, Miss. Dr. Harris passed to his reward while living at Tyro at the age of 56. After the passing of her husband, Mrs. Harris moved to Gulfport, Miss., which became her home until, with others members of the family, she moved to San Antonio, Texas, in 1914.

In early girlhood Mrs. Harris gave her life to God and joined the Methodist church. When she came to San Antonio she cast her lot with the Alamo Heights Methodist Church, in which she served loyally and faithfully till she joined the Church Triumphant. She loved the church and all of its interests, and in its associations made many warm friends who were loyal to her and to whom she was truly devoted. She was fond of her church papers and read the New Orleans Christian Advocate from the time of her early married life until she went to the heavenly home. She was a tender, considerate mother, a true and loyal friend, and a beautiful, consistent Christian.

Some three years since Mrs. Harris was taken with a stubborn case of the flu that greatly impaired her health, and from which she never fully recovered. The last few months of her life she was practically a shut-in. But to the end she was bright, cheerful and happy, and never lost interest in the progress of current events and the growth and ongoing of the Kingdom of God.

Wednesday morning, September 27, like a babe in its mother's arms, she went to sleep in everlasting rest. From the little church she loved and served for 19 years, and in the presence of a large group of admiring friends, who silently wept for her loss here. The pastor conducted the funeral service.

Mrs. Harris is survived by five children—John Young Harris, of Electra, Texas; Mrs. Betty H. Gillespe and Mrs. Lawrence B. Joyce, of San Antonio, Texas; Mrs. Harper Johnson, of Senatobia, Miss., and Mrs. Leon K. McNeese, of Florence, Ala.

Her pastor,
T. F. SESSIONS,
San Antonio, Texas.

Answering a Fool Question
Jones was fat and forty years, says a correspondent. Just as he arrived at the station the 3.15 was pulling out. He burst into his heavy speech amid the cheers of the onlookers and their bets as to whether he would make it. But his heavy girth would not overcome the train's handicap and he quit the losing race at the end of the freight yards and returned.
"Miss your train, sir?" asked the porter cheerfully.
Jones flicked a speck of dust from his coat-sleeve.
"No, my friend," he replied. "Oh, no. I was just chasing it out of the yard. You oughtn't to allow it around here. Don't you see the tracks it's left?"

Executive Ability?
He was called the laziest man in the colored congregation. His hatred of toil was known far and wide. He professed conversion in the revival meeting. His friends wondered if his new religion would change his habits. When the preacher called on him to pray, they found out. In his prayer they noted the words, "Use me, Lord, use me in an advisory capacity."

Ach! Wurrah! Wurrah!
At an Irish convention in Dublin I note recently two sentences in the speeches of two sons of Erin back from "the States." One of them said: "I left Ireland fifty-three years ago a naked little boy, without a dollar in my pocket." Said the other: "Until last week I had never set foot in the land of my birth."

weight——

The youngster who has no appetite, probably has stasis. A little syrup of figs will soon correct this condition—then watch the child eat—and gain!

Mothers should never coax a child to eat. Nature knows best. Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite—get rid of stasis. Children who don't eat are sluggish. Read what the "California treatment" is doing for sluggish, listless children in every part of the country!

A POUND A WEEK. Your child will eat well from the day and hour you conquer sluggishness. But that girl or boy with furry tongue and a bad breath should not be dosed with salts!

Begin tonight, with enough pure syrup of figs to cleanse the colon thoroughly. Less tomorrow, then every other day, or twice a week, until the appetite, digestion, weight, complexion, tell you the stasis is gone. When a cold or other ailment has again clogged the system, syrup of figs will soon set things to right.

When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, California syrup of figs will gently stimulate the colon muscles—and the child you used to coax to eat will fairly devour his food.

An eminent clergyman once defined Christianity as follows:

In the home it is kindness.
In hushness it is honesty.
In society it is courtesy.
In work it is fairness.
Toward the unfortunate it is pity.
Toward the weak it is help.
Toward the wicked it is resistance.
Toward the strong it is trust.
Toward the penitent it is forgiveness.
Toward the fortunate it is congratulations.
Toward God it is reverence and love.

Something less than twenty years ago, when Kathleen Norris was a writer whose name was just beginning to be one to conjure with on the newsstand, she came into New York, to go to work at the dismaying task of picking up the scattered pieces of her life. It had been broken by the death of her two little girls and now her small son was an only child.

At Bellevue Hospital she learned of an unsanctioned baby which a young mother dared not acknowledge, and agreed to take this baby for her own. This healing start of a new interest in life had been going on for

Why Children Need
a Liquid Laxative

The temporary relief children get from some synthetic, habit-forming cathartic may cause bowel strain, and even set-up irritation in the kidneys. A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to give the child "a double dose" a day or two later.

Can constipation be corrected in children? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say many mothers who have followed this sensible medical advice: 1. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Give the dose you find suited to the system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until the bowels are moving regularly without aid.

An approved liquid laxative (one that is widely used for children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The mild laxative action of this excellent preparation is the best form of help for children—and grown-ups, too. The dose can be regulated for any age or need.

Your druggist has Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Member N. R. A.

two weeks when, on one of her daily visits to the hospital she was met by the head nurse with the news that the baby had died. It was, one may guess, a benumbed Kathleen Norris who stared into the future, only half listening to the head nurse. I suspect she was a profoundly wise woman, that nurse, for she kept on talking. She talked of how, though mere birth and death were all part of the day's work in any hospital, the breaking of bad news was always the hardest part of her job.

For instance, she was at that very moment faced with the distressing task of telling a shabby little boy in the ante-room that a half hour before, his mother had died, the mother who had been all in all to the eight-year old youngster. "I don't suppose," she suggested hesitantly, "that you would go out and tell him for me."

You must picture for yourself how Mrs. Norris dried her eyes and went forth to this new assignment. How she began by drifting casually into the ante-room, took a seat there, and finally scrapped an acquaintance with the boy who sat by himself. My, hut she was hungry. She had half a mind to run across the street for a bite to eat, but she did so hate to go alone. Would her young friend care to come along? No, his mother might wake up, and then he would be called—the nurse had promised. But that could be arranged. They would leave word where they could be found, and then the nurse could telephone, if she should wake, who would not wake again. After this meal together, during which the two friends got along famously, Mrs. Norris used the same device for persuading him to come to her hotel and see some books and her own little boy. It was twilight before she told him what had happened, but by then it was a friend who told him, a friend in whose arms he could cry himself asleep. Well, that is the end of the chapter, although it is not, by a long shot, the end of the story. That little boy is Bill Norris today. He is a grown-up now. The last time I had news of him, he was a star reporter on the Pacific coast, and the very apple of her eye.—Alexander Woolcott in Cosmopolitan.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Electric Mills was hostess to a "Fellowship Tea" at the Community House, at which fifty-seven guests were present, each member having invited a guest. The following unique program was presented.

But we'll hope you'll have it pleasantly end.—Dr. Rolf Hunt.

Mrs. Davis.

Each of these numbers was presented in an interesting way, making the program unusual and entertaining. The out of town guests were Rev. Rolf Hunt of Lauderdale and Mrs. St. John of Meridian, district secretary.

In Memoriam

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom saw fit to transplant to "A house not made with hands" the spirit of our faithful president, loving friend and diligent co-worker, Mrs. Guella Guice Prickett, the members realize their loss, but rejoice they were permitted to come in contact with this noble christian woman there by learning to appreciate her love, friendship and knowledge born of close fellowship with God, Therefore be it Resolved, by the Winnsboro Missionary Society: That the Methodist church, Sunday school and the Woman's Missionary Society has lost one of its most faithful members. That we mourn her loss, but rejoice in her eternal gain.

That we commend her loved ones to the Savior whom she so faithfully served and pray that God may have the right of way in their lives as He did in hers and that some day they may meet her in the realms beyond.

That these resolutions be kept on record by our Missionary Society, a copy be given to the bereaved family, one be sent to the Franklin Sun and one to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, the Louisiana League for Peace and Freedom has labored for many years to create a public sentiment in the city of New Orleans for disarmament and world peace, and

Whereas, the international situation grows more critical each day, threatening the very structure of civilization, with the burden of armaments reaching staggering proportions, and

Whereas, the Disarmament Conference at Geneva is making an honest and earnest effort to express the will of the peoples of the world for disarmament and world peace. Therefore be it

Resolved, that we, the Louisiana League for Peace and Freedom in session today with Representatives of the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Y. M. H. A., and Y. W. H. A. The Catholic Association for International Peace and all its regional chapters, express to the Disarmament Conference our entire confidence in their efforts for reduction and limitation of armaments and our thorough support of the policy as expressed in the six point program of the International Consultative group. Be it further

Resolved, that we convey to the Conference how earnest is our desire that some plan be evolved which shall bring about a lasting and effective cooperation among the nations of the world.

AN OLD TIME METHODIST REVIVAL BY WAY OF THE ALTAR

Dear Brother Raulins: We have just closed a revival at Baxterville, on the Columbia Mission. The people said it was the best revival that had been held there since Brother Dan Kelly held a revival there. We had thirty conversions. People that were church members came to the Altar and said, "We are not saved and never have been saved." They prayed for forgiveness and found God in the pardon and forgiveness of sin. Mothers came with their sons. Friends came and brought friends and prayed for them until they confessed Christ. And a large number came and dedicated their lives to Him. Baptists were in the Altar as well as Methodists. I believe the safe est and best way into the Kingdom of God is by the way of the altar. I believe when we left the altar and went after the lost in the modern way we adopted something that is foreign to Methodism. No, I am not trying to put the giant oak back into the acorn. But to get Christlikeness into our people we will have to rebuild the old torn-down altar.

The Blue Eagle, that the world stands in need of is found in (Chro. 2:7-14). If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land.

Sincerely,

OLIA NIX,

Sumrall, Miss.

RINGGOLD, LA., CHURCH LOOKS TO CONFERENCE

Nearly All Salaries in Full, With Benevolences Far in Advance of 1932

Dear Editor: I wonder if you can find space in the Advocate for a brief report of our work here at Ringgold. If so we are glad to say that at our fourth quarterly conference all of our churches, save one, assured us that the salaries of the pastor and presiding elder will be paid in full, and the Benevolences are already far in advance of last year. Among the many things that added pleasure to the session was the unanimous adoption of the following resolutions:

Whereas, it has been our happy privilege to have as our presiding elder this year the Rev. R. M. Brown, in whom we have found an ideal citizen, an earnest and devoted member of the ministry, a lover of men, a truly great and efficient leader in the cause of Christ. Therefore be it

Resolved, that we, the members of the Ringgold quarterly conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, do hereby extend to him our sincere and heartfelt appreciation for his splendid leadership, lovely spirit, and efficient service during the year. Be it further

Resolved, that a copy of the resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

WAR PROFITEERS HELD MENACE TO DISARMAMENT

The frank announcement in the papers of September 1 that the awarding of contracts for $90,000,000 for aviation and motorization of the army depends on the outcome of the Disarmament Conference should open the people's eyes to the influence of the war-makers. Such a statement was simply a dare to those who profit from war to bring about the failure of the Conference.

Not satisfied with the $238,000,000 allotted from the $3,300,000,000 public works fund for a naval building program (over 7 per cent of the total) and the $6,000,000 for munitions, $39,000,000 more has been demanded for airplanes, $77,000,000 for "modernization" of ships and $37,000,000 for new and naval bases.

The plea was made largely in the name of labor, which it was said would benefit in employment to the extent of 85 per cent of the total allocated for naval building.

According to statistics compiled by the Labor Department, labor's share of every dollar spent for classes of work involved in naval construction as well as in building, such as structural steel, electrical wiring and fixtures, plumbing, painting and carpenter work, averages 37 cents. The other 63 cents goes for material.

Naval building as a means for decreasing unemployment is also open to grave objection on the ground that it provides unproductive employment. Norman Angell has stated the distinction between productive and unproductive employment as follows:

"We see a warship being built and employing hundreds of men, and these by their expenditure in turn employing hundreds of others, the whole helping trade. We are then apt to say, 'to deny that such expenditure gives employment, or that its cessation would create unemployment, is to deny the evidence of our senses.'

"Let us see. Where did the money to build the battleship come from? Out of your pocket as a taxpayer. What would you have done with it if the tax collector had not taken it? Most of it would have gone into expenditures on wanted things, an addition to the house, an extra year at school for the boy, a summer holiday, a new car or more thorough repairs to the old furniture, clothing. . . . That expenditure has not been made. Would it not have created employment if it had been? In other words, to put men to work in Portsmouth or on the Tyne, the tax collector has taken them out of work, or prevented them being employed, in Birmingham, or Bristol or Belham. Even if the taxpayer saved his money and put it in a bank, ultimately it would be invested to build a house, or a theatre, or a new railroad, also giving employment."

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

I MET A LADY the other day right in the middle of the front page of a daily newspaper. I was struck by her appearance, but was about to pass her by when I caught a straight and knowing look in her eyes. I stopped. Her left forefinger was pointing to a big pile of cowpeas on a table in front of her, and the forefinger of her right hand was pointing to a much reduced pile of cowpeas on the left.

I said, "Well, what is the trouble?"

She said, "This big pile of cowpeas to my left, weighing eight and one-half pounds, brings the farmer ten cents after he had paid for hauling them into the city. This little pile here to my right, weighing one pound and nine ounces, is what the housewife of New Orleans gets for ten cents when she goes to the market to get peas to shell for dinner."

I smiled, not seeing any point much to it, and thinking of the city folks eating cowpeas and having the fun of shelling them just like folks on the farm.

But she kept looking at me. "I am looking," she said, "for the difference paid the retailer and the producer."

Lady, I said, that is an interesting question. "Why can't the farmer get more money for his peas and the consumer get more peas for his money?" she asked.

Mrs. Smith, I said, what are you up to anyhow? What do you want to bother me with the cowpeas for? I don't catch on to the excitement. What is your answer to the riddle?

She said, "It's a case of too much middleman."

"I snapped awake then and the scales tumbled from my eyes. She was not joking. When she used that word 'middleman' my memory machinery meshed and I recalled, when a student, how I had learned something about the 'middleman.'"

Do you mean to tell me, Mrs. Smith, I asked, that the farmer broke his ground, planted his peas, cultivated them, picked them, bought gasoline for his truck, hauled them in here, paying his ferry fee, and then just got ten cents for that eight and a half pounds of good old cowpeas, ready to shell for dinner? And do you mean that when my wife goes down to the store to get some of those cowpeas for my dinner that she gets only one pound and nine ounces for ten cents?

"That's it exactly," said Mrs. Smith.

Then I was off to war.

Why, you are right, I said. Middleman? Why that is a case where the middle is so big and long that there is no place left for the two ends. I'm with you. What's your idea?

"What I have said about these cowpeas is equally true of other vegetables. And this explains why farmers dump truckloads of them on the road or plow them under in the field. That middleman is getting just about all of it. The farmer is not getting enough to pay expenses, and you are not getting enough peas for your dinner. I have been trying to get New Orleans to establish a market for these farmers so they can get more money for their peas and so you can get more peas for your money. The farmers have had enough of promises, now they want some performance."

My friends, this is not an isolated case. That middleman business has got the farmer by the throat. If you have got to keep him up at that price, build that market and take the middleman out to your place and take care of him there. You can do it cheaper. Let us do some studying on this matter, and let us then do something intelligent about it. And it will be good for your religion too.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT spoke the right word to the American Legion when he said, "No person, because he wore a uniform must thereafter be placed in a special class of beneficiaries over and above all other citizens. The fact of wearing a uniform does not mean that he can demand and receive from his government a benefit which no other citizen receives. It does not mean that because a person served in the defense of his country, performed a basic obligation of citizenship, he should receive a pension from his government because of a disability incurred after his service had terminated and not connected with that service."

It is a courageous and timely statement. Apparently the President had nothing in the way of political gain to expect from such a statement.

And we take pride in the fact that the Legion took the President's message in the right spirit.

It has never been made clear just why a fellow who wore a uniform for a few months and never smelled powder except on the rifle range should be given a fifty-year vacation at the expense of other hard-working citizens.

The American Legion is an influential organization, and it is to be hoped that, when it gets over its adolescence, it will become one of the most valuable supports of good government and one of the best examples of good citizenship. As soon as it gets off of the receiving end of the line and appears at the giving end it will be getting under way toward that high purpose.

And there is evidence that the Legion may do just that. Listen! The Associated Press is speaking: "A plan for the American Legion to fight crime through its thousands of posts in all of the forty-eight states was added today to the long list of subjects for discussion."

With the Legion registering itself behind law enforcement we may expect to see a decided improvement in conditions. And it will be in order for all law-abiding citizens to join them in such effort.

LET HIM THAT STOLE, steal no more, said Paul.

Mr. Wiggin, upon discovery that he had no defensible right to his $100,000 annual pension, has decided that he should give it back.

Of course this was a rather small item—since his salary had been $250,000 per year. And he admitted that the companies responsible for its payment felt that he was worth that. He should have saved up a little from this for a "rainy day." This $100,000 retirement fund was for pin money. Unless he lives to an unusual old age he will hardly need it.

Well, he wasn't worth it; and no man in the country is worth $250,000 a year. There is neither sense nor proportion in it. And it is exceedingly doubtful whether or not that much money can be amassed annually without serious infringement upon honor and fair dealing.

Yes, I read the newspaper reports of the investigations being conducted by the committee under the direction of Lawyer Pecora. And it is a sordid record. I rise to suggest that the records of this investigation, without any coloring from either side, be combined in a volume and made available to the public, that it be required in our schools and that our pastors and church people everywhere be urged to read it. Let all the facts be put down without malice. Let the record of the investigation stand as it is made.

The volume should carry a few cuts of the prominent financial leaders and beneath their names should be some of their most revealing replies to questions. Under Mr. Wiggin we might place this: "At the time of the agreement to pay me annual compensation of $100,000, it was believed to be in the best interests of the bank. As the agreement has been criticized, I beg to request that it be terminated." Near Mr. Morgan's page we might place this statement:

Pecora: "Having learned about the financial condition in Cuba, they apparently were thinking about unloading the other $30,000,000 on the public. Do you think they could have sold these to the public if the public had known what the bank knew?"

(Mr. Morgan, replying in a voice so low that it was inaudible at the press table, was quoted by the official reporter as replying).

Morgan: "I think so. I have not seen anything in the record that would make that impossible."

THE RENT VEIL

(A REFORMATION SUNDAY MEDITATION)

BY REV. A. M. SEREX, Ph.D.

"And the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom." (Mark 16:38)

Four pillars of acacia wood, overlaid with gold, resting on four silver sockets; between these pillars, a large curtain of fine linen, dyed in blue, purple and scarlet, bearing embroidered in the fabric, large cherubim with wings spread wide: It is the veil of the temple of Jerusalem.

This veil surrounds the Holy of Holies; the dwelling place of the Presence of God. Common folk never enter this sanctuary. How could any ordinary person see God face to face? Only a privileged race: the priests may pretend to this perfect communion; a chosen and consecrated caste is alone deemed worthy of bringing to Jehovah the praises of His people, and then, in return, to give Jehovah's blessing to the children of Israel. Once a year, the high priest pushes aside the precious veil, and in the sanctuary, for a little while, in behalf of the whole nation, stands face to face with God.

But lo, on Good Friday, in this supreme moment when Jesus was giving up the ghost on the Cross, the climax of His ministry to mankind, "the veil of the temple"—the Gospel tells us—"was rent in twain from the top to the bottom."

There is a fascinating symbolism in this dramatic incident. It was during that hour, when the Christ was bringing to its completion His work of Redemption, at that gigantic moment when the Cross of Calvary was erected as an everlasting hyphen between earth and heaven, that the veil of the temple was opened wide. Why should it stand there any longer to hide that which was shown openly beyond the city walls? Was not the Death of the Son the complete revelation of the Love of the Father? By what mysterious favour should God continue to remain the exclusive property of a consecrated caste alone? And so, "the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom."

Should one take the trouble of reading again the Gospel with this thought in mind, he will see that the main trend of Jesus' ministry, His central revelation, was a thrilling attempt to drive home this truth—as great in its simplicity as it is extraordinary compared with the doctrines of other religions—that God is not a fearful Reality, approached only by a group of especially initiated and ecclesiastically consecrated persons; but rather that He is very near His creatures, and can be known in an immediate way by every soul that seeks Him. In fact, it can be said that throughout His entire ministry, Jesus was tearing down the sumptuous veils with which priests of all times had surrounded God. Christ began with the Beatitudes: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall SEE God," and gave the final touch to this task in the agony of Calvary, when, in such a gripping fashion, "the veil of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom."

One century, two centuries go by, and already the veil that was rent begins to close again. It seems to those that build the Church that the very majesty of God demands that he should be surrounded with mystery. Failing to have that faith in the human soul which Jesus had, they constitute themselves its tutors and spiritual guardians. Like these parents who wish to spare their children the hardships of life, even at the cost of keeping them in a permanent state of helplessness, the Church begins to perform a service which soon was to become a right and a privilege. And it does not take very long until the religious world is again divided into two classes: a limited and privileged group of priests who alone, in virtue of their priesthood, are declared able to commune adequately with God, and the great mass of people who cannot come to faith and grace except through these regularly consecrated and official mediators. Thus, the Catholic Church was born; and the system was to develop until the laymen:—1. were (and still are) unable to know God truly, except through the official teaching of the church of which the priest is the representative; 2. were unable to speak to God, except through the prayers which the Church placed on their lips; 3. and could not receive the grace of God, except through sacraments administered by regularly ordained priests. For if, in a certain measure, every Catholic devotee may, through personal prayer, have some sort of a direct relationship with God, and can ASK Him for His grace; he cannot RECEIVE this grace which saves, except through the appointed intermediary of God's power, the distributing agency of these ineffable gifts: the church, hence, the perfect logic and validity of the Catholic claim: "Outside the Church, no salvation is possible."

The Protestant Reformation, in its essence, was nothing else but this splendid gesture of lastitude, indignation and faith, by which, for the second time on the field of history, the veil was rent in twain, so that God was restored in an immediate way to the soul athirst for communion with Him. It was because of this mystical and passionate outburst of the soul crying for God that the waves of the Reformation movement were made powerful and swept aside the dykes of ecclesiastical authority and tradition, and spread far and wide all over Europe with such an amazing rapidity and simultaneity. Huss, Wycliffe, Savonarola were merely prophets of this popular demand; Luther, Zwingli, Calvin were only poets and organizers of this violent surge. Had these men been only theologians or innovators, they might have attracted attention or become eminent; but they never could have inspired heroism and martyrdom. The veil that was hiding God was not rent by human iconoclasts or a careless destructive furor; it was rent for the same reason it was torn from the temple of Jerusalem; because it stood between the soul and its God. The Reformation is not a negative and destructive movement—as Rome so often accuses it to be—it was essentially a positive and creative demand, seeking the establishment of this direct and immediate relationship between man and God.

So there lies the fundamental difference between the Catholic spirit and the Protestant spirit: the former interposing between man and his God the sumptuous edifice of the Church and the prerogatives of a religious caste; the latter asserting the immediacy of a communion between the soul and its God.

Of course, in the last analysis, it is the Catholic system which rests upon a fundamental pessimism and negative premises, mainly the inability of the human soul to have perfect communion with God, and of receiving immediately its salvation. Therefore, the Church has to intervene as the indispensable medium of divine grace.

In the accomplishment of this task, Catholicism has become, in its essence, a great materialization of Christian experience. What is the Catholic system, after all, if not the entire range of the Christian phenomenon tangibly realized alongside the other forms of life? This feature is very striking, how even the most spiritualized thoughts of the Christian religion become crystallized and concrete when the Church touches them. For instance, when Jesus said to his disciples: "Go and teach all nations," the Church makes these words mean the institution of the Catholic priesthood with all its privileges and prerogatives. Then, as the Master adds: "Lo, I am with you always"—Catholicism declares this means the promise of the particular type of infallibility claimed for the Church and the Sovereign Pontiff. Examples could be multiplied of this treatment which the Church gives to the entire range of the Christian Truth. At any rate, the Catholic spirit asserts that in itself the whole realm of Christian experience has been tangibly realized in time and space, as a living, well defined, and clearly outlined entity, having an existence "per se," independent from all the other forms of life, never penetrating or being influenced by any, but being the divine corrective of them all. And this materialization—the Church—makes a complete and perfect whole which you must accept or reject in its entirety.

This positiveness and concretization of the Christian phenomenon is that which makes the greatness and attraction of the Catholic Church, especially to a generation like ours which craves for dogmatic assertions, clear-cut definitions, and visible representations, in preference to a highly spiritualized message which requires a spiritual effort to appropriate it. No one can challenge the splendid fulfillment of the Catholic system in that respect. Yet, that against which the soul instinctively revolts; that against which the entire Gospel is a protest, is the pretention of that organism to be the indispensable medium, the exclusive and obligatory channel of divine grace. Like the veil in the temple of Jerusalem, it stands between the soul and its God.

Protestantism rests upon a different basis: "Homo Dei capax et solo Deo saturari potest"

(Man is able to receive by himself the revelation of God, and God alone can satisfy his soul). This principle was posited by Luther in his Commentary to the Epistle to the Romans. One needs not read in these words the expression of a proud spirit; it is rather the outburst of a deep gratitude. It is the classical expression of a universal priesthood, the principle already expounded by St. Paul and which Wycliffe had re-emphasized when he said that "Every believer is a real priest made of God." This is nothing else but the immediate communion of the soul with God, the great vital idea of the Reformation. The Protestant spirit insists in keeping the veil of the temple rent in twain.

This principle of immediacy in the relationship between the human soul and the Deity does not do away with the functions of Church and clergy; it simply changes their pretensions. In opposition to the Catholic system, the Protestant strategy does not claim the Church to be the sole keeper of divine grace, but rather a means of grace; ministers are not plenipotentiaries but ambassadors. For Protestantism, neither the Church nor the ministry pretend to set themselves in the world as a specific organism outside of which there is no salvation; the Protestant spirit rather seeks to penetrate and purify all the other manifestations of life.

That is why, while the Catholic spirit, tending, as we have seen, to crystallize all it touches, has for an ideal the reduction of all the expressions of religious life to one unit. The Protestant spirit, diffusing its spiritual content in all the various forms of life, does not fear this external diversity which is the characteristic of the numerous and transitory forms by which life expresses itself. Protestantism does not bind its existence to any one of these particular forms; knowing very well that each organism bears within itself the germs of its own destruction. It insists in remaining a purely spiritual principle.

And it is for the same reason that while the aim of the Catholic system is to make its priests indispensable to the religious life of humanity, the Protestant ideal is really to render its ministers useless. The famous powers of the keys (Matthew 16:19), the corner stone of the priesthood theory, which Rome interprets as the power to bind, Protestantism conceives as the divine mission to loose the chains of mankind, to free the souls from all tutelage, and to confer upon everyone the glorious liberty of becoming sons of God.

IDEALISM: THE NEED OF THE HOUR

By Joy Elmer Morgan, Editor Journal of the N.E.A.

In times of darkness and confusion the supreme need is light. The light of great ideals has been the saving force through all the centuries—richer in vitality than any race, more abiding than empires, more enduring than monuments of stone. Ideals are practical. Like the beacons that guide men through the seas and the air, they are most needed in times of storm and difficulty.

Some nineteen hundred years ago Jesus Christ gave to mankind the greatest body of idealism the world has known. With none of the trappings of classroom, curriculum, grades, or degrees; in an age crushed with ignorance, superstition, brutality, and corruption—by the mere force of living and teaching—Christ started a new epoch; an epoch so significant that the calendar dates from his birth; so powerful that it has changed the whole course of human events, so beneficent that untold millions of men have been lifted higher in the scale of life.

Is it not plain that what the world needs just now is a new devotion to great ideals? In statecraft, in business, in industry, in law, in the church, in science, or in teaching can anything be more intensely fruitful and practical than a renewed faith in the higher and finer things? Hour after hour, day after day, we are all facing situations where there is choice between the higher and the lower. It takes but a little common sense and a will to choose the higher path—to change the whole course of a life, a school, a nation, or an age. A little more faith, a little more idealism and the confusion of today may give way to the fairest dawn the world has seen.

THE TENT OF MEETING

By Rev. T. F. King

The Master Calls

That was a wonderful day when Martha said unto her sister Mary, "The Master is come, and calleth for thee." It is a great day in the life of any soul when the Master comes and calls. As I think on these words, I am filled with amazement and awe, that the Master should call for me, and that the Master has need of me.

The Master calls for me. Gently, yet persistently, in spite of my sins and my shame, He calls, and He calls for me. He seeks the greatest gift that I can offer, the gift of myself, and in response to that Call I can only say, "Here am I; what wilt Thou have me to do?" The Lord however, would not have me underestimate my gift, for even I have value, and even I have greater possibilities. But there is no pride in my gift. In the presence of God I am poverty-stricken. As I approach Him, I am compelled to say with Peter, "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man." But He does not draw back, and I cannot, I dare not turn away from Him, for I have seen a vision of the Beauty of Holiness, and the radiant glory of God in Christ, and I am content to follow.

The Master calls, and the Master needs, incredulous though it be, the Master needs me for the furtherance of His great designs. God has no instrument for the fulfilling of His purposes, save the instrument man; neither does He use any weapons of conquest, save the mighty weapon of the Cross. That which God will accomplish for humanity will be brought to pass through humanity. All that God has done for man, has been done through God in man, for the Lord Himself was man.

When I think these thoughts, I am asamed of my poor efforts. I have done so little, and I can only pray, Lord inspire me to greater service.

IN MEMORIAM—MRS. L. M. LIPSCOMB

By Harper Caldwell Bernard

"God is His own interpreter and He will make it plain."

As midnight darkness brightened into the early morning twilight of a late September day, 1933, Louisville, Mississippi, the "Pale Horse" halted at the threshold of the parsonage to the First Methodist church, residence of the pastor, Rev. L. M. Lipscomb. The queen of that home, wife of the minister, took cognizance, as the rider, "Death," dismounted.

When the struggles of skilled science failed to overpower life's bitter foe; when the ministrations of husband, daughter and sons refused to detain their adored one, this child of the covenant, who had trodden life's pathway in the faith of her fathers, heard the voice of the Lord, "high and lifted up," "handmaiden of mine, thou hast wrought well, come up higher."

Nannie DuBois Lipscomb, native of Alabama, scion of aristocracy, was highly endowed by nature. Scholarly in attainments, she held sway among the literati; a master linguist, an adept with her pen. Gifted in music, a poet born, she dwelt in an atmosphere of beauty, regardless of her surroundings. Despite her learning, like Sir Walter Scott, she declared: "There is but one Book." Emulating Bible characters in her daily walk, it is apropos that she be classed with the heroes she admired. In hospitality she reminded one of the Shunamite, listed in history as "A Great Lady." Had she lived in the days of the early church, she would have rivaled Lydia in graciousness and vied with Dorcas in kind deeds.

She was as loyal to the Methodist Church as was Miriam of the house of Moses to the cause she espoused, acclaiming its principles with the discernment of the prophetess Deborah, yet with the utmost respect for sister denominations. She loved the ordinances of the Lord's house and delighted in the services of the sanctuary. She abode in the presence of her Saviour as did the sisters of Bethany and those faithful women who were "Last at the cross, first at the sepulchre."

Responding to the "Love Call," in the early days, romance lured her into happy married life. This bride of destiny shared the joys, hardships and sorrows of a North Mississippi itinerant preacher approximately forty years. Mrs. Lipscomb adorned the parsonage with no less dignity and grace than did the Princess Sarah, who presided over the tent of the Patriarch Abraham. Her happy disposition and ever-present optimism radiated sunshine throughout the spheres of her activity as the pastor's inspiration and chief helper. The blending of her spiritual being with that of her preacher-husband's was so complete and unique that he termed her "Light of my light, life of my life, soul of my soul." In the realm beyond she continues as his star of hope, whose scintillating glorifies and beautifies the tragedy of his loss.

She taught her seven children: "Lay up your treasures in heaven," and enjoined them to commune with Him "whom to know aright is life eternal." They now "arise to call her blessed."

Father and children await a reunion with her, not in a temporary parsonage home, subject to removal after Conference, but a gathering of saints in "that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

"Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all. Give her of the fruit of her hands, and let her own works praise her in the gates."

Senatobia, Miss.

REV. L. M. LIPSCOMB THANKS HIS FRIENDS

I wish to thank the good friends who have remembered us so graciously and with such tender and beautiful Christian sympathy in our recent great bereavement by the passing of our beloved companion of nearly 40 years of happy walking side by side. No one knows the bitterness save those who have passed this way. She was light of my heart, soul of my soul.

But for the thought and presence of God, His comfort and grace, and the blessedness of friends who come to you in person and by messages of letters, telegrams and flowers, who could stand to live or care to? Nobody ever had such friends, it seems to me, nor so many of them, nor half so warm and comforting as we have had. More than 300 letters from four states, large numbers of telegrams, flowers of great abundance, tokens of love for me and mine have not been scanty. Now, to acknowledge all these letters, telegrams, etc., and write those who sent flowers, would simply be an impossible task for me. My sweet children took more than 200 of these and acknowledged them.

Now, by the kindness of the Advocate, I sincerely wish to extend my most hearty and appreciated thanks and my genuine love and prayers for your wonderful help to me in this dark hour. Yet God's grace and power to sustain and in times of trouble which I have held up to others around open graves and in the pulpit for forty years has been proven by personal experience to be absolute comfort.

WELLS AND FAREWELLS

The following resolutions were adopted at a banquet given by New Orleans preachers and their wives in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Frank L. Wells, Monteleone Hotel, New Orleans, La., October 20, 1933.

Whereas, Dr. Frank L. Wells, pastor of our First Methodist Church in New Orleans, has been transferred to the Virginia Conference and stationed at Park Place Church, Norfolk, and will soon be leaving us. Therefore, be it resolved:

First: That we deeply appreciate the splendid work Dr. Wells has done in our Conference, as pastor of our great First Churches in Baton Rouge and New Orleans, as president of the Louisiana Conference Board of Christian Education, chairman of the Publishing Committee, New Orleans Christian Advocate, as teacher and platform man in our Standard Training Schools, and Young People's Assemblies, and as preacher in revival campaigns. He has thoroughly identified himself with every interest of our conference, and has given a whole-hearted co-operation in all our activities. His service and influence have reached beyond his own church. He was chairman of the Social Service Committee of the New Orleans Ministerial Union, and as such, did a fine work. This year he was commencement preacher at Tulane University.

Second: That we appreciate Dr. Wells for his noble character and intrinsic worth—a true man, a tireless worker, a thoughtful preacher, a sympathetic pastor, a faithful friend and a brother beloved.

Third: That we appreciate the contribution made by his most splendid family. Mrs. Wells has graced the parsonage home with refinement, culture and religion, she has been a helpmate indeed to Dr. Wells in all his fine work. Miss Virginia is a graduate of the Louisiana State University. Frank is in senior class of the Dental Department of Loyola University. Willeroy, who graduated at Tulane University this year, and whose high scholarship won for him membership in Phi Beta Kappa, is now a ministerial student in Union Theological Seminary, New York City. In the removal of Dr. Wells and his family from our Conference we sustain a great loss, and our prayers, goodwishes and love go with them to their new field of labor. We are reconciled to their going to this extent: They are "going home," and this is fine for them.

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be presented to Dr. Wells; a copy be sent to New Orleans Christian Advocate, and the Richmond Advocate; and that a copy be sent to chairman of Board of Stewards of Church to which Dr. Wells may be appointed.

SOUTHERN GROUP MEETING OF THE JACKSON DISTRICT

At the call of the group chairman, Rev. S. F. Harkey, of the Brandon charge, the members of the Southern Group of the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference, assembled in the spacious auditorium of the Pelahatchie church at 10:30 a. m., October 25, 1933. The meeting was called to order by Rev. S. F. Harkey, chairman, promptly at the appointed hour.

The following pastors were present: Rev. S. F. Harkey, Brandon; Rev. H. J. Moore, Lake; Rev. R. E. Rutledge, Homewood; Dr. J. A. Smith, Jackson; Rev. J. E. Holyfield, Magee; Rev. M. R. Jones, Johns, and Rev. John W. Ramsey, Fanning. The presiding elder of the district, Rev. B. L. Sutherland, of Jackson, was also present, taking an active part in the discussions of the meeting, as was also Rev. W. M. Williams, Chaplain of the T. B. Hospital at Sanatorium. Rev. J. H. Foreman, one of our honored superannuates, who has his home in Pelahatchie, added pleasure to the proceedings. The name of I. O. Brown, an active member from the Fanning charge, should not be omitted from the list of those present.

After the devotional hour, conducted by Rev. R. E. Rutledge, of Lake, it was announced by the chairman that the program, the major portion of which would be given in the afternoon, was built around a discussion of the benevolences. Rev. W. M. Williams, chaplain of the Sanatorium, spoke interestingly of his work at that institution, where, he stated, there are three hundred patients.

The preaching hour having arrived, Rev. H. J. Moore, of Lake, delivered a very forceful message from the gospel as recorded in Mark 6:13-45, following which a lunch was served by the ladies.

After several minutes spent in social intercourse, the congregation reassembled in the church auditorium for the discussions of the afternoon, the service being opened by a devotional conducted by Rev. M. R. Jones, of Johns.

The following topics were discussed by the speakers previously appointed:

"What is the Attitude of the Layman Toward the Benevolences?" J. A. Lindsey.

"Why Our Board of Missions Needs Generous Payments on the Benevolences," Rev. J. B. Holyfield.

"Why the Board of Education Needs Liberal Giving on the Benevolences," Dr. J. A. Smith.

In the absence of Dr. J. L. Decell, who was elsewhere engaged in a meeting, Rev. M. K. Miller, of Jackson, read a paper prepared by Dr. Decell on "Financial Plans." By motion of O. C. Hull, the paper was unanimously approved.

Rev. B. L. Sutherland, the presiding elder of the district, discussed the needs of the Board of Finance, with special reference to the support of our superannuate preachers.

Dr. J. A. Smith, in his inimitable way, expressed the appreciation of the meeting for the bountiful lunch prepared by the ladies of the local church, and a standing vote of thanks was taken.

Following a round table discussion of the benevolences, led by Rev. B. L. Sutherland, during which reports were made by the pastors, the benediction was pronounced.

JOHN W. RAMSEY, Secretary.

BROOKHAVEN IS READY

Some of the brethren of the Mississippi Conference, very correctly sensing the fact that the entertainment of an Annual Conference is no easy task these days, have written that they plan to bring their wives with the understanding that they pay for their entertainment. In order to accommodate these and other brethren who desire to do likewise, Dr. Winfield, President of Whitworth College, says he can give room and board in the dormitories for the wives, provided they bring their own bed linen and blankets, at the rate of $1.00 per day. (At the Lincoln Hotel the rate is $1.10 per day for each person, including room and three meals, provided two are in the same room). This applies only to those not regular delegates or Board members. Nor does this apply to those personally invited by some hostess.

Pecora: "Do you think the public is that glib?"

Morgan: "I won't respond to that, Mr. Pecora."

But let no reader misunderstand. This is no attempt to deny that Morgan and others have labored hard and saved their money, nor to discount these men simply because they have money. Neither is this any effort to exalt dead-beats and never-do-wells whose souls are just as greedy though deprived of the energy and mentality of those who have climbed to these dizzy financial heights. It is purely to call our attention to the fact that some in control of the financial interests of this country have proven traitors to its best interests and that a change must be made. It is to be hoped that the transition will be made without violence, peacefully. But the change is due and on the way. Where can we help most?

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. E. D. Hutchinson, Kreole, Miss., will report sixty-two additions to the church during the year at the approaching session of the Mississippi Conference.

Thirty-two members were added to the roll of our church at Florence, Miss., as a result of the recent revival meetings conducted by the pastor, Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook.

Looking through the bulletin of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, we note that Mr. W. B. Reilly, an honored member, is reported constantly improving in health.

Dr. Chas. W. Pipkin, dean of the Graduate School, Louisiana State University, recently delivered an address before the faculty and students of Centenary College.

Rev. S. S. Hogan, pastor at Bonita, La., succeeded in placing the Advocate in ten of his twenty-seven families during the recent Advocate campaign. Did you beat that?

"The Uniqueness of Christ" is the theme of the World's Week of Prayer, November 12-18. November 12 is Young Men's Sunday. It would be a good thing for the churches to observe the day.

Dr. A. M. Serex, pastor at New Iberia, La., is conducting a meeting at Epworth Church, New Orleans. Good congregations are hearing this excellent preacher and a very helpful meeting is under way.

A good report comes from the Holcomb, Miss., charge. Under the leadership of Rev. J. L. Nabors, pastor, the work has enjoyed advancement. Young People and Missionary Society are alive and doing excellent work.

The following states are represented in Centenary College's Freshman class: Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Illinois, Ohio, California, Georgia, Kansas, Michigan and Pennsylvania. Louisiana has 138 and Texas 17.

gia, Kansas, Michigan and Pennsylvania. Louisiana has 138 and Texas 17.

Mrs. Elizabeth Musser, daughter of Rev. Jno. L. Williams, pastor of Louisiana Avenue Church, New Orleans, has accepted a good position in the city of New York. Mrs. Musser has been assistant secretary of the Louisiana Child Finding and Home Society of New Orleans.

Dean Eugene B. Hawk of the School of Theology, Southern Methodist University, announces that each member of the faculty has been assigned a group of theological students in order that he may be a counselor to these students. Seems that such an arrangement should accomplish great good.

Dr. A. W. Turner, Prohibition champion of Shreveport, La., calls our attention to the fact that we put him down as from Bethany, La., in an announcement we had from him. He says that he is no more at Bethany than usual and that he may still be found, ready for war, at his old address in Shreveport.

From Huntington, Texas, we have a card bearing the following announcement: "We have a new baby boy, born October 17 and weighing 8 pounds, named James Richard—R. A. Bozeman." Brother Bozeman is our pastor of Ida and Hoss-ton, La., charge. We welcome the young man and congratulate the parents.

Graduates of School of Theology, Southern Methodist University, listen! Anyone having pictures of the theological graduating classes of the past, please notify Kenneth R. Hemphill, secretary of the Students' Association, as class pictures are to be placed in Kirby Hall social room. Boys, this is your chance to get into the Hall of Fame early.

Recently the pastors of New Orleans, with their wives, tendered Dr. and Mrs. Frank L. Wells of First Church a farewell luncheon at the Monteleone Hotel. The occasion was a most happy one except for the thought of the departure from our state and conference of these very valuable people. Resolutions of appreciation were passed. See elsewhere in this number.

Mr. W. F. Boswell, son of the late Dr. J. W. Boswell, editor of the Advocate from 1901 to 1909, while in New Orleans on business recently, made a call to our office. Mr. Boswell who is now in the box manufacturing business in Decatur, Ala., worked at the Advocate office awhile during the time of his father's editorship. He went over the building recalling those early days.

Contributions to the "Save the Advocate" fund of the Alabama Christian Advocate have passed the $700 mark. At a recent meeting of the Publishing Committee of this paper, Dr. M. E. Lazenby was elected editor for the twelfth consecutive year. The financial report showed a net gain for the fiscal year of $441.08, thus enabling the Board to reduce the deficit incurred during the previous year from $3,097 to $2,655.92.

Rev. N. E. Alford, a local preacher of the Mississippi Conference, father of Rev. J. M. Alford, pastor at Conshatta, La., and Rev. J. A. Alford, pastor of St. Marks, New Orleans, recently celebrated his eighty-eighth birthday. He is still wide awake and vigorous. On October 15, his birthday, Brother Alford baptized his little great-grandchild, Martin Alford Foye, grandchild of Rev. J. M. Alford.

Under the leadership of Bishop A. Frank Smith, Trinity Church, Ruston, La., is in a great meeting. This station, under the able leadership of Rev. H. L. Johns, the pastor, is making steady progress. The Christian Education Building is under way. In a very short while the entire Sunday school, long separated into various places, will have adequate facilities in its own home. A good hand to this fine congregation.

Dr. W. L. Duran, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, announces that Dr. F. L. Wells, pastor of First Church, New Orleans, will return to Virginia and his home conference within a short while. Dr. Wells has rendered most valuable service to the Louisiana Conference, not only as a pastor but by the presidency of the Conference Board of Christian Education. He goes from us with our highest good wishes.

"Believe it or not," says J. W. Faulk, pastor at Abbeville, La., "we have let the contract for a Sunday school annex. We have over 80 per cent subscribed and more than 60 per cent in the bank. Our people have shown a magnificent spirit of sacrifice and co-operation. We expect the building to be completed and paid for by conference." That is the sort of spirit that builds all worthwhile things. Congratulations to this pastor and people.

A meeting calculated to prove quite unusual is shortly to be held at Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans. The meeting is sponsored by the men of the church and is growing out of the great men's Bible class which is enjoying phenomenal growth. One hundred and eighty-six were present last Sunday. Mr. Wm. H. Black, instructor of the class, will deliver the messages of the meeting which will continue seven days, beginning November 6. Mention the plan to your laymen.

One hundred and eighty-six were present last Sunday. Mr. Wm. H. Black, instructor of the class, will deliver the messages of the meeting which will continue seven days, beginning November 6. Mention the plan to your laymen.

Southern Methodist University will be the first school in the United States to hold a conference of the Model World Student Federation, if plans of the Y. M. C. A. are realized. The conference is scheduled for November. Four states: Oklahoma, Missouri, Arkansas, and Texas, will be represented. T. Z. Koo, Christian student leader of the Orient, will be the principal speaker. The federation has held conferences in Europe and Asia. The conference in November will be the first in America.

Centenary College received double distinction on Monday at Chicago at the Century of Progress Exposition when Professor Andrew Lawrence Quattlebaum, Head of the Voice Department, and Mrs. J. M. Gorton, Assistant Instructor, appeared on the NBC network including 92 stations. Professor Quattlebaum rendered a solo, "To an Absent Friend," the words of which were written by Mrs. Robert Emory of Shreveport and the music by Mrs. Rounton of Arkansas. Mrs. Gorton directed the singing of a double quartet which rendered one of Lily Strickland's famous bayou songs, "Dreamin' Time" which is perfect characteristic of Louisiana. The double quartet, which was composed of Shreveport talent, was accompanied by the NBC orchestra.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE MAKES OPTIMISTIC REPORT

Prospects for Future Brighter

The members of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate have peculiar pleasure in presenting to you the report for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1933. In a period of extreme business difficulty throughout the nation, the constituency of the Advocate has responded in a manner which makes this in some respects a record year. Each succeeding month brought problems for the Advocate not unlike those experienced by other enterprises, but we are happy to report that the year ends upon a decidedly upward swing which brings a feeling of confidence and cheer to us all.

The report of the Business Manager shows that we began the year with a deficit of $3,971, of which amount $1,700 was added during the previous year; but the fiscal year just closed leaves us with a deficit of only $1,506. This means that, with good business management and splendid co-operation upon the part of the patronizing Conferences, the paper has been maintained and we have lessened the indebtedness by the sum of $2,465. We believe that this is a record not only worthy of our cause, but is an achievement which will find few parallels in the business history of 1933.

During the period of the Eightieth Anniversary Campaign, August 1 to October 1, the whole-hearted loyalty of our people came out in very gratifying results. More than two thousand six hundred subscriptions were received, many of them new subscribers. We do not need to say that the returns have abundantly justified the appeal and the concession made.

We began the new fiscal year with reduced obligations as to debt and, while the cost of producing the paper will be slightly increased under the N.R.A., the estimated budget does not exceed the figures of last year's expenditures. The Committee feel, therefore, that through the continuance of Conference support at the present figure and the continued loyalty of our pastors and people, the paper can be maintained and the debt gradually discharged. No one must assume, however, that such a goal can be reached without the enthusiastic support of every pastor and church in our three Conferences.

The Publishing Committee, for its part, wishes to acknowledge the loyalty and work, which made the Eightieth Anniversary Campaign such a happy event, by every concession consistent with sound business policy. Accordingly it has been determined that the subscription price shall be one dollar per year, this rate to apply to the more than twelve hundred subscribers now in arrears and to all renewals and new subscriptions throughout the year. In making this price, the Committee expresses confidence in the devotion of our people and we place the fortunes of the Advocate in the keeping of the Methodist people of Mississippi and Louisiana. Let us emphasize the fact that the reduction of the price must result in a largely increased subscription list, or our plans will be defeated. We believe that the success of the past year and the liberal policy inaugurated for the new year will elicit a great response; and with this feeling we lay the cause of this trusted and time-honored servant of the Church upon your hearts.

THE SUMMER AT SEQUOYAH

By Bishop Paul B. Kern

Another summer season has come and gone and the mountain is quiet once more. Happy throngs of vacationists and seekers after knowledge and inspiration have made this one of the best years in the history of the Western Methodist Assembly. Everyone seems to have had a happy, profitable time, and are more determined than ever to boost for Sequoyah.

The mountain was never lovelier. After a severe drought in June, the rain early in July brought out the grass and foliage and the grounds and surrounding country put on the most beautiful garb, and nature was dressed in her very best. The temperatures were kindly and it was cool nearly every day and blankets were in use at night.

There were no dull periods in the program after it really got started in July. Missions, Christian Education, Temperance, Ministerial Problems—all came in for their share of emphasis. The attendance was above that of last year, and, while not up to the peak years, it revealed an undiminished interest on the part of the people. Financially, the three months just about paid expenses. If it were not for our indebtedness the Assembly would meet with ease its annual budget.

The Board of Trustees had a very encouraging meeting. After years of service, Dr. A. C. Miller surrendered the Presidency and became Vice-President and a member of the Executive Committee. This committee was thoroughly re-organized and has taken a firm grip on the situation. With the help of the friends of Sequoyah, it is determined to work out all its problems. A club of supporting members, known as "The Sequoyah Club," is being organized throughout our territory and if cordially supported our major difficulties will be solved. Everyone is hopeful for the future.

Rev. Sam M. Yancey was re-elected Superintendent and enthusiastic praise was given him and Mrs. Yancey for their superior handling of the Assembly. At the request of the Board, I assumed the Presidency of the Board of Trustees. This responsibility I assumed because I believe in this institution and its important place in the religious and cultural life of our church.

Put Mt. Sequoyah Into Your Summer Plans For 1934

The brethren in the Conferences can greatly assist our cause by giving Brother Yancey a chance to present the Assembly in their churches. No public collections are to be taken. Also he is available for revival services and all the proceeds from such service comes to the Assembly. Brother Yancey is an experienced and successful revivalist and is rendering excellent service in the church as a preacher of the gospel of salvation.

WINFIELD IS READY. LISTEN!

All Winfield finds itself happy in preparation for your coming on November 23. If for any reason any member is not coming, it will help us to let us know at once. We cannot undertake to entertain those not connected with the Conference, but will try to provide for visitors at special rates. If any have requests as to roommates, we shall be glad to take care of same as far as possible. Schedule of services will be published later.

METHODIST STUDENT CENTER ESTABLISHED AT L. S. U.

To Serve 742 Methodist Students

Through the generous co-operation of the University, a Methodist Student Center has been established on the campus of Louisiana State University. Two rooms have been assigned for this use in a cottage on the campus and these have been partially equipped by the University; other decorations and furnishings have been given by the members of First Methodist Church of Baton Rouge. This Student Center will be used as an office by the University pastor and for personal conferences, committee meetings, forums and socials. It will provide a point of contact and in many other ways help to serve the 742 Methodist students and their friends in L. S. U. The various programs and activities promoted at the Student Center will supplement the regular program carried on at the church and will provide a great opportunity both for variety and for more intensive work on the part of a greater number of students.

NOTICE CONCERNING OPENING OF LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE

After conferring with the presiding elders, I wish to announce that the Louisiana Conference will meet Wednesday evening, October 22, at 7:30 o'clock, in the First Methodist Church of Winfield, La. Immediately after the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, the Conference will be organized and the schedule made for the following day.

All examining committees are requested to be ready to make their reports on Thursday morning among the first items of business.

HOYT M. DOBBS,

Bishop in Charge.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

In accordance with the Conference resolution passed at the last session of the Conference the Circuits of the Conference are to report the totals for the charge only in making their statistical report to the Conference.

Due to the fact that our Conference session lasts only three days it will be a physical impossibility to do the statistical work of the Conference unless the preachers give in their reports by the first day of the Conference session. It will be of very great assistance to the statistical secretaries if the preachers will mail their reports for Tables 1 and 2 to me at least ten days before the Conference session opens. By so doing we can have these two tables compiled and it will leave us only Table No. 3 or the Finance Table, to complete during the Conference session.

I will greatly appreciate the assistance of the preachers if they will mail these tables to me, as requested above, and if they will be sure to have Table No. 3, and any corrections for Tables 1 and 2, ready to hand in on the morning of the first day of the Conference session.

Thanking you for your full co-operation and assuring you that we will give the very best service possible in preparing the Statistics for the Conference, I am,

Cordially,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,

Statistical Secretary.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Committee on Admissions

All applicants for admission or re-admission in the Louisiana Conference are requested to meet the Committee on Admissions on Tuesday, November 21, 1933, at 7 p. m., in the Methodist church at Winfield, La.

BRISCOE CARTER, Chairman.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTICE

Dear Brethren: Please let me remind you again to hand your report, Table No. 3, with check, or receipts, to tally, to one of the auditors of the Conference the first day of the Conference session, in compliance with standing rule on page 112 of the Conference Journal, 1932.

This is very necessary in order that the Conference Treasurer may be able to report to the Conference before so late in the session.

Do not put money in your report, but check, marking distinctly what it is for.

T. B. COTTRELL,

For Auditing Committee.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE BOARD OF FINANCE

The Board of Finance of the Mississippi Annual Conference will meet in Brookhaven, November 15, 7:30 p.m., at the Methodist church, room assigned. We urge a full attendance at this meeting.

C. A. SCHULTZ, President;

W. B. ALSWORTH, Secretary.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Committee on Admissions

The Committee on Admissions, Mississippi Conference, will meet in Brookhaven, Methodist Church on Wednesday, November 15, at 2:30 p.m. Those who are to come before the Committee for admission on trial, admission into full connection, and re-admission, are urged to be present at the time indicated.

H. L. NORTON, Chairman;

J. O. WARE, Secretary.

Admission on Trial

The Committee on Admission on Trial, Mississippi Conference, will meet in the Brookhaven Methodist Church on Wednesday, November 15, at 2 o'clock p.m. Let all candidates for admission take notice and be on hand at time stated.

JAMES L. SELLS, Chairman.

Class of Third Year

The Class of the Third Year will meet the committee at the church at Brookhaven, Miss., on Wednesday evening, November 15, at 7 o'clock.

J. H. JOLLY, Chairman of Committee.

THE PAPERS SAY THAT--

"A huge apple tree, still bearing fruit regularly despite its age of more than 100 years, is the prized possession of Miss Stella Burns and her sister, Miss Chloe Burns. The tree, of the Kentucky Red variety, has a limb spread of more than 45 feet."

Think of it, 100 years and bearing fruit regularly. So many trees have their off years. But for three generations children have come to this apple tree to find its limbs bending with Kentucky Reds. What apple is half so good if it be not red? What sort of a Christmas would it be without red apples?

The Psalmist found people like this apple tree. "They shall still bring forth fruit in old age; they shall be fat and flourishing." Why should we make terms with age and discontinue our fruitfulness?

"Detroit, Sept. 30.—Ground was broken for a new $400,000 brewery, after the Rev. Henry Syoen of the Church of Our Lady of Sorrows had blessed the project. The blessing took place at an open-air service.—Universal Service."

And that is why we have churches and communities and homes and hearts of Sorrows. "Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babblings? who hath wounds without cause?"

Regardless of what church or whose church, so long as we have this, we have a covenant with death and an agreement with hell.

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

You can now make at home a better gray hair remedy by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained.

Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, making it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

TO MOTHERS
whose children won't
EAT

Nature knows best. Never coax a child to eat! Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite. When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, don't give small children a constipating cathartic that drains the system. California syrup of figs is all the "medicine" they require.

Specialists will tell you that a sluggish appetite almost always means the child has a sluggish colon. Correct this condition called stasis, and see how quickly a listless, drooping boy or girl begins to eat—and gain! The only "medicine" such children seem to need is pure, unadulterated fig syrup.

Children who get syrup of figs, now and then, soon have the appetite and energy of young animals! They keep well and avoid colds and sluggish spells.

Nature never made a finer laxative for children; and they all love the wholesome, fruity flavor of the real California syrup of figs. It's purely vegetable, but every druggist has it all bottled, with directions. Begin with it at once. The very next day, your child will be eating better and feeling better. Keep on with the syrup of figs a few days and see amazing improvement in appetite, color, weight, and spirits.

The promises made by the bottlers of California Syrup of Figs are true, and it will do the same for you, IF it's genuine CALIFORNIA. Don't accept substitutes.

LYDEL SIMS TELLS ON THE LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE

"In all things shewing thyself a pattern of good works; in doctrine shewing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity, sound speech, that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you."

And that is for the new officers, primarily, and for everybody else in general. If you don't recognize it, the quotation is taken from the letter Paul wrote to his friend Titus. When our conference president went home from Mansfield Assembly, his pastor passed the quotation on to him as a good guide; he passed it on to the other conference officers at the meeting held in Alexandria in September, and I'm passing it further on to all of you who might need a nice conduct-guide while in office—and out of office, too. Hope ya like it!

Rev. A. W. Turner, always interested in Young People's work, has written a note of encouragement. He enclosed a couple of slips of paper containing facts you may not know. By actual test, the children of drinkers develop much slower than those of abstainers. They even cut their teeth later! Also, we find that alcoholism carried off 1522 policyholders in one insurance company in four years. So if you must drink, be sure you have plenty of insurance! And if you want any information on the subject of alcohol, you can probably get it from Rev. Turner. He is a leader in the Louisiana Prohibition Alliance.

Miss Ruth Fargis, of Mer Rouge, writes to say that the Mer Rouge Young People have united their two departments, and have elected Elma Carter as president. Miss Fargis is, of course, publicity agent. They have four standing committees—on Social Service, Missions, Worship, and Recreation. As you probably know, there are six to choose from; all, or combinations of similar ones, may be selected to fit your needs.

Need a Union idea? Here's one from Miss Velma Butcher, district director of the Alexandria District: divide the Union into standing committees corresponding to those in the local church. Put every Union member on some committee. Then each Union committee starts a scrap-book, collecting all the material they can find that would be helpful to the corresponding committees. The best scrap book merits a prize, if you wish. At any rate, the Union has very helpful material available for the local committee—at practically no cost! And of course you're going to have a week-end institute this winter.

aren't you? It's more fun than a pie-eating contest!

Columbists seem to have a habit of bragging about predictions, so I'll "I told ya so!" about the Alexandria banquet. Honest, there were between three and four hundred people there—the liveliest bunch of Young People I've seen at a banquet in some time. Charles White was toastmaster, and H. F. Bradford, president of the Lou Heart Union, was official host. There was music, an' singing, an' speeches an' a one act play, an' just everything! A great success!

The Natchitoches Young People had a Hike Steak Fry that because of the weather terminated in the home of Mr. John Cockerham, one of the fine church members. Cooking was done in the kitchen rather than outside, and various amusements, impromptu and otherwise made it lots of fun. Marjorie Haggart and sister Bernidene, of Lake Charles District, were guests. That helped.

STUDY THESE FIGURES, NORTH MISSISSIPPI

For your information as to how the Conference Board of Christian Education has met the demands of the times for economy the following figures will be interesting:—

The assessments for the three old boards for the year 1930, the last year of their existence, was as follows: Board of Education, $28,300.00; Sunday School Board, $7,500.00; Epworth League Board, $1,000.00. Total, $46,800.00.

The total assessment of the Board of Christian Education for the year 1931, the first year of its existence, was $42,623.00; for the year 1932, reduced to $28,500.00 and is the same for 1933. Of this assessment $6,500.00 is for field work, the balance goes to student work and the colleges.

During the last quadrennium of the old Sunday School Board an average of $9,456.50 was spent per year for field work.

For the first year of the new Board of Christian Education, $8,444.67 was spent for field work. The second year, 1932, this was reduced to $4,708.26. For the present year it will not exceed $3,700.00.

Can any board, district, local church, college or any other organization show a more drastic reduction? The board has been glad to do this in order to meet the emergency.

Beware the Cough or Cold that Hangs On

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, and attacks the seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Your own druggist is authorized to refund your money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Creomulsion. (adv.)

Says Cardui Seemed To Do Her Most Good

"A few years ago my health wasn't so good," writes Mrs. L. E. Erwin, of Lamar, Mo. "I was nervous and tired, and felt the need of a tonic. My mother advised me to take Cardui. After I had taken one bottle, I found I was getting results. I took about five bottles, and certainly was much better than I had been in some time, as my headaches had stopped. Cardui has done me more good than any medicine I had taken."

WEST MONROE REVIVAL COMES TO SUCCESSFUL CLOSE

Forty Members Added To Roll

Rev. Harry S. Allen of Denton, Tex., has just closed a series of revival services in West Monroe Methodist Church.

He preached to large crowds and every message was deeply spiritual and heart-searching. Everyone who had the privilege of hearing him was greatly blessed and helped.

Forty members were added to the church roll and the entire membership pledged themselves to a greater effort and consecration.

This is the second time Rev. Allen has been in West Monroe. Last year West Monroe Methodist Church was at the top due largely to the result of Rev. Allen's work. We feel that the same record will be made this year.

Rev. Allen has made many friends in West Monroe. His consecrated life is a benediction to all who know him. The prayers and love of every member goes with him in his work.

DAN PEEBLES McWILLIAMS, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. D. McWilliams, was born July 20, 1909, in Meridian, at the parsonage home of his grandparents, the Rev. and Mrs. Isaac L. Peebles. He was dedicated to the Lord in baptism in infancy, his grandfather, Dr. Peebles administering the sacred ordinance, and he united with the church at an early age, during a meeting conducted by the Rev. Dan Kelly. He was married September 19, 1931, to Miss Bessie Lassiter. In the evening of May 25, 1933, Jesus came again and received Dan Peebles unto Himself.

His passing was calm and serene: a beautiful smile of victory was on his face as he launched forth into that land where sorrow and pain are known no more. It is but human to grieve at the passing of our loved ones, but through the mist of our tears we can look up into the face of our Father and say, "not my will, but Thine be done."

In the going of Dan Peebles, father and mother have "lost awhile" a noble son, his devoted young companion a faithful husband, our church a young man of sterling worth, and our commonwealth a splendid citizen. The following words express the sentiments of those who knew him from early childhood: "We were all so proud of Dan Peebles; many times we have discussed the beauty, nobleness and sweetness of his character."

Father, mother, and bride of a few happy months, we know you pine for his presence, but let us ever remember that God gathers the brightest flowers here to adorn yonder's heaven. It hurts to part with such a dear one, but it is glorious to have had such a one ready for the King's Royal Diadem.

"Sometimes, when all life's lessons have been learned, And sun and stars forevermore have set,

The things which our weak judgment here have spurned,

The things o'er which we grieved with lashes wet,

Will flash before us, out of life's dark night,

As stars shine more in deeper tints of blue,

And we shall see how all God's plans were right,

And how what seemed reproof, was love most true."

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

No Cooking! No Work! Real Saving!

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in more homes than any other cough remedy, because it gives more prompt, positive relief. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Syrup is easily made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. This gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money, and it's a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

Instantly you feel its penetrating effect. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm, clears the air passages, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief in severe coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its healing effect on throat membranes. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Why Liquid Laxatives are Back in Favor

The public is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that the properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. A child is easily given the right dose. And mild liquid laxatives do not irritate the kidneys.

Doctors are generally agreed that senna is the best laxative for everybody. Senna is a natural laxative. It does not drain the system like the cathartics that leave you so thirsty. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid laxative which relies on senna for its laxative action. It has the average person's bowels as regular as clockwork in a few weeks' time.

You can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drugstore, ready for use. Member N. R. A.

I see in the Advocate of October 12 the name of Rev. G. D. Anders, mentioned as living with his daughter, Mrs. B. L. Sutherland, whose husband is presiding elder of the Jackson District. I was at one time in charge of a church in which Brother Anders was a local preacher. I thought a great deal of him and I would like to find out his exact address so as to correspond with him.

I was at one time, so long ago I have forgotten what year it was, but I think Gloster and maybe Meadville were on the work at that time. I am now living in Dallas, Texas, near my children, of whom three now living, all girls. My two oldest were boys and both are now dead. My oldest son, T. S. (Bradford) was Mayor of the city of Dallas when he died. I recall the names of quite a number of the preachers of the Mississippi Conference. While I was in that Conference, Dr. Black was editor of the Advocate. Bishops Galloway, Fitzgerald, Parker, Brother Penn, and Rev. Krickerbocker assisted me in a protracted meeting at Pisgah Church. I believe that was the name of the church. Bro. Knickerbocker was afterwards presiding elder of the Dallas District where I met him several years ago. Remember me kindly to any of my old friends over there, although I expect they are nearly all dead. I will be 86 years old the first of next January and am still in pretty good health for a man of that age. My wife's sister, Miss Sallie Raynham, of St. Francisville, La., subscribed for the Advocate for me. This is the way I keep in touch with my old friends over there in Mississippi and Louisiana. I recall Dr. Carradine of New Orleans also, who was what they called a holiness preacher, though it appears to be a good name for any preacher. I recall the name of a Brother Edgar, whom I used to know at Greenwell Springs in Louisiana, and Brother Godfrey, presiding elder of Woodville District. I think quite a number of those old associates hop up as I continue to write. With kindest remembrance to them all,

I am yours sincerely,
H. BRADFORD.
Motor Route C, Dallas, Texas.

NEBLETT AND THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The Rev. Robert Alexander Neblett, who joined the Memphis Conference in 1857, and was serving in the territory from which the North Mississippi Conference was formed, became a charter member of the Conference which was held in Water Valley in 1870. His name is 25th on the list of "Honored Dead," found on page 21 of the Conference Journal. He died in 1880, at Iuka, where he is buried.

His son, the Rev. Robert P. Neblett, who is now an itinerant minister in the North Mississippi Conference, began his ministry in 1901 and served as his first charge the Water Valley Circuit, living in Water Valley with the Rev. J. M. Bradley, at the Old Wood Street parsonage. His work was Wyatt's Chapel; Palestine; Pleasant Ridge; Pine Flat; Taylor's and Church Grove (in La Fayette County, near Oxford).

Rev. and Mrs. R. P. Neblett were married in 1908 and the session of the Conference which was held at Water Valley that year was the first Conference which Mrs. Neblett attended. She was then a blushing bride, and the following year began her work with the Woman's Missionary Society, as District Secretary of the Greenville District. She is now serving her sixth year as Conference secretary and member of the Woman's Council, which met last year in Louisville, Ky.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE AND BROOKHAVEN METHODISM

(Whitworth Diamond Jubilee)

By Rev. O. S. Lewis, Pastor-Host

The First Methodist Church building erected in Brookhaven was begun in March, 1858, and was dedicated in September of the same year by Dr. C. K. Marshall. The church cost $3,000, a large portion of which was contributed by Rev. M. J. Whitworth, who then resided on the place known as the Menlas Plantation. The Rev. H. Lewis was the contractor and built the church out of hand-dressed lumber. The College campus was then a forest, and during the time the church was being erected deer were seen on the campus.

The second church was built on the site of the first. The College Y. W. C. A. Hut now occupies this site. The old church served as a place of worship until 1902. In 1903, under the pastorate of Rev. C. W. Crisler, the second church was begun and was completed in 1904 at a cost of $9,020. It was confidently expected at that time that this brick building would serve for many years, but owing to the rapid increase in membership, and demands of the Sunday school and other auxiliary church work, a new building was begun in 1916, under the pastorate of Rev. J. M. Morse. This magnificent and commodious structure was completed the following year, 1917, under the pastorate of Rev. C. W. Crisler. A special campaign for funds to complete the church resulted in raising $12,000 in 1917, all but 2 per cent being cash donations. Payment on the last bond was made during the pastorate of Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, at which time the church was dedicated by Bishop W. N. Ainsworth.

Brookhaven first appears as a pastoral charge in the appointments for 1858. It was then in the Fayette District, with Rev. John G. Jones as presiding elder and Rev. Archibald B. Nicholson as pastor. The Brookhaven District first appears among the appointments for 1860 and Thomas Price was its first presiding elder. R. T. Hennington was pastor in 1859; Peter E. Green in 1860; C. Chamberlain in 1861; Joseph Carr in 1862; John A. B. Jones in 1863-64; Geo. F. Thompson in 1865-66; Leonidas F. Redding in 1867 for four years; H. F. Johnsen in 1871; E. H. Mounger in 1872-73; H. W. Featherstun in 1874; H. R. Singleton in 1875; Joshua T. Heard in 1876 for three years; W. B. Lewis in 1879 for three years; J. W. Mc-

Laurin in 1882; Jno. A. Ellis in 1883; C. F. Smith in 1884; C. B. Galloway in 1885 for one and a half years at which time he was elected Bishop; A. F. Watkins in 1886 for four years; W. H. Huntley in 1890-91; J. M. Weems in 1892-93; M. H. Moore in 1894; B. F. Jones in 1895 for four years; T. W. Adams in 1899-1900; C. W. Crisler in 1901 for four years; Geo. H. Thompson in 1905-06; T. W. Adams in 1907; H. M. Ellis in 1908 for three and a half years, J. M. Wyatt filling out the quadrennium; R.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH, BROOKHAVEN, MISS.
Where the 121st Annual Session of the Mississippi Conference Will Be Held

Selby in 1912; W. H. Lewis in 1913-14; J. M. Morse in 1915-16; C. W. Crisler in 1917; W. G. Henry in 1918; W. H. Lewis in 1919 for four years; A. M. Broadfoot in 1923-24; P. D. Hardin in 1925 for four years; A. F. Watkins in 1929 for 8 months, Dr. G. F. Winfield finishing the year after the death of Dr. Watkins; J. A. Smith in 1930; C. W. Crisler for the third time as pastor in 1931-32; O. S. Lewis in 1933.

This will make the seventh time the Mississippi Conference has met in Brookhaven, having met here before in 1866, 1881, 1891, 1900, 1909 and 1920. A cordial welcome always awaits the brethren who come to Brookhaven. Not only the thousand Methodists, but all citizens of this progressive city look forward with pleasure to having the Conference with us. Brookhaven is appropriately called "The Home-Seeker's Paradise." It is also the "Home of Whitworth College" whose history began with the beginning of the Methodist Church in Brookhaven, and whose influence through the years has greatly enriched the Church and has made Brookhaven one of the most cultured communities in the South.

A unique feature of the Conference this year will be the Diamond Jubilee of Whitworth College which will be celebrated in the form of a Pageant to be staged on Friday afternoon, November 17, at 2 o'clock on Whitworth Campus. This will attract many visitors from over the state and many outside the state.

The election of delegates to the General Conference to be held in Jackson, Miss., next May will also feature this Conference. Another important phase is the fact that this will be Bishop Denny's last Conference before his retirement at the approaching General Conference. Bishop Denny has greatly endeared himself to the brethren of the Mississippi Conference by his unfailing courtesy and great messages. It is a matter of profound regret that Mrs. Denny will not be able to accompany him this year, as she has made many lasting friends by her deep interest and sympathetic attitude.

Of special interest also will be the address by Dr. W. L. Duren, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, on the "Life of Bishop Charles Betts Galloway." This address will feature the meeting of the Historical Society on Wednesday evening, November 15. The Board of Missions will have its Anniversary program on Thursday evening with Dr. Elmer T. Clark as principal speaker. Friday evening there will be a joint meeting of the Board of Christian Education and the Board of Lay Activities. Dr. J. E. Crawford, author of one of the greatest books on Stewardship ever published, will be one of the speakers.

Brookhaven extends a cordial welcome to the One Hundred Twenty-first session of the Mississippi Annual Conference.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Reported by Rev. H. P. Lewis

First Day—November 2

The Sixty-Fourth Session of the North Mississippi Conference convened in Water Valley, Miss., November 2, 9 a. m., Bishop Collins Denny in the chair. Hymn 499 was sung and the Lord's Supper was administered. Hymn 354 was sung.

Dr. Countiss, former secretary, called the roll. Dr. J. R. Countiss was elected secretary for the thirty-first time. W. R. Lott was chosen assistant secretary, and J. M. Guinn, W. L. Pearson, E. L. Jernigan, W. M. Jones, E. M. Sharp, W. I. Henley, and R. A. Grisham were elected statistical secretaries. The bars of the Conference were fixed and the rules of order adopted—the same as that of the General Conference so far as they will apply to the Annual Conference. Words of welcome were spoken by the pastor, J. D. Wroten, Dr. George Brown, and Rev. J. M. Metz, pastor of the Baptist Church, to which

The first ballot for lay delegates was announced. J. G. McGowan and Jno. W. Kyle, having received a majority of the votes cast, were declared elected. A second ballot for four more lay delegates was taken.

It was voted to meet at 7 p. m. to get a report on the second ballot.

The doxology was sung and the Bishop pronounced the benediction.

EVENING SESSION

The Bishop called the Conference to order at 7 p. m. The Conference sang, "O, Happy Day," and S. L. Pope led in prayer.

The clerical tellers submitted a report of the second ballot: 158 voting, 80 necessary to elect. J. D. Wroten, receiving 99, was declared elected. Ballot No. 3 for three delegates was called for.

The lay tellers made report of their second ballot. J. G. Houston was elected. The third ballot for three lay delegates was taken.

The Bishop turned the service over to the Board of Lay Activities, with J. G. Houston in charge. Rev. A. P. Stephens led the congregation in a rousing song service. E. A. Tanner read the Scripture and B. P. Brooks led the prayer. Dr. G. L. Morelock, secretary of the General Board of Lay Activities, gave the principal address of the evening.

The congregation sang, "Peal Out the Watchword," and the session closed with the benediction pronounced by L. M. Lipscomb.

SECOND DAY—NOVEMBER 3

The Conference was called to order by Bishop Denny. Hymn 37 was sung. Dr. Estes, of the Memphis Conference, led in prayer. The Bishop read and commented on Isaiah 55.

Dr. Countiss, the secretary, read the minutes of yesterday's three sessions, which were approved.

The tellers reported results of the third ballot. Clerical: 150 cast, 76 necessary to elect. J. M. Bradley received 92 and was declared elected. Lay: 53 cast, 27 necessary to elect. J. H. Johnson, receiving 34, and Mrs. R. P. Neblett 27, were announced elected. The fourth ballot—for two clerical and one lay delegates was taken.

The Hospital Board made its report and Dr. Ludd Estes and J. H. Sherard were heard pending its adoption.

The fourth lay ballot failed to elect.

The auditors' report on the books of the Conference treasurer, R. W. Sharp, showed that they are correctly kept.

Report No. 1 on Christian Literature, was read and Dr. D. B. Rauhins, editor of our Conference organ, was heard.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Mission, touching our "Home of Mercy" was read, and Dr. J. G.

Snelling, superintendent of the Home, was heard. Bishop Denny also spoke to the report.

The fourth clerical ballot showed the election of W. R. Lott. The fifth ballot, for one was taken. The fifth lay ballot resulted in the election of A. W. Mildren. Three alternates were ordered elected.

Drs. R. A. Clark, Carol Varner, Mathis, and O. G. Andrews, of the Memphis Conference, were introduced.

Dr. E. Nash Broyles read a memorial to the General Conference relative to a flexible benevolent allotment system, which was referred to the Committee on Memorials.

Question No. 3 was called, and M. E. Armstrong, G. W. Curtis, J. N. Hinson and J. H. Holliday were advanced to the Class of the Second Year. J. H. Blakemore, of the Class, was transferred. K. E. Tucker, in Duke University, remains in the Class of the First Year.

The fifth clerical ballot resulted in no election. The first lay alternate ballot resulted in no election.

R. B. Pearson, at his own request, was granted a location.

R. A. Grisham and K. E. Clark were advanced to the Class of the Fourth Year.

The Class of the Fourth Year was called, and A. L. Brewster, transferring, was continued in the Class. B. D. Benson, J. W. Cunningham, L. P. Jumper, L. C. Lawhon, and S. W. Butts, passed in their studies and were elected to elder's orders. G. B. Love, an elder, also passed.

Under Question No. 17, H. N. Mosely and L. H. Floyd were elected to local deacon's orders.

The sixth clerical ballot yielded no election. The second lay ballot for three alternates resulted in election of R. W. Sharp and J. H. Sherard.

Upon his own request, W. I. White was granted a supernumerary relation.

Question No. 21, was called, and the names of our six presiding elders were called, their characters passed, and reports made.

The third lay ballot resulted in no election. The seventh clerical ballot resulted in the election of T. H. Dorsey.

A resolution offered by the Board of Missions for the pastors to share 1 per cent of their salaries with our mission preachers was debated to some extent and finally, by vote, was laid on the table.

A message from J. H. Johnson was read to the Conference, and an offering of $46.50 was given to maintain his insurance policy.

The fifth lay ballot resulted in electing A. T. Hanner as the third alternate.

E. S. Lewis, R. G. Lord and Jno. W. Kyle were named as a Courtesy Committee.

J. H. Felts, E. H. Cunningham and C. T. Floyd were named as Conference Entertainment Committee.

Announcements were made and the Conference adjourned to meet at 2:30 p. m.

AFTERNOON SESSION

The Conference convened at the appointed hour, and W. W. Woollard led the devotions. Minutes of the morning session were read and approved.

The first clerical ballot for alternate delegates was reported, and M. Johnson was elected.

R. G. Moore offered a resolution: from the Boards of Missions and Finance, that the pastors and presiding elders who receive more than $800.00 share in the support of our superannuates and mission preachers to the extent of one per cent of their salaries, which was adopted.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Education was read, and J. H. Felts made an earnest appeal for pastors to use their influence to increase the patronage of Grenada College, which will solve its financial problems.

An offering of $50 was made for W. I. White, who, at this Conference, is taking the supernumerary relation.

The Conference adjourned to meet at 7 p. m.

SECOND DAY—EVENING SESSION

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE CELEBRATES SIXTY-THIRD ANNIVERSARY

Four Veterans Appear on Program

The Historical Society of the North Mississippi Conference, presided over by Rev. E. S. Lewis, held its annual session at First Church, Water Valley, Miss., Wednesday evening of November 1. The occasion was the celebration of the sixty-third anniversary of the Conference which was organized in Water Valley in 1870.

Judge J. G. McGowan, a member of the local church, read a paper on the history of Methodism in Water Valley.

The high light of the program was the appearance of four veterans who were present at the organization of the Conference. Rev. J. J. Brooks, a superannuate, delivered an address on "Memories of the Conference of 1870." A good part of the address was made up of clearcut pen-pictures of various members of the organizing body.

A letter from Rev. S. W. Miller, of Frisco, Texas, the only other surviving clerical member of the 1870 Conference, was read.

J. B. Streater, Black Hawk, a lay delegate to the organizing Conference, who enjoys the distinction of having served his church for sixty-five years as Sunday School Superintendent, and always present for the Sunday school except on rare occasions of illness or absence from home, presented a paper. Brother Streater is one of the original members of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, serving as Secretary of the Board, and signing all the diplomas of the College except those of 1927.

Gen. F. A. Howell, of Durant, now in his ninety-third year, Commander of the Confederate Veterans of Mississippi, told of experiences of those far-away years.

P. A. Dulin, of Aberdeen, though not a delegate to the Conference of 1870, was a seventeen-year-old boy and present on Sunday morning.

In the lives of Revs. J. J. Brooks and S. W. Miller and laymen Streater, Howell and Dulin, our church has had almost four and a half centuries of loyal service.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—NOTICE

Dear Brethren: Please let me remind you again to hand your report, Table No. 3, with checks, or receipts, to tally, to one of the auditors of the Conference the first day of the Conference session, in compliance with standing rule on page 112 of the Conference Journal, 1932.

This is very necessary in order that the Conference Treasurer may be able to report to the Conference before so late in the session.

Do not put money in your report, but checks, marking distinctly what it is for.

T. B. COTTRELL,
For Auditing Committee.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES AND PERSONALS

The Historical Society Anniversary brought about a scene long to be remembered. There were present at this service four brethren, Rev. J. J. Brooks, J. B. Streater, F. A. Howell and P. A. Dulin, who were also in attendance at the organization of the Conference 64 years ago. Their talks were the big features of the evening.

Twelve women, wives of preachers, were among the lay delegation, namely, Mesdames R. P. Neblett, C. A. Parks, W. C. Gálceran, Sr., R. G. Moore, Roy A. Grisham, J. A. George, J. R. Countiss, W. N. Duncan, N. N. Maxey, E. M. Sharp, J. C. McElroy and H. P. Lewis. Mrs. R. P. Neblett was elected a lay delegate to the General Conference.

The Historical Society, in celebrating the 150th Anniversary of Methodism in America, plans to secure a picture and short history of each church in the Conference and preserve them in permanent form in six volumes, one for the churches in each district.

The good people of Water Valley entertained the Conference in a wonderful way. Besides the splendid entertainment in their homes, a great choir furnished special music at the evening services and on Sunday. Pages, scouts and stenographers were at our service.

The genial presence of Mrs. Collins Denny was very much missed at this Conference. She was in attendance on former Conferences over which the Bishop presided.

Though by action of the General Conference Bishop Denny has to retire from active service, because of having passed the age limit, yet he shows no sign of failing strength, vigor or alertness. He is still a master of assemblies.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. W. R. Harvell reports that his stewards are making a strong effort to turn in a good report for conference. Brother Harvell has been ill, but nothing serious.

The Woman's Missionary Societies of New Orleans conducted a retreat at First Church, November 8. Zones 4 and 5 are in retreat today at our church in Houma, La.

Rev. and Mrs. W. R. Harvell, Bastrop, La., announce the marriage of their daughter, Ada Will, to Mr. Charles Otis Eddy at the First Methodist Church, November 5, 5:30 p. m. Good wishes to this fine young couple.

Since the death of Rev. H. S. Johns, pastor of the Greenwood and Bethany charge, La., the Centenary College Ministerial Club will complete the conference year under the leadership of their president, Rev. Roger Lahey, son of our pastor at Merryville.

"Interest fine here at Coushatta. Best congregations last Sunday of our two years' pastorate. Received eight new members during month of October, bringing us up to 93 in all. Organized our third Missionary Circle. Sunday school went far beyond previous record attendance, and our High League with more than thirty present. Will have creditable report for Conference, considering the disastrous rains and the consequent flood waters in the summer. This encouraging word comes from Rev. J. M. Alford, our pastor at Coushatta, La.

121st SESSION OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Business To Come Before Annual Methodist Episcopal Conference Meeting November 16

Bishop Collins Denny will convene the 121st annual session of the Mississippi Conference, meeting in Brookhaven, Miss., November 16, when nearly 400 Southern Methodists of this area will assemble to elect delegates to the approaching General Conference, sitting in Jackson, Miss., May, 1934, hear appointments of preachers to their charges for the ensuing year; hear reports of Conference Committees and Boards; and learn of the way in which the church's major boards at denominational headquarters have weathered the past year.

The election of General Conference delegates

REV. O. S. LEWIS,

Pastor-Host of the Mississippi Conference will be a major item of business on the calendar. The Mississippi Conference is entitled to 12 delegates, six clerical and six lay, and in addition it will elect several alternates.

The Rev. C. W. Crisler is presiding elder of the host district, and the Rev. O. S. Lewis is pastor of the Brookhaven Methodist Church where visiting delegates will assemble for the seventh time in history, and for the first time since 1920.

Prior to the official opening of the Conference, various Annual Conference committees will meet, and also the Bishop's cabinet will meet with Bishop Denny. The cabinet is composed of the presiding elders of the seven districts in the Conference as follows: the Revs. C. W. Crisler, Brookhaven District; J. T. Leggett, Hattiesburg District; B. L. Sutherland, Jackson District; T. J. O'Neal, who is closing his fourth year on the Meridian District, and will accordingly be assigned new work; Otto Porter, Seashore District; and H. G. Hawkins, Vicksburg District.

Probably there will be few changes in appointments, since most of the preachers in the Conference have served their present charges for less than four years.

An interesting feature of the Conference session will be reports from the three schools comprising the Methodist system of education in Mississippi, namely Millsaps College at Jackson, with D. M. Key, president; Whitworth College, at Brookhaven, headed by Dr. G. F. Winfield; and Grenada College, at Grenada, headed by Dr. J. R. Countiss. Millsaps heads the system as the senior college, and Whitworth and Grenada are junior colleges.

Reports from chairmen of Annual Conference boards and committees will also be an outstanding feature of the agenda, with the following chairmen making reports: the Revs. H. A. Gatlin, Columbia, Commission on Budget; J. L. Neill, Gulfport, Board of Missions; C. A. Schultz, Hattiesburg, Board of Finance; Dr. C. A. Bowen, Nashville, Tenn., Board of Christian Education; the Rev. W. M. Williams, Magee, Board of Church Extension; Dr. G. F. Winfield, Brookhaven, Board of Christian Literature; the Revs. W. A. Terry, Richton, Bible Board; J. A. Moore, Rolling Fork, Hospital Board; J. E. Williams, Poplarville, Board of Temperance and Social Service, and H. L. Norton, Shubuta.

F. Y. Whitfield, of Meridian, is Conference treasurer; and the Rev. W. B. Jones, Magnolia, is secretary for the fourth consecutive year. J. M. Sullivan, Jackson, is Conference lay leader.

The two Conference sessions in Mississippi are attracting not only state-wide, but denomination-wide interest, for Southern Methodist attention generally is turned upon Mississippi as the seat of the 1934 quadrennial General Conference, which meets next May in Jackson.

Annual Conferences meeting in 1933 all over the denomination are of double importance, in view of their probable influence on the quadrennial meet, through the election of delegates; formulation of resolutions and writing of petitions to the General Body will soon be in session in Mississippi.—Lincoln County Times.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN ROGERS

By Rev. V. C. Curtis, D.D.

The subject of this sketch, William Franklin Rogers, was the son of George W. and Martha E. Rogers. He was born near Booneville, in Prentiss County, Miss., September 20, 1855.

His grandfather, Zimrie Rogers, moved from Tennessee in 1835 and settled in the neighborhood in Prentiss County now known as Blythe's Chapel. It was in this community that William Franklin Rogers grew up and spent his young manhood. He took advantage of the best schools of that section, and, by diligent work and close application, he prepared himself for a teacher. He then spent some years teaching in the common schools of his county.

He was happily married to Miss Nannie T. Henson on March 27, 1878. Five sons and five daughters were born unto this union. Two of the sons died in infancy.

Brother Rogers was reared in a religious atmosphere. God was honored in the home, and those sterling qualities of character, honesty, justice, virtue and truthfulness were emphasized. It was not surprising that at the age of eighteen, while attending a protracted meeting at his home church, he was happily converted and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The experience that came to him on that eventful day, when he made his surrender to the Lord, never left him through the long years of his life. He could say with the Apostle Paul, "We know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren." Soon after his conversion he felt the call to preach and in response to that call, after a few years of hesitation, he decided to spend the remainder of his life preaching the Gospel that had meant so much to him. He was licensed to preach at Marietta, Miss., October 10, 1885. He did not apply for admission into traveling connection at once, but remained in the local ranks until December 8, 1891, when he was admitted on trial into the traveling connection in the North Mississippi Conference. He was ordained Deacon while he was in the local ranks by Bishop Charles B. Galloway at Grenada, Miss., December 14, 1890, and was ordained Traveling Elder by Bishop H. C. Morrison at Winona, Miss., December, 1901. During his forty-eight years in the ministry he served the following charges: Brown's Creek, 4 years; Iuka Circuit, 4 years; Cornith Circuit, 4 years; Sturgis Circuit, 4 years; Chester Circuit, 4 years; West Circuit, 3 years; Sallis Circuit, 4 years; Oakland Circuit, 4 years; Coffeeville, 2 years; Holcomb Circuit, 3 years; Potts amp, 4 years; Kilnichael, 3 years; Horn Lake, 7 months. Thus having filled out eight quadrenniums and having spent nine years of three circuits, two years on one and the last charge seven months. This record itself reveals the true character of the man and his type of ministry. He was a strong Gospel preacher and emphasized the fundamentals of the Christian religion. He dwelt upon such themes as repentance, justification, regeneration and witness of the Spirit. His preaching was accompanied by the power of the Holy Ghost, and hundreds were converted under his ministry. Many were the shouts of victory that were raised in his meetings. It could be said of him as was said of Barnabas of old, "He was a good man, full of the Holy Ghost and faith, and much people was added unto the church." Many who occupy prominent places in the church and state were converted under his ministry, and the power of his life is flowing through them to bless the world. The church has been made infinitely richer by the faithful and effective services of this man of God.

Brother Rogers not only professed faith in Christ, but he lived it in his every day life. It was a benediction to be in his home. He set before his children an untarnished character, upon which there was never a breath of suspicion. He impressed them in their early childhood with the beauty of the Christian life, and it was a source of his greatest joy to see them develop into the full stature of Christian manhood and womanhood. He never drew large salaries, but he managed well and gave his children the best opportunities for school and college. These children who have gone out into the world to assume their own responsibilities and who reflect credit and honor upon their father and mother are: George M. Rogers, Bruce, Miss.; Mrs. Mary Moss, Philadelphia, Miss.; Mrs. Grover C. Moss, Gadsden, Ala.; Mrs. Maude L. Guyton, Sallis, Miss.; Mrs. Clara B. Lord, Starkville, Miss.; Mr. Amos L. Rogers, Jackson, Miss.; Mr. Marvin L. Rogers and Miss Tryphena E. Rogers of Grenada, Miss.

Brother Rogers had prominent connections in the ministry. Rev. J. H. Rogers, who died in the Oklahoma Conference, was a brother; Rev. W. M. Young of this Conference was a brother-in-law; Rev. J. W. Rogers, pastor of Highland Methodist Church, Tampa, Fla., and Dr. B. F. Rogers, pastor of Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, New Orleans, La., are nephews.

Brother Rogers was honored by being placed on prominent committees during his long ministry. When he passed away, he was serving his seventh year on the Committee of Admissions. Because of his long experience and conscientious convictions, he was placed on this Committee to guard the door of the Conference and pass upon the acceptability of those who came into our ranks.

The physical health of Brother Rogers had been failing for several years and his loved ones advised him to retire from the active ministry, in order that he might be permitted to rest and prolong his life, but this was not according to his wishes for he wanted to remain in the active ministry unto the end. The last sermon that he ever delivered was at Poplar Corner, on the Horn Lake Circuit. He used as a text, "What think ye of Christ?" Immediately after the close of this service, he suffered a severe heart attack and was carried to the Methodist Hospital in Memphis for treatment. In a few days he came home. At 3:30 o'clock on Sunday, June 4, 1933, God signed his release from this earth and called him to His eternal Home to be with Him.

On the following Monday, June 5, at 9 a. m., in the Methodist Church at Horn Lake, where he recently served as pastor, services were conducted by his presiding elder, the Rev. W. L. Stormont, assisted by his long-time friends, Revs. S. A. Brown and W. L. Roberson. He was buried the same afternoon from the Methodist Church at Grenada, the service being in charge of the pastor, Rev. James H. Felts, assisted by Revs. W. L. Stormont, A. T. Mellwain, T. H. Dorsey, E. H. Cunningham and Dr. J. R. Comtiss. A large number of his ministerial brethren from different parts of the Conference were present and a host of others were there to express their love and appreciation for the life of the deceased. His body was laid to rest in the cemetery in Grenada to await the resurrection morn.

POETICAL THOUGHTS

By Mrs. George S. Brown

Cast thy burden upon the Lord and He shall sustain thee. He shall never suffer the righteous to be moved.—Psalm 55:2.

"THE BURDEN"

"The burden that I bear would be no less
Should I cry out against it; though I till
The weary day with sound of my distress,
It were my burden still.

"The burden that I bear may be no more,
For all I bear it silently and stay.
Sometimes to laugh and listen at a door
Where joy keeps holiday.

"I ask no more save only this may be—
On life's long road where many comrades fare,
Ore shall not guess, though he keep step with me,
The burden that I bear."

I wish that we all might remember that it does not lighten our burdens any to cry out against them. It rather seems to add to them, for in our estimation they become appallingly heavy. Do you not, every day, see men and women carrying a heavy basket on their heads or loaded sacks on their shoulders? If they should stop to groan and grunt the load would not be lighter; rather it would seem heavier as they dragged grumblingly along. It is just as true with burdens of the heart.

Of course, there is a natural inclination to tell about them, but very few listen to us, or if they are polite enough to seem to hear what we say, it goes in one ear and out of the other. Each heart knoweth its own bitterness, and not many have time to sympathize with us. And then one gets so tired of constantly sympathizing. Haven't you, among your friends and kindred, those whom you feel in duty bound to visit, and yet you dread to go, for the moment you enter the door you have to hear a tale of woe? You don't mean to be hard and bitter, but you have heard about those burdens until it is an old, old story. You have sympathized but you can't roll away the load—you can't remedy some things, no matter how sorry you feel.

Of course, it is hard to sing when your heart aches and to smile when in pain, and to laugh when everything seems dark and dreary; but it certainly won't add to your burden if you endeavor to make light of it. I wish more of us had the spirit of a young woman I know, who, when she suffered a broken leg, smilingly said, "How glad I am that it is not my arm, for there are so many things I can do, even when not walking." Sometimes it is our own fault that friends stay away from us. There is enough of sorrow in the world and one hesitates to go where they will hear of nothing else. There are brave souls who go along life's way with burdens

REV. CHARLES W. CRISLER, D.D.,
Presiding Elder-Host of the Mississippi Annual Conference almost too great for human strength, but they do not tell others about them. Silently they trudge along, realizing that He who staggered under the weight of the cross, making no complaint, walks with them and has promised rest to all who are weary and heavy laden.

Ruskin says, "The shadows God sends are few; those we make for ourselves are many," and in reality we do make burdens for ourselves—oftimes mountains out of mole hills. Even though the morning sky be overcast and the clouds be gray, we can keep God's sunshine in our hearts and have them filled with the radiance of God's love.

NOTICE CONCERNING OPENING OF LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE

After conferring with the presiding elders, I wish to announce that the Louisiana Conference will meet Wednesday evening, November 22, at 7:30 o'clock, in the First Methodist Church of Winfield, La. Immediately after the Sacrament on the Lord's Supper, the Conference will be organized and the schedule made for the following day.

All examining committees are requested to be ready to make their reports on Thursday morning among the first items of business.

HOYT M. DOBBS,
Bishop in Charge.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

In accordance with the Conference resolution passed at the last session of the Conference the Circuits of the Conference are to report the totals for the charge only in making their statistical report to the Conference.

Due to the fact that our Conference session lasts only three days it will be a physical impossibility to do the statistical work of the Conference unless the preachers give in their reports by the first day of the Conference session. It will be of very great assistance to the statistical secretaries if the preachers will mail their reports for Tables 1 and 2 to me at least ten days before the Conference session opens. By so doing we can have these two tables compiled and it will leave us only Table No. 3 or the Finance Table, to complete during the Conference session.

I will greatly appreciate the assistance of the preachers if they will mail these tables to me, as requested above, and if they will be sure to have Table No. 3, and any corrections for Tables 1 and 2, ready to hand in on the morning of the first day of the Conference session.

Thanking you for your full co-operation and assuring you that we will give the very best service possible in preparing the Statistics for the Conference, I am,

Cordially,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,
Statistical Secretary.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Committee on Admissions

All applicants for admission or re-admission in the Louisiana Conference are requested to meet the Committee on Admissions on Tuesday, November 21, 1933, at 7 p. m., in the Methodist church at Winfield, La.

BRISCOE CARTER, Chairman.

NEW ORLEANS UNIONNEWS STRIKES REPORTER

First Church Comes Alive

Hope you enjoyed Hallowe'en immensely. I'm just back from getting one of our porch chairs out of a neighbor's yard, and the pillow from a tree! Anyhow, Hallowe'en was good in the town of Natchitoches. We had a real Gypsy party, with Leslie Cowley, formerly (?) from Mansfield, leading in the games. They were swell!

Along with the subject of Hallowe'en, we want to tell you about the latest issue of Unionnews. The cover is decorated with a big pumpkin, cut open to show a group of boys and girls bobbing for apples. Around the pumpkin are cats, bats, and a witch riding a broomstick past the moon. The picture is finished in crayons—a most impressive cover!

Looking inside of Unionnews, we find the new officers of New Orleans City Union. The president is Miss Adeline McCarr. Jack Oliver is publicity director, and Beryl Oswald is editor of the News. These officers and the others were installed with a Candle Light service. Did you make your installation impressive?

Further on we are told what the Union pledge goes for in the New Orleans City Union. It contributes to the two district pledges to the Conference, to the district institutes and training schools, to the Union recreation, to a Mansfield delegate, to Standing Committees' expenses, and to publication of Unionnews. That shows how very important a Union pledge can be!

Next comes the news from Algiers. They've just completed a very successful contest, and the winners are waiting for their banquet. The programs were improved noticeably by the contest. They've also decided to have meetings of all Standing Committees the third week of each month to plan activities for the coming month. And they're also planning an extra special program to be given to raise money which will be turned over to the pastor or the church deficit. That's a plan any preacher will welcome!

Carrollton Young People also installed their officers in a Candle Light service. Officers pledged loyal support toward their work for the coming year. Rev. B. F. Rogers gave a talk, "Watch." They pass the sub-headings on to you—

WATCH Ways Actions
Time Courage Habits

St. Marks, too, used the Candle Light service, following it with a communion service. Such things impress the new officers with their responsibilities. They have already had a cabinet meeting, formulated their policy, and drawn up a budget. And if you have trouble getting members to business meetings, use their plan—precede the business with a spaghetti supper!

Parker Young People also have set everything for the coming year. They followed their business meeting with a bunch of "grown-up" games, such as Hide and Seek, and Drop the Handkerchief. They all went visiting the other Sunday, and were guests at the Rayne Young People's Devotional.

Felicity Young People have reorganized, elected, installed, and planned their next party. Miss Pat McHugh is president. Here's to you!

First Church in New Orleans is about to "wake up," to use their figure of speech, and they plan to be really going strong in a few weeks. We should hear from them again!

And with some snappy jokes and personals, the Hallowe'en issue of Unionnews closes. It's a paper any Union would be proud of. Our congratulations to it and its editors! And, by the way, Jack Oliver writes that they're sending a copy each month to each District Director. That's publishing the news!

They don't stop there. I have before me a clipping some of you might have seen. It's from the Times-Picayune, announcing the installation of officers in the New Orleans City Union. Jack sent me that, too.

We'll close along with the Unionews. And here's hoping that in the coming year more news is spread by more Young People, and more people are told what's going on around them!

LYDEL SIMS.

CHARACTER RECOVERY NATION'S GREAT NEED

National Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. Conference on Needs of Youth

That there will be no permanent recovery in this country which does not seek for a recovery of character is the belief of Dr. Albert W. Beaven, president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, who recently spoke before a joint meeting of the national organizations of the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. in New York City. The meeting brought to a focus the urgency of the spiritual claims of young people along with their need for jobs, food and other forms of relief which are being given nationwide attention in the 1933 Mobilization for Human Needs.

"Alongside of the support of the relief agencies must go the strengthening of all forms of character-forming agencies," Dr. Beaven said. "Our problem is not in production, it is in distribution. The very thing which makes our distribution a failure is the lack of character in our citizens. The lack of a sense of social responsibility and social conscience is what has produced exploitation instead of helpfulness. If we want character in our youth, the institutions that are free to make use of the value of religion for securing it are the best investment."

Other speakers on the program included Mrs. Ralph C. Earle of Philadelphia, representing the Y. W. C. A., and Frederic W. Smith of the Y. M. C. A.

In a personal message to the conference, Newton D. Baker, chairman of the annual mobilization, stated that "every constructive community youth guidance center must be kept open to help young people realize that unlimited opportunities still exist."

"THE GENERAL CONFERENCE AND THE CHURCH MEMBERSHIP"

Rev. Henry B. Hines,
Lake Providence, La.

My dear brother:—

Your article in the current issue of the Advocate interests me greatly. It is a clear statement of manifest facts, and it leads to inevitable conclusions. Your article is both clear and sane.

I was one of those put on a special committee at the last General Conference to recommend a financial system, or such adjustments as might seem wise. For days we labored without traveling far in the direction I thought we should go. Then our report—a rather clumsy compromise, I admit—was before the Conference late when the body was becoming restless. It was emasculated by amendments, and then committed to another committee, the budget commission. They had to bring in a hurried report, not having our background of study and discussion. The General Conference was by this time too impatient to give time to discussion, and the report was hurriedly adopted. This fixes the responsibility for what we have.

But what I set out to say is that your article traverses the very ground that I went over with earnest insistence in the meeting of our committee, supported by several other members of the body. But there were members apparently willing to go any length in the other direction, so we had to content ourselves with the best we could get in compromise. You hit the nail squarely on the head, and I am encouraged to believe that we will learn something from the logic of events.

I thank you for your fine article. Blessing upon you.

THE TENT OF MEETING

Light, Life, and Power

In the vocabulary of religion, there are three words which are singularly expressive. These words so fruitful in meditation are: Light, Life, and Power.

Religion is Light. Religion is soul illumination. In the realm of things spiritual there is a knowledge of

A Beautiful Pageant-Drama on the Bible

A skillful combination of music, hymns, Scripture passages, tableaux, and episodes, by Elliot Field, showing the significance of the Bible, and having unusual dramatic possibilities.

So flexible in arrangement that either large or small churches can present it. Just the thing for Bible Sunday, December 10.

A copy of this pageant-drama, including production privileges, will be sent upon receipt of twenty-five cents in stamps or coin.

Stop Headaches Right Now!

Take CAPUDINE is the answer. CAPUDINE contains several ingredients so proportioned and balanced to act together producing teamwork which provides such quick, easy relief. CAPUDINE is liquid—already dissolved. It naturally takes hold quicker without upsetting the stomach. Can you afford not to take the best? Try it for periodic pains and cold aches also. 10c-30c-60c a bottle.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reasons?

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can be controlled. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative brings a perfect movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, or after.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated as long as you keep on using it! And the habitual use of irritating salts, or of powerful drugs in the highly concentrated form of pills and tablets may prove injurious.

A week with a properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will tell you a lot. A few weeks' time, and your bowels can be "as regular as clockwork." Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists keep ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative; effective for all ages, and may be given the youngest child. truth, which is derived neither from books, nor methods of reasoning. He who is in touch with God, does not reason towards truth, but literally sees and apprehends truth. The soul inspired and illuminated with the Presence of God flies upon wings of faith towards Eternal Truth, and sees the awful needs of man from the mountain peaks of Light Divine.

Religion is Life. Life with God is inspired living. It is life dominated by a great purpose and illuminated by a glorious sense of direction. It is life wherein light is expressed in living, for it is far nobler to exemplify truth than to teach it. To suffer for truth is greater than the condemnation of evil. Better by far to give oneself in love for humanity than be a mere teacher of brotherhood. This is life, life immortal, wherein I live, yet not I, for God dwelleth in me.

Religion is Power. Think not however, that power comes unto the soul through sporadic prayer and intermittent effort. Power is the result of agonizing travail. God gives with lavish hand, but He gives only to those whose hands are bleeding with persistent knocking. Unto such however, He bestows the greatest of all power, which is power to create. We are builders with God, creators together with Him, and this is power.

200 PARTICIPATE IN HOUSE-WARMING

The handsome new parsonage of East End Methodist church, located on Sixteenth Avenue and Fifteenth Street, was opened Thursday evening when Rev. P. M. Caraway, pastor, and Mrs. Caraway entertained at a house-warming. More than 200 attended the affair and were given the opportunity of viewing the new home, which is one of the most beautiful and modern of its kind in Meridian.

It contains a living room, dining room, three bed rooms, two baths, pastor's study, breakfast room and kitchen. The floors are hardwood throughout.

Invited to be honor guests in the receiving line with the Rev. and Mrs. Caraway were the Rev. and Mrs. T. J. O'Neil, Mesdames J. B. Pearson, C. I. Martin, Will Davis, D. L. St. John, O. E. Buntyn, R. W. Cunningham, R. W. McDonald, W. P. Lang, R. E. Platt, S. L. Holyfield, A. J. Warren, Mattie Moore and E. A. McAdoo. The women were chosen to receive in appreciation of their efforts in raising funds with which to meet the last payment on the parsonage.

Receiving with them were the trustees of the church, C. G. Stokes, J. B. Kennedy, G. E. Prysock, S. L. Holyfield, R. M. Langford, E. D. Snelgrove, Willis Taylor, I. C. Walker and C. F. Partin.

Miss Sue Hasselle presided at the register. Mesdames R. M. Langford and S. D. McWilliams presided at the tea table. Misses Hattie Rea and Alice Lewis and Mrs. Herbert Osteen were the servitors receiving in the dining room.

Those who prepared the refreshments were Mesdames J. B. Kennedy, T. J. Eckford, Willis Taylor, C. G. Stokes, T. J. Tucker and Alma Denton.

A profusion of gift flowers from florists and friends adorned the entire home.—Meridian Star.

In Memoriam

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

On Monday night, October 4, at 11:30 o'clock, the beautiful Christian life of MRS. MARGARET ELIZABETH McCANDLESS came to an end; she was seventy-five years old. For the past two years she had been practically invalid, but she bore her affliction with great Christian fortitude.

Mrs. McCandless will be greatly missed by her many friends, for her life shed forth a radiance that could not be dimmed even by advancing years and ill health. She was a great reader of the Christian Advocate and looked forward to its coming with great pleasure. When her friends would visit with her she would say to them, "Please do not lay this wonderful paper aside, but read it through and through, for each page has a message for you."

Deceased was the widow of the late John F. McCandless, a well known merchant of Oak Ridge, Miss., and the daughter of the late Tilghmar Whatley, an early pioneer settler of Warren county; she is survived by five children: Mrs. J. E. Webster, Oak Ridge; Mrs. Emma Butts, Oak Ridge; Miss Inez of Memphis, Tenn.; and Misses Marion and Mignone, both of Oak Ridge; and two sons, Joe of Vicksburg and C. H. of Mathiston. Much sympathy is being extended to the bereaved family.

Interment was in the McCandless Cemetery, Rev. J. H. Grice, of Oak Ridge, officiating.

Active pallbearers were her five grandsons, Gordon Webster, Claude H. Webster, Newman Webster, Le Roy Butts, Wayne Butts and a great-nephew, Emmette Bell.

Honorary pallbearers were: R. H. Whatley, J. G. Whatley, A. E. Dunn, W. P. Alexander, P. H. Smithart and Professor C. S. Miller.

MRS. FANNY CAPPS

One of the most sacred facts we do well to ponder and preserve is the life of noble people. There simply is no explanation for them outside the powers of an indwelling Spirit, made possible by a consecrated life. They are "something more." Such a life was that of Mrs. Fannie Capps, who was born in Kosciusko, Miss., August 17, 1857, and died August 31, 1933, at Choudrant, La., where she had spent most of her life of usefulness and service.

The writer had the privilege of knowing her at his first appointment after she had passed the three score years and ten. I wish I had words to describe my discovery.

One of the most impressive pictures of her faith and love, which puts to shame many of our modern excuses and our soft indulgence, was to see her on her way to church, the Bible in one hand, walkingcane in the other, slowly making her way up a hot, dusty road in the hot summer time, or a cold, muddy road in the winter, forgetting not to tap on the steps or gate of the neighbors, reminding them and entreating them to come to worship.

She loved her church, her God, and she loved the souls of men. Who can forget those passionate pleas expressed in her prayers for the boys and girls, men and women of that community?

I cannot refrain from giving another incident that caused the couple then occupying the parsonage home to bow their heads as they felt that the gift offered by her was so sacred that to receive it at all must be in the spirit in which we partake of heavenly things. Sacrifice for Christ's sake was sweet to her.

Back behind it all was a life in vital touch with God. Like Jeremiah of old, her religion was inward and real. Her life, too, covered a long period, but even to the end it was still loyal and true. She knew who it was that said to the woman, "If thou knowest the gift of God, and who it is saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water."

Doctors Give Creosote For Dangerous Coughs

For many years our best doctors have prescribed creosote in some form for coughs, colds and bronchitis, knowing how dangerous it is to let them hang on.

Creomulsion with creosote and six other highly important medicinal elements, quickly and effectively stops all coughs and colds that otherwise might lead to serious trouble.

Creomulsion is powerful in the treatment of all colds and coughs, yet it is absolutely harmless and is pleasant and easy to take.

Your own druggist guarantees Creomulsion by refunding your money if you are not relieved after taking Creomulsion as directed. Beware the cough or cold that hangs on. Always keep Creomulsion on hand for instant use. (adv.)

How Black-Draught Stops Bad Feeling

"I have taken Thedford's Black-Draught for about twelve years, when needed, for dizziness, and it is a wonderful medicine," writes Mrs. Elmer Leverett, of Carrier Mills, Ill. "I can usually tell when a headache is coming on by the bad taste in my mouth and a dull feeling. If I begin taking Black-Draught then, I can keep off the headache."

To make Children

EAT

Don't force children to eat! The girl or boy who has no appetite has stasis—which means the child is sluggish. But cathartics have caused more constipation than they ever cured! The "California treatment" is best—just pure syrup of figs. Try this for a few days, then see how eagerly your youngster will eat.

Stimulate the colon and that child with a finicky appetite will devour everything set before him. Here's the simple treatment that does more for babies or older children than all the diets, fad foods, or tonics.

Nature has provided the "medicine"—you'll need to stir your child's colon muscles into proper action. California syrup of figs. Pure, delicious, harmless. It acts on the lower colon—where the trouble is. It has no ill effects on the intestines.

Begin tonight, with this marvelous "California treatment." Any druggist has California syrup of figs, all bottled, with directions. Use enough the first time to cleanse the clogged colon of every bit of poison and hard waste. Then just a little twice a week until the child's appetite, color, weight and spirits tell you the stasis is gone. Whenever a cold or other upset clogs the system again, use this natural vegetable laxative instead of drastic drugs.

WARNING: There are dealers who practice substitution. Be sure to protect your child by looking for the name CALIFORNIA on the bottle.

MRS. H. McMULLAN SAYS—

The United States has one doctor for every 673 people, while the foreign field has an average of one doctor for every 2,500,000 people.

The observance of a Harvest Day as a special occasion for completing the work of the year and bringing in the deficits in funds has become a standing feature of the fourth quarter. This special meeting is held during the first ten days in December in order to complete our financial plans before we begin the hectic Christmas spending.

Special programs have been prepared each year for Harvest Day, but the number of auxiliaries using these programs is very hard to determine in advance, and for this reason there are a number left from other years which may be used this year. Because of this it seems wise to save the expense of a new program. Societies which did not use the program "Is It Worth While?" prepared in 1932, may be able to secure copies of that program on request from the Literature Department. Those auxiliaries which have used "Is It Worth While?" may get a most helpful program prepared several years ago, but altogether appropriate for use now by any society, even though it was used when it was first issued. This was issued under the title "Harvest Day." In ordering, state which of the two programs you desire.

Mrs. E. C. Tucker of Ridgeland, Miss., is the president and also corresponding secretary of the Ridgeland auxiliary. She is "on the job" and makes all her reports on time.

Mrs. John H. Green, in making her publicity report, summarizes the work of her auxiliary. They took as a Bible study, "The Origin and Growth of the Bible," and carried out the plan of the "Fellowship Tea," co-operated with the Sunday school in a vacation Bible school. In their revival meeting fifty-three united with the church. They are now studying and praying for Japan.

The third meeting of zone 2, Jackson District, was held at Mendenhall. Among the speakers were Mrs. Norman Taylor, district secretary, and Mrs. A. F. Watkins of Jackson. They gave a Fellowship luncheon in connection with the zone meeting, during which Mrs. Paul Arrington of Magee talked on Christian Fellowship. Mrs. W. F. Mahaffy of Braxton, the retiring district secretary, was the recipient at a very unique surprise shower.

The next meeting will be held at Magee.

The Missionary Call

At the fourth and fifth quadrennial conventions of the Student Volunteer Movement the most spiritual sessions were the closing hours, when numbers of young men and women arose in their places and in a sentence told the name of the country to which they expected to go as missionaries within a year, and the reason they were going. There are appended herewith a few of these testimonies, selected from the stenographer's reports of these gatherings:

"China, because I believe God leads in that direction."

"India, in answer to God's call."

"Turkey, because that empire needs Christ and Christ needs that empire."

"The Congo Basin, because God has called me."

"The Philippines: I can go; I have Christ; therefore I must go."

"Japan, because of the leading of the Spirit."

"West China, because I said 'anywhere,' and the church said 'China West.'"

"Philippine Islands, because God says, 'Son, go work today in my vineyard.'"

"South America, because the value of the human soul cannot be estimated, and I want to die rich."

"Mexico, because I love the Lord Jesus Christ."

"China, because I have taken the Lord Jesus Christ, not only as my Savior, but also as the Lord of my life." — "Missionary Comments."

TWITTERINGS OF TIMOTHY TWIG

Cowboyese

The cowboy is fast passing. His was a picturesque life on the breezy plains. A Texas newspaper man would embalm his spicy vocabulary thus: "The top screw mounted his cutting horse and followed by a group of chuck eaters, started to trail a bunch of cattle. The corral rope was on his saddle next to the sougan, and as he placed a brain tablet in his mouth, his mount began to swallow its head and soon turned the pack." You'll need a glossary. Here it is: "Top screw," a ranch hand long on the ranch and familiar with its business from top to bottom. Also called "Waddie." "Cutting horse," highest type of cow pony used for separating a small lot of cattle from a large herd. "Chuck eater," new young man from the east come out to learn the game. "Trailing a bunch of cattle," taking them on a long trip to another place. "Corral rope," used to make an enclosure for the horses at night, tied to the bushes. "Sougan," the purchaser's blanket. He carries three and a cotton pillow—the blanket is also called a "velvet couch" or a "hot roll." "Brain tablet," a cigarette. "Swallow its head," unexpectedly begins to pitch. "Turn the pack," throws its rider.

C. MILTON CHALMERS, Manager

Winnfield Entertains Eighty-Eighth Session of the Louisiana Conference

BY JUDGE R. W. OGLESBY

It is not known just when the church was organized, but the minutes of the Masonic Lodge show that Rev. J. F. Bellamy, a Methodist minister, was the chaplain of the Lodge from 1859 to 1865, and the inference is that he was the local pastor.

From 1865 to 1870 Rev. John F. Wynn, of sainted memory, served the charge on a circuit as large as the State of Delaware. The cornerstone of the present building contains a letter written by him and read at the laying of the cornerstone, in which he describes in a graphic manner the hardships as well as the pleasures of the pioneer preacher. He paid a beautiful tribute to his faithful old horse which carried him over the imperial circuit.

From 1870 to 1880 the presiding elders of the district were Christian Keener, B. F. Alexander and J. H. Stone. The pastors during that period were E. J. Hart, D. A. Boddie, Sam Schroder and C. R. Godfrey.

In 1881 John W. Hearn was the pastor and N. S. Cornell was the presiding elder. It was during this year that our beloved Dan C. Barr was licensed to preach by the Winnfield church. He is still living and comes back once a year to deliver a sermon from the local pulpit.

From 1881 to 1900 the following served as presiding elders: J. D. Harper, J. I. Hoffpauir, V. D. Skipper and J. A. Parker. The following served as pastors: D. C. Barr, A. T. Galloway, E. B. Galloway, J. W. Lee, Wilson Moore, W. G. Roberts, W. E. Akin, W. B. Van Valkenburg and A. W. Turner.

From 1900 to the present the following served as presiding elders: J. D. Harper, R. W. Tucker, Briscoe Carter, J. M. Henry, W. L. Doss, Jr., K. W. Dodson, W. R. Harvell and R. M. Brown. During this same period the following served as pastors: J. P. Haney, N. J. Roberts, J. G. Sloan, W. H. Jordan, H. J. Boltz, R. A. Holloway, A. S. J. Neill, H. W. Bowman, J. D. Harper, L. A. Humphreys, S. S. Bogan, J. W. Lee, R. S. Walton, W. H. Jordan, P. M. Caraway, C. C. Wier, R. T. Ware and Ellis Smith.

In 1870, Daniel Kelly, a Winnfield lawyer, donated to the church block six, being one acre in size, and a frame building was erected thereon. This building being the only one in town was used not only by the Methodists and Baptists as a meeting place, but it served as a schoolhouse also. In 1900 it was torn away and another frame building was erected. In 1918 this was torn down and the foundation for the present building was laid during the pastorate of R. S. Walton. The church let Brother Walton off one Sunday in each month to serve Atlanta, where he built a splendid building which has just recently been moved from its original site up on the hill where the original church stood near the cemetery on the State Highway. While Brother Walton was away one Sunday filling his Atlanta appointment, a collection was taken and $12,500, mostly in Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps, was raised in a few minutes. Brother Walton held his last service in the basement of the new church. He was succeeded by Brother Jordan who took up the work and, outside of a few odds and ends, it was finished during his quadrennium. Brother Caraway succeeded him and during his three years the finishing touches were made. Brother Wier came along to inherit the $2500 debt to the Board of Church Extension, and, after one year of demands from the creditors, his Scotch blood rebelled and under his splendid leadership this debt was wiped out. In 1931 he got Bishop Dobbs to come and dedicate it. But for the love and sacrifice of a noble little band of men and women, some of whom have crossed the Great Divide, this splendid and beautiful little church would not today be standing ready for the entertainment of the Louisiana Conference for the first time in the history of Winnfield.

The Woman's Missionary Society bought and paid for the elegant pews, and Mrs. B. W. Bailey donated the handsome pulpit set in honor of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Dickerson.

Winnfield was made a station in 1905, and in 1906, while R. A. Holloway was pastor, the district conference met here, which was presided over by Bishop Seth Ward, who had just been elected, and the holding of this conference was one of the first, if not the very first, of his official acts after his election to the bishopric. The conference opened on Wednesday and closed on Sunday night. In many respects it resembled an Annual Conference, for the preachers flocked here from all parts of the state to meet the new bishop. Not having much business to transact, a great deal of time was spent in preaching, and some of the greatest sermons ever heard were preached on that occasion.

In 1916, or thereabouts, Bishop E. D. Mouzon held a district conference here and on Sunday preached to a large audience in the high school auditorium.

In 1925 the State Sunday School Convention was held here, at which we were honored by the presence of Bishop S. R. Hay.

It is said that Winnfield is the exact center of Methodism of Louisiana. With the splendid highway system made possible by Governors Long and Allen, both from Winnfield, it can be reached within a few hours from any point in the state.

It has been the ambition of Winnfield to entertain the Annual Conference ever since the new church was built, but the depression came on and caused the membership to forego asking for the honor. Last year the Baptist State Convention met here for the third time since 1903, and the good Baptist people, desiring to show their appreciation to the Methodists for the noble way in which they responded in helping to entertain the Convention, in-

"MEN'S HEARTS FAILING THEM FOR FEAR"

By Bishop W. A. Candler

The ablest men in the world are perplexed by the prevalent depression throughout the earth. They seem not to see the causes which have led to this world-wide depression, nor can they offer remedies for it. Mr. Montagu Norman, who has been the Governor of the Bank of England since 1921, and is regarded as one of the ablest financial authorities in the world, spoke recently of the situation as follows:

"The difficulties of the present economic disorder are so vast and so unlimited that I approach the subject not only in ignorance but in humility. It is too much for me. I wonder if there is anyone in the world who can really direct the affairs of the world or of his own country with any assurance of the result of his action will have. First we have been down then we have been up, then down, then up. The confused affairs of the world have brought about a series of events and a general tendency which appear to me as being outside the control of any man and any government and any country."

Many think the great loss of human lives and human treasure in the World War accounts for the world-wide depression of today; and that direful conflict does explain in part present conditions; but it does not account for all that we see around us.

It was followed by a "boom" which in our country was nothing less than a financial debacle. Men went wild in efforts to make money, and all the people were overwhelmed in a period of a most wasteful extravagance. "Booms" never fail in the end to blast the men and women who participate in them.

But the "boom" does not account for the present depression altogether.

The real source of world-wide confusion is the moral slump which has followed in all nations. War always demoralizes, and this greatest of wars gave rise to the greatest demoralization throughout the earth.

Russia slew her former rulers and went into Communism.

Italy, under the lead of Mussolini, adopted the vagaries of Fascism.

Spain dethroned her king and set up a changeful government, which is not guided by wisdom or high moral purpose.

France has been disordered, and is suffering from a period of small statesmen, who are as much confused about what is good for the world as the governor of the Bank of England confesses he is confused.

England is permeated by all sorts of agitations of radicalism which cannot lead to any final and permanent good.

Germany is harassed by the revolutionary acts of Hitler and his associates.

In our own country settled moral principles are questioned, and set aside, and the fundamental principles of the American Constitution are held in disesteem, if not violated unscrupulously.

It is not strange that the world should be confused when it has thrown away its moral compass. It is adrift without knowing whither it is going, nor where its confusion will end.

Worst of all, the publicists confess confusion and helplessness, and make plain that their confession is justified by their incapacity. They are looking in the wrong direction for deliverance.

The fundamental principles of righteousness must be enthroned in the world, and the nations must submit to the authority of the immutable righteousness of God's law, which is the only safeguard for life in the earth. When that law is set aside or ignored, the greatest dangers arise.

Our own country bears justly a part of the blame for the world's depressed condition.

We possessed the treasure and made loans to every government involved in the World War which asked for aid. These governments now complain that they are unable to meet their obligations, and our people must carry the burden of unpaid debt by processes of taxation and other financial devices of questionable nature. In the emergency thus created our nation also is ready to look for any sort of deliverance, whether it be good or bad. Nothing, therefore, short of the restoration of moral life of the people will suffice to bring them again to peace and prosperity.

Our Republic leads mankind in the matter of wealth and power; and it must lead mankind out of moral confusion back to moral stability. God's law must be re-enthroned in American life in order that this life may be a light to guide a perplexed and fear-stricken world. Surely this great nation was founded for the highest moral ends, and if it disappoints the purpose of God in bringing light to the nations of the earth, it will be cut down as a barren fig tree, cumbering the ground whereon it stands and adding nothing to the welfare of mankind.

Ralph Waldo Emerson said: "America is another name for Opportunity. Our whole history appears like a last effort of the Divine Providence in behalf of the human race." This manifest destiny we are to look at, not with pride and boastfulness, but with a deep sense of awful responsibility.

As far back as the days of Adam Smith, that great economist predicted that the transfer of empire from Europe to America was inevitable. The greatest part of the Anglo-Saxon peoples reside in the United States and its dependencies, and they possess the greatest amount of wealth ever accumulated by any nation since the world began. Heretofore, these Anglo-Saxon peoples have stood for a spiritual Christianity and an unwavering civil liberty; but there are alarming evidences that these high and holy things are suffering neglect in our day. While our people should have risen to the height of our responsibility to these lofty things, they have fallen too much under the passion for getting gain, rather than for cultivating godliness.

Our country lies within the parallels of power, and there is no other land left in the world within that latitude to which emigrants may go and rise to power. The last hope of the world seems to be deposited in America; and if that light be extinguished by worldliness and wickedness, a thick darkness will cover the earth which will be felt as world-wide hopelessness.

When Napoleon addressed his army before the Mamelukes under the shadow of the pyramids, he pointed to the latter and said to his soldiers, "Remember, from yonder heights forty centuries look down upon you." Is it too much to say that from the heights of all past history the centuries that have gone by look down upon our nation? We occupy the very Gibraltar of the ages, which commands the world's future.

The vast accumulations of money, which are found in America, and which constitute its greatest peril, must be used to fulfill its boundless opportunity.

If our material possessions are used in selfish indulgence, with all the sins of luxury which such selfishness imply, the hatred of the nations will be drawn down upon us and the condemnation of God will fall upon us. Already many of the nations of the earth are manifesting envy with reference to America, and are complaining of its selfish tariff.

While the hearts of men fail them for fear, it is the high duty of America to spring new hope for the world; and this it can do only by proclaiming the hope of God that is offered in Jesus Christ.

"A CROSS-BEARING MINISTRY"

By Rev. A. C. Lawton.

Read Matt. 10:1-38

"He that taketh not his cross and followeth after me, is not worthy of me."

Dear Editor: Your editorial, "Can the Pastor Be Saved?" at hand. Your requirements are fine as far as they go. All agree with you that a religious experience, a trained mind, and a healthy body are essential for a successful Christian ministry. Even these should be explained more fully.

The religious experience must be kept alive by faith, prayer, worship, obedience and service.

The trained mind must continue to add knowledge by study, meditation and observation.

The healthy body must be kept healthy by proper foods, rest, fresh air, exercise and sunshine.

But still I have not come to my point. Here it is: All these fine qualifications will not save the pastor unless he is willing to bear his cross daily. Somehow I don't believe we Methodist preachers are willing enough to bear suffering and sacrifice for Christ and the lost as we should. Some of us in our eagerness to be a five thousand or two thousand-dollar preacher get our stewards to set the salary above what they can pay. Some of us even pay part of our own salary so as to report in full. Then at Conference do report in full and dare act as if we are not lying.

Has the Methodist ministry lost its challenge for sacrificing ministers?

What is this talk about too many Christian preachers? It is a disgrace in times like this for any church to say that. A disgrace? Yes! I say it. With the devil seeking whom he may devour, sin rampant as it is in the world, and especially in Louisiana, yet we speak of a congested Louisiana Conference. Fields white unto harvest, souls dying in sin, liquor flood loose, divorce rampant, married and unmarried murdering unborn babies, corrupt politicians, wickedness in high places of government and hell itself practically turned loose—but all the time God sending fresh soldiers and laborers into the harvest and His Church saying we cannot use you. Something is wrong.

If I was one of these God-called men and God had sent me to preach His Divine Son's Gospel, I would not let the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, stand in the way. If I were rejected by the bishop, presiding elder, or Annual Conference from the Methodist charges I would go to the fields or on my father's tomb-stone and preach as Wesley did. "Woe to me if I preach not the gospel," accepts no excuse. I have one prayer I pray daily: "Oh, God, whatever the cost, for Christ's sake use me in the saving of lost souls."

As long as there are lost souls, and as long as God calls men to preach His Son's gospel, and as long as they meet the Church's requirements for admission, then it is the Conference's duty to admit them and the bishop's job to give them a charge.

We feel the voice of the Conference is the voice of God. Send us. We will go. We are willing to sacrifice for Him who died for us. If we are not willing to bear our cross we should be put out. We do not belong in God's ministry or the Methodist Itinerary.

The unwillingness to bear their cross was found among Jesus' own chosen twelve. One wanted to hold the money bag. And when he saw there would be no silver in it he ran off to another church or conference where the thirty pieces of silver were paid. The others loved their crosses, suffered, preached and died, but they turned the world upside down.

Alexandria needs two more Methodist churches. Ruston needs a second church badly. Some of the large pulpits could care for an assistant pastor. Most of the large cities need more Methodist preachers. State evangelists could be used throughout the Conference.

God will stop calling them into the Louisiana Methodist Conference when Louisiana doesn't need them. If we are truly called and the Conference sends us, God will care for us. "Lo, I am with you, even unto the end of the world." He will not send us where He will not go with us.

The pastors and officers of the larger churches will co-operate, unless they are selfish; if so, change them. I believe they will divide their salary to get a second church started and make room for God's anointed. The larger pulpit pastors want to bear their crosses, too. This is their chance.

Let us never say we have too many God-called preachers, but not enough. Let us lift our eyes unto the fields white already to be harvested and pray for more laborers. For if the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, cannot use God's prepared and called preachers, then He will raise up another church that will.

I have spoken. I call heaven to write it down. I have warned you.

WORLD'S WEEK OF PRAYER

A Call to Prayer

In this annual Week of Prayer and World Fellowship, the Young Women's Christian Associations of fifty countries celebrate their common purpose and seek communion with their source of common strength.

These are bewildering days. Never since 1918 have we so needed the contact with Him whose Kingdom we seek and the fellowship of those who see eye to eye with us on the fundamentals of living. We ask as Francis Thompson asked, "Is my gloom, after all, shade of his hand outstretched caressingly?" While we share his groping, we hold to his belief that the hand of God has not been removed from the world; and in that faith we proceed to the specific and practical problems that confront us.

This year we shall be acutely conscious of the Associations in other lands that have suffered from our retrenchments. Especially for the Y. W. C. A.'s of India, Uruguay, Estonia and Latvia shall we pray that our withdrawal of all American secretaries may not irreparably harm their developing movements, but that the sources of healthy life within them may heal the wounds of sudden loss and bring them to a period of fresh and happy growth.

We shall remember with gratitude signs of progress in many countries—better leadership, greater participation in social action, a firmer financial basis. The recent conference in China of leaders from Japan, Korea, the Philippines, the United States, together with the president and executive of the World's Y. W. C. A., is a symbol and a promise that even the most difficult times cannot halt our going forward. The national conventions in China and Japan impress us afresh with the great promise and present force in these national movements. Surely Association life that can flourish under such handicaps of national and international disquiet has a spiritual power that cannot be gainsaid.

But while we give thought to our active participation in a world fellowship, we shall also remember the international life of the world, political, social, economic, religious, which touches us just as closely. With what fears and hopes we look into the year ahead! In the Disarmament Conference, the war debt discussions, our relations with our nearest neighbors among the nations, how severely we shall be tested, and who can tell whether our statesmen and we ourselves shall act with the intuitive fear and suspicion of animals or with the mutual trust and love of the children of God. With this test in our thoughts we shall pray for an increase of spiritual stature in leaders and peoples.

Especially in our foreign policy as a nation we shall remember that we have often by too hasty action, or failure to act, endangered the healthy development of other peoples, increased international tension, inflicted indignities on the spirit of proud races. May we see that in the family of nations as in the human family, all are responsible in the last analysis for the conduct of each; and be ready to take our full share of blame for what is past and responsibility for the future right relations of the world.

To be international means to have learned the lesson of love as Christ taught it. How shall we attain to this quality of life unless He teach us; and how shall He teach us unless we seek the instruction of His spirit?—Woman's Press, November, 1933.

QUALIFICATIONS OF STEWARDS

By L. C. Pigford, Lay Leader

Certainly no official position in the church carries with it any greater responsibility or opportunity than that of steward. This was recognized in the earliest days of the Christian Church when the apostles found need of lay assistance in properly caring for the temporal affairs, thus leaving to them free rein for the spiritual affairs. This is such a notable transaction in the history of the church that the names of the first appointees are recorded in the Scriptures. The stewards' importance takes on added significance now when the spiritual life of the church is seemingly at low ebb, and when we are casting about for pastoral assistance in the development of the Christian life and character of our people. For surely you will agree that there is too little of consecration in the every-day practical affairs of mankind—yes, distressingly so; and that if we shall make progress in the face of present odds we must require and demand that lay consecration and lay assistance be unstintingly given. There is no greater opportunity or responsibility offered to laymen than as a member of the board of stewards. It can not be far from the truth to state that the board of stewards of a Methodist charge constitutes its most potential group. In my humble opinion, no agency of the church can so ably prove the key to the solution of our difficulties as can the board of stewards, and I would urge the pastorate to center their attention and efforts on the stewards as individuals toward a proper and wholesome consecration of their lives and service to His cause. I sometimes think that we have spread our activities over such an area of organization, without proper assistance, that the effect of our efforts is thereby destroyed. Concentration on a small group, who would prove the nucleus to leaven the whole, might bring greater and more lasting results. Certainly, in a consecrated board of stewards is laid the foundation for success in any task that the local church may undertake.

Let us then look to their qualifications so that proper selections may be made. In Acts 6:3, the apostles spoke to the membership in these words: "Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business."

And in Acts 6, 8th verse, it is said, "And Stephen, full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people."

In the Discipline, "Let the stewards be persons of solid piety who both know and love the Methodist Doctrine and Discipline, and of good natural and acquired abilities to transact the temporal business of the Church."

First—Genuine Christian Character.

"Choose seven men full of the Holy Ghost."

"And Stephen, full of faith and power."

"Let the stewards be men of solid piety."

Certainly these are sufficiently impressive to point us to the necessity of a spirit-filled life as the first and most essential qualification of a steward. No greater mistake can be made than to elect a steward who does not have this qualification; it matters not what his other qualifications. There can be no substitute for spirituality. The work to which he is related is so fraught with spiritual significance that none but a Christian man is qualified to function in this capacity. Irretrievable injury has been done to the church by placing on the board of stewards men of questionable character. The effects are always disastrous, both from within and without. But, you say, Brethren, that this is the ideal and that it cannot be attained. Then let us approximate it as nearly as we can. Surely in our relations to the church of the Lord Jesus Christ we must preach the ideal and strive to attain, or else we had best stop preaching and striving. Too long has the church suffered from a weak spiritual lay leadership, and so much so that the world has lost confidence in us and finds little to attract.

Not long since I was impressed with the statement from our local pulpit to the effect that in all compromises between the church and the world, the church had made them; the world had made none. Certainly in the selection of the leadership of our church we cannot afford to trifle with this most essential qualification, genuine Christian character, for fear that compromises might further make inroads on our polity and purpose.

Then also a steward should possess ability.

"Full of wisdom."

"Full of faith and power."

"Of good natural and acquired abilities."

All are taken from the three verses above quoted. Under this heading we might list leadership. Because of the varied responsibilities that fall upon a steward he should possess qualities of real leadership. The ability to impress on others his plans and to direct in the execution of those plans. Experience—a valuable teacher to one who must take on the role of leadership. The exuberance of youth has its excellencies in right settings, but may do endless harm when allowed free rein in leadership. Energy—a lazy person has no place on a Methodist board of stewards. The office calls for activity; responsibilities are too great to be discharged by one who is lacking in energy. Courage is another prerequisite quality; inevitable difficulties and discouragements of all sorts will present themselves. A man lacking in faith and courage will soon be defeated and unfortunately will communicate his spirit to other members of the church and consequent failure will be the result. The qualities that win out are those of unfaltering faith and courage to undertake the seemingly impossible. A man of vision is also required; he must be able to see beyond the present, to visualize the results that will be achieved in the years to come. He must be able to discern clearly the moral and spiritual values in all relationships of life and the place of the church to function in leadership in this marvelous ministry to the souls of men.

No man can succeed as a steward who is not loyal to his church and its program—that is, the entire program of the church. Too frequently men are placed on the board of stewards who are favorable to one feature of the work of the church but opposed to another. The influence of such a man is deadly so far as the spirit and enterprise of the church is concerned.

Another essential qualification is the spirit and habit of co-operation. The steward ought to be a man of conviction, but he ought to fight for those convictions in the board; and when the majority have voted on the question and the policy of the board has been determined then it is his responsibility to line up and give his full support to the policy or plan adopted. Nothing more unfortunate can happen for a board of stewards than to have a member, or a number of members, start a movement of opposition in the congregation. A "divided board" invariably means a divided church, and this spells defeat instead of victory.

ARTIE H. AHTEN—AN APPRECIATION

By Dr. W. W. Holmes

Artie H. Ahten, for fifty years a respected and useful citizen of the Carrollton section in New Orleans, died on October 26, 1933. He was born in Norden, Ostfriesland, Germany. He came to America when he was nineteen years of age, first settling in the vicinity of New York City, but one year later, in 1870, moved to New Orleans. In 1871 he was married to Miss Wilhemina Stangler. To this happy union ten children were born—Henry, John, Willie, Mrs. Fred Brandt, George, Albert, Otto, Mrs. Walter S. Mott and A. H., Jr. All survive their father except Henry and John. Mrs. Ahten passed away about five years ago.

Mr. Ahten conducted two lines of business successfully—saddlery and gardening. He was particularly successful in the latter. He conceived the idea of raising cucumbers under glass in winter for northern markets. In this venture he made a fortune.

His most conspicuous service in New Orleans was in the church. When he moved to Carrollton, then a suburb of New Orleans, he gathered the children together for Sunday school. For the first few years these meetings were in private residences. In 1885 Mr. Ahten was instrumental in the organization of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church. He was one of the first stewards of the church, and when he retired from the Board a few years ago he was elected chairman, emeritus. He was a trustee of the church from its organization to the time of his death. He was Sunday school superintendent for many years. He was always a liberal contributor to the church, and in the building of the new Carrollton church he was the largest giver. He and his good wife, at the cost of several thousand dollars, supplied the church with its present fine organ. He was a great lover of music, especially the great gospel hymns of the church. He died in his eighty-fourth year, strong in mind and body. He was a good churchman for more than sixty years. His faith failed not. He came to the end of the way in triumph and great joy.

May God give us more such men.

RESOLUTIONS OF EAST BATON ROUGE MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

The East Baton Rouge District Ministerial Association duly assembled in regular session at Amite, La., on November 6, 1933, hereby resolves:

1. We deplore the fact that the 18th Amendment will probably be struck from the Constitution of the United States of America.

2. We deplore the fact that the White House has apparently assumed the relationship of clearing-house for the breweries, distilleries and distributors of alcoholic liquors.

3. We further deplore the fact that the two dominant political parties have abandoned the high ethical aims embodied in the prohibition amendment and laws and have put revenue above righteousness and dollars above the decency of sobriety.

4. We deplore and resent the fact that a member of the Presidential Cabinet who is on a salary at national expense spends much of the time bought by his salary promoting the repeal movement in contempt of the consciences of millions of honorable citizens throughout the nation.

5. We deplore the use of governmental patronage as a means of securing support for liquor interests by scourging hesitant groups into voting for repeal.

6. We further put ourselves on record as unalterably opposed to any concession to liquor sentiment and we will constantly contend for absolute bone-dry prohibition.

REV. HENRY S. JOHNS

By Dr. A. W. Turner

In the passing of Rev. H. S. Johns on September 28, 1933, at the parsonage home in Greenwood, La., the Louisiana Conference loses one of its most faithful and efficient men. Brother Johns was one of the most faithful and tactful pastors that the writer has ever known. Perhaps the outstanding feature of his ministry was his twenty years of service as chaplain at the Louisiana State Prison.

His gentle brotherly spirit won for him the respect and love of all prisoners, regardless of creed or color. They trusted him to write a word of comfort to the folks at home, and loved to hear him sing gospel songs and preach to them a gospel of hope that was sufficient for the unfortunate hemmed in by prison walls.

Brother Johns accompanied more men to the place of execution than any other man in Louisiana. He labored and prayed with these poor unfortunates up to the last minute, and his was not a cold, mechanical service. His soul was stirred to the greater depths as he suffered with them.

The devotion of the good people of the Greenwood charge, where Brother Johns spent his last five years, lacking a few months, was beautiful, and revealed to the writer something of the sweet and tender relation existing between a faithful gospel minister and his people.

I enjoyed the fellowship of this good man for many years. In his going I sustain a personal loss. God bless and keep his loved ones, and grant unto us all the abundant entrance into the heavenly home received by this good man.

Someone will prepare a suitable memoir. I just write to try to express my appreciation of a departed friend and brother.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Community Chest campaign will be on shortly. Let us be prepared to "do our part."

We regret being out recently when Dr. A. S. Lutz, pastor of our church at Minden, La., called at the office.

Dr. R. E. Goodrich, pastor First Church, Houston, Texas, formerly of First Church, Shreveport, La., is a delegate to the General Conference.

Rev. H. N. Harrison, one of our superannuates living in New Orleans, was in the office the other day spreading good cheer. Come again, Brother Harrison.

Recently the parsonage at Mangham, La., was completely destroyed by fire, a total loss. Insurance, $2,500. Moral: Insure your church property.

Miss Irma Welborn, formerly of Laurel, Miss., graduate of Whitworth College, is director of the Primary Department of the Gardner School of New York.

"Why Do the Innocent Suffer?" and "The Double Moral Standard" were recent sermon subjects of Dr. L. L. Cowen, pastor Central Church, Meridian, Miss.

Dr. Charles W. Pipkin, Dean of the Graduate School of Louisiana State University, recently delivered an address before the faculty and student body of Centenary College.

"We are in our final drive. We are hoping for a 'fine report,' but the end is not yet." Rev. B. C. Taylor, pastor, Natchitoches, La. We shall expect "everything in full," Brother Taylor.

Don't miss it. Tune in and stand by with your radio this afternoon from 5:15 to 5:30. (I don't know what kind of time). Dr. Wilfred Grenfell, of Labrador, will speak. Boys, who had you rather be than Dr. Grenfell?

"Odd, But True: The first six months of 1932 gave the working class of people one of the best health records they have ever had." I got this "out of the paper." How is your health, or do you belong to the working class?

The editor and manager of the Advocate greatly appreciate the many courtesies extended them at the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference by the pastor-host, Rev. J. D. Wroten, and his most efficient staff of assistants.

Reports have it that Dr. H. T. Carley, presiding elder of the Monroe District, though recently having undergone an operation for appendicitis, has made his quarterly conference appointments. That means that the vigor of youth is still his.

Dr. John Paul, well known in Louisiana, his native state, and Mississippi, place of a number of years of his ministry, evangelist and editor, has been called to the position of acting president of John Fletcher College, University Park, Iowa.

Rev. G. W. McLain, pastor of our church at Safford, Arizona, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, subscribes for the Advocate that he may keep up with former friends and associates.

Boys, let's do something that will make real news for him.

This man Thrower, better known by his fellow-pastors as "T. B.," has a way of spreading joy and happiness everywhere he goes, and his jovial spirit was reflected in the broad smiles of all who came in contact with him at the Water Valley Conference.

The Conference organ is an excellent medium of advertising and subscribers who have something to sell will profit by placing an ad in the columns of the Advocate. Rates will be gladly furnished on request. Help your Church paper, which in turn will help you.

For 1934 Mr. Jas. S. Noblin, of Millsaps College, has been elected president of the Mississippi Methodist Student Conferences. It strikes me that this organization has wonderful possibilities for the church and that the church should give it hearty and co-operative support.

The Conference at Brookhaven will be the last Annual Conference over which Bishop Collins Denny will preside as a bishop in active service. With the approaching session of the General Conference, which meets in Jackson, Miss., next May, Bishop Denny will retire after twenty-four years of active service in the episcopacy.

BISHOP HOYT M. DOBBS.

President of the Louisiana Annual Conference

We take the following from a letter by Rev. Louis Hoffpauir, our pastor at West Monroe, La.: "We just closed our meeting last night (October 22), and while there were a great many things to interfere we had forty additions to our church here and the membership greatly helped. Brother Allen goes to Pineville Wednesday to help Brother Boddie in a two-weeks' meeting."

"The Fannie church is paying out in full on the salaries of pastor and presiding elder, and also on the benevolences. The prospect now is that the charge as a whole will pay considerably more on the benevolences than last year, and there have been twenty-nine additions to the church by certificate and otherwise." This, from Rev. John W. Ramsey, is most encouraging.

Give a big hand and "fifteen" for the Carolinas. They stayed put notwithstanding the Farley-Wet pressure. Their stand is refreshing to veterans of the prohibition struggle. The South may be pretty solidly Democratic, but she prefers the sober type. And let it be remembered that Uncle Sam, in his new amendment, promised to protect "dry states." Let us insist that it be done.

A series of five Zone Meetings of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Vicksburg, Miss., District recently came to a close. Among the speakers were Mrs. Alma Riley, of the Orphanage at Jackson; Miss Nell Drake, of Port Gibson, for twenty-six years a missionary teacher in China; and Miss Urania Pyron, missionary worker in Poland. Misses Drake and Pyron are now home on furlough.

From Miss Alice Gorton Wynn, Crowley, La., we have a clipping from an old number of the Advocate in which we find this statement: "Rev. J. F. Wynn is considered the father of Methodism in Winnfield and in Winn parish. He traveled that circuit on horseback many years ago, when the preaching places were twenty-five and thirty miles apart." Brother Wynn was the father of the late Dr. R. H. Wynn.

A card from Mrs. S. A. Steel, Mansfield, La., reports that the Prince of the Pelican Pines is in bed, having recently suffered a stroke that has removed him from his rolling chair. But he still has his colors up. He wants to know of the editor just how many mules Sam had. Will some of you help me answer him? And now is your time to write him a letter. He ought to get a letter from some one of us every day.

Great was the joy of the students of Centenary College and Faculty the other day when Dean Smith, after an extended illness, appeared on the campus to resume his work. Dean Smith delighted the college with his reading of the poem, "Old October," by James Whitcomb Riley. Dean Smith has been in the habit of reading this poem to college groups for a great number of years. If you have not heard him read it, you have missed something.

In the recent death of Mr. Artie H. Ahten, New Orleans Methodism lost one of its oldest and most enthusiastic workers. Brother Ahten was one of the organizers of the Carrollton Avenue Church and was a member of the original board of stewards. At the time of his passing he enjoyed the distinction of being Chairman Emeritus of the official board of that church. We are carrying an appreciation of the life of this faithful servant on another page.

Subscribers are requested to check their expiration dates which will be found on the address label of their paper, and if the date thereon reads November 1933, or prior thereto, are urged to forward remittance of $1.00 to cover their renewals for another year. In making this low subscription price, the Publishing Committee expresses confidence in the devotion of our people, and it is hoped that renewals will be forthcoming promptly as they become due.

The Laymen's Revival, sponsored by the Men's Bible Class of our Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, New Orleans, came to a close on last Friday evening. That the several messages delivered by Mr. Wm. H. Black, teacher of the class and prominent local banker, were heard with much interest is indicated by the fact that more than 290 men returned on last Sunday morning at the regular class period to hear him lecture on the current lesson.

The School of Theology of Southern Methodist University has inaugurated an interesting chapel plan: Tuesday, service led by one of the pastors of the city; Wednesday, worship led by a faculty member; Thursday, message by an outstanding layman; Friday, a service led by a senior student. Why not do something about chapel everywhere? Like Mark Twain's observation on the weather, much has been said about it, but mighty little done. I believe I would not swap the chapel talks in college for any three courses of study I took.

Presiding elders look back with pride upon many of the young men who began their ministry under their direction. Rev. Ben P. Jaco calls our attention to an article on Peace, appearing in the August 24 number of "The Shanghai Spectator," from the pen of Rev. J. H. Brooks, Chaplain of the Fourth U. S. Marines, stationed at Shanghai, China. Chaplain Brooks is a member of the North Mississippi Conference. Bishop Kern reports that he is doing fine work. He has a congregation numbering from 800 to 900 people. Chaplain Brooks was one of Brother Jaco's preacher-boys during his presiding eldership.

We are a little slow on "comparisons" and "bragging," but we may be indulged in a little pardonable pride when we bring our figures alongside those of one of our highly esteemed sister Advocates. The Publishing Committee of the Alabama Christian Advocate reports that during the year it cut its deficit by $441.08. Our Committee reports that our deficit enjoyed a shrinkage of $2,465 during the same year. To our presiding elders and pastors, with their workers, goes the big share of credit for this unusual achievement. A people who can do that during a year as difficult as the one through which we have just passed can support a paper and make it a success.

WINNFIELD ENTERTAINS LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

sisted that the 1933 Conference be invited to Winnfield. After a spirited fight, Winnfield won over Shreveport. The depression got worse and the little band began to wonder if it had not, after all, made a mistake, and began to talk about shifting the burden to some other point more able to do it, but the Baptists, Presbyterians and Christians of Winnfield said, "By all means let it come on."

It is to be hoped, despite the strained circumstances under which they are being entertained, that the preachers and lay delegates will go back to their homes feeling that they have been welcome, if not royally, entertained.

SCHEDULE OF THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Wednesday, November 22, 7:30 p.m.—Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, administered by Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, followed by the organization of the Conference. Mission Board meets immediately afterwards.

Thursday, 8:30 a.m.—First business session.

Thursday, 7:30 p.m.—Mission Board Anniversary.

Friday, 7:30 p.m.—Anniversary Board of Christian Education.

Saturday, 7:30 p.m.—Memorial service, subject to the action of the Conference. It has been felt by those agreeing on this schedule that it would help all concerned to have preaching in connection with the evening services. However, this is left to those having charge as well as to the direction of the Conference.

The Committee on Entertainment will receive the guests at the church on Wednesday, the 22nd, and requests that no committees for the Conference meet earlier than this date. It would help the Committee if you would notify them as to time and method of arrival. This is notice to everybody coming, as no individual notices will be sent to our guests. Just come! All Winnfield welcomes you!

ELLIS SMITH, Pastor-Host.

Winnfield, La.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE PASTORS, PLEASE NOTE

The pastors will bring nothing but post office money orders to Conference for payments on benevolences.

Owing to banking conditions, I will not be able to distribute to the Boards and Committees the funds they will want to use at once.

If you do not wish to embarrass and retard the work of the Conference, please heed the above.

Yours sincerely,

A. M. MAYO,
Conference Treasurer.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Committee on Admissions

All applicants for admission or re-admission in the Louisiana Conference are requested to meet the Committee on Admissions on Tuesday, November 21, 1933, at 7 p.m., in the Methodist church at Winnfield, La.

BRISCOE CARTER, Chairman.

Admission on Trial

The candidates for admission on trial are requested to meet the Committee at the Winnfield Methodist Church, Winnfield, La., at 5 p.m., November 22, 1933.

W. W. PERRY,
For the Committee.

First Year Class

The members of the Class of the First Year are requested to meet the Committee Wednesday night, November 22, in the room assigned, at 7 o'clock.

B. C. TAYLOR, Chairman.

Class of the Fourth Year

The Class of the Fourth Year will meet the Committee at the Winnfield Methodist Church on Wednesday evening, November 22, at 3 p.m.

H. W. RICKEY, Chairman.

TENT OF MEETING

Prayer

By Rev. T. F. King

The Master spent much time in prayer. Communion with the Father, was His vital source of spiritual life and power. Jesus lived in prayer. His life of continuous intercession was a life that very few have even approximated. Deep and sincere prayer is never easy. It demands the concentrated effort of all the faculties. So difficult is it that the normal Christian finds it almost impossible to lose himself in prayer, even for a short period of time, and live within that period, in undisturbed communion with God. In the average religious person there is a tragic paucity of soul life. He exists on crumbs, when he might dine with the Lord.

In your prayers it is required that you seek; for prayer is a quest. It is the outreach of the soul for God. It is the deep desire and hunger of the innermost self for the Father, and without prayer there can be no religion. Seek God, and greater union with Him. Seek with earnest desire, with unyielding tenacity, until at length you realize with Eckhart that, "Even God cannot thwart the soul with towering aspirations." Seek as did Jacob at Peniel, and as the importunate widow sought. "Seek, and he that seeketh findeth."

It is also required that you believe. Believe in the power of soul in communion with God. The Lord needs you, in order that through you He might transmit power and light unto the world. Believe, therefore, that you can achieve. "For it is God that worketh in you." Consequently when you pray for that soul supremacy which every follower of the Lord strives to attain, believe, not that you will be a conqueror, but that you are even now more than a conqueror in all things. Believe with assurance, and the victory is yours.

The prayer life and union with the Father are of course inseparably linked. Both are dependent the one upon the other. Jesus has united the two ideas in His imperishable words, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ask whatsoever you will, and it shall be done unto you." Abiding in God, we know how to frame our petitions in harmony with His will and purposes.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS

By Rev. John W. Ramsey

The widely accepted, but erroneous, doctrines of the universal fatherhood of God and the universal brotherhood of man are two of the fundamental tenets of modernism; yet these fallacies are being preached from Methodist pulpits and taught in Methodist literature. The Bible teaches that God is the father of no man except the Christian—all others are the children of the devil. The Jews said: "We have one Father, even God;" but Jesus said: "Ye are of your father the devil."

The tap-root of the Religion of Modernism is the evolutionary hypothesis; or, to change the figure, the evolutionary hypothesis is the bedrock upon which the superstructure of the Religion of Modernism has been builded.

Two things are absolutely essential to the theory of evolution: 1. Spontaneous generation; and, 2. Transmutation of species; but the highest exponents of the hypothesis have been compelled by facts to admit that neither has occurred.

The theory of evolution, if accepted, would destroy the Bible doctrine of sin. According to evolution, what the Bible calls sin is only the remnant of man's beastly origin; and, if there be no sin, there is no need of a Saviour. Hence, evolution crucifies Jesus Christ—puts Him to death without hope of resurrection.

You may now buy the "Short Bible," by Prof. Goodspeed, of the University of Chicago. In this new Bible the Book of Amos takes first place, while Genesis occupies the seventh position. God only knows to what lengths these Modernists will go in their desperate and devilish efforts to destroy the old Book and to unsettle the faith of the saints.

* * *

Much is being said and written these days about "religious education," and the departments of our schools and colleges in which the Bible is supposed to be taught are called the Departments of Religious Education. Such departments are well named since they teach many things that are contradictory of the Bible. If they really taught the Bible they should be called Departments of Christian Education. If you will stop right here and think seriously for a moment, you will ascertain that in the expressions, "Department of Religious Education," and "Department of Christian Education" there is a distinction with a difference.

* * *

Those who oppose the presiding eldership have apparently found in Dr. R. E. Smith a unique leader, if such leadership is to be determined by the invention of a unique nomenclature. In a recent article in the Advocate, Dr. Smith styled the office of the presiding elder "a most expensive antique." What, then, about the bishopric? Is not that office older than the presiding eldership? Are we then to say that the office of bishop is also an "expensive antique?"

When Your Cough Hangs On, Mix This at Home

Saves Good Money! No Cooking!

If you want the best cough remedy that money can buy, mix it at home. It costs very little, yet it's the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. To make syrup, use 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money—a real family supply. Keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, clears the air passages, and thus cures a severe cough in a hurry.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, the most reliable healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

A HAPPY OCCASION

Dear Dr. Raulins: On Sunday, Oct. 15, we had the pleasure of having our father, Rev. N. E. Alford, with us, who brought us an old-time gospel message, this being the occasion of the eighty-eighth anniversary of his birth. An unusually large congregation was present, and he preached with remarkable vigor for one of his age. It was on this occasion that he baptized his great-grandson, mentioned in your "Weekly Party" of last week.

You mentioned the fact of his being the father of two Louisiana pastors. He also has two other sons serving pastoral charges—Rev. L. F. Alford, Silver City, Miss., and Rev. C. W. Alford, of Waukena, Fla. He has a son-in-law in the North—Mississippi Conference, Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth, of Brookville, Miss., and a daughter, Miss Annie Alford, is head resident of one of our homes in Kansas City, Mo.

He is related to the large number of ministers of the Lewis family and also to some of other names. And, courting the ministers who have married his relatives, there are more than thirty preachers in the family. "Can you beat it?"

CEDAR GROVE CHARGE, SHREVE- PORT, LA.

Dear Editor: Perhaps a short report of this charge would be of interest to some of the Advocate readers.

I am closing my third year on this charge, and, from some very important angles, this has been the most fruitful year. Not that I have received more money, but that the spirit is better and the work in general has been more thorough. We have done some real constructive work. The Sunday school is the largest, perhaps, in the history of the church. The young people's work also has increased. The Woman's Missionary Society is thoroughly alive and has done a very fine year's work. They have repapered the parsonage this year and made possible the repainting of the church building, and will repaint the parsonage early in the new year.

We have done considerable repair work on the church, such as reroofing the auditorium, etc.

We have received thirty-one members this year, and the interest in church work is on the increase. The outlook for next year is much better. The financial report will be very short, due to conditions that have prevailed in this section of the city for the past three years.

ANCIENT CHURCH AT ST. MARTINVILLE IS INTERESTING RELIC

(Louisiana Tourist Bureau)

One of the oldest Catholic churches in Louisiana stands in St. Martinville, La. It contains as unique a piece of religious architecture as any state has ever known—or produced.

tional shrine. Patterned from that of a famous old Cathedral in France, the sanctuary is recognized as an artistic masterpiece in its construction and design. It was built many years ago by an octroon, a native of the parish of St. Martin.

Its impressive presence blends with the atmosphere of its surroundings, and makes of this altar one of the favored mecca for visitors in the colorful land of Evangeline. The sanctum graces a wing of the church erected in 1765 by Reverend Jean Francois, a Capuchin priest and missionary. The building remains today in a state of perfect preservation and originality of design. Repairs have been made, but no alterations were allowed.

In its entirety, the site is one of the most frequented by tourists in the Teche country. Just to the left of the Grotte de Loudres, in the tiny cemetery in the rear of the church yard, is the grave of Longfellow's immortal heroine, "Evangeline"—Emmaline Labiche in real life. The last resting place of this lovelorn maiden is another noted shrine in the state boasting of more visitors than almost any other tomb in Louisiana. Covered with yucca, and shaded by the mossy draperies of hoary oaks, the sepulchre stands as a monument to the maiden whose memory will never be forgotten in the land which bears her name.

Occupying a central position in the business portion of St. Martinville, the church, with all of its solemnity and grace acquired with age and its priceless treasures, is paramount in the interests of every visitor in this quaint little city of Louisiana.—Crowley Daily Signal.

GINGER

It Makes Good Methodists Better
Methodists

I mean the Christian Advocate, General Organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Why ask space in your paper to boost the General Organ at this time?

A traveler in a severe snow storm, trudging along alone, feeling that he would sink in the snow in a few steps more, stumbled on what proved to be a human being, overcome and almost frozen to death. The first man began to rub the body of his brother and the contact put new warmth in his own body and he was soon able to get the weak man to his feet, and both proceeded on their journey to safety. Moral: Help the other fellow and this act will warm your own soul.

We want Methodists everywhere to be loyal to both papers—their Conference Organ and their General Organ, too. It is a well known fact that there is a vast difference in the two papers. Your Conference Organ is a home paper and carries local news pertaining to your area, while the Christian Advocate contains articles, news and comment of world-wide interest of the entire Church.

Publicity aplenty is needed and we know our Conference papers are glad to help. Here's the proposition: Thanksgiving will soon be here. We desire to enlist the aid of all readers of both papers in securing one or more new names for your paper and for the General Organ by November 30. What a glorious 1933 Thanksgiving we can enjoy by doing a bit of personal (that's what it takes) work for our Church!

When your children from one year old to twenty-five do well, praise them. If these lines bring in game, pat Editor Ginger on the head. You will warm his heart. Amen!

Bronchial Troubles

Need Creomulsion

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, and attacks the seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Your own druggist is authorized to refund your money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Creomulsion.

Properly

YOUR KIDNEYS! Do you realize what an important part they play in your bodily health and length of life? They are the blood filters. Every 24 hours they excrete more than 500 grains of poisonous waste. Thus your kidneys are literally sentinels of your health.

It is well, then, to keep careful watch of your kidneys. If they fail to do their work fully, there is slow poisoning of the system, which may lead to many serious conditions.

Disordered kidney action and bladder irritations may give rise to scanty, painful or too frequent passage and getting up at night. One is apt to feel a dull, nagging backache, drowsy headaches and dizziness.

While, naturally, temporary irregularities may occur, if the condition persists, it is well to look to your kidneys. There is positive danger in neglecting disordered kidney action.

If you have any reason to believe your kidneys are not functioning properly, why not give Doan's Pills a trial? No other advertised diuretic has such world-wide use. None is so well recommended.

Get Doan's today. Your druggist has them.

BROTHER GEO. P. WHITE SICK

My Dear Brother Raulins: I am sure that many of the brethren will be interested in knowing something of one of our superannuates, namely, Rev. G. P. White, of Hammond, La.

On a recent visit to Brother White I found him bedfast, as he has been the greater part of the year. An illness early in the year has seriously depleted his strength and he has not been able to leave the bed for any considerable time since.

This disability, in addition to other burdens of a financial nature that are more or less prevalent but especially acute in this parish, is quite a cross. I am sure that few would more greatly appreciate a word of remembrance and an interest in our prayers.

Let us not permit him to be a "forgotten man" in fact as well as in name.

Sincerely,

B. H. ANDREWS, P. C.

REV. T. J. O'NEIL

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder of the Meridian district, was at Quitman on Tuesday, November 7, at 7:30 p. m., and held the adjourned session of the fourth quarterly conference.

Brother O'Neil was reared in Clarke County and for the past four years has been associated with the church at Quitman as presiding elder of the Meridian district.

Tuesday night, at the close of the business session of the conference, the official board and the congregation adopted the following resolution:

Whereas, according to the policy and laws of our Church, Brother O'Neil will be assigned to another field in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference; we have enjoyed his ministry and Christian fellowship in the work of the church and have been glad to co-operate in the administration of affairs, giving him our loyal support as far as possible. We assure him of our continued interest and friendship and our prayers for his success and happiness will follow him. We commend him to the people of any charge that he may be sent and assure them that he is worthy of a hearty reception, a cordial and faithful co-operation that whatever his work may be that they, together, may make it a great success. Brother O'Neil's ministry and presence will be a blessing and a benediction to any community in which he may live and his lot as a preacher and pastor may be cast.

GIRLS RECORD THEIR EXPENSESBusiness Girls Report on Their Spare Time Interests and Living Problems for National Y. W. C. A.

How girls spent their money during the depression years of 1931 and 1932 and what they did with their spare time was revealed recently at an all-day conference held at the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Associations in New York.

The meeting was based on studies made by business girls from all parts of the country. Approximately 500 girls kept account of every penny they spent during the two-year period and 1,000 others took notes on their interests outside business hours.

The budget survey brought to light figures which proved that young women restricted their diets to an alarming degree when cuts in wages came. In order to help their families and friends in distress, to keep up their appearances and to save money for the day when they might be out of jobs they ate meagerly and moved to cheaper lodgings.

In the lowest wage group in 1931, girls earning $5 and $9 a week managed to spend only 94 cents for noon lunches each week, but this lunch money shrank to 47 cents a week during the next year when more demands were made on their depleted incomes, according to Miss Grace Coyle, director of the research staff of the National Board.

The case of four typical young business women was pointed out. In 1932 they were averaging $15.60 in earnings a week, but the next year they were cut to $9.25, a decrease of 40 per cent. How did they manage their wages? Their $8 a week board and room bill the first year was reduced to $5 the next. For clothing they spent $2.50 a week the first year and managed on $1.83 the second. They were able to save $2.34 the first year but in the second they carried over in their purses only 18 cents a week.

"Girls in the higher wage brackets, earning between $30 and $40, were able to do a little better," Miss Coyle said. "They saved more than $6 a week in 1931 despite the larger amount they were turning over to dependents. Even these girls spent less than $1.50 for lunches per week and changed to cheaper living quarters, so that the highest average was little more than $11 a week for room and board."

One other interesting trend noted was the increased amount girls were putting into education. They scraped and pinched all along the line in order to learn how to run more office machinery and to improve their business talents, Miss Coyle said.

In the study of what girls do with their hours off, it was found that with the short work week girls were more inclined to use their Saturdays for active sports, hiking, playing games and picnicing. They preferred to watch games Saturday afternoons on the longer working week.

Reading was voted as claiming not only the most of their leisure time, but as being the favorite pastime. Both their practices and their preferences were indicated. They checked traveling, automobiling, the theatre and the radio as being their chief interests.

"The information these girls gave us will be of great aid to the Y. W. C. A. in establishing intelligent leisure time programs for girls," Miss Coyle said. "With the girls indicating what they do and what they want in the way of activities in their spare hours we can plan better to suit their needs, now that business hours are decreasing."

Why the Sudden Change to Liquid Laxatives?

Doctors have always recognized the value of the laxative whose dose can be measured, and whose action can be controlled.

The public, too, is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that a properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated as long as you keep on using it.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is at all druggists, Member N. R. A.

"LOYALTY SUNDAY" AT FIFTH STREET CHURCH, MERIDIAN, MISS.

Sunday, November 6, was designated "Loyalty Sunday" at Fifth Street Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., and a very appropriate and impressive program was rendered. The accompanying picture will give some idea of the arrangement of the altar.

There are twenty-seven teachers, and each teacher's name was painted on a placard and just in front of the card a candle was placed for each year's service the teacher had given, which ranged from one year on the extreme end to thirty-six in the upper center, there being a total of 262 teaching years represented, the three upper names alone, consisting of Mr. J. B. Holland, who is also superintendent. Mrs. B. J. Nelson and Mrs.

A. W. Hearn represented over 100 teaching years.

Two young ladies with lighted tapers, starting at each end, lit the candles, moving to the center as appropriate music was rendered by the choir. As the candles were lighted, each teacher, who was seated directly in front of his or her name on the front seat, arose and stood while their candles were being lighted, and in many instances the class arose and stood also.

The pastor, Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, conceived the idea and planned its execution. He preached a very appropriate and impressive sermon.

It was also "Loyalty Sunday" in finances, and attendance, the church being crowded to near capacity, and a very nice sum of money was brought in to help pay up the finances for the year, a committee of ten ladies having been working on this feature for about three weeks.

PRAYER AT SUNSET

Help us, Father,
That we may live
Like Jesus lived;
That we may give
To Thee efforts,
That souls may turn
To Thee anew,
That they may learn.

That God can change

TWO WEEKS

How to rid any boy or girl of sluggishness or constipation and build a big appetite.

The trouble with children who will not eat is usually stasis. The symptoms are a tongue that's always coated, bad breath, poor color, dull eyes that are often a bilious yellow. No appetite, no ambition—even for play. Hard to get to sleep, hard to wake in the morning.

There's an absolute remedy for this condition. It gives listless youngsters the appetite and energies of a young animal! They eat! They gain! They keep well!

It's not the stomach, but the bowel condition that keeps children from eating. But the trouble is in the lower bowel—the colon. California syrup of figs is the only "medicine" that is needed to stimulate the colon muscles. The very next day, your child is eating better and feeling better. Keep on with the syrup of figs a few days and you will see amazing improvement in appetite, color, weight and spirits.

Any drug store has the real California syrup of figs, all bottled, with directions. Nature never made a nicer acting or nicer tasting laxative. (It is purely vegetable.) Remember California syrup of figs when sickness, a cold or any upset has clogged a child's bowels.

WARNING: Even when it's something to give children, some stores will try to substitute. So be sure the bottle says CALIFORNIA Syrup of Figs.

MEMBER N.R.A.

Oh, Dizzy! Dizzy!

When Disraeli in the House of Commons first set eyes on Mr. Biggar (who looked it), he said to his fidus Achates, "What is that?" "That, sir, is the honorable member for 'S.—H.—' "Really!" replied Dizzy, "I thought it was a leprechaun"—which being interpreted is a small but malignant species of Irish fairy.

Those Ultra Violet Rays

An old mine was re-opened in California some time since. Flies were found in a dry place. They were all white except their eyes, which were red. A white rattlesnake was killed.

The animals had had air but no light. A few of the flies exposed to light in a glass case recovered their usual color in a few days.

Proceedings of the Mississippi Annual Conference

REPORTED BY REV. W. B. JONES

FIRST DAY—NOVEMBER 16

The Conference met in the First Methodist Church at nine o'clock a. m., November 16, 1933, at Brookhaven, Miss., Bishop Collins Denny in the Chair. The Bishop administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, assisted by J. G. Galloway, J. L. Sells, Geo. H. Jones, and J. L. Greenway, after having sung the hymn, "O for a heart to praise my God."

This is the seventh time that the Conference has met in this beautiful little city, meeting the first time in 1866 just following the close of the Civil War, with Bishop Paine presiding and the sainted C. G. Andrews as secretary. Other sessions were presided over by Bishops Keener, Hendrix, Hargrove, Hoss, and McMurry.

The roll was called by the secretary of the last Conference and was answered by a greater response than there has been in years, both by the preachers and laymen.

Two preachers, W. A. Hayes and J. C. Chambers having died during the year, their names were referred to the Committee on Memoirs.

W. B. Jones was elected secretary and S. F. Harkey and Geo. H. Jones assistant secretaries. J. W. Moore, T. R. Holt, Roy Wolfe, T. E. Nicholson, and H. W. F. Vaughan were elected statistical secretaries.

The Rules of Order of the General Conference of 1930 were adopted as the Rules of Order for this Conference so far as they apply to an Annual Conference.

The presiding elders nominated and the Conference elected the following Standing Committees:

Public Worship—C. W. Crisler, O. S. Lewis, G. F. Winfield, V. D. Youngblood.

Memoirs—B. F. Jones, W. T. Griffin, V. R. Landrum, Rolfe Hunt, G. P. McKeown, L. F. Alford.

Conference Relations—W. J. Dawson, J. T. Abney, J. W. Thompson, C. C. Clark, L. D. Haughton, G. E. Allan, L. J. Shelgrove.

State of the Church—L. L. Cowen, E. L. Ledbetter, J. H. Jolly, H. J. Moore, L. J. Power, H. L. Daniels, Curtis Youngblood, W. H. L. Carruth, J. M. Forman, C. A. Massey, Dr. J. C. Ballard, R. T. Liddell.

Sabbath Observance—L. P. Anders, T. C. Cooper, M. K. Miller, W. C. M. Baggett, J. D. Ellis, T. M. Ainsworth, E. M. Lane, Mrs. W. R. Rawls, J. M. Stevens, Thos. L. Bailey, Mrs. J. M. Corley, Robert Lewis.

District Conference Records—B. H. Williams, J. W. Leggett, Jr., H. S. Westbrook, S. C. Moody, C. H. Gunn, E. E. McKeithen, S. E. Denman, H. Ogden, I. O.

Brown, C. F. Partin, J. P. Drake, Mrs. W. T. Hegman.

General Conference Memorials—J. L. Decell, B. M. Hunt, E. A. King, E. M. Lane, P. M. Caraway, W. H. Lewis.

Various communications from General Boards were referred to the corresponding Conference Boards.

A communication concerning the approaching celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America was referred to a special committee composed of H. G. Hawkins, C. W. Crisler, J. B. Cain, and M. M. Black.

A telegram of greetings from Rev. J. F. Campbell, who was unable to attend Conference on account of illness, was read by the secretary who was ordered to send a suitable reply.

Bishop Denny called Question 9, "Who are received by transfer from other conferences?" and announced the transfer of William Marion Tabb, in the class of the second year, from the Alabama Conference.

Questions 17 and 6, "What traveling preachers and what local preachers have been elected to deacon's orders?" and "Who are admitted into full connection?" were called. William Marion Tabb, having stood an approved examination in the course of study and being recommended by the Committee on Admissions, was elected to deacon's orders, called to the altar, given a charge by Bishop Denny, and received into full connection. The charge to the class was a very excellent one, the Bishop stating that it was the last charge he would ever deliver as a Bishop, as he is retiring by age limitation at the next General Conference which meets in Jackson, Miss., in April, 1934.

Question 13, "Who are transferred to other Conferences?" was called, and Bishop Denny announced the transfer of Derwood Leland Blackwell, a deacon in the class of the second year, to the Texas Conference. The secretary presented to the Conference the certificate of ordination as a deacon of Derwood Leland Blackwell, the certificate being signed by Bishop Paul B. Kern.

The election of delegates to the General Conference was taken up.

The names of tellers were announced by Bishop Denny, and it was announced that the Conference was entitled to six clerical delegates and to six lay delegates. After the Bishop gave instructions for voting, the ballots were taken and the tellers retired to count the votes. It was ordered that the Conference meet at three o'clock to receive the report of the tellers and to take the second ballot, if necessary.

The Methodist Publishing House, through J. R. Smith, presented to the Board of Finance a check for $1,248.90, and W. B. Jones presented a check of $25.00 from the Magnolia Church to the same Board, which goes to the superannuates of our Conference.

Mr. J. E. Crawford, of the General Board of Lay Activities, was introduced and addressed the Conference.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Christian Education was read by the secretary and adopted by the Conference. This report recommended the appointment of Rev. I. H. Sells as Executive-Extension Secretary of the Conference Board of Christian Education to fill the vacancy made by the death of the lamented Rev. J. C. Chambers.

The report of the Editor of the Conference Journal was read and ordered to be filed for record, and the motion was made and carried that the pastors make their reports by charges, instead of by individual churches, and that these reports be printed by charges.

Bishop Denny announced the transfer of B. W. Ware, an elder, to the Alabama Conference.

Under Question 21, the characters of the following were passed and they were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation: W. W. Cammack, R. F. Witt, J. T. Nicholson, E. D. Phillips, C. T. Noble, C. H. Ellis, H. B. Perritt, J. C. Ellis, C. F. Emery, N. B. Harmon, C. C. Griffin, B. H. Rawls, J. H. Forman, W. W. Graves, J. W. Price, J. G. Galloway, R. A. Sibley, M. L. Burton, B. F. Jones, J. L. Greenway, A. A. Simms, H. G. Roberts, J. B. Stringer, P. D. Hardin, W. P. George.

The name of W. T. Griffin was called, he made his report after his character had been passed, and his name was referred to the committee for the superannuate relation. The Conference regrets to lose the active service of this faithful and efficient worker, who has been a member of this Conference for forty years.

The Conference adjourned after various announcements were made, the benediction being pronounced by Rev. J. L. Decell.

Afternoon Session

The Conference met at three o'clock with Bishop Denny in the Chair. Devotional services were conducted by Rev. W. M. Sullivan. The Conference sang a hymn.

"O For a thousand tongues to sing," and Rev. W. M. Sullivan led the Conference in prayer.

The secretary read the report of the tellers of the clerical delegates to the General Conference. J. L. Decell, J. T. Leggett, and B. L. Sutherland, having received a majority of the votes cast, were declared by Bishop Denny to be elected.

The secretary read the report of the tellers for the lay delegates. J. M. Sullivan and H. H. Crisler, having received a majority of the votes cast, were declared by Bishop Denny to be elected.

Another ballot was taken and the Conference adjourned to receive the report of the ballot at 7 o'clock. It was announced that Rev. W. O. Sadler would preach immediately upon adjournment. Announcements were made, the Doxology was sung, and the benediction was pronounced by Bishop Denny.

EVENING SESSION

Bishop Denny called the Conference to order at seven o'clock p. m. After singing "Children of the Heavenly King," the Bishop led in prayer.

The secretary read the report of the second clerical ballot, and Bishop Denny announced that J. A. Smith had been elected a delegate to the General Conference. There was no election on the second lay ballot. Another ballot was taken for both clerical and lay delegates and the tellers were instructed by the Bishop to seal the result and report at tomorrow morning's session.

After announcements had been made, the Conference joined in singing "Praise God, From Whom All Blessings Flow," and adjourned, the benediction being pronounced by Bishop Denny.

SECOND DAY—NOVEMBER 17

Bishop Denny called the Conference to order at 8:30 a. m., and requested Rev. L. L. Roberts to conduct the devotional service, which consisted in singing "A Charge to Keep I Have," the reading of the fifty-first Psalm, and prayer by Dr. Alfred F. Smith, one of the Agents of the Methodist Publishing House at Nashville, Tenn.

The minutes of yesterday's sessions were read by the secretary, and after slight amendments as to wording suggested by the Bishop were approved.

On roll call of the names of those who did not respond previously, the following answered to their names: D. E. Vickers, J. W. Ramsey, A. S. Byrd, H. A. Wood, J. C. Jackson, J. L. Sutton, N. S. Loftus, B. H. Williams, clerical members, and Thomas L. Bailey and H. A. Gower, of the lay delegation.

The tellers for the laymen reported the results of the third ballot, and it was announced that Judge J. M. Forman, of Jackson, and V. D. Youngblood, of Brookhaven, had been elected. The secretary read the results of the third ballot for clerical delegates to the General Conference, and the Bishop announced that Otto Porter had been elected. Mrs. W. F. Mahaffy and W. W. Godbold, alternate lay delegates from the Brookhaven District, were seated in place of principal lay delegates who were absent.

Leave of absence was granted to J. H. Moore, who is chaplain of the Mississippi State Penitentiary.

Under Question 15, Eugie Asbury Kelly, John Willard Leggett, Jr., Oliver Hamilton Scott, Eugene Webster Ulmer, and David Thomas Ridgeway, having passed a satisfactory examination on the course of study, were passed in examination of character, they made their reports, and were advanced to the class of the fourth year. Under the call of corresponding questions it was answered that there is no one else in the class of the first year, no one remains on trial, no one else is in the class of the fourth year, no one has been discontinued, no one else in the class of the third year, no one has been re-admitted, and no one has been received as traveling preachers from other churches.

Under Question 19 the following, having stood an approved examination on the course of study, were passed in examination of character, and having made their reports, were by vote of the Conference elected to elders' orders: Wesley Ezell, Thomas Rayburn Holt, Leroy Lafayette Matheny, Lester Thomal Nelson, Lucius Milan Reeves, Roy Wolfe, and Oliver Hamilton Scott. The Conference was pleased to have the presence of W. W. Cammack, a superannuate who was admitted into the Conference in 1879. Brother Cammack spoke feelingly of his work and expressed his pleasure at being able to attend another session of the Conference.

Under the proper question no local preacher was elected to the office of deacon.

Question 1, "Who are admitted on trial?" was called. Frank Marion Casey of the Jackson District, William Hugh McRaney of the Meridian District, Roy Lesly Lane and James W. Slay, of the Seashore District, having stood approved examinations on the course of study, and being recommended by the Committee on Admissions, were admitted on trial.

The Bishop requested the wives of the preachers to appear at the altar for an introduction to the Conference. B. F. Jones escorted his sister, the widow of the late W. B. Lewis, to the front; W. B. Jones escorted Mrs. W. W. Cammack to the front; and thirty other preachers' wives came to the front, to whom the Bishop was introduced and whom he presented to the Conference.

Dr. A. F. Smith of Nashville, Dr. J. R. Countiss and Rev. R. G. Lord of the North Mississippi Conference, Dr. R. N. Allen, Louisville, Ky., Dr. D. B. Raulins of the Louisiana Conference, H. E. Bush D.D., rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Brookhaven, and Prof. B. M. Drake, a grandson of the late B. M. Drake who was prominent in the early history of Methodism in Mississippi, were introduced to the Conference.

The presence of W. C. Davis of the Jackson District and J. H. Miner of the Meridian District, lay delegates, were noted.

The secretary read the result of the fifth ballot of the lay delegates and Bishop Denny announced that Judge E. M. Lane of Raleigh, Miss., was elected a delegate to the General Conference.

The Conference was pleased to hear an address by Dr. A. F. Smith on the work and condition of the Publishing House at the present time, and he was followed by brief comment by Bishop Denny.

On announcement of the result of the sixth ballot for lay delegates it was declared that W. D. Hawkins was elected delegate to the General Conference.

The report of the Board of Christian Literature was read by W. J. Ferguson, the Conference was addressed by Dr. Raulins, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and by Judge J. Morgan Stevens of Jackson, on request of the Board, and, after being amended, was adopted.

The secretary read the report of the seventh clerical ballot and the Bishop announced that T. J. O'Neil had been elected a delegate to the General Conference.

The report of the Seashore Methodist Assembly was read by J. L. Decell and was received for record.

On announcement by the secretary of the result of the ballot for alternate lay delegates, Bishop Denny announced that Mrs. L. W. Alford, C. V. Hathorn, and Mrs. T. B. Cottrell had been elected alternate lay delegates to the General Conference.

A Resolution was read by Rev. J. L. Decell, proposing the sale of a part of the Seashore Camp Ground property, and was adopted.

Report Number One of the Board of Missions was read by W. D. Hawkins, was amended, and adopted by the Conference.

On announcement of the result of the ballot for alternate clerical delegates to the General Conference, the Bishop announced that C. W. Crisler and Dr. C. A. Bowen had been elected, thus completing the election of the delegations to the General Conference.

Announcements were made by several Boards and Committees. The Committee on Public Worship announced that a pageant would be presented on the Whitworth College campus at two o'clock p. m., and that the Board of Christian Education would observe its anniversary at seven-thirty p. m.

One stanza of "Rock of Ages" was sung and the Conference adjourned, the benediction being pronounced by Dr. H. E. Bush.

THIRD DAY—MORNING SESSION

The Conference was called to order at 8:30 a. m. by Bishop Collins Denny, and the devotional services were conducted by J. L. Decell, who announced the hymn, "Majestic Sweetness Sits Enthroned," which was sung, and Dr. Decell led the Conference in reading responsively the forty-fifth psalm, and the Conference was led in prayer by J. L. Greenway, after which the first stanza of "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," was sung.

The journal of the second day was read, slightly revised, and approved.

The secretary read the report of F. Y. Whitfield, Treasurer of the Golden Cross Fund, stating the amount of collection for the Fund to be $219.87, which goes to the Methodist Hospital at Hattiesburg for charity purposes.

The secretary read the report of F. Y. Whitfield, Treasurer of the Mississippi Conference, which was filed for record.

The report of the Paine College Jubilee Commission was read and adopted. The sum of three hundred dollars is to be raised by a free-will offering by the Methodists of our Conference on Sunday, December 10, or as near thereto as practicable.

The report of the Budget Commission was adopted, calling for a slash of twenty-five per cent on all askings of the Annual Conference Claims. The adoption of this report re-elected F. Y. Whitfield as Conference Treasurer.

Rev. I. H. Anding, an honored and well-known Baptist minister, was introduced to the Conference.

By resolution the Conference voted by a large majority a special assessment of five thousand dollars for Whitworth College, to be applied on interest and principal of indebtedness to enable the College to run within its income and meet the requirements of the Association and to be apportioned to the several districts as follows: Brookhaven District, $805; Hattiesburg District, $755; Jackson District, $1055; Meridian District, $890; Seashore District, $755; Vicksburg District, $740.

In the adoption of Report No. 2 of the Board of Missions, Rev. Chas. Assaf was recommended for appointment as Home Missionary, and Rev. W. M. Williams Chaplain at the Sanatorium, and Mr. O. C. Hull as our Conference Lay Evangelist; W. D. Hawkins was elected Conference Missionary Secretary without salary.

In the report of the Hospital Board, Rev. H. E. A. Raley was re-elected Director of the Golden Cross of the Mississippi Conference, and Rev. Otto Porter was elected to fill the unexpired term of Rev. W. A. Hays, deceased. An assessment of $11,475 was granted our Methodist Hospital for bond and interest fund.

The Conference adopted resolutions which were previously adopted by the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference concerning the property of the Orphans' Home.

The Board of Church Extension granted donations of fifty dollars to Lambuth Memorial Church, one hundred and fifty dollars to Rocky Point Church, seventy-five dollars to Nelson's Chapel, Georgetown Circuit, and granted a loan of twelve hundred and fifty dollars to the Raymond Church.

Through the report of the Board of Temperance and Social Service it was urged that all the organizations of our Church use every effort in the interest of temperance and sobriety and that our preachers preach fearlessly against the social evils of our day.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, was re-elected Conference Lay Leader.

In the report of the Board of Christian Education beautiful tribute was paid to the labors, life, and character of Rev. J. C. Chambers, deceased. This report also announced the election of the following volunteer workers: Mrs. W. H. Watkins, Adult Work; J. B. Cain, Young People's Work; Mrs. J. L. Carter, Children's Work; V. G. Clifford and Dr. H. M. Ivy members of the Wesley Foundation Commission of Mississippi State College for Women; J. L. Decell, I. H. Sells and W. H. Lewis, Board of Managers of the Seashore Assembly Pastors' School.

The following were placed on the superannuate list: W. W. Cammack, R. F. Witt, J. T. Nicholson, E. D. Phillips, C. T. Noble, C. J. Ellis, H. B. Peritt, J. C. Ellis, C. F. Emery, N. B. Harmon, C. C. Griffin, B. H. Rawls, J. H. Foreman, W. W. Graves, J. W. Price, J. T. Galloway, R. A. Sibley, M. L. Burton, B. F. Jones, J. L. Greenway, A. A. Simms, H. G. Roberts, J. B. Stringer, P. D. Hardin, M. L. White, W. P. George and W. T. Griffin.

The secretary was instructed to send suitable greetings of love, sympathy and good wishes to the following brethren, who were unable to attend Conference on account of sickness: J. C. Wood, W. L. Blackwell, J. D. Ellis and C. W. Wesley.

The Auditor's report indicated that all the preachers had made their reports which had been carefully checked and settlements made with the Conference Treasurer.

The following were introduced to the Conference: Rev. D. F. Anders, of the Louisiana Conference; Rev. Ira E. Williams and Rev. D. T. Ridgeway, recent transfers to this Conference.

The Committee on Public Worship announced that at 7 o'clock p. m., the Glee Club of Copiah-Lincoln Junior College would render a musical program, and that Dr. J. A. Smith would be the principal speaker at the Anniversary of the Board of Temperance and Social Service at 7:30 p. m.

The following Sunday services were announced: First Methodist Church, 9:00 a. m.—Love Feast, led by J. L. Greenway.

10:45 a. m.—Sermon by Bishop Collins Denny, followed by the ordination of deacons and elders. 2:30 p. m.—Memorial service.

7:00 p.m.—Preaching by P. M. Caraway.
 First Baptist Church—10:30 a.m., J. L. Neill;
 7:30 p.m., L. L. Cowen.
 First Presbyterian Church—11:00 a.m., J. B. Cain; 7:00 p.m., Geo. H. Jones.
 Pearlhaven Baptist Church—11:00 a.m., L. M. Sharp; 7:00 p.m., J. A. Wells.
 Protestant Episcopal Church—11:00 a.m., J. B. Holyfield.
 Kinet Methodist Church (colored)—11:00 a.m., C. C. Clark.
 Bethel A. M. E. Church—11:00 a.m., J. W. Thompson.
 St. James Baptist Church (colored)—11:00 a.m., St. Paul Baptist Church (colored)—11:00 a.m., J. H. Morrow.
 After singing one stanza of "Guide Me, O Thou Great Jehovah," the Conference adjourned, the benediction being pronounced by Bishop Denny.

THIRD DAY—AFTERNOON SESSION

The Conference met at 2:30 with Bishop Denny in the chair. J. B. Holyfield conducted the devotional service, which consisted of singing "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," the reading of the twenty-third psalm, and prayer by L. L. Roberts. The minutes of the morning session were read and approved.

Under questions Eleven and Twelve no one was located, no one had withdrawn, and no one had been expelled.

The matter of a meeting-place for the next session of the Conference was placed in the hands of the presiding elders.

Report Number 2 of the Board of Finance was read, stating that it is a matter of regret to the Board and to the Conference that the superannuates can be paid only $6.26 and the widows $3.13 per year's service, and the children claimants at the rate of $20 a year. These are the lowest figures in eighteen years, due to the financial stringency of our land.

By the adoption of the report of the Conference Historical Society, it was ordered that every local church observe during the year the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Methodism in America, that a short history of the Mississippi Conference be read at our next session, and that a display of historical relics be made at our next General Conference, if practicable. Rev. J. B. Cain was appointed to write the short historic sketch.

The various statistical questions were called by the Bishop and answered by the statistical secretary. The statistics showed 2600 to have been received on profession of faith during the year and a net increase in membership of 1749.

The report of the Committee on the State of the Church urged that emphasis be placed upon the observance of special days and special seasons and the fundamental doctrines of repentance, faith, the Holy Spirit, the importance of prayer, and observing the quiet hour.

The report of the Committee on District Conference Records reveals that the records are all neatly and well kept.

Bishop Arthur J. Moore, who has supervision of the campaign for Kingdom Extension, has arranged for a Conference-wide rally at Jackson, Miss., on January 25, 1934. Bishops Denny, Arthur Moore and Darlington will be present and take part on the program.

In behalf of the Conference, J. T. Leggett addressed Bishop Denny, expressed the appreciation of the Conference for his four years of faithful and sympathetic service as president of the Conference, and presented to him an envelope containing a gift as a token of the love of the members of the Mississippi Conference.

Bishop Denny graciously accepted the gift and expressed his appreciation for the esteem of which the gift is a token.

"Blest Be the Tie," "Thou, My Everlasting Portion," and "Children of the Heavenly King," were sung while the entire Conference and congregation crowded to the altar to shake hands with the Bishop.

It was ordered that the names of the preachers be called for the passage of their characters, but that no reports be made by them. The names of all the preachers, except those who had previously been called, were called one by one, and they were passed in examination of character.

It was ordered that, when we adjourn, we adjourn to meet in memorial session tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. Bishop Denny requested Dr. B. F. Jones, the Chairman of the Committee on Memorials, to preside at the memorial session.

The journal of this session was read by S. F. Harkey and approved by the Conference.

By rising vote the Conference requested Bishop Denny to express to Mrs. Denny its regret that she had been unable to attend this session of the Conference and to assure her of our love and esteem. We have enjoyed her presence at the last three sessions.

The Conference sang the first stanza of "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and adjourned, the benediction being pronounced by Bishop Denny.

FOURTH DAY—MEMORIAL SESSION

The Conference met in memorial session at 2:30 p.m., B. F. Jones in the chair by appointment of the Bishop. Before the session was called to order, by request, the men of the Conference sang "How Firm a Foundation," which was heartily joined in by the preachers and the men lay delegates. The Conference was called to order and Dr. Jones read from the third and fifth chapters of First John, and Rolfe Hurt led in prayer. Beautiful floral offerings were furnished, one by the church at Waynesboro in memory of W. A. Hays, and one by the Conference Board of Christian Education in memory of J. C. Chambers.

Question Fourteen, "What preachers have died during the year?" was called, and answered: W. A. Hays and John C. Chambers. The memoir of Rev. W. A. Hays was read by Dr. J. L. Decell, and the memoir of J. C. Chambers was read by Dr. C. A. Bowen. A number of the preachers paid loving tribute to the memory of these useful departed workers.

Bishop Denny arrived and assumed the chair. An offering was taken, as is the custom of the Conference, for Rev. Louis Fayard, an aged and faithful local preacher who has served a number of years near the Gulf Coast, amounting to $63.75, which was delivered to Rev. M. L. Burton to be conveyed to Louis Fayard, whose home is near Gulfport.

The Bishop called questions eighteen and twenty and answered by filing for record a certificate of ordination of William Marion Tabb, deacon, and the following elders: Wesley Ezell, Timothy Rayburn Holt, Leroy Lafayette Matheny, Lester Thomal Nelson, Lucius Milam Reeves, Roy Wolfe, Oliver Hamilton Scott. The Bishop announced a number of changes in charge lines in the various districts.

Resolutions of thanks were read, response made by Dr. Crisler, presiding elder, making an appeal for Whitworth College.

The Bishop announced the hymn, "Children of the Heavenly King," which was sung, and he led the Conference in prayer. The minutes of the afternoon session were read and approved. Bishop Denny made appropriate remarks and called question forty-five, "Where are the preachers stationed this year?" and read the appointments.

The Conference joined in singing the doxology and adjourned sine die, the benediction being pronounced by Bishop Denny.

WHITWORTH PAGEANT OUTSTANDING FEATURE OF CONFERENCE

Five Thousand Swarm Campus to Attend Diamond Jubilee Celebration

The seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of Whitworth College was celebrated last Friday afternoon, November 17, in connection with the One Hundred Twenty-First session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, which met in Brookhaven, Miss., November 16-19.

The founding of the college, November 17, 1858, was recalled in a pageant, "A Century of Progress in the Higher Education of Women," in which the students of Whitworth depicted the development of education for women by the college from its organization to the present before a crowd estimated by Dr. G. F. Winfield, Associate President and Dean, to be between 4500 and 5000, including high church officials, state officials, alumnae and visitors from nearly every southern state as well as from other sections of the country.

Distinguished guests present included Bishop Collins Denny, President of the Mississippi Conference; Mrs. S. E. Moreton, one of only two living graduates of the Class of '68; Dr. D. M. Key, President of the Millsaps System of Colleges, of which Whitworth is a unit; Dr. J. R. Countiss, Associate President and Dean of Grenada College, also a member of the Millsaps System; Hon. Walter Wood, Secretary of the State of Mississippi; Hon. J. C. Holton, Secretary of Agriculture, Mississippi; Mrs. A. H. Longino, President of the Alumnae Association, and wife of former Governor A. H. Longino; Mrs. J. M. Stevens, Secretary of the Alumnae Association; Mrs. Alice Sutton Moore, President of M. S. C. W.; Dr. O. N. Arrington, Mississippi College; Miss Clay Dailey, Blue Mountain; Mrs. J. C. Jenkins, Mississippi Synodical College; Dr. C. A. Bowen, General

Board of Christian Education, Nashville, also a member of the Mississippi Conference; Dr. Elmer T. Clark, Secretary General Board of Missions, Nashville; Dr. A. F. Smith, Agent of the Methodist Publishing House, Nashville; Mrs. L. A. Quinn, Jackson, Miss., a member of the Class of '73, and mother of Mrs. J. T. Leggett, wife of Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District of that Conference, and many former students and graduates of the college who gathered for class reunions following the pageant.

Preceding the pageant, a parade, led by the Millsaps College Band, wound through the streets of Brookhaven. The pageant began with life at old Elizabeth College, founded at Washington, Miss., in 1818 and chartered by the State of Mississippi the following year. The academy, the first institution of its kind, was the predecessor of Whitworth College now owned by the Methodist Conferences of Mississippi.

The second part of the pageant gave a synopsis of the present school as it furthered the advantages for women in their struggle for educational rights. History was recreated as the various characters reviewed the life current to the school and campus activities of the college girl.

Dr. G. F. Winfield, Dean; Mrs. Janie Drake Cooper, author of the pageant, and the student body were highly praised and complimented for the splendid manner in which the pageant was enacted, and especially the well executed Zouave drill representing the connecting link between Whitworth College and M. S. C. W.

The players, at the finale, moved from their places singing "Brave Through All Circumstances, Strive We To Be; True in a World of Sham, Esse Quam Videri."

A reception, following the pageant, closed the Jubilee Celebration. Those noted in the receiving line were Dr. and Mrs. G. F. Winfield, Whitworth College; Dr. and Mrs. D. M. Key, Millsaps College, Jackson; Dr. J. R. Countiss, Grenada College, Grenada; Commissioner Holton, impersonating Rev. J. M. Whitworth, the college founder; Junius Johnson, representing Dr. H. F. Johnson; Miss Margaret Vernon, representing Annie Coleman Peyton; Dr. I. W. Cooper, Jr., representing his father, Dr. I. W. Cooper. All former officials.

Others in the receiving line were girls of 1858, '67, '87, Confederate Veterans, Walter Wood, state official, impersonating Bishop W. B. Murrah, first president of Millsaps; Dr. B. M. Drake, a president of Elizabeth Academy, was represented by his grandson, Prof. B. M. Drake, of Jackson, Ga., and the Rev. H. G. Hawkins, a former president.

This pageant, having been staged at the World's Fair in Chicago on Mississippi Day, has attracted nation-wide attention and the large gathering that taxed the seating capacity arranged for the occasion, and overflowed to all parts of the campus, went away singing praises of the work being done by our Church through its department of Christian Education. The Conference, at the session following the pageant, increased its assessment for the support of Whitworth College by $5,000, and authorized the continuance of the campaign for endowment.

REV. T. J. O'NEIL

Resolutions adopted by the fourth quarterly conference of the Poplar Springs Church, Meridian, Miss.

Whereas, the law of our Church does not allow a preacher to serve longer than four successive years on the same district; and this being the fourth year of Brother T. J. O'Neal, presiding elder on the Meridian District, and he will be assigned to another field of labor; Therefore be it Resolved by the quarterly conference assembled October 25:

First: We hereby express to Brother O'Neal our deepest appreciation for his fidelity and his faithfulness to the trust imposed in him. Especially in view of the disturbed and unsettled conditions under which he has been compelled to labor these four years we wish to go on record by thanking him for his patience and forbearance with the ministry and membership of the church during these chaotic years he has served this district.

Second: We commend him to the people to whom he will be appointed to serve another year, and pray God's blessings upon him and his family wherever his lot may be cast.

Third: That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of this quarterly conference, a copy be furnished the Meridian Star, and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy be tendered Brother O'Neal.

Signed:

F. B. ORMOND, Pastor.

W. E. CURTIS, Pres. Board of Stewards.

FLOYD W. PRICE, Supt. Sunday School.

MRS. E. B. KEY, Pres. W. M. S.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

The Disarmament Conference has again been postponed, this time until December, and Mr. Davis, American representative has been called home.

A reception was held at the parsonage for the wives of the pastors and the lay-women in attendance on the Conference on Thursday afternoon. The reception was sponsored by the Missionary Society of the local church.

The Educational Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will meet in Nashville, Tenn., December 4-7, inclusive. If you are interested in the educational work of your church, you are invited to attend these meetings.

The Board of Christian Education recommended and the Conference confirmed the appointment of Rev. I. H. Sells to succeed the late Rev. John C. Chambers as executive secretary of the Mississippi Conference Board of Christian Education.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs celebrated the 55th anniversary of his birth on November 16. He was born at Spring Garden, Alabama, on November 16, 1878. His father, Dr. S. L. Dobbs, is one of the oldest members of the North Alabama Conference.

The Millsaps College Band came down from Jackson on Friday of last week to take part in the Diamond Jubilee of Whitworth College and rendered a beautiful concert on the campus to the enjoyment of the gathering of more than 5,000 that packed the stands during the afternoon.

"Have been confined to bed for the last ten days with influenza. Am a little better. The Doctor says I may have to remain in bed for several days longer. Last Sunday was the first day I missed filling my pulpit this year." Let us not forget our sick brethren. Drop a card to Brother E. V. Duplantis, Gueydan, La., and let him know you're pulling for his speedy recovery.

The meeting of the Historical Society on the evening preceding the opening of the Mississippi Conference was featured by an address by Dr. W. L. Duren, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, on the "Life and Character of Bishop Chas. Betts Galloway." The auditorium was filled to its capacity on this occasion which was presided over by Rev. H. G. Hawkins, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District.

The late session of the Mississippi Conference marked the last over which Bishop Collins Denny will preside as an active member of the episcopacy. With the approaching session of the General Conference according to the law of our Church, Bishop Denny, together with Bishops Warren A. Candler and H. M. Dabose, will retire from the active ranks of the episcopacy, they having reached the age limit.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Dr. C. M. Chapman, Dr. J. R. Countiss, Rev. R. G. Lord, of the North Mississippi Conference, Dr. R. H. Harper, Rev. Robert A. Cross and Dr. J. G. Snelling of the Louisiana Conference were noted on the campus of Whitworth College during the recent session of the Mississippi Conference at which time the Diamond Jubilee of the College was celebrated.

The Pastor-Host, Rev. O. S. Lewis, with his hard working assistants were responsible for making the one hundred twenty-first session of the Mississippi Annual Conference one long to be remembered by the many delegates and visitors who were privileged to attend, and the good people of Brookhaven are to be commended for the cordial and hospitable manner in which they entertained the many guests in their homes.

The Louisiana Annual Conference is now in session at Winnfield, La., Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, presiding. The pastor-host, Rev. Ellis Smith, together with his loyal people and those of the Baptist, Presbyterian and Christian denominations, have left no stone unturned in their efforts to provide the comforts of home to the members and delegates who arrived from all points in the state yesterday. A detailed report of the proceedings will be carried in our next issue of the Advocate.

The Business manager of the Advocate, together with Rev. H. A. Wood, pastor of our church at Union, Miss., was most graciously entertained at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Junius Johnson, during the sessions of the Mississippi Conference recently convened at Brookhaven, Miss. Mr. Junius Johnson is the grandson of the late Dr. H. F. Johnson of Whitworth fame, and was in the receiving line following the pageant at the reception honoring Whitworth's Diamond Jubilee.

The outstanding event of the Conference was the beautiful and impressive pageant, "A Century of Progress in the Higher Education of Women," written by Mrs. Janie Drake Cooper, and enacted by the students of Whitworth College, Friday evening, November 17, on the beautiful campus of the college. Dr. G. F. Winfield, Associate President and Dean of Whitworth was highly praised and congratulated for the inestimable service he is rendering the Church and the state through his untiring efforts on behalf of the college. A full account of the pageant will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Rev. C. T. Floyd, pastor of our church at Amory, Miss., and his people lost no time getting lined up in their work for the new Conference year. Sunday morning, November 12, found him in his pulpit beginning his third year and preaching to an unusually large congregation, evidencing their pleasure in his return. There was a beautiful and impressive service, including into office, his Board of Stewards, consisting of twenty-six members. The outlook points to a wonderful year's work in this church. In all of its history of forty-four years, it has not failed once to report to Annual Conference its obligations paid in full.

Rev. and Mrs. J. T. Leggett residing at 601 Southern Ave., Hattiesburg, Miss., were greatly surprised on Saturday, November 11, this being their thirty-second wedding anniversary, by the arrival at the parsonage of a number of friends, including Rev. C. A. Schultz, Rev. R. H. Clegg and wife, of Hattiesburg, Rev. A. B. Barry and wife and Miss Evelyn Osborne of Laurel, Miss., bringing with them a set of chinaware which was unpacked, placed on the table and a copious and delicious anniversary dinner served using the new chinaware. After a delightful afternoon the self-invited guests with many expressions of good will, hopes and prayers for the Rev. Mr. Leggett and wife to have many more anniversaries, the guests returned to their homes.

Asbury College at Wilmore, Kentucky, has resumed its radio devotional broadcast each weekday morning from 7:00 to 7:30 (Central Standard Time) over WHAS, Louisville, Kentucky. The program may also be heard over two additional stations of the Center of Population Group, WCKY, Covington, Kentucky, and WSM, Nashville Tenn. The broadcast will consist, as it did last year, of the singing of the old hymns by the men's and women's Glee Clubs, the men's quartette, the mixed quartette, and the great college chorus of one hundred voices; a short prayer and "A Thought for the Day" by Dr. H. C. Morrison, acting president of Asbury College and president of Asbury Theological Seminary, members of the faculty, as well as guest ministers and speakers. A special feature will be the radio messages of Dr. E. Stanley Jones of India, an alumnus of Asbury College, who will speak on the Asbury College hour on January 19 and 20.

CHRISTIAN CONSCIENCE AND THE STATE

By Rev. T. F. King

At the invitation of the editor of this paper, and through no desire of my own, I am again relating an incident which I have tried to forget, and which I would gladly obliterate from my memory. The re-telling of this story gives me no pleasure. Actually it is like the opening of an old wound, and it is only because I might be incidental in helping to mold a Christian conscience upon a very vital matter, that I feel obligated to write this article.

Four years ago, I appeared before a United States district court, for my final citizenship papers. At that time the reader will probably remember, the government had become acutely aware that there existed a Christian conscience upon the subject of war. In fact, the government was even more aware of this conscience than the churches were themselves. Very clearly the government realized the potential danger of the attitude involved in the Mackintosh case. Consequently all candidates for naturalization were carefully examined concerning their views on the subject of war, and if the candidate betrayed any misgivings of conscience he was rejected. It was therefore probably unfortunate that my request for citizenship happened to come at this time.

Naturally as a Christian minister I was questioned very thoroughly regarding my attitude to war. I told the judge that I was prepared to defend the country in the event of an invasion, and that I was prepared to defend the constitution. This however, proved to be insufficient. The judge presented a concrete case, and said, "Supposing California wanted more territory, and decided to seize some in Mexico, and every man was drafted for some form of service, would you object or be loyal?" I answered that I did not believe the United States would engage in such a war. The judge, however, demanded a specific answer. "Under such circumstances," he said, "a war of aggression, would you object?" I answered, "In all probability I would. I would first have to consider my duty to God, and to humanity." "In other words, then," said the judge, "you cannot subscribe under any and every condition to the doctrine, my country right or wrong, but my country?" Naturally I answered, "No," and I was rejected.

I believe I realize clearly what is involved in this rejection of my application, but I am afraid that the average Christian does not. Consequently I wish if possible, to make plain some of the issues involved in this case, and to arouse if possible an enlightened Christian conscience on this subject. It has of course been necessary for me to speak about myself, but I hope the reader will realize that the individual does not matter so much. I merely use myself to illustrate the truths involved. As the reader will perceive, I was prepared if necessary to defend the country and the constitution, but I was not prepared, and I am not now prepared to make myself, that is the soul within me, subservient to any demand of the state, when I as a Christian, consider such demand to be wrong. I hold that the soul in touch with God is creative, and is therefore instrumental in shaping the state, and that the soul cannot be used by the state, to do that which is contrary to the principles of Christianity. My allegiance to God is greater than any earthly allegiance, and I dare not trample upon the cross: I dare not betray that great truth: the sacredness of humanity, and deny thereby the brotherhood of man. If, therefore, my principles conflict with a perverted nationalism, then I, the individual involved must suffer the consequences; but for the sake of the future, and for the sake of mankind, I must uphold my principles.

Such then, in brief outline is the position in which I found myself four years ago. The question now is, what stand will Christian people take in such a matter, and what do our preachers think? There must be no delusions in this matter, for the problem is still with us. It is the problem which the early Christians faced, and faced so nobly. In a sentence the issue is: shall I obey God or man? Love of country is an emotion possessing spiritual value, but there is a higher love than patriotism. The Christian is first a citizen of the Kingdom of Heaven, and to this Kingdom he must first be loyal. For my part I have made my decision. If need be I am prepared to be branded as a coward, but I am not prepared to be branded with that awful stigma of betraying Christ, and denying the hope for which He stands.

The issue also confronts the church, and the church must face this problem. If in the days to come, humanity is again plunged into an awful welter of slaughter, then a great deal of the blame will have to rest upon the shoulders of the Christian Church. I am not stinting language, and I realize plainly what I am writing. Now, if ever, is the time to create a Christian conscience on the evil of war, for the simple reason that war is the major evil confronting civilization today. The awful wrongness of war, is an evil far greater, and far more deadly than the problem of liquor. We must see facts in their true perspective, and the church must attack this, the most terrible foe of all humanity.

Let me very plainly in a few concluding words, re-state this issue, both as I see it, and as I have experienced it. Divested of all superficialities the church must face these facts: if at any time the state sees fit, we can cast God on one side, and dismiss the Christian conscience: if at any period we must place the will of the state before our obligations to humanity, and if, in any emergency the decisions of the state are always right and obligatory upon Christian people, then we may as well close our churches and admit the supineness of Christianity.

The follower of Christ is called upon not to conform to the world, but to transform the world. We can only try to exemplify the Spirit of the Master who relied solely upon the power of God, which is the might of sacrifice. "Blessed are the peace-makers, that is, the pacifists, for they shall be called the children of God."

Why Doctors Favor a Liquid Laxative

A doctor will tell you that the careless choice of laxatives is a common cause of chronic constipation.

Any hospital offers evidence of the harm done by harsh laxatives that drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be controlled. It forms no habit; you needn't take a "double dose" a day or two later.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the average person's bowels regular as clockwork in a few weeks' time. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry. But there is little "convenience" in any cathartic which is taken so frequently, you must carry it with you, wherever you go!

Its very taste tells you Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children! All druggists, ready for use, in big bottles. Member N. R. A.

A DIURETIC FOR THE KIDNEYS

LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE

By Lydell Sims

Baton Rouge District Youth Issues Quarterly

"The BaRoDi Barometer" is the name of Baton Rouge District Young People's new quarterly, edited by the enterprising district director and associate district director, Miss Mary Searles and Miss Ruby Brian, respectively. The paper, as its title would indicate, aims to be a barometer of the young people of the district.

In the opening issue is an honor roll of departments reporting on time. Thirteen departments of the district reported on time, and seven others have reported late, making a total of twenty reports. Ten departments are chartered, with twenty or so more unchartered. Eighteen young people have joined the church in the last quarter, and there are two Life Service Volunteers. There is a total reported membership of over 600. The leaders in the district work are trying to get a much larger number of chartered departments. There should be plenty of leadership in this district—since Spring 148 credits have been earned by Intermediates and Young People.

There is also a report that this is Kentwood's "coming out" year. The young people there have newly organized, and plan hopefully for the coming year.

Shreveport Intermediate Union Meets

The Shreveport Intermediate Union's last meeting, held at Noel Memorial Church, is reported by the conference Intermediate Director, Miss Anna Pharr Turner, to be the best held there in quite a while. Representatives from five churches, totaling about sixty, were present. Mr. Fred Russ of Noel led the devotional, which, to quote from Miss Turner, "was the best I've heard Intermediates give." "Glorifying the Cross" was the subject of this outstanding devotional. Lighting effects were used with marked success.

In the business meeting following, Miss Patty Bartmess was elected president.

Grambling, Live Wire Unions Meet

November Union meetings were held on the twelfth of this month by the Grambling Union and the Live Wire Union, of Alexandria District and Lake Charles District, respectively. The Grambling Union met at Elizabeth, featuring a program on Armistice and Thanksgiving, an Exchange of Ideas period, a report on the scrap book enterprise in which the Union is engaged, and refreshments of hot chocolate and cake.

The Live Wire Union met at Sulphur, with a program theme of World Peace. It was decided definitely to have a week-end Institute in Sulphur, December 8, 9, and 10. Courses in Organization and Department Leadership and Worship will be offered.

A HAPPY OCCASION

On Friday, October 27, an adjourned session of quarterly conference was held at our church in Shannon, Miss. The Rev. T. H. Dorsey, P. E., could not be present, so Rev. W. O. Hunt, pastor, was selected to preside in place of the presiding elder.

The session was called for 1:30 p. m. and the unfinished business was soon dispatched. The yearly report to be sent up to Annual Conference was the best we have had to send in several years.

A splendid feature of this occasion was the surprise birthday party given the pastor. Some days ahead the word was passed around that this session of the conference was to fall on the Rev. Mr. Hunt's birthday, and the people of the three churches were quick to fall in line and plan the happy surprise.

Early in the day the church was set in order, flowers brought in and arrangements made for a long table to be put up on the church lawn.

While this was Brother Hunt's own personal birthday, the celebration was planned to include the entire Hunt family, and long before noon mysterious packages began to arrive at the church where the committee in charge arranged them on and around a table down in front of the chancel. The pastor had been notified that there would be "dinner on the ground," contributed by the three churches, and that this would be served at noon. Imagine his surprise when he and Mrs. Hunt entered the church and saw the unusual decorations, consisting of bundles, boxes, bags, all piled high and looking interesting and mysterious.

By that time, a good crowd had gathered. The congregation was asked to stand and sing, "Old Time Religion." The Rev. O. H. Richardson, Baptist pastor, led in prayer. A small table was brought in, on which was a beautiful white cake surmounted by three dozen pink candles. A group of small children stood around this table and sang "Happy Birthday, Dear Pastor," and the cat was out of the bag.

The Sunday school superintendent, O. H. Rutledge, made a short presentation speech, after which the crowd was invited out on the lawn where a most excellent lunch was served. During this meal numerous speeches were made by the members of the congregation, expressing pleasure at the occasion and appreciation of the pastor, who is rounding out his second year in this charge.—Exchange.

Black-Draught Gives Refreshing Relief

"I have suffered a great deal from biliousness and constipation," writes Mrs. D. C. Jones, of Waterloo, Ala. "When I get bilious, I have a bad taste in my mouth, have sour stomach, my color is bad, I get dizzy and have the headache. When I take Black-Draught, it relieves me and I feel like a new person. CHILD'S COLD

COMMON head colds often "settle" in throat and chest where they may become dangerous. Don't take chances — at the first snuffle rub on Children's Musterole once every hour for five hours.

Children's Musterole is just good old Musterole, only in milder form — bringing ease in five minutes, and relief in five hours as a rule.

It gets such marvelous results because it's NOT just a salve, but a "counter-irritant" — quick and helpful in drawing out pain and infection.

Used by millions for 25 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists. In three strengths: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong.

FREE—Write name and address on Musterole carton, mail to Musterole Co., Dept. 21, Cleveland, Ohio, and receive free a regular 35¢ package of Musterole Cold Tablets.

Whereas, God in his infinite wisdom saw fit to transplant to, "An house not made with hands," the spirit of our friend and faithful co-worker, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Barfield Hood, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society, realizing our great loss, but rejoicing that we were permitted to have many years of intimate association with her thereby learning to know and appreciate her gentleness, kindness and deep spirituality; and

Whereas, she was always faithful in all her relations to her church, to her friends and to her loved ones; therefore be it

Resolved, that the Woman's Missionary Society extends deepest sympathy to the family of the departed one, knowing full well, "Ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope."

That the Methodist Church, the Sunday school and the Woman's Missionary Society have lost one of its most faithful members.

That we commend the loved ones to the Saviour whom she so faithfully served and pray that God may have right of way in their lives as He did in hers, and that some sweet day they may meet her around the great white throne.

That these resolutions be kept on record by our Missionary Society, a copy be given to the bereaved family and one be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and one to the local paper.

ELIZABETH, LA., W. M. S. MEET

The Missionary Society of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Elizabeth, La., met in the church auditorium Tuesday, November 7, in an all day meeting for the purpose of completing the Mission Study book, "Christianity and Industry in America." This lesson was presented to the class by Mrs. G. G. Weisenbaker in the forenoon after which an appetizing lunch was enjoyed at the noon hour by all.

They had as honorary guests, Rev. Alonzo Early, pastor of the church and little Malcolm Twiner.

The afternoon program in observance of the Week of Prayer was led by Mrs. W. W. Williams.

Opening song—"Faith is the Victory."

Scripture lesson by Mrs. Dowels, selections taken from Matthew 5th chapter, Luke 6th chapter, Mark 24th chapter, followed by sentence prayers.

The leader gave an interesting talk on Paine College, Augusta, Ga., and new hospital at Changchow, China. This was followed by the song, "I want to be a Christian."

We then heard a radio talk on Paine College by Mrs. Paul Sigler. A dialogue, "Building and Curing in Changchow" was given by Miss Willa Lee Farrell and Miss Goldie Smith.

Rev. Mr. Early gave an interesting talk on the Uplift of the Negro Race. Another splendid talk "God's Free Offer and God's Free Offer made

 When children won't eat—and won't gain
 weight

The youngster who has no appetite, probably has stasis. A little syrup of figs will soon correct this condition—then watch the child eat—and gain!

Mothers should never coax a child to eat. Nature knows best. Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite—get rid of stasis. Children who don't eat are sluggish. Read what the "California treatment" is doing for sluggish, listless children in every part of the country!

A POUND A WEEK. Your child will eat well from the day and hour you conquer sluggishness. But that girl or boy with furry tongue and a bad breath should not be dosed with salts!

Begin tonight, with enough pure syrup of figs to cleanse the colon thoroughly. Less tomorrow, then every other day, or twice a week, until the appetite, digestion, weight, complexion, tell you the stasis is gone. When a cold or other ailment has again clogged the system, syrup of figs will soon set things to right.

When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, California syrup of figs will gently stimulate the colon muscles—and the child you used to coax to eat will fairly devour his food.

The claims made for California Syrup of Figs are true and it will do the same for you—IF you get genuine CALIFORNIA Syrup of Figs. Don't accept any substitute.

Proceedings of the Louisiana Annual Conference

REPORTED BY REV. R. H. HARPER, D.D.

FIRST DAY—WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 22

The Louisiana Annual Conference convened in its eighty-eighth session at the Methodist church in Winnfield, La., on the evening of November 22, at 7:30, Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs in the chair. The Bishop conducted the devotional service. Dr. F. N. Parker led the prayer.

The secretary of the preceding session of the Conference, R. H. Harper, called the roll. Practically all the clerical members and a large proportion of lay delegates were present.

R. H. Harper was elected secretary; John F. Foster and J. C. Rousseaux were elected assistant secretaries; R. W. Vaughan was elected statistical secretary and H. W. Cudd, H. B. Hines, C. E. McLean and J. E. Hearn were elected assistants to the statistical secretary. The hours of meeting and adjournment were fixed at 8:30 and 11:50 a.m.

The following annual committees were named:

Conference Relations—L. N. Hoffpauir, R. S. Walton, C. D. Atkinson, R. F. Harrell, B. D. Watson and W. F. Roberts.

District Conference Records—J. M. Boykin, R. H. Staples and S. J. McLean.

Public Worship—R. M. Brown, Ellis Smith and Judge R. W. Oglesby.

Memorials—W. W. Holmes, N. E. Joyner and H. N. Brown.

Memoirs—R. W. Vaughan, F. N. Parker and R. M. Brown.

The presiding elders made their reports, which showed a large number of accessions to the church, and their collections were remarkably good, considering the stress of the times.

The character of each presiding elder being passed, the passing of character was continued, and each presiding elder recommending in the case of the men in his district, the character of all the men of the Conference was quickly passed, with one exception, which was referred to a committee for investigation.

Mrs. Geo. S. Sexton, Jr., Conference President of the W. M. S.; Mrs. Wiltz Ledbetter, Corresponding Secretary of the W. M. S.; Mr. G. L. Morelock, of the General Board of Lay Activities; Mr. S. M. McReynolds, Conference Lay Leader; Miss Tannehill, press representative; Rev. A. F. Vaughan, member of the Conference and chaplain in the U. S. Army, who has recently been assigned to Barksdale Field, Shreveport; Rev. Frank A. Matthews and Rev. Frank Collins, transfers back to the Louisiana Conference, were introduced.

Upon nomination of A. W. Turner, C. C. Miller and Mrs. B. G. Gallaher were elected to fill vacancies on the Board of Temperance and Social Service.

After the singing of an appropriate hymn, Bishop Dobbs administered the sacrament, assisted by Rev. Ellis Smith, Rev. R. M. Brown, Dr. G. S. Sexton and Dr. F. N. Parker, and the Conference adjourned with the benediction of the Sacrament.

SECOND DAY—MORNING SESSION

Conference convened according to rule at 8:30 a.m., Bishop Dobbs in the chair. The Bishop conducted the devotional service. C. K. Smith led the prayer.

Following the approval of the minutes, Bishop Dobbs recognized Ellis Smith, pastor-host, who presented R. M. Brown, presiding elder, who welcomed the Conference to the Minden District. Mr. Leonard Allen, a brother of Gov. O. K. Allen, represented the mayor of Winnfield in giving a heartily welcome to the city. Judge R. W. Oglesby welcomed the Conference on behalf of the Methodists of Winnfield and presented to Bishop Dobbs a walking stick which the Judge had whittled out of Winn Parish cedar. He then presented a similar stick to R. M. Brown. Bishop Dobbs made a fitting response to the addresses.

Bishop H. A. Boaz was an honored visitor to the Conference on the second day, and he addressed the body on Kingdom Extension and Benevolences. Dr. E. H. Rawlings also addressed the Conference.

Bishop Dobbs named B. H. Andrews, S. A. Seegers and J. A. McCormack as an auditing committee for the minutes.

lege, addressed the Conference concerning the College, and submitted the report of the Board of Trustees, which went to the Board of Christian Education. Prof. Andrew Quattlebaum, of Centenary, accompanied by Miss Mary Elizabeth Abel, of Winnfield, sang two songs, much to the pleasure of the Conference.

During the session the secretary was instructed to send a telegram of sympathy to Mrs. P. C. Willis on account of the death of Mr. Willis, a prominent member of the board of First Methodist Church, Shreveport.

Jolly B. Harper, Roland William Faulk, John Fletcher Wilson, Ivan Oden Donaldson and Joe Brown Love were elected deacons, and they, with Henry Arberry Rickey (a deacon), were admitted into full connection in the Conference. The transfer of Joe Brown Love from the Holston Conference to the Louisiana Conference had just been announced. He is the University pastor with First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge.

Mrs. Wiltz Ledbetter, Corresponding Secretary, made the report of the Woman's Missionary Society, and it went to record.

Tellers for the election of delegates to the General Conference were named as follows: Clerical—J. A. McCormack, A. M. Serex, W. D. Kleinschmidt, J. J. Rasmussen, W. H. Giles, V. D. Morris. Lay—J. Ed. Eaves, J. H. Carter, S. H. Radcliffe, T. W. Holloman, W. B. Clarke, S. W. Monteguda. The secretary certified that the Conference is entitled to five clerical delegates and five lay delegates to the General Conference, and the Bishop instructed clerical members and lay delegates to prepare their ballots accordingly. Balloting was begun and resumed at intervals during the sessions of Thursday, Friday and Saturday, resulting in the election of W. W. Holmes, F. N. Parker, Martin Hebert, W. Angle Smith and Guy M. Hicks as clerical delegates, and of T. W. Holloman, Mrs. Geo. S. Sexton, Jr., Judge R. W. Oglesby, S. M. McReynolds and J. H. Carter as lay delegates. The election of three alternates for both clerical and lay was ordered. T. L. James, J. Ed. Eaves and Mrs. Wiltz Ledbetter were elected as lay alternates. R. H. Harper, H. L. Johns and D. B. Raulins were elected as clerical alternates.

Dr. C. C. Sealeman, President of Southern Methodist University, addressed the Conference on Christian Education.

Announcements were made, the doxology was sung, the benediction was pronounced by Dr. J. Q. Schisler, and the Conference adjourned to meet at 2 p.m., to hear the report of tellers.

AFTERNOON SESSION

Pursuant to adjournment, Conference convened at 2 p.m., Bishop Dobbs in the chair. Dr. T. M. Brownlee led the devotional service. Dr. A. S. Lutz led the prayer.

A number of distinguished visitors were presented to the Conference—Dr. J. L. Decell, pastor Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss.; Dr. B. L. Sutherland, presiding elder of the Jackson (Miss.) District; Dr. J. N. R. Score, of Houston, Texas; Rev. Cyrus Barcus, of Texas; Dr. John Richard Spann, Dr. William H. Wallace, Dr. M. K. Miller, Rev. T. O. Prewitt, Millsaps Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss.; Dr. C. W. Crisler, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, and Dr. Geo. F. Winfield, dean of Whitworth College.

The Bishop called to the chancel Rev. J. B. Williams, who is 75 years of age, and has served 46 years as a member of the Louisiana Conference. He addressed his brethren with deep feeling and asked that he be granted the superannuate relation. His request was referred to the proper committee. Bishop Dobbs spoke feelingly of Brother Williams' long and faithful service, and the Conference then sang, "Blest be the Tie that Binds."

Reports of ballots for delegates to the General Conference were heard.

Rev. Cyrus Barcus, of Texas, who had supplied the church at Haynesville, La., after Dr. Cleanth Brooks had been forced to give up his duties there on account of ill health, addressed the Conference upon invitation of the Bishop.

A hymn was sung, the benediction was pronounced by Dr. J. L. Decell, and the Conference adjourned, to meet at 7:30 in the evening to hear the report of the tellers.

EVENING SESSION

Bishop Dobbs conducted the devotional service. W. L. Doss, Jr., led the prayer.

Rev. C. C. Neal, President of Haygood Institute for colored students near Pine Bluff, Arkansas, addressed the Conference. An offering was given him for his work.

Reports of tellers and balloting took a part of the time of this session. After the taking of the third ballot, the Conference adjourned.

THIRD DAY—NOVEMBER 24

D. B. Raulins, Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, conducted the devotions at the opening of the Friday morning service.

Bishop Dobbs outlined a desirable program for the day, and upon motion of Dr. H. T. Carley, hearing of report No. 1 of the Board of Christian Education was made the order of the day at 10:30 a.m.

Reports of tellers and the taking of new ballots at intervals required a part of the time of the session.

Upon motion of W. L. Doss, Jr., it was ordered that the Bishop be asked to appoint a committee of three to prepare a program for the celebration by the Louisiana Conference of the Sesqui-centennial of Methodism. Bishop Dobbs deferred the matter of naming the committee until he should have more time.

J. G. Snelling read a report concerning the Kingdom Extension campaign for next spring. The motion prevailed that an adjourned session of the Conference be held in Alexandria, La., on January 26, 1934, with the Conference Board of Missions co-operating with Bishop Arthur J. Moore in the program for the meeting.

Bishop Dobbs called Dr. F. N. Parker to the chair.

The report of the Board of Directors of the Orphanage was, after lengthy discussion, referred to the Orphanage Board of the Conference.

Upon invitation of Bishop Dobbs, Rev. Joe Brown Love, University pastor of First Church, Baton Rouge, spoke concerning his work with the Methodist students of L. S. U. Rev. Frank Collins, who is returning to the Louisiana Conference after service in Cuba, spoke concerning our work there. Dr. Theo. W. Gayer, Baptist pastor at Pineville, and president of the Louisiana Prohibition Alliance, addressed the Conference concerning the liquor traffic.

Dr. Leon W. Sloan, superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, also addressed the Conference.

Dr. John F. Foster was elected Conference Director of Superannuate Endowment.

Judge E. L. Walker read the report of the Conference Board of Lay Activities, and after an address by Mr. G. L. Morelock, of the General Board of Lay Activities, the report was adopted. Upon nomination of the Board of Lay Activities, Mr. S. M. McReynolds, of Monroe, La., was re-elected Conference Lay Leader.

By rising vote, the Conference unanimously accepted the invitation of Dr. Angie Smith and the Board of First Methodist Church of Shreveport to meet in Shreveport in 1934.

Upon the reading of Report No. 1 of the Board of Christian Education, Dr. Angie Smith, Dr. J. Q. Schisler, of Nashville, and Dr. F. N. Parker addressed the Conference concerning our educational interests, and the report was adopted.

Robert A. Cross was located at his own request. It was reported that J. W. Sudduth had withdrawn from the ministry and his credentials were surrendered to the Conference and placed in the hands of the secretary. The Conference was also informed that J. C. Sutton had withdrawn from the local ministry, and his credentials were also placed in the hands of the secretary. C. J. Thibodeaux was discontinued as an itinerant preacher on trial, at his own request, and he returns to the local ministry. His presiding elder, W. L. Duren, was authorized to employ him as a supply.

The Conference heard with sorrow of the death of J. S. Rutledge, W. W. Drake, H. L. Johns and T. J. Warlick, and their memoirs were referred to the committee on memoirs.

The doxology was sung, the benediction was pronounced by W. T. Gray, and the Conference adjourned.

FOURTH DAY—SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 25

Conference convened, according to rule, at 8:30 a. m., Bishop Dobbs in the chair. The devotional service was conducted by B. F. Rogers. B. H. Andrews reported the minutes to be correct.

Dr. A. C. Millar, editor of the Arkansas Methodist, was introduced.

Otis W. Spinks, Carl Lueg, Alvin P. Smith, and A. A. McKnight, having passed their examinations were advanced to the class of the second year.

Accompanied to the platform by Judge R. W. Oglesby, Governor O. K. Allen was presented by Bishop Dobbs. The Governor greeted the Conference; stated that he was on his way to see L. S. U. defeat Mississippi in football, but that he would not say as much if the University were playing Centenary.

A. W. Turner informed the Conference that Governor Allen had told him that the Attorney General had ruled that the blind-tiger law would protect sections of the state that desired to remain dry. The Conference moved a resolution of appreciation of the Attorney General's action.

John F. Foster reported that he had carried out the instructions of the Conference and had sent the following telegram to the superannuates who were not able to attend the Conference, some on account of illness:

"The Louisiana Annual Conference by resolution forward you their warm greetings and pray that the blessings of God may abide with you."

Henry Arberry Rickey was elected a local elder.

An afternoon session, at 2:30, was ordered, and F. N. Parker was appointed to preside.

The names of the superannuates were called and referred to the Committee on Conference Relations. Some of the superannuates, who were present, addressed the Conference.

Bishop Dobbs announced the transfer to the Louisiana Conference of Frank A. Matthews, in the class of the third year, from the North Arkansas Conference; of John Richard Spann, an elder, and William H. Wallace, an elder, both from the Northwest Texas Conference; and of Frank Collins, an elder, from the Cuba Conference. The transfer of Joe Brown Love, in the class of the second year, from the Holston Conference, had been previously announced. The Bishop also announced the transfer from the Louisiana Conference of W. C. Childress, an elder, to the Northwest Texas Conference; of E. G. Kaetzell, in the class of the third year, to the North Arkansas Conference, and of Frank L. Wells, an elder, to the Virginia Conference.

The report of the Board of Christian Literature was read by J. D. Fomby. D. B. Raulins, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, addressed the Conference. The report, which reviewed the work of our publishing interests, told of the optimistic report which had come from the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate to the effect that the indebtedness of $3971 had been reduced in the amount of $2465, and that price of the Advocate had been reduced to $1 a year, was adopted. Upon the recommendations contained in the report, D. B. Raulins was confirmed as editor of the Advocate, and R. E. Smith and B. C. Taylor as contributing editors. W. L. Duren was elected a member of the Publishing Committee, in place of W. W. Drake, deceased, and H. L. Johns, in place of F. L. Wells, transferred from the Conference. J. W. Reilly was elected a member of the Board of Trustees of the New Orleans Methodist Depository, in place of Dr. A. C. King, deceased.

Briscoe Carter submitted the report of the Legal Conference and it went to record. A resolution, offered by E. C. Gunn, was adopted, asking the Legal Conference to instruct the General Board of Finance to invest such funds which they have of the Louisiana Conference in the way they may deem best.

A resolution, offered by A. S. Lutz and W. R. Harvell, was adopted, expressing the appreciation of the Conference to Mrs. W. J. Porter and her two daughters for the gift of a house and lot in the town of Sibley, to be used as a home for superannuate preachers, naming the home "The W. J. Porter Superannuate Home," and instructing the Legal Conference to take over the property for the church and to maintain it to the best of its ability. The resolution also carried a request that an offering be taken to pay the taxes due, and an amount sufficient for the purpose was contributed by members of the Conference.

Briscoe Carter offered a resolution, which was adopted. It authorized the Legal Conference to transfer to the State of Louisiana the property near Pleasant Hill, La., known as the property of the Paine College, and to be used as a park commemorating the battle of Pleasant Hill during the Civil War. Mineral rights were reserved.

Guy M. Hicks read the report of the Commission on Budget, giving the assessments for the Conference Boards and interests, and it was adopted. The total of assessments for Conference work is $62,200; the total for General work, $38,170, and the grand total, $100,370. Permission was granted to the Commission to make the distribution to the districts later.

Miss Nuttall, rural worker, was presented to the Conference. T. M. Brownlee, A. S. Lutz and E. M. Mouser were granted leave of absence. The doxology was sung, the benediction was pronounced by W. Angie Smith, and the Conference adjourned.

Afternoon Session

The Conference met at 2:30, F. N. Parker in the chair. Hymns were sung, and prayer was led by H. N. Brown.

H. L. Johns read a report of the Board of Christian Education, requesting the presiding elders and pastors to cooperate in the pastor's school at the Seashore Methodist Assembly, June 19-29, and in the camp meeting, August 5-12, 1934. The trustees of the Assembly (Louisiana members) were authorized to raise $25 as a contribution to the said pastor's school. The report was adopted. The report also authorized the trustees to study a plan proposed for the satisfactory disposition of the camp ground property. Report No. 3 of the Board of Christian Education was read and adopted. It stressed the several interests of our educational work, the observance of the special days such as Sunday School Day, and College Day, and commended the summer assemblies at Junaluska, Mount Sequoyah, and Mansfield. The Bishop was requested to make certain appointments of men connected with our educational work. The following, by the adoption of the report, were confirmed as members of the Southern Methodist Assembly—Clerical: A. S. Lutz, H. L. Johns; Lay: T. L. James, C. O. Chalmers.

Mrs. Olive Millsaps, representative of the Memorial Mercy Home of New Orleans, was introduced, and she spoke briefly. J. G. Snelling, superintendent of the Home, also spoke.

S. M. McReynolds, Conference Lay Leader, read the report of the Commission on Benevolences. The report recommended that an every-member canvass for local expenses of a church be made as soon as possible after Conference; that an every-member canvass for Benevolences and Kingdom Extension be made and completed not later than the fourth Sunday in February, and that the presiding elders be made the official representatives of their districts in the campaign for Kingdom Extension and Benevolences. It was reported that H. T. Carley had been elected as chairman of the Commission on Benevolences, in place of W. W. Drake, deceased. The report was adopted.

N. E. Joyner read the report of the committee of investigation in the case of A. J. Martin, reporting no trial necessary.

Pastors' reports were heard, and the reports were continued until every pastor had reported.

The report of the Board of Temperance and Social Service dealt in no uncertain terms with the liquor evil. It reaffirmed faith in the outlawry of the liquor traffic as the ultimate and only solution of the problem, urged ministers and churches everywhere to take immediate steps to protect, maintain and extend state-wide prohibition where it exists, urged churches to establish adequate systems of scientific instruction relative to the harmful effects of alcohol, deplored the fact that the radio and moving pictures give so much time and advertisement to things that have a tendency to lower the moral ideal, commended the "Hon. H. H. White, President of the Louisiana School Board, in refusing to agree to designate money collected from the licensed sale of intoxicating liquors in Louisiana, as a Special School Fund," and approved and commended every organization whose aim and efforts are to promote Temperance and Social Service, and more effective Prohibition laws. The report especially commended the Louisiana Legislative Prohibition League for "the aggressive work it has done under the leadership of Dr. A. W. Turner," and requested his re-appointment by the Bishop as Director of the League. The report said: "We further recommend that all our churches and pastors co-operate fully with Dr. Turner, and that all our pulpits in Louisiana shall be open to him." The report also recommended that the presiding elder of the Shreveport District, with the aid of the presiding Bishop, by letter or other method, be authorized to raise funds to assist in financing our Temperance and Social Service work in Louisiana.

A. M. Mayo read his report as Conference Treasurer, and it was ordered to record. A. M. Mayo offered his resignation as Conference Treasurer, and it was accepted. Paul M. Brown, of the Commercial-National Bank of Shreveport, La., was elected Conference Treasurer.

Ellis Smith read the report of the Committee on Public Worship. It announced a love feast at the Methodist Church on Sunday morning, at 9:30, to be conducted by J. B. Williams; preaching in the same church by Bishop Dobbs, at 11:50, followed by the ordination of deacons; preaching at the Baptist Church, at 11:00 a. m. Sunday by F. N. Parker; at the Presbyterian Church by W. W. Holmes; at the Christian Church by Guy M. Hicks; at the South Winnfield M. P. Church by R. T. Ware; at the Jonesboro Methodist Church by C. C. Miller, and at the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, by W. Angie Smith.

Miss Nettie Stroup, head resident of St. Mark's

Hall in New Orleans, was presented, and she spoke briefly.

R. W. Vaughn, superintendent, spoke concerning the work of the Orphanage, stressed the great needs at the present time, and urged a more liberal support of the Orphanage.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Missions was read by D. B. Boddie. This report dealt with the Memorial Mercy Home and urged a liberal support of that saving institution. The report requested that, instead of a special day to be set apart for the Home, the District Representative of the Board of Managers of the Home be granted the privilege to sit in with the District Board of Stewards in their first meeting of the year, and, in co-operation with the presiding elder of each district, to fix the time for the presentation of the work of the Home and the taking of an offering in each district. The report recommended that, wherever practicable, the pastors invite the superintendent of the Home to visit their charges and present the work of the Home. The report also asked that the District Representative, in co-operation with the pastor, select a Committee Woman in each church, who will give every possible assistance in bringing information to various groups in the church and in securing financial aid for the Home.

The report of the Board of Trustees of the New Orleans Methodist Depository was received and ordered to record. Also the report of the Treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Society.

The report of the Board of Church Extension was read, giving the following donations: Bonne Idee, $25; Chalmette, $200; Griffin, $75; Pine Grove parsonage, $100; Total, $400. The report was adopted.

The report of the Bible Board was read by S. S. Bogan. The report recommended that the first Sunday in January, 1934, be observed as Bible Day by the Louisiana Conference.

The report of the Hospital Board was read by H. W. Rickey. The report recommended that the Conference retain membership in the Hospital Association of our Church, and that H. W. Rickey be appointed as a delegate to the annual meeting of the Hospital Association, and asked Bishop Dobbs to re-appoint L. W. Cain, Winnsboro, La., as Conference Director of Golden Cross. The report asked that Dr. C. C. Jarrell be authorized to pay $500 of the Conference Golden Cross funds now on deposit with the General Hospital Board to aid the Tucson Hospital for tuberculosis patients, in its present embarrassment over a bond issue. The report was adopted.

Upon privilege, N. E. Joyner was given time to form an organization for a Methodist Benevolent Association in the Conference, and N. E. Joyner was elected president; C. D. Atkinson, vice-president, and J. A. McCormack, secretary-treasurer.

The Conference adjourned, to meet in evening session.

Evening Session

Pursuant to adjournment, the Conference convened in memorial session at 7:30 p.m., with W. W. Holmes in the chair. The hymn, "Nearer my God to Thee," was sung; after which Dr. Holmes read a part of the 14th chapter of John. The congregation standing, Question 14 was called: What preachers have died during the year? The secretary read the names of Joseph S. Rutledge, W. Wirans Drake, Henry S. Johns, and T. J. Warlick. The Conference was also informed that Mrs. J. D. Harper, Mrs. Thurmon Spinks, and Mrs. R. V. Fulton had died during the year. Dr. Holmes led in an appropriate prayer. He then explained the Methodist custom of holding a memorial session of the Conference, and called for the reading of memoirs. F. N. Parker read the memoir of W. W. Drake, R. W. Vaughan the memoir of H. S. Johns, and F. N. Parker the memoir of T. J. Warlick. F. N. Sweeney stated that he had not had time to complete the memoir of J. S. Rutledge, but would furnish the secretary the memoir for publication in the Annual. C. C. Miller read a memoir of Mrs. J. D. Harper. R. M. Brown is to furnish memoirs of Mrs. Thurmon Spinks and of Mrs. R. V. Fulton for publication in the Annual. Eulogistic remarks were made by a number of the ministers and laymen present.

D. B. Boddie read report No. 2 of the Board of Missions. The report outlined a plan for the development of two charges each year, in addition to other work helped by the Board. Gordon Avenue, Monroe, and Gentilly, New Orleans, will be helped the coming year. The Board recommends an appropriation of $200 each to the Charity Hospital in New Orleans, the Charity Hospital in Shreveport, and the Veterans' Hospital at Pineville. It was asked that H. N. Brown be continued as Conference Missionary Secretary. The re-appointment of J. G. Sneeling as superintendent of the Memorial Mercy Home was asked. Attention was called to the fine work of D. B. Boddie as chaplain of the Veterans' Hospital at Pineville, and it was reported that the Board of Missions hopes to secure during the coming year the $500 needed to complete a chapel near the Hospital. The report was adopted, and the report of S. H. Meyer, treasurer of the Board, submitted with the main report, was ordered to record. Report No. 3 of the Board, giving the appropriations to the several charges to be aided, was also read and adopted.

R. H. Staples read the report of the committee on District Conference records, and the report showed that the most of the records are well kept.

Rev. Butler Deville was received into the Conference from the Baptist Church, and then granted a location, that he might enter at once into the ranks of our local ministry.

Winans Beadle, from the Lake Charles District; Albert Alexander Collins, from the Ruston District; Rupert Bentley Sloan and Jack Holland Midyett, from the Shreveport District, were admitted on trial.

E. L. Cargill requested that his name be referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation. G. S. Sexton and T. J. Holladay made appropriate remarks concerning the retirement of Brother Cargill from the active ministry. Upon motion of P. B. McCullen, the Conference rose in recognition of the faithful service of our retired ministers.

A. J. Martin was granted an honorable location, at his own request, and will engage in the work

THANKSGIVING

O Thou, whose bounty fills my cup
With every blessing meet!
I give thee thanks for every drop—
The bitter and the sweet.

I praise thee for the desert road,
And for the river-side;
For all thy goodness hath bestowed,
And all thy grace denied.

I thank thee for both smile and frown,
And for the gain and loss;
I praise thee for the future crown,
And for the present cross.

I thank thee for the wing of love,
Which stirred my worldly nest;
And for the stormy clouds which drove
Me, trembling, to thy breast.

I bless thee for the glad increase,
And for the waning joy,
And for this strange, this settled peace,
Which nothing can destroy.

—Jane Crewdson.

of a singing evangelist, his address for the present being Marksville, La.

H. N. Brown made a report for the Committee on Memorials and Resolutions, and the memorials to the General Conference, which were concurred in by action of the Louisiana Conference, were given to W. W. Holmes, leader of the Louisiana delegation, to be put in proper form and submitted to the General Conference in May of 1934.

F. N. Parker pronounced the benediction, and the Conference adjourned to meet in final session at 2 p.m., Sunday.

FIFTH DAY—SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 26

As many as could find a seat or standing room pressed into the Methodist church on Sunday morning to hear the impressive sermon of Bishop Dobbs, which was followed by the ordination of Jolly B. Harper, Roland William Faulk, John Fletcher Wilson, Ivan Oden Donaldson and Joe Brown Love as deacons. The preaching service was preceded by a love feast, conducted by J. B. Williams.

The Conference assembled in its final session at 2 p.m., with Bishop Dobbs in the chair. The hymn, "Saviour, more than life to me," was sung, after which C. C. Wier led in prayer.

The Bishop announced the appointment of R. H. Harper, W. L. Duren and W. W. Holmes as a Sesqui-centennial Committee to arrange for a suitable celebration by the Conference.

A. J. Martin, who had been granted a location at a preceding session, stated his desire to return, if possible, into the itinerant ministry, but was informed that it would be impossible for the Conference to rescind its action, and that the matter would have to be taken up in the regular way, through recommendation for re-admission, etc.

H. T. Carley made a statement concerning the adjourned session of the Conference to be held in the First Methodist Church, Alexandria, La., on January 26.

N. E. Joyner read an expression of thanks for the gracious hospitality of Winnfield as follows:

"The Louisiana Annual Conference owes a great debt, a debt it cannot pay. However, the Conference most gladly acknowledges its obligation. We owe Winnfield and her people for hospitality and kindness unexcelled. We have been most graciously received and thoughtfully surrounded by every kindly consideration. We have been both guests and friends. Time would fail us should we attempt to name the many who have ministered, and until time fails shall hold you in loving remembrance, and upon every remembrance of you we shall thank God, and ask His blessings upon you. May God bless Winnfield, her pastor, her pastors, and her people."

W. W. HOLMES.
N. E. JOYNER.

The Bishop read the questions concerning the statistics of the churches of the Conferences for the year closing, and they were answered by R. W. Vaughan, statistical secretary.

Bishop Dobbs, assisted by the presidings elders and other elders present, ordained to the order of elders: Marvin Wallace Beadle, Harvey Benjamin Hysell, Willie DeWitt Milton, Virgil Dixon Morris, and George William Pomeroy, traveling preachers, and Henry Arberry Rickey, local preacher.

All the business of the Conference having been completed, the Bishop made appropriate remarks, and read the appointments for the coming year.

The doxology was sung, the Bishop pronounced the benediction, and the Conference adjourned, sine die, to meet next in First Church, Shreveport, La.

CHANGES IN CHARGE LINES

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT—Raise Montrose to a station. Form new charge to be called Provençal and composed of Provençal, Pine Grove and Oak Grove from the Montrose charge. Form a new circuit to be called Olla and Jonesville and composed of Olla, Jonesville and Grayson. This eliminates the Standard charge and elevates Ferri-day to a station.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT—Discontinue the Walker charge. Add churches of that charge to the Denham Springs charge, making the Denham Springs charge to be composed of Denham Springs, Live Oak, Walker, Mangum and Albany.

LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT—Add St. Martinville charge from the New Orleans District to the New Iberia charge making the New Iberia charge to be composed of New Iberia, Jeanerette, St. Martinville, Lydia and Pecan Island and to be called New Iberia and St. Martinville. Transfer Basile from the Lake Arthur charge to the Eunice charge. Add Iota from Lake Arthur to Crowley. This leaves the Lake Arthur charge to be composed of Lake Arthur, Maxie, Bell City and Hayes. Add Cameron and Grand Chenier from the Merryville to the Vinton charge making it to be composed of Vinton, Grand Chenier and Cameron. Add Hopewell from Elizabeth to Merryville and make the Merryville charge to be composed of Merryville, Hopewell, and Pine Grove. Divide Many and Zwolle into two separate charges raising Many to a station and also raising Zwolle to a station.

MONROE DISTRICT—Form a new charge to be composed of Marion and Bird's Chapel from the Ruston District and Sterlington from the Monroe District and to be called Sterlington and Marion. Add Fairbanks from the Sterlington charge to the Oak Ridge charge.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT—Combine the Covington and Slidell charges, making a charge to be composed of Covington, Slidell, Mandeville, Waldheim and Fitzgerald. Add Reserve from the Donaldsonville charge to McDonoghville. Add Labadieville from Houma and French Mission to the Donaldsonville charge. Combine Louisiana Avenue and Second Church, making a charge to be composed of these two churches and to be known as Louisiana and Second Church. Transfer the St. Martinville charge to the Lake Charles District.

RUSTON DISTRICT—Discontinue the Marion charge and transfer the Marion Church from that charge to the Monroe District. Discontinue the Farmerville charge and transfer Bird's chapel from that charge to the Monroe District. Discontinue the Oil Field on the Bernice charge. Add Farmerville to the Bernice charge forming a charge composed of Bernice, Farmerville, Alabama Church and Summerfield and to be called Bernice and Farmerville. Form a new charge to be composed of Calhoun and Drew from the old Farmerville charge and Downs ville and White from the Marion charge and to be called Calhoun and Downs ville.

CONFERENCE NOTES

The Bishop and the presiding elders were entertained during the Conference in the hotel, and they were assigned a large and pleasant room for their cabinet meetings.

Many comments were made upon the delightful weather that prevailed throughout the session, in contrast with the rains that fell almost constantly during the preceding session of the Conference at Ruston.

Winnfield is a center of paved roads, and the most of the Conference members and delegates came in their cars; also many visitors from different sections of the state were present at different times during the sessions, especially on Sunday.

Chaplain A. F. Vaughan, of the U. S. Army, was present during a part of the Conference, greeting his many friends. The Chaplain is a member of the Conference, and has recently returned from service in the Philippines to the post assigned him at Barksdale Field, Shreveport. He is a brother of R. W. Vaughan, superintendent for many years of the Orphanage, and for two decades and more the efficient Statistical Secretary of the Conference.

Bishop Dobbs was expected to preach at a great union service in the Baptist Church of Winnfield on Sunday night, but was compelled to leave immediately after the reading of the appointments, on account of illness in his family, and his place was ably taken by D. B. Raulins, editor of the Advocate.

Prof. Andrew Quattlebaum, of Centenary College, was a welcomed visitor to the Conference, especially so since he delighted the Conference with his singing on two occasions.

The Conference was greatly pleased at the visit paid the body by Governor O. K. Allen, who was en route to the football game between L. S. U. and Mississippi. In the session of Thursday morning, a brother of the Governor, Mr. Leonard Allen, represented the Mayor of Winnfield in giving an address of hearty welcome to the Conference.

Though a small city, Winnfield provided handsomely and graciously for the entertainment of the Conference, and many expressions of appreciation were heard from the visitors. Rev. Ellis Smith, the pastor of the Methodist Church, and the entire membership of his church left nothing undone. Dr. Land, pastor of the large Baptist Church of Winnfield, was often in attendance upon the sessions, and he and his people co-operated in the entertainment of the visitors. The writer of these notes, with Rev. J. J. Rasmussen and Rev. R. R. Branton, was most graciously entertained in the home of Judge and Mrs. Cass Moss, prominent members of the Baptist Church, and is greatly indebted to them for their kind hospitality.

One of the members of the Conference boasted of a fine overcoat which his congregation had given him, but lamented the fact that the mild weather did not give him an opportunity of displaying it often.

An unusual number of visitors from other Conferences were at different times introduced to the Conference, including Dr. Decell, Dr. Sutherland, and Dr. Crisler, from the Mississippi Conference, and Dr. Score, of the Texas Conference. Bishop Boaz was a visitor one day; also Dr. Rawlings, Dr. Schisler and other connectional men.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

The increase in benevolent collections in North Mississippi was from 23 per cent in 1932 to 39 per cent in 1933. That is a very encouraging report.

Rev. S. H. Caffey, pastor at Tunica, Miss., made a splendid report at the close of his first year. Much progress had been made in every way and all collections were in full.

Dr. H. F. Brooks was greeted with a spirit of co-operation at Tupelo, Miss., his new appointment. At a mid-week service one hundred and fifty gathered for a social and fellowship hour.

The budget was set and the every-member canvass completed in two weeks after Conference at Aberdeen, Miss. Mr. B. H. McFarland is the

THE PRESIDENT'S THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION

I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, president of the United States of America, do set aside and appoint Thursday, the thirtieth day of November, 1933, to be a day of Thanksgiving for all our people. May we on that day in our churches and in our homes give thanks for the blessings bestowed upon us during the past year by Almighty God. May we recall the courage of those who settled a wilderness, the vision of those who founded the nation, steadfastness of those who in every succeeding generation have fought to keep pure the ideal of equality of opportunity and hold clear the goal of mutual help in time of prosperity as in time of adversity.

May we ask guidance in more surely learning the ancient truth that greed and selfishness and striving for undue riches can never bring lasting happiness or good to the individual or to his neighbors.

May we be grateful for the passing of dark days; for the new spirit of dependence on one another; for the closer unity of all parts of our wide land; for the greater friendship between employer and those who toil; for a clearer knowledge by all nations that we seek no conquests and ask only honorable engagements by all peoples to respect the lands and rights of our neighbors; for the brighter day to which we can win through by seeking the help of God in a more unselfish striving for the common betterment of mankind.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Signed:

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

president of the board of stewards, Neil McCaskill secretary, and F. B. Maier treasurer. The weekly envelope system is used in that church.

First Church, Columbus, Miss., sounds no retreat in the plans for the new year. At a meeting of the officials the spirit of the Board was to go forward with every phase of the work. Mr. T. E. Lott, for the third time, was elected chairman of the board of stewards. Rev. A. T. McIlwain is entering his second year as pastor of that great church.

Indianola, Miss., the seat of the next North Mississippi Conference, is one of the splendid towns of the delta. With a population of around 3500 and a citizenship progressive and awake, it is not a surprise that the Methodists of the town have been active in the work of the church. They have an attractive new building with modern equipment for church work. We may all look forward to a great session of the Conference at Indianola. Rev. C. A. Parks is the pastor, now entering in his third year.

Rev. W. R. Hammontrée, pastor of Sardis Circuit, has been appointed for six years to work with the Gilmore Sanitarium Corporation, Amory, Miss., in connection with the Conference Board of Christian Education, in rural churches of Monroe and Itawamba Methodist churches. This corporation is a benevolent institution chartered under the state for religious work in those two counties. The endowment was created by the late E. D. Gilmore of Amory. The trustees are permitted to direct certain funds for Sunday schools, revivals, hospitals, missions and erections of new church buildings in those two counties. However, certain amounts are given for foreign missions. Mr. Gilmore believed in the Methodist church, for one of the provisions in that the trustees must be stewards in the Methodist church. During the six years since definite work was started Brother Hammontrée has made much progress in many local churches. It is the hope of the Church that this work will grow into one of the outstanding pieces of Christian education demonstrations in the entire Church.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TO ADDRESS CHURCHES

On Wednesday evening, December 6, President Roosevelt will deliver an address in connection with the Twenty-fifth Anniversary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. A special meeting of the Council is being held in Washington at the same time for the purpose of furnishing a united impetus to spiritual advance.

A radio broadcast over all major stations throughout the country, from 10 to 11 o'clock (Eastern Standard Time), will carry the President's address to listeners in all parts of the nation.

dent of the Louisiana Conference Missionary Society. Subject: "Our Missionary Code." All interested in missions are invited to tune in, and especially the missionary ladies over the state.

December 11, Mr. A. H. Tarver, president of Shreveport Chamber of Commerce. Subject: "Centenary College as a Financial Asset to Shreveport."

After each of the above mentioned talks, there will be a fifteen minute program of music.

AN ELECTIVE COURSE ON METHODISM

Adult classes in the Church school have a treat in store for them. During the months of January, February, and March, the Adult Student will carry an adult elective course on "The Methodist Church: Its Message and Work." These studies have been prepared by Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe of Duke University. Helps for the teachers of the course will be provided in the Church School Magazine. This lesson material furnishes excellent material on our Church and should be used by hundreds of adult classes. Write for copies of the January Adult Student, if you are interested in using this course.

All applications must be approved by the Conference Board of Church Extension and in the office of the General Board on or before December 29, 1933. No applications will be entered on the Calendar after this date.

T. D. ELLIS, Secretary.

REPEAL AND AFTERWARD

By Edwin C. Hinwiddle,
Superintendent, National Temperance Bureau

The Eighteenth Amendment has been repealed, but the alcoholic liquor problem is still unsolved. The means employed to defeat its purpose and to take it out of the Constitution reflect credit neither upon its opponents nor upon the American people as a whole. Unless now in sober and sane consideration of this serious and important question of liquor control, ardent and conscientious dries and sincere wets who, for any reasonable cause, opposed national prohibition adjust themselves to this problem, the country faces a crisis in social and economic progress.

The only escape in this may lie in the possible fact that, despite all that has been said against it, prohibition has helped to turn and keep multiplied thousands away from the traffic and habit which the open and legalized saloon would have won as its victims.

Prohibitionists are under no obligation to suggest a better method of regulation. They believe it was not the prohibition policy which was most at fault, but throughout the years the lack or quality of its enforcement and administration. They, like all other good citizens, are in honor bound to do their utmost to secure legislation and enforcement which will minimize the evils of liquor drinking and selling. On the other side, such honest wets as I have referred to should have an open mind, carefully observe the results of regulations and control without the Amendment, and be ready to govern future actions accordingly.

That the so-called "drys" will prove better sports than the opponents of the eighteenth amendment have done I have not the slightest doubt. They will continue to advocate enforcement of law. The radical "wets" practiced and preached its nullification, with noteworthy exceptions. The dries will seek and publish the truth about the results of liquor drinking and selling where it may be permitted under the new regime. The organized wets during the life of the Eighteenth Amendment steadfastly denied even its patent benefits, and by the expenditure of vast sums of money through the press, the radio, the theater, and by enlisting writers, broadcasters, and performers of one kind and another developed an opposition—largely through misinformation—which finally won.

All this, however, was powerless before the calm judgment and conscience of the American people for over ten years of the law's life. It was only after the panic and depression fell upon America that even their confessions of past sins and long promises of future atonement got the wets the ear of the great body of the American people. Then came the demand from the underworld, added to the calls of respectable wets, for a betrayal of political parties, and the party lash—which dries never sought—was brought into play while America was floundering in a financial slough of despond.

The shoe is now on the other foot. Already difficulties appear in the offing. How to tax so as to raise revenue and yet keep the bootlegger, rum runner and racketeer outside the game; how to permit the sale and yet keep the promise to prevent the return of the saloon; how to scrap the policy of federal prohibition and yet adequately protect dry states from exploitation by wet ones, these and other similar difficulties will confront the "happy" and "easy" warriors of the wet cohorts, while the dries are re-forming their lines and preparing for the next phase of the campaign to solve the liquor problem.

WOMEN OF ELIZABETH ELECT NEW OFFICERS

The members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Elizabeth La., met on Thursday afternoon, November 9, in the parsonage in a devotional meeting in the observance of the Week of Prayer.

Then followed a business meeting electing officers for the coming year's work.

One Sure Way to End Coughs and Colds

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, and attacks the seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Your own druggist is authorized to refund your money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Creomulsion. (adv.)

TO MOTHERS
EAT

Nature knows best. Never coax a child to eat! Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite. When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, don't give small children a constipating cathartic that drains the system. California syrup of figs is all the "medicine" they require.

Specialists will tell you that a sluggish appetite almost always means the child has a sluggish colon. Correct this condition called stasis, and see how quickly a listless, drooping boy or girl begins to eat—and gain! The only "medicine" such children seem to need is pure, unadulterated fig syrup.

Children who get syrup of figs, now and then, soon have the appetite and energy of young animals! They keep well and avoid colds and sluggish spells.

Nature never made a finer laxative for children; and they all love the wholesome, fruity flavor of the real California syrup of figs. It's purely vegetable, but every druggist has it all bottled, with directions. Begin with it at once. The very next day, your child will be eating better and feeling better. Keep on with the syrup of figs a few days and see amazing improvement in appetite, color, weight, and spirits.

The promises made by the bottlers of California Syrup of Figs are true, and it will do the same for you, IF it's genuine CALIFORNIA. Don't accept substitutes.

RESOLUTIONS

Be it Resolved by the Board of Stewards of the Fayette Methodist Church:

First. That we heartily endorse the work during the past year of our pastor, Rev. T. B. Cottrell, and his good wife.

We find them to be lovable Christian characters, showing unselfish and devoted care and attention to all departments of church work.

Second. We earnestly endorse the work and services of our presiding elder, Rev. H. G. Hawkins, knowing him to be a splendid Christian character; showing careful interest in all church work under his jurisdiction.

We ask the blessings of our Heavenly Father upon them in the years to come, wherever they may be, and hope all may be returned to their present fields of labor.

Signed:

R. T. LIDDELL,

A. C. PUFFER,

C. L. DAVIS,

For the Board.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE YOUNG PEOPLE

And . . . Young People of the Mississippi Conference—if you could have been present at the Fourth Annual Young People's Training Conference at Galloway Memorial in Jackson, you would have known that those young people were wide awake and working hard. This conference was made a memorial to our own late Rev. J. C. Chambers, former Conference Executive Secretary and was sponsored by the Jackson Union.

Two more Unions are waiting to join the chartered list—Scott Union, and West Hinds County Union. Nothing is better than good Union meetings to pep up the lazy and slow Leaguers.

Plans are on foot for a big Assembly this year, for the Young People in all the districts. Hattiesburg District especially, having had a meeting on the 26th of November to lay their plans for the same.

Camp Kickapoo in Clinton has been chosen to be the camp grounds of the Second Christian Adventure Camp of Jackson District and William Fulham, District Director, is planning for the success of this Camp. Jackson District is doing great work and just watch them move.

So long, Young People. Let's hear from you and your work. You'll find me in Hattiesburg waiting to print it.

GREW HAIR ONE INCH

Mr. W. E. Andrews, Franklin, Pa., writes:
"I used 2 bottles of Japanese Oil and succeeded in growing hair one inch long on my bald spots."
JAPANESE OIL, the antiseptic counter-irritant, is used by thousands for baldness, falling hair, loose dandruff and scalp itch. 60c a bottle. Economy size $1. At all druggists. FREE booklet, "Truth About the Hair"—write National Remedy Co., Dept. K, 56 W. 45th St., N. Y.

Thanksgiving Day was inaugurated and first celebrated by some of the founders of our republic who had little in their larders but much in their souls. On the hillsides slept many of those who, in faithfulness to their ideals, had made a pilgrimage to a new land and a new day. Their comrades, after a season that had not been altogether friendly, deemed it wise to halt a moment in acknowledgment to Almighty God.

Material things are not blessings that God owes us, but tokens of a providence far greater than prosperity.

At this time of the year, while not overlooking any material reminder of divine care, we should be thankful for a more convincing discovery of our dependence one upon another and the glory of co-operation and good will. We should be supremely grateful for the revelation of the indispensability of the spiritual in the preservation, stability and progress of our land.

We should be thankful not only for the providence of God unforgettably expressed by a bounteous table, but for a God who makes us eager to share our blessings with others.

THANKFUL TIME

It's come to thankful time again:
The yellow corn is shining,
And every purple autumn grape
Can show a sugar lining.
The crimson apples crowd the bin,
The nuts are bronzed with sweetness.

The golden pumpkins in the field
Are rounded to completeness—
Our little garden's spicy still,
That was so gay with giving;
The air is frosty-clean—O Love,
We're thankful to be living!

From gray to green, from green to gold,

Through every kind of weather
The rainbow year came slipping by;
We met in glad together.
And now we fetch us fragrant wood,
And light our ingle fire—
An upward-leaping, ruddy flame,
A dream and a desire
Across the leaf-brown, happy hills
The soft-shod dusk is moving;
A cricket cries his song—Dear Heart,
We're thankful to be loving!

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. MARTHA HARRIETT JERNIGAN, wife of Earl Jernigan, born August 19, 1892, and died November 3, 1933.

The death angel came to her swiftly as she failed in attempting to save her baby daughter from the wheels of a speeding automobile.

Truly it can be said of her that "She laid down her life for her child" and "that no love can be greater than this."

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. F. Sheppard, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, and the body laid to rest at the Beckcom graveyard near Hornbeck La.

She was a devout member of the Church, a fond and devoted mother, a faithful wife and a true neighbor.

To the loved ones and the many friends we offer the consolation that God has prepared a place for the ones who love him and that mother and daughter are united in a happier land than ours.

She is survived by three sisters, one brother, two daughters and her husband.

Why Liquid Laxatives Do You No Harm

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can be controlled. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement, and with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated as long as you keep on using it!

An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is syrup pepsin. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help, as they do in the case of cathartics containing mineral drugs. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Member N. R. A.

THE TEACHING OF WORSHIP IN THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES

The Committee on Worship of the Federal Council of Churches has completed a survey of the teaching and practice of worship in nearly one hundred theological seminaries, a summary and analysis of which was given by Dean Weigle, of Yale Divinity School, at the fall meeting of the Committee recently. The data is so valuable that he has been requested to present it at the annual conference of theological seminaries. One important fact brought out in the survey is that in a number of seminaries, the equipment of prospective ministers for the conduct of worship is elective, instead of being required of all candidates. Yet it is disclosed that the worship service and prayers in free churches are deplorably weak and unworthy.

As a possible method of awakening interest in and magnifying the great hymns of the Church, occasional hymn festivals, led by the united choirs of towns or city districts, were recommended, following an address by Reginald L. McAll, organist of the Church of the Covenant, New York.

The Committee on the Literature of Worship presented an annotated list of 100 of the best books on worship with brief reviews, which will be published as soon as funds are available.

Bishop Wilbur P. Thirkield, chairman, presided.—Federal Council News Service.

MAKES YOU LOSE UNHEALTHY FAT

Make No Mistake—Fat Is Dangerous—Ask Your Doctor

To take off fat—take one teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—one bottle lasts 4 weeks—get it at any drug store in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the SAFE and HARMLESS way to lost fat—your money returned.

Reduces From 154 to 128

"Less than 4 weeks ago I started taking Kruschen. I weighted 154 and felt tired out all the while. Now I weight 128. I feel so full of energy I can't seem to work fast enough." Mrs. R. H. Hamilton, Carbondale, Pa.

While losing fat with Kruschen you gain in physical attractiveness—you look and feel younger—no more gas, acidity—no more constipation.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

BIG THINGS are happening. And some of them have already happened. Hitler, leading the Nazis by the hand and the rest of his people by the nape of the neck, says goodbye to the Disarmament Conference and the League of Nations. Mr. Litvinov of old red Russia gets on a boat and comes to see us, talks with Roosevelt and Hull, and gets recognized before he goes back. Citizens of New York City have just put a crimp in the Tammany Tiger's tail by electing La Guardia as mayor. The Eighteenth Amendment is repealed while North and South Carolina break ranks and save their souls. The initials brigade, CCC, NRA and AAA, with the others, are still on the march. Yes, we are witnessing the break-up of one world while another is forming. Chaos seems to have a little the lead just now, but God got the best of him one time, when he said, "Let there be light;" and God will win again, saying, "Let there be love."

I HAD TO LAUGH at the cartoon in a New Orleans paper picturing the "last stand" of Prohibition. It was a football field with several husky players, bearing the names of states voting on repeal, one of the biggest carrying the ball, which was marked "Repeal Alone." On the line right under his own goal posts stood Prohibition, togged out with his famous stove-pipe hat, armed with his well-worn umbrella which has kept much of the "wetness" off of us for the past thirteen years, wearing golf knickers, and, with a very unathletic stoop in his back that indicated age and impending defeat, holding the line as those brave (?) fellows bore down upon him to sweep him away with a tide so wet that his derby was bound to be lost and his parasol prove altogether inadequate for the deluge. In the background stood the score board indicating the score: Wets 33; Drys 0.

Yes, I had to laugh. And this means that I am getting ready to fight. No repeal can make drunkenness respectable, nor dry a widow's tears, nor take the curse out of alcohol.

And I have not forgotten everything. Quite a number of the states still have Prohibition. And Uncle Sam cannot say, "It is now up to the states." No such thing. Half of the Twenty-first Amendment repeals the Eighteenth; the other half guarantees protection to dry territory. We shall insist that our end of the amendment be carried out. Of course we have some doubts about how well an intoxicated government is going to do this. We shall find much trouble in trying to hold the bear and turn him loose all at the same time.

The saloon must not come back. But this morning my paper said, "In many cities of the country, saloons have been opened wide to all comers." An editorial in the same paper, though, shows how drunkenness will decline because there will be plenty to drink with no one to say nay. In other words the drunkenness we have had during Prohibition was due to the lack of liquor and orders not to drink what there was. A hog is greedy and wild for corn until a load is dumped down before him with all restrictions removed. Then he quietly and politely turns away, saying, "No thank you; I do not care for it."

AND GERMANY'S DEPARTURE brings to our attention again the unfinished task of World Peace. It seems hardly to have begun.

There should be no blinking the fact of failure of the Allies to carry out their part of the Versailles contract. It seemed that some of the nations wanted to make sure that Germany must bear the full blame for any "next war," because she broke away and wouldn't play with the other nations any longer as they insisted on having all the toys and tin soldiers. But that cannot be done. The Lord knows that Germany has sins enough to look after, but the other nations are in a very poor position to throw stones. If and when we get into the "next war," we shall all be to blame for it.

You are interested in lower taxes, are you? Have you read this little report? "American taxpayers, in time of economic depression, unbalanced budgets, and actual starvation, continue to invest so heavily in non-liquidating war expenditures that in 1932 (the year before this one), the amount spent by the United States for war purposes exceeded the total government receipts."

Get out your slate and pencil and work on these figures a bit. Use two slates if you find yours too short for the whole line. 1932 Receipts: income tax, $1,057,335,853; other receipts, $1,063,932,153; deficit, $2,885,272,299.

We do not put down the extra cents as they would extend the line a little too far. But we do not forget that dollars are made up of cents and mills in the Federal Budget just as they are in your own little affairs. And the government is your affair also. Don't forget that. (Have you paid your poll tax?)

And review your arithmetic. "Deficit" does not mean "Income." That word stands for "debt."

But I hadn't told you about the expenditures. Better put a capital letter at the beginning of that last word. Expenditures: Total War Expenditures: Public Debt Charges, $1,010,682,563; Pensions, $1,060,853,180; National Defense, $699,081,812; All Others, $2,235,972,750.

Did you get the "answer?" You needn't turn to the "back of the book" for it. The war "problem" is not worked out that way. My answer is this: Total War Expenditures, $2,770,617,555. And to pay that we had a total of Ordinary Receipts, $2,121,228,006.

If you do not get the answer, write me about it. We'll go into a "huddle" and try to learn something about the thing. Now don't any of you out there plowing up your cotton think you have nothing to do with it and that it is no responsibility of yours.

"BRAIN TRUST" is a phrase that came in with the "new deal."

Seems that Mr. Roosevelt got a few school teachers to help him launch the "new deal," and one of them did not pan out so well. Of course, we do not know all about it, and many have decided that school teachers do not have much brains. But let us not conclude that too soon. You have not heard from the rest of them.

And don't go off half-cocked about school teachers. They never have had a square deal. There is no group in the country who are expected to do more with less and for less, unless it be the preachers.

We fellows out in the country who did not have much chance to find out whether or not we had a brain, or get to sharpen it up if we did have one, have a way of discounting brains. And yet I have never known one of us who did not wish to be regarded as "brainy," and who did not straighten up his spinal column and smile if anyone told him that he did something real bright. Isn't that so?

Well, if there ever was a time when we needed brains it is now. And I don't mean calf brains or hog brains. If you do not believe this go back up there and read that statement about our war costs. You say you didn't add up and subtract those figures, just read on over them? How is that for brains? Just a little matter of addition and subtraction.

And it is we ordinary folks, good citizens, taxpayers, that need those brains. Let us organize the "democracy of brains" if we don't like the "brain trust." It is the common man who needs brains. Oh, I mean, who needs to exercise his brains. We have them. About all the use we make of them now is to complain about the sharpster who got ahead of us.

Browning, doesn't matter which one, prayed one time: "Make no more giants, Lord; but elevate the race at once." And I say, Amen.

A lot of us good people, good Methodists, seem to think that goodness is sufficient. Well, it is not. And it is not what Jesus taught. He thought religion, at least the Christian religion, required brains. As you may be a little too tired to turn to it and read it I'll give it to you.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF STEWARDS

By L. C. Plgford, Lay Leader

One of the chief responsibilities of the Board of Stewards is the financial task of the local church, embracing as it does the need of the membership, needs of the pastor and the needs of the benevolences. No other responsibility of any other group in the church has such far-reaching consequences. The first appointments of lay helpers were for the purpose of ministering unto the widows of the congregation—those in need among the membership. I wonder if we have not forfeited a needed sustenance of our own spiritual welfare in permitting charities to be dispensed by other organizations to our membership. No larger opportunity is given to reach close to the heart of our membership than to administer to its individual needs. We make the contributions through other non-denominational organizations and if these were handled through the Board of Stewards of our church I am of the opinion that they would bring dividends of untold wealth. The needs of the pastor and his family are a responsibility of the Board of Stewards—and to provide homes for them. Everything that the church hopes to do in fulfilling its mission for world evangelism and Christian education is all of their amplifications and minutiae of program depends upon the success of the local church in its financial undertaking. I wonder sometimes how we can expect to prosper in our church program when we view the niggardly treatment of our pastors and our benevolences, the latter especially. It is my opinion often expressed that no church has ever been assessed more than it could and should pay. The trouble is in the heart of the membership and not in a lack of ability to pay.

The Board of Stewards also should carry the responsibility to see that every department of the church program functions and to lend assistance to that end—pulpit supply—young people's work—Sunday school—the education of the membership in the financial needs of the church, both local and foreign. It is here that I feel that we are not reaping the results that we should because of the failure to inform our membership. People will be found in every church who are averse to contributing to missionary activities. Some churches have regular stated appointments for dispensing information to the membership regarding the church's financial condition and its program. This should be general.

A further responsibility of the Board of Stewards is to uphold the pastor. He is the appointed leader and his direction is required. They should keep this in mind and stand loyally back of him in all his plans. They should seek to develop a proper attitude of mind and spirit towards him. They should refuse to indulge in foolish or destructive criticism knowing that such will tend to block the way of whatever service the pastor may be able to render. They should pray for their pastor, and give him from time to time assurance of their moral, financial, and active support. They should defend him against his critics; they should do everything in their power to carry out his policies; they should endeavor to take care of the temporal affairs of the church committed to them in such a way as to leave to the pastor a maximum of time for study, prayer, meditation and visitation.

The Board of Stewards has the opportunity to create a proper Christian attitude to pastor and fellow members among the church membership. The Stewards of the church exert a tremendous influence over the entire congregation and practically determine the status of the church in its community by reason of their example. What a Steward may say or what his activities may be are of little concern as compared with what he is himself. Above everything else a Steward should give to his congregation and to his community an example of an upright, honest character. This power of example will then extend also into all of the business, civic and social relationships of the community. Because of his influence as a leader in the church he has opportunity to reflect the social conscience of the church and the true spirit of Christ by properly conducting his business; by meeting his obligations and taking his part in the social life of the community.

Another opportunity is to develop and maintain a good morale. The leadership of the Board will be held responsible in the main for this, but every Steward likewise has his particular responsibility. The spirit of courage, vision, faith, good-fellowship, co-operation—all these enter materially into developing this morale. Dissension, division in matters of opinion or judgment, lack of loyalty to the preacher and to one another—these are the derisive forces that tend to disrupt and produce inability to function affectively as a great organization for the church.

Its chief opportunity lies in the power to promote Christian Stewardship. The average Steward is apt to have too meager a conception of his responsibility and opportunity at this point. Sometimes he construes his responsibility at "making up deficits" at the end of the year. Again he thinks of his task as going out and getting the money from some delinquent member. It is quite evident that the time is upon us when the Board of Stewards must consider this phase of the work—the finances—from the standpoint of all the factors involved and remember that the successful financing of the church is based upon spiritual, psychological and educational factors, plus the use of some good plan or method of church finance. Primary concern should be given to the person—individual—not the dollar—in church finance. A sound financial policy will seek to enlist the individual giver on the basis of his own spiritual growth and from the standpoint of stewardship conscience. It will seek to inculcate in him the conception that his gift is an act of worship and a means by which he invests himself in the program of the church, resulting in the development of his own Christian character and bringing him more nearly into the spirit of the Kingdom of God. A financial policy that results only in securing the amount of money needed may be in the long run destructive of the best in the spiritual life of the church. A sound financial policy will so enlist each individual giver as to make his giving conducive to a broader understanding of the purposes of the church and his opportunity of investment through its program. Here lies the greatest opportunity for the Steward.

In conclusion may I be permitted to express my opinion that if the lay leadership within our church were one half as consecrated to the service of our Master and zealous toward the program of the church as our pastorate that the success of the church program would be noticeably better. To that end, therefore, the suggestion has been made previously in this paper that a concentration of effort on the part of the pastors should be directed to the spiritual development—I almost said evangelism—of the members of the Board of Stewards. Too often pastors are wont to assume that because one is a member of the Board of Stewards that he is one of God's elected children and is experiencing the joy of his religion in accord with his capability. Not so. If this were true larger results would be evidenced in the membership. I wonder if the Rich Young Man who had kept all the commandments from his youth up would not today be a member of some Board of Stewards if living? I fear our pastors are fallaciously depending too entirely upon collective or group admonition—and not enough on individual inquiry and suggestion. Are they putting first things first when they only complain if the member fails in attendance on the worship service? This ye ought to have done but not to have neglected to inquire as to the spiritual welfare and experience, and as to the practical application of the member's Christian Character in his service to his fellow man. The pastorate is not alone preaching or visitation—but if I do not misinterpret our Master's ministry on earth, it carries also the responsibility of individual analysis of the church member and the proffer of suggestive correction. The rich young man was told to do that thing that brought to his consciousness his one obstacle in the way of attaining unto the Kingdom of God. Is a prophetic vision too much to expect of a pastorate imbued with the Holy Spirit?—I think not.

WHO IS LORD OF THE CONSCIENCE?

The Churches believe that "God alone is Lord of the conscience." This view is not shared by the Court of Appeals of Maryland.

Ennis H. Coale, in the fall of 1932, sought exemption from compulsory military drill at the University of Maryland. His request, based on the ground of conscience, was denied. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church which at its 1932 General Conference said:

"We petition the government of the United States to grant to members of the Methodist Episcopal Church who may be conscientious objectors to war the same exemption from military service as has long been granted to members of the Society of Friends and other similar religious organizations. Similarly we petition all educational institutions which require military training to excuse from such training any student belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church who has conscientious scruples against it."

Standing upon this declaration, Ennis Coale took his case to the Superior Court of Baltimore, which, on January 24, 1933, issued a decision upholding Mr. Coale's position. The Court, in accepting at their full moral value the declarations of the Methodist General Conference, said:

"If religious conscientious objectors are excluded from this state-supported university except upon pain of relinquishing their religious beliefs and principles, then a religious test has been imposed as a condition of their enjoyment of its educational privileges."

The University appealed from the decision and on June 21, the Court of Appeals of Maryland reversed the order of the lower court.

The Superior Court, in sustaining Mr. Coale's refusal to enroll in the R. O. T. C., declared that exemption of religious conscientious objectors from military requirements was "not a matter of grace but a matter of right, resting upon the fundamental law of the State and Nation." It was further stated that conscientious objectors "are entitled to full protection in their religious liberties as guaranteed by the Federal and State Constitutions." The Court of Appeals, on the contrary, ruled that Mr. Coale was "without constitutional support in refusing to take such training," and that he was "likewise . . . without any law, Federal or State, in support of his contention."

DON'TS FOR PREACHERS AND CHURCHES

By Dr. J. M. Rowland,
Editor Richmond Christian Advocate

We never did like "DON'TS." We heard too many of them in childhood. There are times, however, when a few well chosen "don'ts" are worth considering and Conference time is one of these times. If we could get over a few choice "DON'TS" to preachers and churches it might help us in taking up duties on a new charge.

To the Preacher:

Don't think you will escape all your snags by moving. They move, too.

Don't think all your friends are on the old charge. Some of the best ones you have ever found may be where you are going.

Don't listen too much to the first ones who try confidentially to give you the "low down" on the shortcomings of some of your new members. The most reliable members who wear better and last longer are not the ones who run first to a new preacher telling him the bad points in the charge.

Don't talk too much about the charge you left in a way to disparage the new one. Let them know you loved the people and they loved you, but don't rub it in.

Don't go back to the old charge too much. Hold your friends and keep in touch with them, but when Miss Mary Jones marries and thinks no preacher can do as well as you, make it convenient to have another engagement that day.

Don't start out either as pastor or as preacher in a fault-finding attitude. Leave off your scolding for a time. Let the first contacts and the first sermons be free from all of that. It is best to feed them on honey for awhile, saving the vinegar for a later date.

Don't discredit in any way your predecessor. To his friends and his enemies you discredit yourself when you do. If they praise him you beat them at it. If they say anything about going to see him, ask them if you can go, too. If they criticize him, try to find a good thing to say for him and if you can't, discuss the N. R. A.

Don't make the impression on the stewards you are busted and poverty stricken. If it is true keep it to yourself until you get better acquainted with them.

Don't let pessimism and gloom get into your first sermon, or your first contacts. There is nothing now worse for a preacher than despondency. People will not put up with a gloomy, pessimistic preacher. If he does not major on the bright side of life he just as well crawl in a hole.

Don't take it out on them, if you think you did not get a square deal. You may not want to go there and perhaps they wanted somebody else, so the best thing is to make the best of it.

Don't think because some man or woman in some church told you that church would be glad to have you as pastor that that church was asking for you. Many times a preacher is greatly misled at this point. Some person of little influence tells him they want him and he thinks the church wants him.

Don't look for trouble in a new charge. There is plenty of it there and it will be looking for you soon enough. Don't poke your nose in the choir unless it is absolutely necessary, and then wear a mask.

Don't appear as a dictator. People just do not like them. If you have some revolutionary ideas for your new charge get a key man or woman committed to your program and let them seem to originate it, if you want it to meet success. Don't deal with too many don'ts.

To the Church Members

Don't think your church will die because your preacher was moved. You will get over it some time.

If you did not expect a charge, don't take it out on the new preacher. He may be as dissatisfied as you are, and it is poor taste, not to mention ethics, to take it out on him because your beloved pastor was moved.

Don't go in mourning for forty days because he left you and tell the new preacher about it every time you see him.

Don't run over there to see the old preacher next Sunday nor even the next. Your preacher needs you and your duty is at your own church. Apply the Golden Rule here. Suppose all the members ran off after the old preacher?

When your daughter gets married, let the new preacher marry her. He can tie it as tight as the old one, and he has the same sort of a ceremony.

Don't think your new preacher can live until the first coming of the Elder without pay. Remember, his car drinks gas like a toper and people do not give it to him. He can't run himself or his car without gas.

Don't expect your new preacher to remember all of you every time he sees you at first. Remember there is one of him for you to know and many of you. When you speak to him just form the habit of mentioning your name and it will help him.

Don't be too quick to tell him of the faults and shortcomings of the church and the members. He will discover that soon enough. Let him enjoy his ignorance as long as he can. And maybe there are some good things you can tell him about the church and the people.

Don't withhold from him, however, important information he needs to know about conditions of the church and its work.

Don't get peeved if he does not come to see you as soon as you think he should. Be sure to go to see him at the parsonage and at the church. Don't think he can find out you are sick unless you let it be known.

Don't discourage your preacher. Help him by encouragement and prayers. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman used to say laymen could make or break a preacher and that no preacher ever came to success without the influence of some layman who helped make him. Don't discourage and hinder your pastor. Help him be a better preacher and help him to succeed in his work.

A PLEA FOR THE STUDY OF CLASSICS

While we hear much in these days of man as the descendant of the anthropoid ape and of the cave-man, according to the only sane account we have handed down to us, man was made in the likeness and image of God. And as we cannot conceive of God so creating man and then leaving him in helpless ignorance, to make his way in an unknown and untried world, God must have given him some degree of instruction in the arts and conduct of life. Hence, we need not be surprised if both history and archaeology point to the fact that at least a portion of the race has always been civilized and that that civilization had as its center and seemed to spread from the regions generally agreed upon as the place of man's origin. Literally, the East has been for the race "the source of light."

Letters, alphabets and writing, whose time of origin no one can date, came from the East. Greeks borrowed their alphabets from Hebrews and Phoenicians, and our convenient numerals, 1, 2, 3, etc., came to us from the Arabs.

As men wandered farther and farther from the place of their origin, they in many instances lost their civilization and degenerated into savages and barbarians. So, finally, our ancestors came into the light of recorded history, when about 100 years before the birth of Christ, living in the forests of Germany, clothed in the skins of wild beasts, and trying to invade and pillage the civilized provinces of the Roman Empire.

From this condition of 2,000 years ago, what influences have brought these descendants to their present state? Are the forces that make for civilization innate, or are they a part of the native constitution of a people? If they are innate, people once civilized would remain so and civilizations would not die, whereas they have all died in the place of their birth, and if they live at all, they live in the lives of other people who have borrowed them. Civilizations are borrowed. They have been first borrowed from men who from the Divine hand received them in the beginnings of human history.

Into our civilization of today elements from three chief sources have come. We owe these to three great peoples. Our religion we have from the Hebrews; our laws and government from the Romans; our philosophy and metaphysics from the Greeks. Our civilization can but endure by constant recourse to these great sources, through the languages in which their uplifting thoughts have been preserved. Our surest and closest contact with those to whose influences we are so greatly indebted must be through their languages, and for this there is no substitute, for what is any language but the outgiving of the soul of people.

And now a practical exhortation for this place and hour. Three great streams converge and coalesce in our English tongue: the Saxon, Roman and Greek tongues. Modern science says, learn things through their sources. Why not our own tongue? In the Renaissance, Latin almost submerged our Saxon speech. Today, in the heyday of science, we have upon us another deluge—a deluge of scientific terms from the Greeks. Let us know our language through its sources. The first mark of an educated man is his knowledge of his native tongue.

N. G. AUGUSTUS.

Pontotoc, Miss., Nov. 1, 1933.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott, Contributing Editor

There is much danger to the preacher's courage during these days. The enemy of his soul is making every effort to discourage him. Very few pastors are satisfied with the attendance of his people to hear his preaching. Frequently the Sunday preaching services pass and he feels a sense of failure. Many of his supposedly faithful people were not at church at all. The devil whispers to him that he is failing. This thought may get deep into his mind and he begins to watch anxiously to see his congregations increase. There is a pitfall into which many a good minister has found himself. The measure of a minister's success is not the number of people to whom he preaches, but the character of the message he delivers and the kind of life he lives to give force to the words of his lips. If people only knew the value their presence gives they would not be so negligent in making an effort to hear the preaching of the Word. Yet, the man of God must look higher. He must not depend on numbers, or flattery, or any worldly success for his happiness and glory in his work. His one commission is to proclaim FAITHFULLY the Eternal Truth. The harvest is the Master's.

John E. Brown, the Evangelist, relates in one of his sermons the illustration of the horse which had torn himself away from the wagon and run until the collar was the only part of the harness left. He said it was very hard to hitch him again to any kind of vehicle. He made it apply so well to many of our people who have at one time worked at some task in the church but who now have the collar as the only part of their equipment. The point is what are we going to do with people who have had the experience? Occasionally under the impulse of evangelistic preaching they will come back and be used, but in most cases the treatment is by the individual method. We must be perfectly fair with all people. God does not make all good Christians to be Sunday school teachers, stewards or some other church official. Many will do better if left to the natural task of living the life in their homes. I am afraid we make an error in always exhorting the people to be leaders and officers of some kind.

The group lessons prepared for our Sunday schools now are very fine indeed. That is the type used by all our smaller towns and rural Sunday schools. The improvement is marked during the past five years. If parents will take time to read through some of the lesson materials for children and young people they will see how the lesson writers are trying their best to help the children at every stage of their lives. I am looking now at the "Methodist Intermediate Quarterly," which was given to my 12-year-old girl last Sunday morning as she was promoted to the intermediate department. The list of subjects for the thirteen lessons are just the type which will be helpful to boys and girls of that particular age. The whole quarter is devoted to the general theme of "Some choices and what came of them." Intermediate boys and girls are learning to make their own choices and they need sympathetic help from every side. The Southern Methodist Church is fortunate to have the array of men and women who are literally giving their lives to furnish to our children helpful spiritual food for their growing years.

DR. SPEER'S MAGNUM OPUS

By Rev. Carroll Varner

Anything from the pen of Dr. Robert E. Speer always attracts my attention at once, for I know it is good even before I've tasted it. I know of no man who weighs more carefully what he says and writes and is more sure of his ground than he. He has written something near 30 volumes and not a one of them is to be classed as ordinary. The latest volume by Dr. Speer is entitled, "The Finality of Jesus Christ," consisting of the lectures he delivered on the Stone Foundation at Princeton and later at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville. This book is a masterly and courageous defense of the faith once delivered; and I dare say this great writer and religious leader expected it to be his magnum opus. Within recent years, as many of us know, the most subtle, insidious and persistent attacks have been made against the foundations of our faith at home, partly through much so-called religious education and, abroad, by repeated efforts toward religious syncretism, and many fine well-meaning people in both hemispheres have fallen for it. Now Dr. Speer's book is the surest antidote to that kind of poison; to change the figure he simply cuts the foundations right out from under them. One cannot read this great work without marveling again and again at the writer's wide reach of information and his profound knowledge of the whole of church history. He is also thoroughly familiar with the critical views, quoting freely from them and proceeding immediately to answer them. Indeed, about the only criticism which one could make of the work is that the author quotes too fully and from too many sources. He does this, however, for the same reason that a wise and fair judge would want all the testimony possible in a given case in order that he might reach a just decision.

The tenor of the whole book can be put, perhaps, in one striking paragraph from the opening of Lecture IV:

"To the early Church and to all of those to whom Christianity has had the reality of Life and Death values and the power to lift them over all boundaries of race and nation and carry them, as they carried it, to the whole of mankind, Jesus Christ was the Son of God and the only Lord and Saviour. He needed nothing from any man and He had everything to give to every man. Let us get this perfectly clear. To all four evangelists, to St. Paul, to all the writers of the New Testament, to the Apostolic Fathers, to the leaders of the expansion and, therefore, of the perpetuation of Christianity in the world from the apostolic age to our own, Jesus Christ and the faith of Christ, that is the faith in and on Christ, stood alone, meeting the common need of which all the religions, philosophies, speculations and longings of men are the expression, but meeting it and satisfying it as it can never be met and satisfied except by Christ only, by what He was and did and is, who alone can say, 'Fear not; I am the first and the last; I am he that liveth and was dead; and behold, I am alive forevermore.'"

Jesus said unto him (a lawyer), Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. Matthew 22:27.

When good people begin to exercise their brains as well as their hearts we are going to see something happen in our neighborhood and in our country.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Conferences are over. Now we can get together again around the fire and find out what has been going on. Pull up your chairs.

Have any of you considered the Goodwin Plan as an aid to church financing? What is to be said for it? Against it?

In Berlin, we are told, the cop will "give you a ticket" if you toot your (auto) horn too much. Now what do you think of that?

When you write to Rev. J. W. Ramsey, address him at Porterville, Miss., instead of Lorman. A post-conference adjustment places him at the new address.

Misses Ruxton and Walker of the Whitworth College faculty were among those who came to New Orleans to witness the great play, "Green Pastures."

Are you reading the Meditations appearing under the title, "The Tent of Meeting?" Rev. T. F. King, our pastor at Sulphur, La., is rendering us this excellent service.

Dr. Thomas Carter, member of the Louisiana Conference and professor in Vanderbilt University, has just passed through a critical siege of illness. Did you write him?

Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor at Brookhaven, Miss., reminds us that in the historical sketch of Methodism in Brookhaven the name of Dr. W. C. Black, pastor in 1905, was omitted by mistake.

A local paper of North Mississippi speaks with pleasure of the return of Revs. R. E. Wasson, A. Y. Brown, T. L. Oakes and K. E. Clark to their charges. Only one change was made in the entire county.

Is your church, preacher or any organization of your church doing anything of news interest to the rest of the people of our two states? If so we should like to know about it so we can tell it to others.

Born to Rev. and Mrs. A. K. McLellan (nee Jewel Dean), November 18, a daughter, Nauey Carolyn. Maternal grandparents: Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Dean, Boyce, La.; paternal grandparent: Mrs. Mollie D. McLellan, Shreveport. Congratulations to all.

Recently Rev. Martiu Hebert, now of West Monroe station, Louisiana Conference, conducted the funeral of a son of Rev. C. J. Thibodeaux, our pastor at St. Martinville, La. Our sympathy goes out to Brother Thibodeaux and family in their bereavement.

Debating is taking a good place on the program of Millsaps College students this year. This provides excellent opportunity both for acquiring important information on vital subjects and the development of skill in the public presentation of these matters.

"Winning Financial Freedom" is the title of an extremely convincing pamphlet issued by The Layman Company, 730 Rush Street, Chicago, Ill. They will send a pastor enough for his entire official board free if you ask them for them. Why not send for them?

At the recent session of the Louisiana Conference Rev. F. C. Collins of the Cuba Conference was transferred in. He is now stationed at Leesville. Look elsewhere in this number for a write-up of Brother Collins taken from the Cuban Evangelist, organ of the Cuba Conference.

A happy feature of the work at First Church, Lake Charles, La., recently was the observance of "Old Folks Day." All members over seventy years of age were honor guests. For a church thus to honor its veterans adds a radiance to advancing years. Others might follow this example. Rev. E. C. Gurn is pastor.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, now settled in his new pastorate at Charleston, Miss., reports a most hearty reception. Brother Lewis' experience is unique in that this station was served some years ago by his brother, Rev. J. T. Lewis. Brother Lewis speaks highly of the preachers of the Sardis-Grenada District.

Attention! "The men of the district are all in their places for the work of a new conference year. They are all happy. And I see no reason why the work of the church should not advance at the hands of such faithful and efficient men." That is from Rev. W. L. Sorment, presiding elder of the Sardis-Grenada District.

The local paper speaks most highly of the work of Rev. L. W. Cain, at Winnsboro, La. Brother Cain's ministry has endeared him not only to his own congregation but to the people of other faiths. The paper expressed the desire that Brother Cain might be returned not only for another year, but for many more.

Professor Andrew Quattlebaum of the Music Department of Centenary College greatly delighted the Louisiana Conference in its recent session at Winnfield with a number of inspiring numbers. To hear him once makes it impossible ever to be indifferent to his soulful singing. Centenary is to be congratulated.

Rev. Grover C. Schwartz, former pastor of North Main Street Church, Water Valley, Miss., was appointed at the late session of the North Mississippi Conference as a student to Emory University. Mrs. Schwartz and their daughter, Virginia, will remain in Water Valley. Brother Schwartz did some excellent work at North Main.

Seven students resident in Mississippi, including two from Millsaps College, have made application for the Rhodes Scholarships to be awarded from the southern division of the United States in January. The Millsaps boys are Maurice M. Jones of Greenwood, a senior; and Frank H. Lydell, Jackson, who spent two years in Millsaps.

Coach Homer H. Norton, who has been with Centenary College for more than a dozen years, goes to Texas A. and M. College as coach for 1934 and is succeeded by his assistant, Curtis Parker. Coach Norton, son of a Methodist preacher and graduate of Birmingham-Southern College, has made a great record at Centenary.

The Men's Bible class of Carrollton Avenue, New Orleans, recently established a glorious record. Two hundred and ninety men were present for the class session. In addition to the regular activities of this class, the teacher, Mr. W. H. Black, cashier of the Federal Reserve Bank, conducted a week's meeting that proved very profitable.

If you want to spend fifty cents so you will not regret it send it to the Golden Rule Foundation, Lincoln Building, 60 East 42nd Street, New York City, and ask for a copy of "The Golden Rule Book." (Cloth bound, $1.00). It is crammed full of very valuable information. By one it has been called "the most practical household book of the year."

Hubert R. Knickerbocker, son of H. D. Knickerbocker, formerly of Louisiana; former professor of journalism in Southern Methodist University, considered the most noted post-war correspondent in Europe; has been given a "roving assignment" to cover Europe and Asia. Under International News Service Mr. Knickerbocker spent some time in Russia.

First Church of Lake Charles, La., recently presented a pageant, "By the Winding Calcasieu," written and presented by local talent. Mrs. Elizabeth Greene Streater, the author, used materials provided by A. M. Mayo, for many years a citizen of Lake Charles, and for more than forty years the aggressive superintendent of our Sunday school there.

Rev. Jno. L. Williams, formerly pastor of Louisiana Avenue Church, New Orleans, returns to his former work with the Louisiana Child Home Finding Society, having served the Louisiana Avenue Church acceptably as a supply for the past few years. Rev. Jolly B. Harper comes to New Orleans as pastor of the Louisiana Avenue and Second Church work.

Do you live in the country? Then you may be interested in the Special Six Weeks' Courses for Missionaries, Rural Pastors and other Rural Workers, which will be offered by Scarritt College in conjunction with Vanderbilt University, Peabody College and the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School, Nashville, Tenn., January 2-February 8, 1934. Better look into it.

Rev. H. H. Smith of Ashland, Va., who every now and then sends up a good article for our columns has just gotten out a pamphlet entitled, "The Methodist Steward." The purpose of the booklet is, "To help 'poor stewards' become 'good stewards' and 'good stewards' become 'better stewards.'" Pastors, get a handful of them for your stewards. Just ten cents apiece.

Rev. R. T. Pickett recently reported an epidemic of malaria on his charge. For awhile his church was turned into a hospital. The State Board of Health was invited to take charge of the situation. In about ten days all the patients were back home. Brother Pickett himself was one of the victims, but he reports that he came through all right and that there was not a single death in the entire community.

Rev. J. N. Humphrey, who is in his fourth year as pastor at Dumas, Miss., tells of the glorious reception tendered him by his people upon his return and threatens to make this the best of the four. In addition to this Brother Humphrey is already trying out the new subscription price for the Advocate. Why he has just sent in eight subscriptions with one of Uncle Sam's Money Orders to cover same. Seems to me that is starting the year right.

President Pierce Cline, appearing for the first time before the Louisiana Annual Conference as President of Centenary College, made a most favorable impression. In a recent Chapel Talk, President Cline, after commending the fine spirit of the team and the band at a football game, said, "Do well all that lies before you. If it is carrying a football, carry it well; if it is sweeping a floor, sweep it well; if it is studying a Latin lesson, study it well."

In another place you will find a brief article about Rev. Louis Fayard, Biloxi, Miss. Rev. M. L. Burton, of Gulfport, while on a call for the purpose of presenting the Annual Conference check to "Uncle Louie," received this article. Brother Burton speaks of him as "one of the most faithful local preachers, has meant much to the cause of Christ and Methodism on the Mississippi coast, and only the Judgment can reveal the full influence of his service to the church and the cause of righteousness."

Rev. Ellis Smith, pastor at Winnfield, La., assisted by his many friends of the other churches, was host par-excellence of the Louisiana Conference. He was re-assigned to Winnfield and as a token of the very great esteem in which he and Mrs. Smith are held by the people of Winnfield a great Jubilee Service, in which all the city's churches united, was held in their honor at the great First Baptist Church. Hundreds of various faiths, following the sermon of the evening, met Brother and Sister Smith at the altar with warm and appreciative greetings. Dr. Land is pastor of the Baptist Church.

Nothing gives a pastor quite the "thrill" that being able to make a good report at Conference does. We have a man down in Louisiana who went before the Bishop in the grip of that thrill. Let him tell it. Rev. John Rasmussen, pastor at Burke, speaking: "The Bunkie Methodist Church has today (two weeks before Conference) paid its Conference collections in full. We shall be able to report 'everything in full.' As a matter of fact, we are not only going to report 'everything in full,' but we are 'going over the top' to the tune of several hundred dollars." Brother and Sister Rasmussen are in great favor with the Bunkie people. When the Bishop recently read the appointments I heard this: "Bunkie, J. J. Rasmussen."

THE TENT OF MEETING

KNOWING GOD

By Rev. T. F. King

One of the most tragic facts of modern Christianity is the inability of the average Christian to say, "I know in whom I have belief." The truly religious man is certain of God. He does not attempt to prove God, he knows God. More precious unto him than riches, is the fact of the Eternal Presence. There are occasions, in the life of every sincere seeker, when he is lifted up into the heavenlies. In those moments all too rare, time and space no longer have dimension: things temporal vanish; God alone is near. With Him, and through Him, the triumphant soul rises above the body, and dwells in rapture in the secret presence of the Most High. The world is uncertain, life is uncertain, God is unchangeable certainty.

Without this certainty of God, there can be no adequate religion, but such certainty is not easily attained. He who is encumbered with conflicting motives, can never reach the glorious heights of fellowship with God, for God is not only Father, He is also Husbandman who prunes the seeking soul of impeding desires. Religion has always demanded heroic living, and even more so today is this fact true. Happy is that soul who has made his decision. Blessed is he who says, "I will at all costs seek God, and abide by the things of God." Blessed is the man who has resolved to follow the promptings of the Inner Light, even though he be led through rough places and dark valleys. Blessed is he who has sought and found, for life, glorious life is opening up before him.

As I write these lines, I realize how utterly unworthy is my own life. I realize how many times I have failed, yet deep within me, I know that I seek the one great pearl, and in order to possess that one, I am prepared to sacrifice many lesser, even goodly pearls. The great quest urges me onward, yet always upward towards union with God.

SUPERINTENDENT OF THE METHODIST HOME SPEAKS TO MISSISSIPPI METHODISTS

To the Pastors, Woman's Missionary Societies, Sunday Schools and All Allied Bodies of Mississippi Methodism:

Dear Friends: During the Thanksgiving season it becomes my duty and pleasure to send that full measure of thanks and appreciation due those who have by their love and interest made the Methodist Orphans' Home a habitation equipped and qualified to minister to the needs and training of the scores of homeless children who have enjoyed your bounty during the many months gone by. In the discharge of this duty I feel under obligation to furnish you, the faithful sponsors of our Home, with information regarding the condition and progress of the children that I think you are entitled to receive.

I know that I speak from the heart of every child in the Home when I say that your responsiveness and co-operation have brought us well-being and contentment in the many material ways so necessary in the development of human lives. Your prayers, your good wishes, your unselfish contributions to this great cause have challenged the best that is in us and have created a situation wonderful to behold and inspiring to the last degree. Our children have been blessed and we are happy to acknowledge you as the channels through which the Divine Will has been wrought.

The children are healthy in body and soul. It has been our endeavor at all times to foster and mature their spiritual growth, not merely in the sense of acquiring the knowledge that support of church institutions is a primary matter, but also in the faith and belief that their lives should be so molded that when the time comes for them to take our places they shall be competent and willing to join the great throng that seeks first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and to whom all these things shall be added.

It is very pleasant indeed to say to you that the same care expended upon the children in their spiritual training has been practiced with reference to the building of bodily health. Space does not permit a description of physical changes in the health of the children as a result of a principal diet of milk. I have been very fortunate to have secured a sufficient number of cows to furnish our children with a bountiful supply of milk; and milk, as you know, is recommended by physicians as the best article of food to be obtained. During the available months, fresh vegetables from our garden and farm in plentiful quantities furnished another item so necessary in reinforcing the healthy growth of our children. Meats from our own stock, flour and sugar contributed by our friends, molasses of our own manufacture, and all the other necessities, either gifts or purchases, have made us feel satisfied that there is never a hungry or unhappy child at the Methodist Orphans' Home. You have made this possible.

Dr. H. F. Magee, our physician, who is always ready to attend the children (without pay) night or day, has this to say about the health conditions in the Home. I quote Dr. Magee: "In my capacity as attending physician at the Methodist Orphans' Home, I have found, in my periodic visits, that the general health of the children is eminently satisfactory. From my observation and personal investigation, it is evident that the children are well fed, that the sanitary conditions conform to the best standards and that there is an exceptional minimum of those diseases prevalent among children. They are most assuredly receiving the proper food and plenty of it."

Our children are being educated according to the program used by the schools of our state. Our grammar school standing is equal to that of any other group in the city.

Knowing of the interest you have shown in the welfare of the Home, I thought you would like to learn some of the results of the many kindnesses received at your hands. These results are yours. You have helped us turn possibilities into accomplishments of your acts.

Again let us say we are grateful, and we hope and pray that of the blessings you have bestowed many shall return to you in a large way.

Very sincerely,

FRED J. McDONNELL.

MEMORY OF REV. H. S. JOHNS HONORED

By George A. Fox

On Sunday evening, October 22, Rev. H. S. Johns was beautifully memorialized by his congregation at Greenwood, La. The main feature of the program was a floral wheel—"The Wheel of Service," which was the work of Mrs. J. P. Collins, who also presided over the program. After some introductory remarks, Mrs. Collins placed in the center of a disc a white "hub," symbolic of the radiant purity of the life of Mr. Johns. Around this hub was placed twelve spokes, representative of his Christian virtues. These spokes were located by messages from the Sunday school and its various departments, the church and two other organizations, the Baptist congregation and the community. Around the whole was placed an evergreen wreath, typical of immortality. This last was placed by Mrs. J. B. Vaughan, who dedicated "The Wheel of Service" with prayer.

The musical phase of the service was in the capable hands of Mrs. E. S. Moncrief. The invocation, by Rev. Horace Hampton, of Centenary College, was followed by Mrs. Moncrief singing "I Will Sing You a Song." As Brother Johns lay near the gates of the grave this most appropriate hymn was wafted to him from a neighbor's home. Following the building of the wheel and a male quartet singing "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," the writer had the honor of speaking in behalf of that goodly number of young ministers whose lives have been blessed by contact with this "father in Israel." Rev. E. G. Howard, of the Bethany Baptist Church, spoke feelingly of his connection as co-pastor with Mr. Johns. "Nearer My God to Thee" having been sung, Rev. D. X. Lagrone, a local preacher of Greenwood, pronounced the benediction.

A memorial service can add nothing to a life like Brother Johns', but rather the life lends lustre to the service. The large congregation felt that Mrs. Collins' ingenious device had put in tangible form the thoughts of all our hearts. So we all thanked God for his good life and example and took renewed courage from the memory of his virtues to do our part in bringing about that state when the earth shall be as full of the knowledge and glory of the Lord as "the waters that cover the sea."

PREACHER WANTS BOOKS

I will appreciate the loan of any or all of the Third Year Conference Course books of any Brother who has them. Write me what books you have and I will write you whether or not to send them and what books to send. I wish to get them as soon as possible so I can prepare for the Pastors' School at the Seaboard Assembly Grounds.

Your brother,

Kreole, Miss

WM. M. TABB.

REV. F. C. COLLINS AND FAMILY

By Dr. Luis Alonso, Editor Evangelista of Cuba
(Translated from the Cuban Evangelist)

Due to recent pressing matters an editorial note has been postponed which should have appeared in this church organ about the Rev. F. C. Collins and his exemplary wife, who have won the appreciation of all the Cuban people with whom they have been successfully working for several years. On account of the critical situation through which our Board of Missions has been passing, the retirement of some of our missionaries in Cuba was necessary and inevitable. Especially did this apply to those in educational work in which they were engaged. Absolutely the only reason that deprives us of such appreciated workers whose loyalty and understanding of the Cuban people is unquestioned was the problem of finance.

Mrs. Collins, daughter of our very dear friend, Rev. Lawrence Reynolds, presiding elder of the Western Mexican Conference, is a lady singularly attractive and amiable to all those privileged to be associated with her. Rev. F. C. Collins is a minister of culture and ability. His work, especially among the young people, has been highly beneficial and satisfactory. On losing such esteemed co-workers it is fitting that we publicly manifest our high appreciation of their positive merits and at the same time render our tribute of love, lasting gratitude and grateful recollections which they leave among the Cuban people.

We sincerely deplore the departure of friends and co-laborers so beloved and useful to the cause of Christ in this country. On their leaving we commend them to the protection of a divine Providence, praying that the Lord will bless them abundantly wherever they go. If in the Divine plan they should return soon, they will always find loving hearts and happy memories as echoes from their past years in this country. This official organ of Cuban Methodism says farewell to the Collinses with our sincere expressions of appreciation.

BOOK REVIEW

THE DEVELOPMENT OF METHODISM IN THE OLD SOUTHWEST, 1783-1824, by Walter Brownlee Posey. Published by Weatherford Printing Co., Tuscaloosa, Alabama, 163 pages, $1.50.

Dr. W. B. Posey, Professor of History in Birmingham-Southern College, has published a recent book on "The Development of Methodism in the Old Southwest." This study meets a real need in American church history. It is, as the title states, a history of the beginnings and early development of Methodism from 1783 to 1824 in that territory now included in the States of Tennessee, Kentucky, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas. In 1783 Methodism first entered this territory. By 1800, when the Western Conference was organized, there was one presiding elder's district made up of thirteen circuits and eleven preachers who ministered to 2,930 members. In 1811 there were ten districts comprising seventy-one circuits, 101 preachers, and 30,741 members. By 1824 the Western Conference was increased to seven annual conferences, two hundred circuits extending from the Great Lakes to the Gulf and as far west as St. Louis and Hot Springs.

Professor Posey narrates in attractive literary form how in this territory Methodism made such rapid progress. The camp meeting, which he describes most vividly and interestingly, was one element in this development. The circuit rider whose "activity was mobile as the fluctuating edge of the frontier" played his part. The earthquakes in the Central Mississippi region between December 16, 1811, and February 7, 1812, helped the Church to make a net increase of more than fifty per cent during the year 1812.

Some of the educational and missionary efforts and achievements of Methodism in the Old Southwest during this early period are recounted. The rise of such schools in Kentucky as Bethel and Augusta, the beginning of the Sunday school movement, and the first missionary activity among the Indians are given due attention. Finally, certain problems, such as slavery, liquor and church government, are dealt with. The attitude of John Wesley, of Asbury and of others on the subject of slavery, the appearance of anti-slavery groups in the Southwest, and the Church's legislation opposing slavery are thoroughly and illuminatingly described. What early Methodism of the Southwest thought of liquor and tobacco furnishes an excellent chapter in Professor Posey's book.

Treat COLDS in the First Stage!

Colds go thru 3 Stages and they're far Easier Relieved in the First than in the Second or Third!...

IT PAYS to know something about colds! They are a great cause of prolonged sickness and financial loss.

A cold ordinarily progresses through three stages. The first—the Dry stage, the first 24 hours. The second—the Watery Secretion stage, from 1 to 3 days. The third—the Mucous Secretion stage. The time to "nail" a cold is in the first or Dry stage. It is twice as easily relieved then.

The Wise Measure

The thing to take upon catching cold is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. It stops a cold quickly because it is expressly a cold remedy and because it does the four things necessary.

First, it opens the bowels, gently, but effectively, the first step in expelling a cold. Second, it combats the cold germs in the system and reduces the fever. Third, it relieves the headache and that grippy feeling. Fourth, it tones the system and helps fortify against further attack.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is utterly harmless and may be freely taken with perfect safety. It is, and has been for years, the leading cold and gripe tablet of the world.

Now—20% More for Your Money

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine now comes in two sizes—30c and 50c—and is sold by every drug store in America. It pays to buy the 50c size as it gives you 20% more for your money. Always ask for it by the full name and look for the letters LBQ stamped on every tablet. Look for an ulterior motive when a substitute is offered.

LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE HAVE FELLOWSHIP DINNER

By Lydell Sims

Many young people attended Conference on the final day, Sunday, and besides the great benefit they received from the morning services and the glimpse of the organization behind a local Methodist Church, the fellowship with old acquaintances was enjoyed immensely. Around forty attended a fellowship dinner, spread on the ground in the nearby woods. It developed that all but two or three had been to Mansfield Assembly at least once, the record for longest attendance going to Rev. Mr. Grambling, who has attended since—oh, since the assemblies were begun! Rev. and Mrs. G. W. Pomeroy, Rev. and Mrs. Carl Lueg, Charles White, Mrs. White (mother, not wife), Leslie Cowley, Misses Marjorie Roberts, Anna Pharr Turner, Pearl Hattie, Hazel Lea Nowell, Grace Jones, Edith Skinner, Rushie Mae Butcher, and many others enjoyed the fellowship. An outstanding example of generosity was offered by Brother Grambling in giving your reporter an entire stick of chewing gum to mention his name in the news. This terrific gift was heartily enjoyed by the recipient. More donations are welcome. O-Kay, Brother Grambling!

Louisiana Young People

Reports of November meetings of Louisiana Young People's Unions have reached a total of nine, with one hundred sixty-five the largest recorded attendance. Unions reporting are the New Orleans City Union, the Highway Union, Hoyt M. Dobbs Union, Shreveport Union, Everready Union, Service Union, Friendship Union, and the Grambling and Live Wire Unions, which have already been reported in the Advocate. Following are some of the accounts of the meetings:

"The Shreveport City Union has elected and installed the new officers for the coming year, and a goodly lot they are. William Fleming, of Noel Memorial, is President; Pearl Hattie, Park Ave., Vice-President; Margaret Belle, of Mangum, Secretary; Viola Brown, of Park Ave., Treasurer; and Jolly (Jack) Rodgers of Noel Memorial, Publicity Agent. The different chairmen were appointed, and before long you will be hearing of their accomplishments." Jolly (Jack) Rodgers. "One hundred sixty-five young people representing six churches within the Everready Union met at Salem, November 19. Mill Mildred Mall was the leader of an interesting devotional, 'Thanksgiving.' Others were: Johnnie Maud Register, Mrs. Doris Nobles, and Rev. Mr. Johns, Ruston. Louise Trussell presided over a snappy business session—Miss Opal Joiner, Associate District Director, planned to organize an Intermediate Union soon. Pledges

To End a Cough In a Hurry, Mix This at Home

Saves Big Dollars! No Cooking!

Millions of housewives have found that, by mixing their own cough medicine, they get a purer, more effective remedy. They use a recipe which costs only one-fourth as much as ready-made medicine, but which really has no equal for breaking up obstinate coughs.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. The syrup is easily made with 2 cups sugar and one cup water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and makes the most effective remedy that money could buy. Keeps perfectly, and children love its taste.

Its quick action in loosening the phlegm, clearing the air passages, and soothing away the inflammation, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its healing effect on throat membranes. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

were stressed. A paper for the young people of Ruston District was the main item of interest. Definite steps were taken, and plans were made for its publication by this Union soon. Fun (a stunt night) in early December was discussed."—Miss Edith Skinner.

"The Young People's Service Union of the Monroe District met at the First Methodist Church in West Monroe, Thursday night. There were nearly 100 present. . . . A devotional was conducted by members of the home group, after which a business session was held. . . . A well-prepared chili supper was served in the church basement, and games and a recreational period comprised the closing number on the night's program."—Miss Eleona Brinsmade, in the Monroe News Star.

LOCAL NEWS: New Orleans First Church Young People, who recently "revived," had their officers installed, as the last formal act of Rev. Dr. Wells, who has moved to Virginia. They set their ambitions at the top. . . . Miss Maude McFarland, Associate District Director of Alexandria District, organized a Young People's Department at Simpson in connection with the organization of a Church there. President Gallows and his council are off to a flying start. They plan to join the Friendship Union. . . . St. Mark's young people, of New Orleans, have been making visits lately. They have visited the Seaman's Bethel, the Maison Hospitaliere, and the Old Ladies' Home, with songs and greetings. . . . Provincial, a town of some few hundred, has a League attendance in the twenties. Our Conference Director, Wallace White, is now living in New Orleans, where he is serving the Cudahy Packing Company. We are sure Wallace will find the social conditions in New Orleans to be all that could be expected.

Conference President Ernest Mickal writes that he plans to leave soon for a meeting of Young People's leaders at Nashville, Tenn. He promises to tell us all about it on his return.

MERRYVILLE W. M. S. MAKE RE-PORT

Just a few lines from Merryville, La., Auxiliary, as we have not written you in some time.

"Old Depression" almost strangled us first half of year, what little money we had was caught in the bank holiday, (bank still closed) including our entire first quarter's pledge offerings. Then we lost five of our active members all moving away—however, we've gained a very smart, enthusiastic new member, Mrs. L. E. Frazar. So we sixteen ladies put our shoulders to the wheel and are not only coming to life, but growing stronger in every way.

Our programs are very interesting, thanks to the splendid way in which each lady gives her part. When weather began to get cool, we gathered up old clothing and started a "rummage" sale each Saturday, almost giving things away, to help folks keep warm who couldn't buy new; selling cake, pie, sandwich and coffee, soon we were able to buy a much needed cook-stove for the parsonage.

A number of people from the Gulf Refining Oil Co., came in, to be here several months. We got busy and rented a house, furnished it into two apartments, each donating what we could spare, buying a few things that can be used at parsonage later, and rented to two couples, which will give us an income of $20.00 (twenty dollars) a month while they are here. So now we are able to meet the obligations of fourth quarter.

Our Week of Prayer just closed with three days program, children having the last.

Have Thanksgiving program planned for Wednesday at church at 9:30 a. m. after which we go to creek for a picnic.

Only thing that mars our happiness is the fear of losing our pastor and wife, Brother and Mrs. C. W. Lahey, at Conference time.

Officers elected for new year are: President, Mrs. D. W. Smith; Treasurer, Mrs. Addie Rich; Corresponding and Recording Secretary, Mrs. J. D. Richard; Superintendent Children's Work, Mrs. J. Smith; Superintendent Bible and Mission Study, Mrs. L. E. Frazar; Superintendent Literature and Publicity, Mrs. A. O. Mull; Superintendent Christian Social Relations, Mrs. O. M. Taylor; Superintendent Supplies, Mrs. C. Dean; Local Work, Mrs. J. Burrow and World Outlook, Pastor's wife.

IN MEMORIAM

EARL MAXINE JERNIGAN, daughter of Earl and Martha Harriett Jernigan, born July 31, 1927, and died November 6, 1933.

Funeral services were held from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Hornbeck, La., and burial at Beckcom graveyard nearby, the pastor, Rev. C. F. Sheppard, conducting the services.

Her schoolmates paid a beautiful tribute to her memory by dropping a single flower on the casket that held her remains.

In her death her many little playmates lost a precious friend, her sisters the sunshine of their lives and her father his baby.

Her chair is vacant and the entire Sunday school mourn the loss and will miss the smiles and chatter of this child of God, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.

She is survived by her father and two sisters, besides a host of friends.

"I'll be waiting for you, Billy—"

TODAY, "Billy" is an old man. For years he has been "Uncle Bill" and "Grandpa." But, while his eyes are not so good, that picture still comes clearly... the night he left for the Magic West to stake out a home... their home. He came back... penniless. But she was waiting. And her faith in him never faltered. She knew he would succeed, some place, and he did. Now he is nearly eighty... and it is she who has gone... from life, but not from memory.

As he waits for the day when he will again be with her Over There, he is thankful that one member or his family knew of the CLARK Vault—and suggested it. Just the knowledge that within its impenetrable walls of metal all is serenely isolated—that no outside influence may intrude—is comforting beyond words. Especially when the earth is drenched with water this consoling thought is a priceless assurance.

Many thousands of those who have been left to "carry on" know how true this is. It is one of the important reasons why the CLARK metal vault is today a part of every well-planned service.

A NEW GRECIAN MODEL IS OFFERED BY CLARK

The first and only one-piece vault of its kind ever produced

In this new CLARK vault we offer the latest development of the water-proof metal vault. We have named it the CLARK "Custodian."

Beautiful in design, with classic Ionic columns, graceful curves and colorful finish, it establishes a new standard of beauty in this field. Yet underneath its chaste lines are greater strength and durability than have ever been possible before.

On a huge hydraulic press we form each vault from one single sheet of an amazing rust-resisting metal. We build it, too, upon the air-seal principle—pioneered by CLARK—the same natural law that protects the men in the diving bell at the bottom of the sea. Then, to prove it is absolutely water-proof, we test it under 5000 pounds of water—a test that even a pinhole leak cannot escape.

Nothing Less Than a Clark

The new CLARK Custodian as well as CLARK Standard and CLARK solid copper vaults are distributed by leading funeral directors everywhere. They are offered in a choice of modern, yet tastefully restrained color finishes—and at reasonable prices that any average family can easily afford.

Specify a "CLARK" vault and see, with your own eyes, that the CLARK trade-mark is on the end. No honorable funeral director will resent this precaution on your part. Every CLARK vault is warranted for 50 years or more. The Clark Grave Vault Company, Columbus, Ohio. Branch office and warehouse: Kansas City, Missouri.

OUR DUTY TO OUR PEACE-TIME ARMY

BY BISHOP W. A. CANDLER

When war was on, chaplains were provided for our soldiers in France. Now we have a peace-time army of 310,000 men, who need consideration for their spiritual welfare.

The gathering of this large number of men is a part of the relief plans of President Roosevelt. The body is commonly known as the Civilian Conservation Corps, and is enlisted to preserve the national forests and to perform other functions which come within the meaning of the word conservation. They are under military direction and supervision, without strictly military rule. The engagement of these men gives them work as a part of the great number of the unemployed in our land. The newspapers tell us that in view of the approaching cold weather, many of the men in encampments in the North and West will be transferred to camps in the South.

A press dispatch from Washington under date of October 27, says:

"The reforestation forces in Southern states will be swelled by approximately 25,000 men under the new distribution of civilian conservation corps camps for the winter," Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work, announced Friday 471 camps had been allotted to fourteen Southern states.

"This represents an increase of 121 camps over the number maintained in these states during the summer.

"All told, Fechner said, there will be 97,035 men working in Southern forests and parks during the winter, compared with the approximately 72,000 men who occupied 350 Southern camps during the first enrollment period.

"The War Department said transfer of CCC companies from the far West to Eastern and Southern states had been completed, and it was indicated that new Southern camps will be occupied and enrolled to maximum strength by early November.

"The following table shows the number of camps to be maintained in the South this winter and the number of men who will occupy the camps.

State	Camps	No. Men
Alabama	28	5,768
Arkansas	39	8,034
Florida	26	5,356
Georgia	40	8,240
Kentucky	27	5,562
Louisiana	27	5,562
Maryland	12	2,472
Mississippi	22	4,532
North Carolina	34	7,004
Oklahoma	26	5,356
South Carolina	21	4,326

Tennessee	58	11,948
Texas	42	8,652
Virginia	69	14,223
Totals	471	97,035

This transfer of so many men to our part of the country lays upon the Southern Churches and their members an important obligation. The existence of these camps will not be permanent, and it will not be practicable, perhaps, to appoint chaplains to them, although Reserve Chaplains have been assigned to some. The work of these Reserve Chaplains, however, is to be supplemented by civilian volunteers, in many cases secured by local councils of churches,

LATE AUTUMN

As some old face, with years of goodness lined,

Grows beautiful when gentle death appears
And radiates through fragile flesh the kind,
Untroubled wisdom that has come through tears;

By summer's glory; and under veils of haze
Awaits in golden garments and with peaceful breath

The first embrace of winter, bringing death.

or by inter-denominational associations of ministers.

"Serving as liaison representatives for the General Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains in the nine Corps Areas, are the following:

First Corps Area—Bishop Henry K. Sherrill, Boston.

Second Corps Area—Dr. John W. Langdale, New York.

Third Corps Area—Rev. T. Guthrie Speers, Baltimore.

Fourth Corps Area—Rev. Richard O. Flinn, Atlanta.

Fifth Corps Area—Rev. M. H. Lichliter, Columbus.

Ohio; Sixth Corps Area—Rev. Norris L. Tibbets:

Chicago; Seventh Corps Area—Rev. Frank G. Smith.

Omaha; Eighth Corps Area—Bishop John M. Moore.

Dallas, Texas; Ninth Corps Area—Bishop James C. Baker, San Francisco."

This plan of organization is doubtless as well arranged as could be. But preachers and churches near to these camps should give Christian attention to these men for whom the government gives employment in the important work of conserving the forests of the country.

These men are away from home during the time of labor in the employment of the government, and they are exposed to the moral and spiritual perils implied in the old maxim, "He who is far from home is near to harm." From the social restraints from evil and the local inspirations for good they will be removed; and some substitute for these good things must be found.

We have observed that men away from home, without the perils of such encampments, are not as religious as when in their homes. Dignified men—officers of the Church and officers of the State—not infrequently relax their moral principles and engage in indulgences during their summer vacations in which they would never engage if at home. The cords of the moral life are often alarmingly relaxed in the humid atmosphere of watering places. If this be true of men and women in good conditions during summer vacations, what must be the dangers threatening these toiling men in the Conservation Camps? Their case appeals strongly for spiritual help. All that can be done for them should be done for them.

It is said that they have several days of freedom from labor under the new system of five days of labor and eight hours of toil in each day. This brings an additional peril to them, for the old maxim truly says: "The devil finds work for idle hands to do."

During these days of their surcease from labor, great and favorable opportunities are offered for the extension of Christian kindness and religious influences among them.

Let no Church and no minister of the Gospel overlook the obligation we owe to this peace-time army.

With all we can do we cannot give to these men engaged in the Conservation Corps their homes or their churches while they are engaged in the work to which they have been assigned, but we can give them brotherly sympathy and the Gospel appeal.

Many of them, doubtless, are Christians, holding membership in various-denominations; but ministration should be given them without and distinction of denominational lines. They should be invited into Christian homes and offered the blessings of Christian hospitality.

Some of them, doubtless, have been accustomed to family prayers in the homes out of which they come. Let them be invited into sinless homes where prayer is wont to be made.

Open doors of the Sunday schools and give them the benefit of instruction in the

A CATHOLIC CALLAHAN DEFENDS A PROTESTANT WILSON.

A notable Letter to a Catholic Newspaper

To the Editor of The Catholic Transcript:

Referring to the editorial from the Norwich Record, which you carry on your editorial page and head, "A Dry Villifies the Catholic Hierarchy."

This editorial, which could be just as correctly headed, "A Dry Compliments the Catholic Church," includes a news item which appeared in the Springfield Republican, of which the following is an excerpt:

"Wirthrop, Mass.—Deplored what he called 'the sinister influence of the Roman Catholic hierarchy against Prohibition,' but praising such Catholic laymen as Colonel Callahan and the late Senator Walsh, Dr. Clarence True Wilson today urged the New England Methodist Conference to continue the fight against the repeal of the dry law."

"Dr. Wilson said he loved the Roman Catholic Church and that it was a great and noble institution in many ways, and yet he had to acknowledge that the Catholic hierarchy was exercising a sinister influence against Prohibition. Dr. Wilson said he could not love a blind Methodist leader if he was headed in the wrong direction. But he did love the late Senator Walsh, who said just before his death he would enforce Prohibition."

All of you are making a very great mistake and doing a great injustice when you attempt to put an anti-Catholic tag on Dr. Clarence True Wilson. It must surely be a lack of information, or you have forgotten his going throughout the country in 1927 and 1928 recommending Senator Thomas J. Walsh for the Democratic candidacy.

You must have frequently read in the daily papers of Dr. Wilson expressing "my great hope to see during my lifetime a Catholic elected and presiding as President of our country."

The outstanding effort by Dr. Wilson, made in behalf of Senator Walsh, was some years ago, when a prominent and dry Methodist a very high-class citizen, was selected by the Republicans to oppose the late senator for the Senate in Montana.

A trip to Helena and a conference was held with all the dry leaders, and they were told what a serious blow to Prohibition would be the defeat of Senator Walsh. After which the Methodists, as before, largely voted for our co-religionist.

As to the charge of the hierarchy being opposed and even fighting Prohibition, if you allow your memory to go back a few years you will recollect when different members of the hierarchy quite systematically, every week or so, beginning with three of the four cardinals and including some archbishops and bishops, had interviews in the daily papers, not only criticizing, but some of them very severely condemning Prohibition and prohibitionists.

I am very well aware that your Bishop Nilar and some other members of the hierarchy, several of whom have written me encouragingly, have very little sympathy with liquor and the liquor crowd.

I also know the present Bishop Cassidy was not at that time a member of the hierarchy; but with the above publicity, altogether uniform in its support of the anti-prohibitionists, you cannot find fault with Dr. Wilson or any of our fellow citizens if they misunderstood the official attitude of the Catholic Church on the question of Prohibition.

When the New York World and the Chicago Tribune brought extended stores from Rome and Paris, respectively, that the Holy See was preparing to condemn Prohibition and prohibitionists and to give many reasons why it was inconsistent with Catholic doctrine, I never heard of any member of the hierarchy raising a protest or asking for a correction when it was very obvious these capable messages were only propaganda for the return of liquor.

I have found time to direct and manage perhaps the three leading lay Catholic activities, including the Commission on Religious Prejudices, and was decorated by the holy father for creating better relations between citizens in this country. This, in addition to an interest in truth and justice, compels me to express myself in defense of Clarence True Wilson.

Incidentally it may be news to you to learn that after the 1928 campaign, when the Methodists did so very much and had such a large part in the election of Hoover, the only advice by Dr. Wilson, and his Methodist friends to President Hoover was that he put in the cabinet a Catholic and a Southerner, and urged my appointment.

This thing of branding people anti-Catholic just on the word of their political opponents has already done our fellow Catholics altogether too much damage.

In my opinion the National Catholic Welfare Council could not take up any more important work than to put a stop to it.

Furthermore, it should be made one of the deadly sins.

P. H. CALLAHAN.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE AND PROHIBITION

We re-affirm our faith in the outlawry of the liquor traffic as the ultimate and only satisfactory solution of the problem. We believe any system which recognizes the legal statute of the business is doomed from the beginning. We believe that any system that makes the state a partner in the business through participating in its revenues is immoral and intolerable.

We remind our ministers and our people that thirty or more states prohibit the manufacture, distribution and sale of liquor under their own laws. Should the Eighteenth Amendment be repealed these laws will undoubtedly be the next point of attack. We urge, therefore, that our ministers and churches everywhere take immediate steps to protect, maintain and extend statewide prohibition where it exists and that where other restrictive measures are in force or obtainable, these be given the same support.

We deplore the use of the national administration of the unprecedented powers given to it by the National Recovery Act and other emergency legislation, to coerce the sovereign states and their citizens to vote for repeal.

While we re-affirm our adherence to the principle of outlawry as the ultimate solution of the liquor problems, as Christian citizens we cannot be indifferent to the conditions which may exist in our country at any given moment. We are under no obligation to help those who have destroyed national prohibition to frame substitute legislation. For any efforts in that direction they must assume sole responsibility, but we will exert all the power at our command to compel the enactment of the best possible legislation, rather than permit liquor laws to be framed by brewers, distillers and liquor politicians.

We urge our churches to establish adequate systems of scientific instruction relative to the harmful effects of alcohol upon the individual and upon society, especially through teaching in the home, in the church, school, in young people's organizations and through the public schools.

We deplore the fact that the radio and moving pictures, two of our greatest educational agencies, give so much time and advertisement to things that have a tendency to lower the moral ideal, instead of uplifting the moral life of our people.

A STORY ABOUT BISHOP MARVIN

By Edward White, in the Central Christian Advocate

Enoch Mather Marvin, born in a log cabin in Warren County, Mo., June 12, 1823, became one of the greatest Bishops in the Southern Methodist Church.

While pastor of the Centenary Methodist Church in St. Louis, Mr. Marvin was elected a delegate to attend the General Conference at New Orleans in 1862. A local paper made a note of this. Mr. Marvin was a Southerner. He had not taken the oath of allegiance to the national government, but might be called on any day to do so. A refusal would mean imprisonment.

Marvin procured a horse and managed to get through the lines to Memphis, sometimes with a guide, often without one. He might have taken the oath and remained at home securely with his wife and children. But he said he felt that he was directed to go south by a higher power.

The General Conference was called off before Marvin arrived, and he joined the Southern Army under General Price, as chaplain. There he met Bishop Kavanaugh and the two became fast friends.

While in the South, Chaplain Marvin helped to organize the army church, which was very successful. He was with the soldiers night and day, ministering to the sick and dying and preaching at every chance.

When the war closed, Marvin returned to Missouri, and was given a pastorate at Marshall. There were some national regiments in the town. Ministers and others were being arrested every day.

One day while Marvin and his family were out on the porch an officer and several soldiers in blue approached. Marvin had on a gray uniform he had worn in the Southern army.

Mrs. Marvin and the children became pale. They knew what Marvin had said about his refusal to take the oath, and that his attitude had not changed. They were putting ministers in jail for that.

The officer handed Marvin a paper. The commanding officer requested him to visit the Union camp Sunday and preach to the soldiers.

"But these clothes," said Marvin—"they're all I've got."

"Wear 'em," smiled the officer.

✓ A. H. AHTEN—AN APPRECIATION

By Chas. O. Chalmers

On October 26, 1933, there passed from this life one whose memory I shall cherish as long as I live. Brother A. H. Ahten came to this country from Germany as a youth 19 years of age. Sojourning awhile in the East, he decided to come South and settled in New Orleans, living for a time in the Second District, but eventually purchasing a home in the Carrollton section, where he resided the remainder of his life.

The outstanding qualities in this good man's life were his devotion to Jesus Christ and his sympathetic feeling for his fellowman. On coming to this city he sought out and became connected with the mission work which was being carried on among the German-speaking people by the Methodist Church on Dryades Street. As time moved on, preaching in the German tongue was discontinued by our Church, and it was about this time, in 1883, when Brother Ahten, with the help of others, started a Methodist Sunday school in the Jefferson Courthouse building on Carrollton Avenue, now known as McDonogh School No. 23. This little Sunday school led up to the founding of Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church early in 1886. Brother Ahten was elected steward and trustee of the new church, and when he died was chairman emeritus of the Board of Stewards and chairman of the Board of Trustees. During all of the years of service as steward, trustee and off-and-on as Sunday school superintendent, he was foremost and diligent in promoting the cause of Christ and the interests of His church.

Brother Ahten was an humble man who knew his limitations. He did not have the advantages of an education, but he was rich in religious experience and brotherly love. He believed in stepping aside when there was some one available whom he thought was more efficient than himself. He was the personification of humility without being conscious of it, and his earnestness and devotion to his Master brought him position and honor in the church which he preferred others might have. He was constant and liberal in the support of his local church.

By his unselfish generosity and kindly feeling for others, Brother Ahten helped many a young man to attain success in this material life as well as hope in the life to come. A young man who had just ventured into the business world sought Brother Ahten that he might endorse a note for him. Without asking a question, Brother Ahten said that he preferred loaning the young man the money, and on the following morning he traveled twelve miles to accommodate the young man and handed him ten $100 bills. This is cited as one instance only, and was by no means the greatest of his benefactions; for they were many and varied.

Brother Ahten was happily married to Miss Wilhelmina Stangier, with whom he lived fifty-seven years, she having preceded him to the better land in 1928. Brother and Sister Ahten reared a large family, of whom two daughters, six sons, twenty-nine grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren survive. Brother Ahten wrought well, and lived to the ripe old age of 83. May his soul enter into the joy of his Lord.

CHURCH GIVING, IN PROSPERITY AND DEPRESSION

The total contributions to the Protestant churches of the United States in 1932 were $378,000,000, in round numbers, according to a study made for the conference of the promotional executives of the principal denominations, held in New York under the auspices of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America on September 27.

The figures on the giving to the churches were contained in a research study on trends in church finance, made for the conference by A. C. Marts, president of Marts & Lundy, Inc., a well-known New York firm of financial counsellors.

The contributions to the churches in 1932, as analyzed by Mr. Marts, were approximately forty per cent below those in 1929, as compared with a larger drop of fifty-four per cent in the national income during the same period. The fact that the giving to the churches had declined less than the income of the nation during the depression was interpreted as an exceedingly hopeful sign.

The 1929 contributions to the churches were reported as $581,000,000, falling to $378,000,000 in 1932. The 1929 national income was eighty-five billions; the 1932 national income was set at forty billions.

The advantage which the churches have enjoyed in suffering a smaller decline than the national income was, however, set over against the fact of the small amount of the churches' share at any time. The total share of the churches in the national income during any of the years for which Mr. Marts had gathered data was not quite one per cent. Moreover, the churches did not share at all in the special growth of national income during the "boom" years 1927 to 1929. On the contrary, the income of the churches actually declined about three per cent during those years.

Expenditures for recreation in the United States, on the other hand, during 1927 to 1929 greatly increased. Since 1929 the expenditures for recreation have equally rapidly declined, the drop being sixty-five per cent.

Commenting on the significance of the figures presented by Mr. Marts, Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, General Secretary of the Federal Council, said:

"It is highly significant that in the so-called 'era of prosperity,' when the national income was shooting upward to its highest peak, none of the increased resources flowed into the channels of Christian service. The people had more money, but apparently the surplus was spent for personal indulgence and the satisfaction of material wants. But when the period of the depression came the people stood by the Church with noteworthy loyalty. Hard-pressed though they were, they did not, in the aggregate, curtail their gifts to the Church as much as their income had been curtailed. This is most heartening evidence of the hold that the Church still has on the hearts of the people."—Federal Council of Churches.

CHAPLAIN BODDIE RENDERS REPORT

U. S. V. Hospital No. 27, Pineville, La., 1933

This has been a hard year to serve the Hospital as chaplain, due to shortage in finances. The General Board cut off its appropriation after the first month of the year, and the Conference Board only making a $100 appropriation, and the Pineville Church running far below its usual amount, has made it hard to serve. Yet in spite of this handicap, in many ways it has been our best year. Though I have not made as many regular visits as usual, I have had my special trips that were most helpful.

The Hospital has from 323 to 399 patients all the time. Monthly entries range from 49 to 180. Deaths per month range from 0 to 14. There have been 73 deaths this year. Among them have been some of our finest Christian men, one of whom was Rev. J. E. Cunningham, a Superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference. I have tried to be faithful to these brethren in representing our Church.

The problem of ministering to the families of these sick men is a hard one and demands much time and attention as they are away from home and friends, and only a preacher can do for them some things that must be looked after. There are always family and domestic problems among them that are very delicate and require patience and care. Only a pastor of such cases can understand what it is.

The problem of a place for them to worship is a big one. Many of these families live in little cottages or apartments near the Hospital, and are two and three miles from any church. I have secured funds and purchased a good lot on Highway No. 71, located in the middle of this little community, and secured funds and material to begin a small chapel. The foundation is laid, but due to the economic depression over the country I was forced to stop work. It is hoped that we can secure funds early this year to complete this chapel. Five hundred dollars will complete it.

I believe that it would be wise for the Board of Missions to ask permission of the Conference to complete this task, then we could do something worthwhile for these distressed families of our "war heroes."

I believe that this Board should appropriate not less than $300.00 to the support of a chaplain for this work.

D. B. BODDIE, Chaplain.

HONOR FOR PAINE COLLEGE

Friends of Negro education in the South will rejoice with Paine College, Augusta, Ga., for its splendid record during the economic depression. It has maintained a balanced budget, has not reduced the salaries of its faculty, and has kept out of debt. For these achievements the college has been placed on the Honor Roll of the Association of American Colleges, of which it is a member.

Few American institutions can equal Paine's record in maintaining financial stability during the past two years. President E. C. Peters attributed the success of Paine to three factors—the loyalty and support of the two supporting groups, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Colored Methodist Church, the extra care of the administration in reducing expenditures, and the careful plan of collecting tuition and fees. He adds that out of $20,000 charged annually for tuition and fees, less than $100 is unpaid at the end of the year. When we consider the limited means of the students and the additional economies the depression has forced upon them, we wonder if there is another college in the country which can equal this fine record both of the management and of the loyalty of students to Paine College.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

DR. W. W. DRAKE

We, the members of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, in regular annual session assembled, note, with a sense of great loss and a feeling of deep grief, the absence of Dr. W. W. Drake, whose home-going occurred July 27, 1933.

We hereby convey to Mrs. Drake and sons and other loved ones this expression of our appreciation of the genial comradeship of Dr. Drake and of his valuable counsel as a member of this body.

We ask that a copy of the record of this action be preserved in our minutes, a copy sent to Mrs. Drake, and a copy printed in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Respectfully submitted,

W. L. DUREN,
D. B. RAULINS,
Committee.

TO THE LADIES

Apparently there has been some misunderstanding about space in the Advocate for Woman's Missionary Society news. This is to correct it.

Upon the advice of the Publishing Committee, the stock pages were discontinued. This was recommended upon the feeling that many of our readers passed over the valuable material on these pages because they felt that they had no interest in these matters.

It is the desire of the Advocate to use just as much good news material from the Missionary Society as we can secure. And this material will appear in our regular columns.

You may continue, therefore, to send your news matter to our editor, Mrs. H. McMillan, Newton Infirmary, Newton, Miss.

Let this principle guide you in the selection of your material. It should have news value and interest for as nearly the whole range of our readers as possible. We are very anxious to secure news of your special plans and achievements.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE

Thanksgiving is a day of special significance at MacDonell School. Its observance is traditional: a sunrise service, then breakfast and a leisurely doing of necessary chores and preparation for church, the Thanksgiving service in one of the Protestant churches in town, the barbecue dinner prepared by the boys, field day exercises and games in the afternoon, more feasting, guests, a long leisurely evening, and bed.

The sunrise service, planned and conducted by Deaconess Bessie Williams, was a beautiful, worshipful presentation in pageant form and symbolism of God's love and His blessings. Our hearts were stirred by the simple, reverent prayer responses by the students, giving thanks "for friends all over the state who make it possible for us to be here," "for the new building which means so much to the school," "for the church through which is felt the influence of Christ." We, the teachers, could have added a thanksgiving for the joy of having a share in opening up this new life of gladness and strength to the young people of the school. You, too, who have shared the burden will share in the rejoicing of this hour.

MacDONELL SCHOOL TO DEDICATE NEW BUILDING

The new building at MacDonell School, Houma, La., a dormitory for girls, which is a result of the Week of Prayer offering of last year, is now completed and ready for use. It is a beautiful building, comfortable and convenient, and will be a blessing to the work for many years to come.

Thursday, January 4, is set as the day for the dedication. Mrs. J. W. Downs, Secretary of the Woman's Work, Home Department of the Board of Missions, is to be the principal speaker. Other distinguished guests will participate in the service. All friends of the school are invited to be present on this happy occasion.

OF INTEREST TO PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS AND PUPILS

An announcement of general interest to public school teachers and pupils in the Southern states has just been made by the Conference on Education and Race Relations, an organization of Southern educators, which is offering a number of substantial awards to teachers, schools, and pupils participating in a simple educational project entitled "America's Tenth Man." Twenty-five dollars will be paid the pupil writing the best paper on this subject, fifty dollars will go to the school doing the best work, and fifty dollars to the principal or teacher directing the winning project. There will be fifteen additional awards, each consisting of a valuable "Tenth Man Library," to the fifteen schools, one in each state, reporting the most effective work. Any pupil or teacher interested may get full information from R. B. Eleazer, Secretary of the Conference, 703 Standard Building, Atlanta.

BISHOP ARTHUR MOORE RECOMMENDS

Mr. O. W. Stapleton whose home address is 1507 East 14th Street, Tulsa, Okla., was my associate for ten years. Four years in the evangelistic work and throughout the six years of my ministry at Travis Park Church, San Antonio, as my assistant and director of music, and for many years specialized in all types of church music and holding of services for children, in recent years he has been associated with some of our larger churches as assistant to the pastor, director of music and finance. He is a Christian gentleman with an attractive personality and a beautiful voice.

Brother Stapleton informs me that he plans to devote all of his time to the evangelistic work. I desire to commend him to our pastors everywhere. Any church will be fortunate to have his splendid services in a series of meetings, always constructive, he will do only good. He is a local preacher and can do a part or all of the preaching in a meeting if necessary.

ARTHUR J. MOORE.

OUR DUTY TO OUR PEACE-TIME ARMY

Word of God. If no Sunday school or church be near their camps, let someone organize a Sunday school in the camp and give to it Christian teachers, if there cannot be found in the camp sufficient number of godly and capable men to teach.

The government proposes to build such temporary structures for the benefit of these men as their needs may require. Some of these buildings could be easily used for the purposes of worship and the work of a Sunday school.

Into all these details, however, it is not needless to go. Men who love God and their fellow-men will find ways to do this important work; and they will do it without specific programs being framed for them.

IT SEEMS TO ME that the President's Thanksgiving Proclamation for 1933 strikes a different note from that marking those of our rather near past. We have grown accustomed to the "basket and store" kind of proclamation in which we are urged to come together in our churches to thank God for the things with which we are blest. Of course Mr. Roosevelt does not discount this emphasis, but this year it certainly does not occupy the foreground or enjoy such specific and all-important status.

Go with me and let's look into the Proclamation. For what does the President urge us to give thanks?

After a statement, a rather general one, as to the "blessings bestowed upon us during the year past," he says, "May we recall the courage of those who settled a wilderness." (I put these words in heavy type so you won't overlook them.)

Now, courage is a spiritual quality that certainly does not depend for its support upon a material foundation. It is something that we need in all circumstances. And especially do we need it now.

"The vision of those who founded the nation." In the Old Book you will hear a man saying, "Where there is no vision the people perish." Where there is no spiritual insight, no high idealism; no grasp of things eternal; the people become a mob, they stampede and accomplish their own ruin.

"The steadfastness of those who in every succeeding generation have fought to keep pure the idea of equality of opportunity and hold clear the goal of mutual help in time of prosperity as in time of adversity." That is pretty strong preaching and stronger practice.

"May we ask guidance in more surely learning the ancient truth that greed and selfishness and striving for undue riches can never bring happiness or good to the individual or to his neighbors." The Man of Galilee taught something like that.

"May we be grateful for the passing of the dark days, for the new spirit of dependence on one another; for the closer unity of all parts of our wide land; for the greater friendship between employers and those who toil; for a clearer knowledge of all nations that we seek no conquests and ask only honorable engagements by all peoples to respect the lands and rights of their neighbors; for the brighter day to which we can win through by seeking the help of God in a more unselfish striving for the common bettering of mankind."

Did you make these things the causes for your Thanksgiving? Courage, vision, steadfastness, equality of opportunity, mutual help, guidance, futility of greed and selfishness, interdependence, closer unity, greater friendship, clearer knowledge, honorable engagements, and the brighter day to be achieved by seeking the help of God. Quite a big program, isn't it? But the President would have us know that Almighty God underwrites it and will empower us to achieve it.

NO. NO. GOVERNOR ROLFE! Surely you do not mean what the papers report that you said. Thurmond and Holmes, kidnapers and slayers of Brooke Hart, a young man of San Jose, California, having confessed the crime, were being held in prison. A mob was organized, the jail doors battered down, the prisoners taken out and hanged. The ghastly finale to the kidnaping was witnessed, so it is reported, by 6,000 people, half of whom were girls and women.

Following the lynching, Governor Rolfe is reported to have commended the mob and stated that nothing should be done to those who participated in it. Following the statement of the Governor, several came forward to claim the honor of leading the mob. One young man claimed that, after taking a drink of whiskey to inspire him with the necessary courage, he went out and organized the mob.

Not a great many hours later a mob of 7,000 stormed the St. Joseph, Mo., prison and lynched a nineteen-year-old Negro for a confessed attack upon a white woman. But those in power took a different attitude in this case.

Is mob violence and lynching to have the approval and praise of those whom we have elected to public office for the purpose of the enforcement of the law and orderly procedure of courts of justice? If so, the final defeat of law and order and the enthronement of violence are assured. The tragic limits of such procedure no one can prophesy.

Let no one interpret this statement as commendation or toleration of the crimes of which these prisoners were guilty. The actions of the courts should be accelerated and speedy justice meted out. But may God save us from taking the trail that leads back to irresponsible barbarism.

THE CHURCH AND STATE war is on in Germany. Already the pressure of the Hitler regime is being felt as he seeks to forge the Protestant church into a tool of the government. Already revolt is breaking out among church leaders. The question of the supremacy in the German Protestant church is up for settlement. In 3000 non-Nazi churches prayers for two pastors charged with attack upon a Nazi Christian leader are reported to have been conducted.

The position of the Catholic church in Germany is somewhat different from that of the Protestant. Its force will probably, if expressed, be found upon the side of the revolting Protestants.

This issue, now to the fore in Germany, gives occasion for all churches to consider the place of organized Christianity in the making of the new world, which is now under way. There is a great flare-back of extreme nationalism which may be counted upon to give us trouble for some time. No nation can longer conduct its affairs, however important, contrary to the general good. Of course, that nation which enjoys the most stable national integrity should be best fitted for negotiation looking toward the larger fellowship of nations, but the line between the welfare of one nation and that of all the rest can no longer be drawn as exclusively as it was in a time of less intimate and less irritable contacts; in a time when the world community was so much smaller.

In this period of augmented national self-consciousness, when possibilities of explosion lurk in many places, the Christian church has three ways open to it. Which of these will it take?

First, the Christian church may choose to become "otherworldly." That is, it may decide that it really has no stake in the political affairs of the world. Its task is to retire from any share in molding public sentiment or having any share in political life. Once more the monastery will beckon to many. They will wish to take the church out of the world in order to save it, forgetting that it is not the business of the church to save itself, but to give itself, as did Jesus, for the world.

A second way is that of partisan participation in national affairs making itself an arm of the government in which it happens to be operating. By this stand it loses its identity as the champion of the supremacy of the universal and spiritual. The church in each country tends to take the political coloring of that country. In attempting to underwrite the political principles and methods of a country, it becomes speechless as a spokesman for the Kingdom of God.

But there is another possibility for the Christian church, and that is by way of prophetic championship of the universal spiritual elements of human life involved. With a non-partisan but fully informed conviction of righteousness in a world of more intimate relationships it must lead the way to the new order of things.

No church that closes its eyes to political, social, industrial and economic conditions; no church that cuts itself to fit the policies of a particular country, can speak to this age. Let us take note of that.

I BELIEVE YOU ARE headed the wrong way, Bishop Shaw.

I notice in the morning paper that you, the chief representative of the Roman Catholic Church in New Orleans, are quoted as approving a resolution of the Federation of Catholic Societies of Louisiana favoring a distribution among the Catholic schools of a share of the taxes collected for educational purposes.

I can sympathize with you in the desire for more funds with which to support our church institutions. These days are hard on us. You are probably not in as bad shape as we Protestants are if rumors as to Catholic ability to get money be true.

And I realize that the parents of the children of your church schools have paid a big share of those taxes, and that your children in parochial schools receive no benefit from them. That does look a little hard. Seems that a great many of our church institutions may have to close unless the people rally to them with better financial support. Such a procedure, as I see it, prophesies no good for the country.

Furthermore I agree with you, I think, in your emphasis upon the importance of Christian education such as the church offers. I do not see how the public school is going to be of much help to us along that line without some changes. If religion is essential to the preservation and progress of the country it does seem that we should have some better recognition from the government.

But I cannot agree with you in asking that the government divide the taxes of the public schools with us. This is a part of the price we must pay both for our form of government and for the privilege of our religious differences.

If you will permit me to make a suggestion it is this: Let us abandon our religious exclusiveness, or our exclusiveness in religion, and let us get together in a great comprehensive program of Christian leadership that will justify the support of private funds sufficient to keep our schools going, and let us do the job of Christian education so well that the country will be brought out of its present dilemma into a great new day of deepened and enlarged fellowships.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. T. B. Thrower, the new pastor at Central Church, Columbus, Miss., has entered upon his work with promise of a very fruitful pastorate.

Rev. Otto Porter, new presiding elder of the Meridian District, with his family, is now settled in the parsonage home at 2701 Ninth Street, Meridian.

"The Parables of Jesus" is the special prayer meeting theme being used by Dr. L. L. Cowen, pastor Central Church, Meridian, Miss. This great church is already catching the stride for the new conference year.

Rev. R. G. Moore, the new pastor at Leland, Miss., has entered upon his work with a spirit of whole-hearted co-operation from his people. Leland has one of the commodious modern churches of the Conference.

In North Mississippi Conference, December 31 was designated as College Day, when information relative to Grenada College will be given in every church in the Conference and the offering taken will be given to the college.

Rev. and Mrs. G. W. Dameron and son have taken over the work at Crowley, La. While some repairs are being made at the parsonage, the Damerons are spending a few days at the Rice Hotel. A great year is anticipated.

The officers of the Aberdeen District Preachers' Meeting this year are: T. E. Gregory, president; C. T. Floyd, vice-president; G. H. Boyles, secretary. The first meeting will be held at Vardaman, January 9. Dr. H. F. Brooks will be the preacher of the occasion.

Dr. O. E. Kriege, president of New Orleans University, delivered a most timely and telling sermon at the Union Methodist Thanksgiving Service held at First Church. This year the pastors and people of both Methodisms came together for this great service.

The work of the church at New Albany, Miss., under the leadership of Rev. J. H. Holder, has consistently grown during every year. Especially is that true of Sunday school attendance. Although they have a new church building with ample facilities for all types of work, it is crowded even now to take care of the people.

Why not take time for a course of study? "The American Institute of Sacred Literature," of the University of Chicago, is offering a course called "The Re-constructive Forces of the Chris-

LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE ON THE MARCH

By Lydel Sims

This week is Local Department Week, evidently. Read what these other Young People are doing, and if you're better, just let us know!

Miss Pauline Rodgers, Shreveport District Director, writes to tell of the Noel Memorial Young People's doings. They recently graduated a large class into the Young Adult Department organized for them. These Young Adult Departments are getting to be quite "the thing!" Does your church need one? If it does, that'd be a good project for you to undertake!

Noel is doing even more. Listen to this: "A Thanksgiving Fellowship banquet is being planned for the Noel Young People and they are expecting a record-breaking crowd. This is one of the most progressive groups to be found anywhere, and their plans for the winter are very attractive. Recently, department pictures were taken and hung on the walls. The budget system is working splendidly and provides for a well-rounded program of activities."

That department picture idea would bear trial in a lot of places, we'll bet!

President Juanita Funderbuck of the Wisner Young People, tells us that they have been fortunate enough to have Miss Edith Skinner, of Simsboro, La., for their Young People's Revival. She brought them a series of most inspiring messages for a period of two weeks. The Wisner Young People were delighted with her services. A Cross Service was one of her most inspiring. Many people were touched, and many lives were consecrated. The Wisner Young People have lost one of their most devoted members in the death of their Secretary. They feel their loss heavily, but rejoice in the example of the life that has been before them.

The Mansfield young people are in the very best of spirits, as shown by this letter from Florence Murphy, Publicity Agent.

"Do you believe in 'shoutin'' in church? The young people of the First Methodist Church didn't until they heard the announcement made that Brother and Mrs. Hicks were staying in Mansfield. If you don't believe we're proud of our pastor and his wife—just make us a visit some time. 'Oh where, oh where is 'Ba Thane,' better known in Mansfield as Hadly Heard? Well, if you must know, he has accepted a position as manager of Morgan and Lindsey's in Minden. Even though he is a Baptist, we regret very much having to lose him, since he was the main character in the playlet 'Ba Thane.' The remaining cast: Misses Earl Cowley, Betty Smith, and Florence Murphy, Mrs. Hicks, and Messrs. Monk Tainter and Murry Kidd—feel that this is more than a tragedy in their life. Believe it or not, we had planned to put it on again in Mansfield, and then go on Broadway!"

And say, as soon as we get the complete "dope" on the doings of the famous "Ba Thane" cast, we'll let you know just what a great success they've made of it since first performing at Mansfield Assemblies this summer!

Miss Edith Skinner, mentioned above, who is Publicity Agent of the Everready Union, tells of the activities of two of the Everready Leagues: "The Young People's Department of Simsboro helped the Woman's Missionary Society in observing Christian Fellowship Week, November 13-19. Through the Christian Social Relations Committee a party, 'A Trip Around the World,' was planned and enjoyed by the young people, November 17. 'World Fellowship' by Lucile McGregor was the attractive pageant they presented to a large audience of neighboring young and older people, November 19. Miss Shelia Nuttall and Mrs. J. P. Jones were directors. "Thanksgiving morning, at 7:30, the Antioch Young People met in a very impressive service at the Antioch Church. Mary Dring was responsible for the beautiful meeting."

And getting off the subject of local departments at the close, we'll just whisper that there are plans abroad in at least two Unions for Union papers—and one of these plans to make theirs district-wide. We'd like to see a paper for every Union in the state before summer. As soon as there are developments, we'll let you know; in the meantime, does your Union have a paper? Think it over; if you'd like a sample of another Union publication let me know! Natchitoches, La.

EDITOR'S TROUSERS RETURNED

At the Mansfield Young People's Assembly in June, 1933, it was rumored for some days that the Editor of the Advocate, who enjoyed an honorable place on the faculty, had lost some pants, trousers and breeches. They seemingly had mysteriously disappeared from the Boys' Dormitory. The matter created for the Editor a vigorous type of sympathy and active concern as it was well known that his wardrobe was on a depression schedule just at the time. Careful search was made in all quarters. At one time it looked as though the whole Assembly would be thrown into turmoil over the tragedy.

Finally the disturbance got into the papers. A lady from far California wrote expressing sympathy.

Well, first and last and finally, the episode became a tradition, a legend and a myth. One report circulated a few weeks after the disappearance of the personal property was to the effect that, upon arrival home, the Editor found his trousers just where they had been left, and that they had not been to Mansfield at all.

The latest development came when, at the meeting of the Young People's Union of New Orleans, just prior to Annual Conference, each local pastor was presented with some token of esteem and good wishes. A beautiful package bearing the famous name of a prominent clothing store on Canal Street, was presented to the Editor. Hello! A pair of trousers!

But—they were only about six inches in the waist and six inches in length. But, again, they were of the choicest material and equipped with pearl buttons.

WESTERN CLERGY BUREAU ANNOUNCES REDUCED RATES

Effective December 1, 1933, the fare for holders of Western Clergy Certificates will be one-half of the one-way fare instead of two-thirds of the one-way fare.

The fares to the general public will be reduced generally, effective December 1, 1933, and, therefore, the reduction on the basis for clergy fares from two-thirds fare to one-half fare will make a material reduction in the cost to the clergy for travel on the railroads in Western territory.

The one-way first-class fare in the West for the general public will be reduced from 3.6c per mile to 3c per mile. Therefore, while the fare for clergy heretofore has been 2.4c per mile, the new fare will be 1½c per mile, first-class.

The one-way coach fares—that is, fares for tickets good for travel in coaches only—for the general public will be reduced from a general basis of 3.6c per mile to 2c per mile, and whereas, clergy in the past have been compelled to pay 2.4c per mile for coach tickets, under the new arrangement, effective December 1, the fare will be 1c per mile for tickets good in coaches only.

In addition, the surcharge for travel in sleeping and parlor cars will be eliminated. That also will effect a material reduction in the cost for clergy desiring to secure that service. For example: Where it has previously cost a clergyman $3.75 for a lower berth, including surcharge, the cost for a lower berth between the same points, effective December 1, will be $2.50. That reduction, together with the general reduction in the railroad charge, should make railroad travel by clergymen more attractive and should permit them to make additional necessary trips which may have been avoided in the past, due to the thought that railroad charges were too high.

Clergy application blanks for certificates for 1934 are now being placed in the hands of local railroad agents; however, clergy certificates for 1933 will be honored during the month of December at the new low fares referred to herein. The clergy certificates for 1934 will be good for the new low fares commencing January 1, 1934.

THE DEEPER SIGNIFICANCE OF THE CCC

By Jay Elmer Morgan

The Civilian Conservation Corps concerns educational workers especially. It is a fine thing to round up 300,000 unemployed young men from the streets of our American cities and to give them occupation in the open air with a wage which will help to support their dependent families. It is a fine thing to clear up the forests, to plant trees, and to stop soil erosion. But the CCC involves much more than this. It involves the federal administration of youth. The immediate advantages of the CCC are more easily understood than its deeper significance.

This deeper significance may be seen by projecting that enterprise forward. Suppose that due to inescapable conditions of unemployment, the term of enlistment is extended from six months to twelve months, and then extended again for a year or two or three. Suppose that instead of 300,000 youths the number becomes 500,000, a million, two million, and more. The social and educational significance of the CCC would then become far more important than its economic significance. We would have taken from their families, away from their local neighborhoods, schools, and occupations, the flower of American youth. We would have taught them to look to the federal government, to accept army leadership and mass management of their whole lives. These are not financial possibilities. They are very real. They suggest the need for more vigorous action on the part of localities and states to care for their own young people and to see that their roots strike deep into the soil of family and neighborhood life, which in the end must be the foundation of any stable civilization.—Journal of the National Education Association.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

Plans are being made by the Civil Works Administration, the United States Public Health Service and the State Board of Health for the construction of sanitary toilets in unscreened areas, and for malaria control, with a view toward eliminating health hazards and at the same time to furnish worthy work projects for the unemployed.

It is expected that material will be furnished by the owner or tenant, supervision furnished by the Louisiana State Board of Health and the United States Public Health Service, and labor by the Civil Works Administration.

You should be interested in getting some permanent improvement for your community.

Please let us have as soon as possible as much information as you can regarding character and amount of work desired.

Yours for better health,
J. A. O'HARA, President.
Louisiana State Board of Health.

DON'TS FOR HUNTERS

Advice pertinent to the Season by Mississippi State Superintendent of Education

Right soon the hunting season will be in full blast and we shall read daily in the papers about someone shot and killed—accidentally. As one who has handled guns for many years and who has never had but one accident, I feel in a way competent to give a few suggestions to hunters on this matter for whatever they may be worth:

1. Do not ever at any time under any circumstances point a gun, loaded or empty, at anyone else or yourself.
2. Upon entering a car, boat, wagon, camp or house, always unload your gun.
3. Never shoot unless you are absolutely certain that you know what you are shooting at and be sure never to shoot unless you know you are not shooting toward some other member of your party whom you perhaps cannot see on account of bushes or other obstruction. If you fail to observe this precaution you may kill your best friend.
4. Never grab a gun by the muzzle and pull it through or over a fence after you. Put the gun through first.
5. While standing on logs, stumps or other elevations, keep the muzzle of the gun pointed downward and never upward. Don't rest muzzle of gun on your foot.
6. When traveling through the woods with others, keep the gun pointed either up or down. Keep safety on at all times except when you are actually firing at something.
7. When you stop to rest remember that if you leave the safety off your dog may step on the trigger or knock the gun down if it is leaning against a tree.
8. Do not be shooting at random and do not hunt on anybody's place without permission.

9. Don't mix liquor with ammunition.—Weekly News Letter.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. LANGFORD'S, A LIFE OF STEWARDSHIP

On October 15, 1933, our friend and co-worker, Mrs. J. W. Langford, passed into the great beyond. While we feel our loss very keenly yet her influence will live on through the endless ages and the example of her life is our heritage—a heritage more valuable than gold—Her life stood out as a "Light set upon a hill"—a light whose radiance permeated, not only every phase of church work, but every life it touched.

Mrs. Langford accepted God as the owner of all things—believed His words, "the world is mine and the fullness thereof" as well as, "All souls are mine." She emphasized the sovereignty of God by accepting Christian stewardship as dealing with the whole of her life—her means, time, talents, influence and service—all the factors of life.

The stewardship of giving she made a means of spiritual growth, giving sacrificially—never thinking of self. Her time belonged to God and when duty called was ready to say, "Lord here am I, send me." Her influence with children was marvelous. Every child loved her and she would become as a little child in order to reach them, then would hold Jesus up in such a way that He drew them to Him. The stars in her crown—the stars which represent little souls won for Jesus must be "as the sand of the sea" almost. Many people have halved memories of days past when they sat at the feet of Mrs. Langford and learned about God. Am sure she felt as did Alma F. Korengal.

"I do not ask that I shall ever stand Among the wise, the worthy, or the great,
I only ask that safely, hand in hand A child and I may enter at Thy gate."

This sainted woman had unwavering faith in God and some of her prayers of faith will yet be answered. For fifty years her devotion to and services through the church was not surpassed—never satisfied with less than her best for God. Like John, she felt, "My Father worketh hitherto and I work."

Our dear friend, with falling hands—hands that hath "wrought for God," has thrown this flaming torch of service to the women of the Methodist Church of Gibsland—Shall we break faith with her and with the God whom she served?

MRS. C. G. BYRD.

On Monday, October 30, at 1:00 o'clock, the beautiful Christian life of mother, MRS. SARAH A. TATUM, came to an end. She was ninety-two years and eleven months of age. The services were held at the Baptist Church, Oak Grove, La., and she was laid to rest in the Oak Grove cemetery. They were conducted by her pastor, Rev. Walter Holey and Rev. T. J. Holladay, Methodist minister.

For the last four years she had been an invalid, under the care of her daughter, Mrs. T. W. Pattison. She bore her afflictions with great Christian fortitude. She was glad to have any of her children with her at all times.

We miss her so much, even though we know she welcomed death with outstretched arms. We will hear her sweet prayers no more at night, but they will follow her children and grandchildren throughout their lives.

We hated to say "good-bye, dear, sweet mother," but we know God makes no mistakes, and we know that you are at rest. Your presence lingers on and we remember kind deeds each day of our lives. All was done that loving hands could do. God calls thee home. He knew best.

HER CHILDREN.

MRS. JULIA LEWERS MURPHY was born in Tate County, Miss., August 13, 1849. She gave her heart to God in her early teens and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. She was the daughter of Col. Thomas Lewers, and in 1869 she was married to J. H. Murphy, who was a soldier in Col. Lewers' regiment.

To this union was born five children. One died in early manhood, and those surviving are as follows: Mrs. J. A. Still, Senatobia, Miss.; W. A. Murphy, Strayhorn, Miss.; Dr. H. L. Murphy, Arkabutla, Miss.; and Mrs. S. A. Bimingsley, Looxahoma, Miss.

Mrs. Murphy fell asleep peacefully November 6, 1933, in her home in Looxahoma, Miss., after an illness of two weeks. Funeral services were conducted at Mt. Vernon Church by Rev. P. F. Luter, of Senatobia, assisted by Rev. A. L. Davenport, of Tyro, Miss.

The writer was Mrs. Murphy's pastor for more than two years. Her home was a home for preachers. She was always gracious and cordial to all. She was loyal to her church and her Christ. To know her was to love her because of her sweet Christian character and her friendliness to one and all. "The memory of the just is blessed."

Cold that Hangs On

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation; while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, and attacks the seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Your own druggist is authorized to refund your money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Creomulsion. (adv.)

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

THE THREE WISE MEN arrived in our city somewhat in advance of Christmas, but not too soon. They have been long in coming. The distance they have traveled is not to be measured by miles, but by years, by centuries. It was a mental and spiritual pilgrimage and the way has been blocked by prejudice and misunderstanding. But they arrived and their coming means the dawn of a new day. Only a small crowd welcomed them and no parades were held in their honor. Still they seemed glad. They came to give instead of get.

They came from widely separated points of thought and feeling and tradition. In fact, it was once thought, and is still thought by some, that they live in walled cities of thought and endeavor; and that it was hardly intended that they should ever meet. In fact they have seemed to feel that they did not need to meet, and that they had little need of one another. They lived in separate worlds, as it were. Between these worlds there have been centuries of conflict and misunderstanding. But one day these three men set out for a common goal. So they met. And since then they have journeyed across America together.

Meet these wise men, will you? They are interpreters of a better understanding and the prophets of a greater tomorrow.

There they sit, side by side, on the platform; on the face of each, a smile of happy fellowship. Did they come to your town? Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron, Father John Elliott Ross, and Rev. Everett R. Clinchy; a Jewish rabbi, a Roman Catholic priest and a Protestant preacher; all belonging to the apostolate of understanding and goodwill.

As Rabbi Lazaron spoke, centuries looked out from his eyes, and one was made to feel that he was a true son of Abraham in the journey that he was taking. When Father Ross spoke, symbols and centuries were heard in his voice. And when Dr. Clinchy spoke, one felt that Protestant Christianity has a greater function than protest. Back of them all was something older than their histories and without which their histories cannot be complete. That something was the need for understanding and goodwill.

CHRISTMAS THIS YEAR should be celebrated in terms of its larger spiritual dimensions. For too long it has been limited to rather small if not pagan bounds. It has been a signal for feasting and frolic, and a time for the giving and receiving of gifts.

We might make it a time for an approach to a better perspective of the world and times in which we live. Many things have broken up and passed away. Some of us are still trying to hold on to fragments of a day that is gone. Let us note both the decided contraction and the infinite expansion of the world in which we live. No longer is anyone free to "let the rest of the world go by."

And we might spend some thought on the problems that are ours as a nation. As the program of relief and reconstruction goes forward, let us try to see into the "ins and outs" of things. Have we not put an unbalanced emphasis upon "prosperity?" Can we as church people afford

THE CHRISTMAS STORY

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

And, lo, the Angel of the Lord came upon them and the glory of the Lord shone around about them, and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them, Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you: Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God, and saying,

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known to us.

And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.

And all that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.—Luke 2:8-20.

to overlook the indispensability of spiritual regeneration? Just how does the church fit into the situation?

Surely we shall preserve the sweet and tender sentiments of the day. But sentiment should not be substituted for the urgent practicalities involved. There is such a thing as being selfish even in our sentiments and prejudiced in our emotions. The greatest self-realization comes through the greatest self-giving.

And let us not forget, after the hustle of Christmas shopping is over, and the evergreen is in place, and the candles lighted, and the fire is crumbling to coals in the fireplace, to pause; and that in the quiet, while you are being visited by troops of memories, kaleidoscopically shifting, sad and sweet; that it is a time for consecration. We have not yet redeemed the prophetic pledges and promises symbolized by the Christ-Child, nor liquidated the obligations of our faith either in our own individual lives or in the wider community of the world. And this must be done if the light is still to shine over the Manger of Bethlehem. It is a time for consecration.

THEY ARE OVER, our Annual Conference sessions for 1933.

Well, maybe not. The business routine is over, the preachers have made their reports, their characters have been passed, and they have been assigned to their old or new posts of work for the coming year. The delegates to the 1934 General Conference have been elected and are now looking forward to the day of its opening. The boards and committees have had their meetings and have made their reports. The bishop has read the appointments. We have adjourned sine die.

But this is not the whole story of an Annual Conference, nor even the major part of the drama of the church. Not only does the Annual Conference reveal what has been done; it also rather painfully reveals what has not been done. While some of the reports gave cause for gratification, to thoughtful observers there was much to sober if not sadden us. Just what, for instance, was there in the reports to encourage us about the welfare of our superannuates, the advancement of missions, the progress of Christian education, to hearten us for a more intelligent, aggressive and sacrificial attack upon the whole task of the church for our time?

Bishop, I move that we re-arrange this Annual Conference business. Of course I leave it to you to work out the plan. We preachers are pretty well satisfied to come up year after year with our reports and receive our appointments. Really, we haven't accomplished much to "report." Sometimes the less we have done the longer the report. A big part of the time we are thinking about our "appointments." We just don't seem to be able to give ourselves fully to the Conference.

How would it do to make the appointments in the interim between Annual Conference sessions and then come up to an annual meeting unhampered by this and some other business matters? Let all hands, including statistical secretaries, come in and participate in prayer, discussion, preaching and a study of the particular matters with which the Conference is faced.

Yes, we are "crowded for time." Seems that it will soon be necessary for us to give our whole time to business and let spiritual interests go.

Let us do something about it.

LET METHODISTS MOBILIZE!

By Bishop Arthur J. Moore

When I was appointed to direct the 1934 Kingdom Extension Cultivation, I gave serious study to the responsibility. I realized, what indeed all thoughtful Christians know, that while the panic is immediately responsible for the sad condition of our benevolent work, back of it all there is a spiritual factor. Vital religious experience and a liberal support of Church enterprises are bound up together. It is fallacious to declare that if we have one, the other will automatically follow, for neither can exist without the other.

That spiritual life is at a low ebb is a fact so obvious that it needs no discussion. In the Kingdom Extension cultivation, therefore, I shall do my utmost to call the Church back to religious experience, effective evangelism, a real knowledge of God, a passion for saving men, a missionary spirit that flows out of a personal Pentecost.

The offering at Easter will, of course, be taken. To neglect it would defeat our spiritual purposes, since we need not expect God to abundantly bless a Church that would let its missionary enterprises suffer still more than ours have already suffered. Unthinking persons have said that we should wait until the General Conference develops a new financial plan, but such plan could not go into effect for more than a year, and in the meantime our missions would collapse. One whole year's work is involved, and there must be no letting down; we must carry on.

Nevertheless the offering will not be stressed heavily. Our main emphasis will be upon spiritual factors.

Our first step is to mobilize the Church. This will be attempted in thirty-four great evangelistic and missionary Rallies from Virginia to California. Every Bishop, all connectional secretaries and others have given their time for these meetings. Two teams have been organized; on each there will be at least three Bishops and two connectional secretaries. These will move across the Church holding a Rally each day. The program will be very much the same in each: Inspirational addresses in the morning; discussion in the afternoon; a great evangelistic Rally at night.

Immediately following these Rallies, the District Institutes will be held. Their purpose will be to disseminate widely the spirit generated in the Rallies. More than thirty outstanding preachers have freely given their time and one will visit the District Institutes in each Conference.

Fuller announcements will be made from time to time. At the moment I appeal to preachers and laymen and women everywhere to prepare for the greatest evangelistic mobilization in our history. Pray without ceasing for the success of the Rallies. Disseminate the information everywhere. Prepare to attend. Take a group from your church. Each Annual Conference should assemble in a body.

The schedule of these Rallies is as follows:
Mississippi and North Mississippi, Jackson, Galloway Memorial, January 25.
Louisiana, Alexandria, January 26.

TEN DESIRABLE SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC GOALS OF AMERICA

By Belmont Farley

Re-affirming as our most cherished ideal the opportunity for all our people to develop free, cooperative, rich lives, to stand confidently on their own feet, to judge clearly and effectively by means of their own trained intelligence, to act vigorously as occasion requires, to enjoy the highest values that modern life now offers to the most privileged, to engage joyously in the free exchanges of a shared life, the Committee on Social-Economic Goals of America offers for the consideration of the American public the following ten objectives:

1. Hereditary Strength. Rich personality depends upon the inborn capacity of individuals.

Therefore:
It would seem that in an enlightened society cultural influences exerted upon mating and conscious control of reproduction might be instituted in such wise as to increase constantly the percentage of our people who are "well-born," and thereby raise steadily the average level of innate capacity.

2. Physical Security. To be born with superior capacity is but half the picture; to conserve and develop this capacity is the other half.

Therefore:

Definite provisions must be made to reduce the number of lives annually sacrificed to the speeding automobiles, to the ravages of fire, to undernourishment, and to disease.

3. Participation in Cultural Development. Every new-born babe is a complex bundle of possibilities which may be developed by contact with the culture achieved through racial experience.

Therefore:

Society must assure to each individual the fullest possible opportunity to come into fruitful contact with cultivating influences in such a way as to develop the needed (a) skills, techniques, and knowledge; (b) values, standards, and outlooks.

4. An Active Flexible Personality. Participation in our cultural resources should promote active personalities motivated by intelligent purposes, not by unguided impulse from within or casual pressure from without.

Therefore:

Economic and social goals must be consciously pursued that will foster (a) personal initiative, (b) discriminating judgement and choice, (c) flexibility of thought and conduct, (d) individual differences, and (e) cooperativeness.

5. Suitable Occupation. A congenial life work is a first requisite of rich personality.

Therefore:

Society should offer to individuals guidance, training, placement and advancement in suitable vocations.

6. Economic Security. Deplorable economic conditions of today are apparent to everyone.

Therefore:

It is incumbent upon society to set up certain standards of economic security, some legal, some with such extra-logical sanctions as public opinion, conscience, and our ideas of common decency. Increasingly we think in terms of (a) the right to a job, (b) a minimum wage, (c) a legal dismissal wage, (d) security of tenure, (e) mothers' pensions, (f) compensation for industrial accidents and disease, and (g) old-age and unemployment insurance.

7. Mental Security. Individual personality and public welfare alike depend upon a satisfactory answer to the question, "What we believe?"

Therefore:

Americans ought to fear the powerful commercial interests that are trying to exploit us through gaining control of our thoughts and opinions. Just as society has brought pure drinking water to the houses and highways, so it ought to bring pure truth within our reach at every point and on every matter where non-social agencies are interested in hoodwinking us.

8. Equality of Opportunity. Our nation had its birth in struggle for equality as opposed to special privilege. In the light of modern knowledge of individual differences this is not taken to mean equality either of inborn or acquired personal traits but the equal chance to attain to one's fullest possible development in proportion to abilities.

Therefore:

Equality of opportunity, the birthright of every American, should involve for each individual the opportunity to live a healthy, happy life, to have a comfortable, sanitary home, to have useful employment, to enjoy equality in the eyes of the law, and to have the benefits of such educational facilities and other means of appropriate development as will enable the individual to become the happiest, most efficient, and most useful member of society possible with his natural endowments.

9. Freedom. The struggle for freedom has seemed to center in the efforts of one group to free itself from oppression by another. While dynastic and hereditary tyranny have been largely overcome, domination of the economically less favored group by the economically more favored group still persists.

Therefore:

The greatest stress should be placed on what should be termed the agitative liberties, i. e., freedom of speech, of the press, the screen, of broadcasting, of assembly, of demonstrating, of organizing. Particularly to be cherished and defended are freedom of research, of experimentation, and of teaching, for they are the means by which new truth is revealed and grafted upon old truth.

10. Fair Play. Justice defined by the courts and good sportsmanship shown by citizens in all their relations with one another are esteemed as eminent social virtues.

Therefore:

A sense of fair play should dominate the relations of the poor man before the court, the employer in conflict with his employee, the attitudes of one race toward another, the attitude toward taxation, and commercial services. Of late we are called upon to widen the circle to include among those with whom we are to play the game, all the nations and races of the earth.

POST CONFERENCE REVERIES

R. E. Smith

Yes, I went to Conference and enjoyed all except—

There is too much strain and not enough devotion. Bishop Dobbs is a marvel of patience, courtesy and dispatch; the brethren respond and cooperate beautifully, but the system renders their efforts futile. The whole thing results in a curious cross between a political convention and a chautauqua. The voting is not so good as in the former nor the speeches equal to the latter. And the devotionals are like Enoch in two respects: God takes them and they are not! If Bishop Dobbs, out of the richness of his reading, experience, and peerless English, had taken a half hour each morning opening to us some great Scripture it would have primed the day and sweetened our memories for many a hard battle.

Before God, I believe the appointments should be made and read at some other time and place! Or, the business of the Church should be weighed, planned and recorded at some other time and place. Both cannot be done effectively as we attempt it at Annual Conference. This is no indictment or railing accusation against anyone. It is simply asking too much of human nature to expect men whose wives and children are waiting breathlessly the word whether to pack up and move, or to remain where they are another year; it is too much, I say, to ask these men to sit down quietly and counsel best for the big interests of the Kingdom under the terrific strain of uncertainty about their loved ones and the vital factors of their ministry. Result: the few who are relieved of this strain and feel sure of their places, or better ones, have to do the main work of the Conference while the majority do the best they can to maintain outward composure—yet the most casual observers may sense the subdued and disquieting emotions. The Bishop and cabinet usually meet twice a year outside Annual Conference; oftentimes there are adjourned sessions of the Conference—for special purposes; always there are District Conferences. Why couldn't some of these take care either of the business or of the appointments?

Now, I'll stop and run to my bomb-proof.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS

By Rev. Jno. W. Ramsey

I would sound a warning concerning a book entitled, "The Prophets and Their Times," by J. M. Powis Smith, and edited by Shailer Mathews, Soares, and W. C. Bower. Of course, anyone who knows anything of Shailer Mathews will know the type of book without having read it—that it is rotten to the core with modernism. But here are a few quotations: "The outstanding prophets of Ahab's reign were Elijah and Elisha. When the narrative concerning them is seen in the cold light of criticism, grave doubt as to their historicity arises"—page 36; the author speaks of Elijah's being fed by the ravens as incredible as the story of Semiramis being fed by doves with curdled milk, or Romulus and Remus being fed by wolves—pages 36 and 37; the author denies Ahab's being a persecutor of the prophets—page 36; represents Ahab as a great statesman confronted by the narrow-minded prophet, Elijah, a mere idealist and religious enthusiast—page 40; the narratives "are full of legendary and folklore elements, so that they make the impression of sagas rather than historical narratives"—page 37; "such stories could easily have arisen soon after the death of Elijah"—page 38. Now, what do all orthodox Methodists, who believe in the Bible as the inspired word of God, think of present conditions in our church when a book of that nature is being used as a text-book in the Department of Religious Education of some of our colleges? Yet that very thing is being done, and the faith of immature boys in the Bible of their Christian fathers and mothers is being shaken to the very foundation. The anxious hearts of Christian parents all over the land today are wanting to know where they can send their children to college without having their faith in the Bible and God wrecked.

To say that our boys, after college careers, will be confronted with the prevailing currents of atheism and materialism in both life and literature is no doubt true, as a mere statement of fact; but to offer the fact as an excuse for teaching such rot as contained in the above-mentioned book is nonsense—more, it is criminal. If Christian parents have any rights whatever remaining in their church colleges which they maintain with their contributions of money, they certainly have a right not only to expect, but to demand, that the minds of their children be fortified in preparation to meet the currents of materialism in life and literature, rather than that these colleges should prepare the impressionable minds of our sons and daughters for a quiet and unresisting acceptance of the waves of materialism now sweeping over the land.

The only thing my church college can give my son which the state college cannot give, is the strengthening of his Christian character and the establishment of his faith in the Bible and God. If my church college does not do this very thing, what substantial reason can be offered that I should choose it for the education of my boy rather than a state institution?

Dr. James A. Beebe, President of Allegheny College, has the following things to say concerning what a church college should be and do: "The church college which is content to be no more and no less Christian than the rest of the world is notably deficient in the quality of its Christianity. The substance of it all is that it is the function of the church college to be distinctly Christian in all its organizations and activities, in its point of view, its atmosphere, its purposes; and if it does not perform this function it has no justification for its existence. This we believe to be the decisive test. If a church college is not different from the state school the specific things that distinguish Christianity from 'the world, the flesh, and the devil,' it is not a Christian college, and it has no right to be called such. The church has no right to be spending a lot of money in supporting non-Christian schools."

Have you heard of the "Heightening Process?" I thought I was familiar with modernistic terminology, but that was a new one. What does it mean? Here it is: A told B that C ate a crow; B told D that C ate two crows; and D told E that C ate three crows. That is the "Heightening Process," and its application easily explains the narratives of the virgin birth and the physical resurrection of our Lord, and with mental reservation enables one to repeat the Apostles Creed in any Methodist church at the Sunday morning service without lying.

The American Association for the Advancement of Atheism says: "We welcome the aid of the Modernists and pledge them our fullest co-operation in ridding the world of Fundamentalism—of any serious acceptance of Christian theology." What a wonderful pageant! The modernist and the atheist with their necks thrust through the bows of the same yoke, pulling together. What a combination! It's enough to make the devil split his sides with laughter; but it is no laughing matter for the Christian. The battle is joined. Awake thou that sleepest! Put on the whole armour of God, and contend earnestly for the "faith once delivered unto the saints." Pacifism has no place here. This is no time to cry "Peace!"

HOW DO YOU TREAT YOUR SUCCESSOR?

An almost infallible touchstone of ministerial courtesy which also affords a very sure indication of Christian character is in your attitude toward your successor. To let drop any intimation of rumor which would prejudice against him his new congregation is a flagrant violation of the ethics of the itinerant brotherhood. If you cannot sincerely pray for the success of your successor, then you should pray for yourself. If you find yourself envious through fear that his achievements will surpass yours, then make a call for penitents and be the first to respond to your invitation. The man who puts first the Kingdom of God and the Church will rejoice over the superior work of another.

In many instances preachers should grieve over the apparent failure of successors, since they did not leave a good foundation, for a foundation which consists of personal attachments, rather than allegiance to Jesus Christ and the Church, is nothing more than "wood, hay, and stubble."

It is possible that if your successor does not succeed, it was in reality due to your failure—a failure garnished over with the veneer of superficiality. It should be a matter of genuine satisfaction when the man who follows you makes good, for it is evident that the Church which you had served had been led into a Christian loyalty which was not affected by the inevitable changes in the itinerancy.—Nashville Advocate.

RUSTON DISTRICT STEWARDS MEET AT ARCADIA

Reported by Rev. J. H. Bowdon

On Thursday morning, December 14, 1933, the Methodist church at Arcadia opened its doors to nearly one hundred folk from the Ruston District. The occasion was the annual meeting of the District Board of Stewards. The pastors, charge lay leaders, Sunday school superintendents and other interested members were included in the call for the meeting. There was a splendid group present.

The morning hours were turned over to the discussion of several very vital questions. Rev. Louis Hoffpauir, of Homer, La., led the morning devotions, after which Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., D.D., explained the purpose of the meeting. In his own delightful way, Rev. W. H. Royal discussed the subject, "Benevolences in Full on a Circuit Last Year." He was followed on the program by Mr. C. E. Tooke and Rev. H. L. Johns, who brought us messages on, "Paying in Full on a Station Last Year." Mr. W. B. Williams, a layman from the Lisbon charge, helped us with a discussion of "Ministerial Support in Full on a Rural Charge Last Year." Mr. R. L. Taylor, Charge Lay Leader of the Arcadia charge, read a splendid paper on "Promoting a Program to Interest Men in the Local Church." The paper was so well received that it was ordered to be included in this report. Judge C. A. Barnette, Associate District Lay Leader, brought us a helpful message on "What the Church Should Mean to Men and What Should be the Response." The closing program of the morning was an inspirational address by Rev. A. M. Serex, Ph.D., pastor of our church at Minden.

After lunch, which was served by the ladies of the Arcadia church, the District Board of Stewards met and attended to their business. The presiding elder's salary was fixed at 13 per cent of the salary paid the pastors of the District. After a prolonged discussion, the apportionments were handed down on the basis of membership and the amount assessed the pastor in charge.

The meeting as a whole was very helpful. A plan of procedure for the year was worked out. A Ruston District Laymen's Association was discussed and met with hearty approval of those present. We believe that the meeting will result in lasting good to the District.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT MEETING

As "Time" would report it:

Last week First Church, Clarksdale, Miss., was the scene of district activities. Clarksdale's Watson and flock were the genial hosts to the pastors, charge lay leaders and district stewards of the Greenville District, who flocked to the massive Delta edifice for two meetings and, incidentally, a delicious luncheon prepared by the ladies of said flock.

Pre-luncheon activities consisted of an official district stewards' meeting to give legal flavor to the rubber-stamp apportionments handed down four years ago by a pre-depression General Conference. (A memorial drafted by Greenville's Broyles, and passed by the North Mississippi Conference over a report of non-concurrence by a committee on memorials who refused to concur because it, according to its spokesman's own verbal supplementary remarks, could not understand the memorial, would, if accepted and passed by the General Conference, put an end to this system).

Delectable. This interesting meeting was broken up by a feminine call to luncheon, which found a ready response in the mind of each delegate. The group marched (in double time) to the dining-room, where a luncheon was served by the ladies of the church.

Inspirational. Afternoon was given over to a joint meeting of pastors, lay leaders and stewards for charge reports and inspirational talks. The meeting was a tremendous success. Presiding Elder Broyles presided in his usual debonaire manner that has permanently endeared him to the people of the district. Impressive talks were made by several pastors and laymen. Mr. W. D. Bell, of Gunnison, gave an encouraging report from his charge. Likewise came excellent reports from Duncan's Lay Leader Wolfe, Lula's Steward Lee, Lyon's Simmons, and a most delightful address from Tunica's buxom Allen. Said Mr. Allen: "We need a people who can get religion like a Methodist, keep it like a Baptist, pay for it like a Presbyterian, boast of it like an Episcopalian, be as loyal to it as a Catholic, and enjoy it like a Negro."

Charge reports indicate that the Greenville District will again lead the entire Conference in additions on profession of faith and receipts on connectional claims. Much of the credit for this goes to able Elder Broyles, and the rest of it to the loyal co-operation of the big-hearted Delta people.

Fitting Close. As a fitting close to this fine meeting the chair called on Shelby Smoot, who always has a message of evangelistic fervor. Said Dr. Smoot: "The pastor is a specialist in religion. He is God's personal representative in the congregation. The church that thrives must respect him and support him. Many of our churches are discrediting their pastor. When they do this they discredit his message. When they do this they destroy the vitality of the church. A vital ministry must be at the center of every successful church program. Nothing can be substituted for it. The Sunday school, missionary societies and other organizations are merely the by-products of the pulpit. When you remove the influence of the pulpit, they too, will cease."

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT ISSUES CALL FOR UNIFIED ADVANCE

PREACHERS AND LAYMEN ORGANIZE

Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, recently sent the following invitation and message to pastors and laymen of the district:

To the Pastors

"It seems good to me for us to have a conference in which we will discuss our mutual problems and plans and enter as far as possible into the adoption of unified plans for carrying on our work in the Shreveport District for the coming year. I am calling, therefore, all the pastors of the Shreveport District to meet with me and Bishop Dobbs at 9:30 Monday morning, December 18, at the First Methodist Church. The conference will run Monday and Tuesday. We will close out Tuesday afternoon with the meeting of the district stewards.

"We are going to discuss revivals, pastoral visiting, preparing to preach, Kingdom Extension, special days, and every-member canvass as a means of financing and promoting our entire program. Prepared speakers will lead the discussion of each topic, to be followed by questions and answers and general discussion of our individual problems.

To District Stewards

"I am calling the District Stewards to meet on Tuesday, December 19, for the purpose of allocating the benevolences to the various charges and to create an organization of a District Board of Stewards. It is desired that we elect a president and a secretary, thereby creating a permanent organization to cooperate with the presiding elder as a Board of Stewards.

"I would be pleased if you could come in and set in on the conference of our preachers Tuesday morning. A basket dinner will be served at the First Methodist Church, at 12:30 Tuesday, and it is especially desired that you be present at that dinner. Immediately following the dinner, the district stewards will be called in session for their meeting."

Program for Preachers' Conference

1. Planning for Revivals—Dr. W. Angle Smith.
2. Revivals in our Circuits—Rev. R. H. Staples.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Merry Christmas to all!

Mr. J. R. Abels, layman of Porchatoula, La., was an appreciated caller at the office last week.

The addition of twenty new members marked the beginning of the new year for Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, pastor at Lake Charles, La.

Greensburg, La., charge has received Rev. C. M. Morris as pastor and the local paper speaks highly of him and family.

Rev. J. B. Conner, the new pastor at Coffeeville, Miss., is receiving splendid cooperation at the beginning of his pastorate.

Bishop H. A. Boaz celebrated his sixty-seventh birthday on last Monday, December 18, and on Tuesday, December 26, Bishop Arthur J. Moore will be forty-five years of age.

"Two large and well assorted 'poundings,'" is the way Rev. L. C. Wilson, Boyce, La., describes the beginning of his seventh year at Boyce. He makes a most encouraging report of the opening of the new year.

Rev. William T. Woodward, Sicily Island, La., who recently passed his sixty-seventh birthday, renews his subscription for two years, and reports that he is feeling fine. Greetings and many happy returns, Brother Woodward.

Dr. B. F. Rogers, former pastor of Carrollton Avenue, New Orleans, now presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, has been received and is now settled in the district parsonage at Lake Charles.

"May I express to you my appreciation of your conduct of our paper and especially of your editorial work." That is the way Dr. Jno. F. Foster, pastor at Ferriday, La., writes his editor. Thank you, Dr. Foster.

Rev. Bruner M. Hunt, our efficient young pastor at Centenary, McComb, was the preacher for the special services of Religious Emphasis Week at Millsaps College during the week of December 7.

January 4 is the date for meeting of Educational Council of North Mississippi Conference at Grenada, Miss. The Council is composed of Executive Committee of Board of Christian Education, Presiding Elders, Conference and District staff of workers.

Somebody said that Dr. R. E. Smith, ("Dean Smith" of Centenary College) should turn his extensive knowledge of the Bible into a great book on the Bible. We second the motion and authorize him to begin at once. We wait for his assurance that the project will move forward.

Rev. Jno. L. Williams, formerly pastor of Louisiana Avenue Church, New Orleans, was visited recently with a farewell reception and pounding.

It was a surprise party and developed some cash also. Brother Williams is now located at 1314 St. Mary Street, the home and general office of the Louisiana Child Finding and Home Society.

Before us is a copy of the bulletin of Park Place Church, Norfolk, Va., of which Dr. Frank L. Wells, formerly of First Church, New Orleans, is now pastor. Dr. Wells has been warmly and generously received. His work there has had an auspicious beginning and prospects are happy. But we miss him in Louisiana.

"Integrating the World of Our Institutions of Higher Education with the Church's Unified Program of Christian Education" was the theme of the address delivered by Dr. C. C. Sealeman, president of Southern Methodist University, at the opening of the recent session of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Mr. J. T. Lewis, Tylertown, Miss., has greatly advanced himself in the estimation of this office. Why, the other day we received a good list of subscriptions from him headed by his own renewal and accompanied by a good check with a margin sufficient to take care of the "exchange." Thank you, Brother Lewis.

Rev. N. D. Guerry was welcomed back to his home conference this year and is now in his pastorate at Woodland, Miss. After serving several years as pastor, he transferred to the Nashville territory to finish his work at Vanderbilt. After he finished his work at school he remained to serve several pastorates in that conference.

The first quarterly meeting on the Becker, Miss., charge, where Rev. L. B. Wimberly is beginning his fifth year as pastor, was held at Paine Memorial Church. Rev. T. H. Dorsey, presiding elder, preached to a splendid audience. A large number of people gathered to attend the conference and enjoy the dinner served in picnic fashion.

The "Pageant of the Nativity" will be given by the Young People's Group of the Central Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., on Sunday morning, December 24. On the following Sunday evening this same group will conduct a "Watch Night" service at the parsonage from 11 p.m. to 12:10 a.m. Dr. L. L. Cowen is the pastor of this active congregation.

We always feel happy when we hear that a pastor has been given a good reception on his new charge. That is what has happened to Dr. A. M. Shaw who went to Oak Grove, La., charge. I saw a copy of the local paper in which there was a half column telling about the excellent sermons preached by Dr. Shaw last Sunday. Large congregations heard him with delight.

President D. M. Key and Dr. J. Reese Lin, professor of history and philosophy at Millsaps College, attended the meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools recently held in Nashville, Tenn. Prof. M. C. White, faculty chairman of athletics, Millsaps College, has been elected president of the Dixie Conference for the ensuing year.

Rev. B. F. Bullard, who only one year ago was superannuated because of ill health, was recovered sufficiently this year to be placed back on the effective list as conference evangelist. He makes his home at West Point, Miss. The conference has no more effective man in evangelistic work than Brother Bullard. He has had much experience over his conference.

The celebration of the sesquicentennial of American Methodism will be observed by North Mississippi Conference by gathering the history of all the local churches. The Executive Committee of the Historical Society will organize the Conference by selecting men in each district to assist in gathering historical sketches through the local pastors.

Of course you pastors want some Peace posters for your vestibules and young people's divisions and other places in your church. Well, send 15c to World Peaceways, Hotel Roosevelt, 45th Street and Madison Avenue, New York, and they will send you ten posters free. The fifteen cents is to pay the postage. Get your letter off today. Settling this War Problem is one of our pressing jobs just now.

First Church, Lake Charles, La., enthusiastically begins the new year. The Board of Stewards, at its first meeting, elected the following officers: A. M. Mutersbaugh, Chairman; Lonnie Clark, first vice-chairman; Dr. J. A. Crawford, second vice-chairman; John M. Howard, secretary, and T. L. Freeman, treasurer. This is Brother Freeman's twenty-first year as treasurer. His election is no empty compliment, but a just recognition of high and efficient and faithful service.

Revs. Wm. H. Wallace, Jr., pastor First Church; J. B. Grambling, pastor Epworth; and Jolly B. Harper, pastor Louisiana Avenue and Second Church, new pastors in New Orleans, have found their way to the Advocate office. We are delighted to have these splendid men, along with Rev. R. R. Branton, pastor St. Marks; Rev. W. H. Giles, pastor Carrollton Avenue; and Rev. A. W. Townsend, pastor McDonoughville, in the city. All have been happily received.

Rev. and Mrs. Lawrence L. Cowen announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Dorothy, to Mr. Gycelle Tynes, of Gloster, Miss. Dorothy, who is the third oldest daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Cowen, is in her junior year at Millsaps College. Mr. Tynes, a recent graduate of Millsaps, is at present principal of the Vocational High School at Taylorsville, Miss. The happy event will take place during the Christmas holidays. The Advocate joins their many friends in extending congratulations and best wishes.

We heard: "Rev. W. H. Giles, pastor of the Tallulah church for the past four years, delivered an inspiring sermon at a union Thanksgiving service at the Baptist church on the evening of his departure for his new appointment in New Orleans, Carrollton Avenue. The building was filled to capacity by friends from all denominations. J. L. Cason, in a brief talk, paid a fitting tribute to the splendid life and service of Brother Giles, whose removal from Tallulah is the source of genuine regret to the entire community."

Rabbi David Lefkowitz of Temple Emanu-El, Dallas, Texas, recently delivered an address on "Toward a Better Understanding Between Jews, Catholics and Protestants" at McFarlin Auditorium, Southern Methodist University. At the same time Father John E. Ross, Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron and Rev. E. R. Clinchy, who, under the auspices of the Federal Council of Churches, have been touring the country in the interest of a better understanding between Jews and Christians, appeared at the University.

Renew your Advocate subscription immediately upon expiration thereby assisting us in meeting current expenses. Thank you.

LISTEN, LOUISIANA METHODISTS

Let us not forget that at the last session of the Louisiana Conference we unanimously promised to ask for a Christmas offering for the Orphanage at Ruston. This is to supply funds from January 1, 1934, until Easter.

C. C. WIER,

President of the Conference Board.

ATTENTION, PRESIDING ELDERS—LEST WE FORGET

By Dr. A. W. Turner

Page 258, paragraph 522, Discipline 1930, reads as follows:

"There shall be in each District, auxiliary to the General Conference Board, a District Board of Temperance and Social Service, composed of one layman and one clerical representative from each pastoral charge. The presiding elder should be an ex-officio member and shall call the Board together for organization. This Board shall promote temperance and social service in the District and co-operate with the Conference Board in all its work."

I am sure the presiding elders know the law of the Church.

But they have so much to do. They have, insofar as I know, failed to carry out the above provision of the law.

I believe such a committee is needed now and some of them should be interested.

LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE SEE THINGS AT EDUCATIONAL COUNCIL IN NASHVILLE

Lydel Sims

We withhold all other news this week to present to the young people of Louisiana, and to any other readers, a real treat—an account of the Educational Council of Southern Methodism held during the week of December 3, at Nashville, Tennessee, with especial emphasis in the account upon the meeting of the Associate Council for young people. Miss Anna Pharr Turner, our Conference Director of Intermediates, and Miss Pearl Hattic, Conference Vice-President, attended this great meeting of leaders as representatives of Louisiana Young People. They have returned highly enthusiastic about the meeting, and want all of us to share in part with them the benefits they received. Pearl gives us a view of the trip as a whole, while Miss Turner presents the proceedings of the Young People's Council Meeting. We know you'll appreciate and enjoy their accounts. Here they are!

Pearl's Account

"Yee-Whiz! Imagine getting a telegram containing a trip to Nashville! Sounds rather queer, but that is just what happened to me last Saturday night. Ernest Mickal, our Conference President, was unable to go to the meeting of the Educational Council of Southern Methodism, so he very thoughtfully wired me to take his place. Having exactly twenty-four hours and forty minutes in which to make preparations for such an important trip is quite an experience! However, everything was lovely, even though the ticket man wouldn't sell me a ticket all the way to Nashville, and I had to buy one to Memphis, and then one from there on to Nashville.

Forward, March!

"We arrived in Memphis at 6:00

MISS MARJORIE SHEERIN, of Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:—

"My Cough is gone already!"

"My cough was so bad," writes Miss Sheerin. "I called the doctor. He said, 'Take Pertussin.' Am I glad I did! . . . Next morning my cough was gone!"

WHEN YOU "CATCH COLD" the tiny moisture glands in your throat and bronchial passages clog up with thick mucus! Your throat feels tickly—dry. You cough, but can't "raise" a thing.

You must get those little moisture glands back into action, to stop a cough. And Pertussin does just that!

A spoonful or two stimulates the glands, starts their natural moisture pouring out. Germ-laden phlegm loosens. Your throat feels relieved. Pertussin is helping Nature cure your cough!

Pertussin is the scientific extract of a medicinal herb famous in treating the worst coughs known. It contains no narcotics—won't upset digestion. Get a bottle!

PERTUSSIN

has been prescribed by doctors for 30 years . . . It works safely!

Monday morning, and after a hasty breakfast, we had about ten minutes left to see the city. We'll leave you to imagine just how much we were able to see in that length of time, but we did manage to see the skyline in spite of the very heavy fog and smoke.

"Shortly after we boarded the train for Nashville, many preachers came in, and much to our delight, among them we found Brother McLellan, our own Executive Secretary. He and Rev. J. D. F. Williams, of Texas, gave us lots of timely advice on how to act in a big city!

810 Broadway

"Our first glimpse of 810 Broadway was from the train, and we could hardly wait until time for the night meeting to see all the dignitaries and the various offices in which they labor so diligently for our welfare. We arrived in Nashville about 2:00 Monday afternoon and went immediately to the hotel. After getting located very comfortably, Brother McLellan took us on a personally-conducted tour of Main Street, and then guided our eager footsteps toward the Publishing House. With other early arrivals, one of whom was Joe Brown Love from L. S. U., we were shown in the back way by none other than the famous editor of The Highroad, Mr. R. L. Hunt, the friend of all Louisiana Young People. We had time enough to take a good look around at the offices and all the people before the first meeting began. This meeting was of the Local Church group, and during the evening we heard Dr. Bowen, Dr. Schisler, Dr. Hogan, and Dr. Alexander. We were almost as interested in how they looked as in what they had to say, because we had heard so much about them. Needless to say, they are all personalities instead of just names to us now.

Dignitaries!

"After the meeting Mr. Hunt was kind enough to point out the various other people of note who were present and to introduce us to many of them. Among those whom we met were Rowena Ferguson, Ina Corinne Brown, Aileen Moon, Elizabeth Brown (the President of the Young People's Associate Council), Mrs. Walter Towner, Mrs. E. O. Harbin, and a very interesting young man, Worth A. Robbins from Kentucky, who was the only real young person present at the first meeting.

Young People's Council

"Next day the meetings of the Young People's Associate Council, presided over by Elizabeth Brown of the Holston Conference, began. By this time many other young people had arrived, and the discussion in this group, led by members of the Central Office staff, were very interesting and timely. Tuesday night the fellowship supper was held at Scarritt College. It was our first visit there and we were very much impressed with the beauty of the place. After a very entertaining program (where we found some clever suggestions for banquets), we heard a lecture in the chapel by Dr. Woo of China, who was addressing an organization composed of members of all races. Later Miss Maggie Marshall, our friend who was formerly at St. Mark's, agreed to take us up into the tower, even though it was pouring down rain. This was a real treat.

Sights

"On Wednesday afternoon we managed for a car, and a party of six of us journeyed out to the Hermitage, the old home of Andrew Jackson. The place is beautiful indeed. Anna Pharr and I were very much surprised to find that other members of the party were wondering what kind of tree a Magnolia is and had never seen Holly before. Incidentally, I endowed the Hermitage with one of my gloves! On our return we joined the rest of the Young People's Council on a tour of the city. Among the points of interest that we visited were: Fiske University, where we saw the murals painted by Aaron Douglas ('member the story not so long ago in the Epworth Highroad—'One of God's Children With Wings?'), Peabody and Vanderbilt campuses, Scarritt College, and the Parthenon.

Good-Bye!

"Our last meeting of the Associate Council was held Thursday morning. It ended all too soon, but we have lots and lots of things to report to Louisiana Young People through our Conference Program, and especially through the January meeting of the Council and the Union Presidents. Different news items will follow within a short time concerning the various phases of the program.

"Just before we left we joined a party, which was conducted by Mr. Hunt, and made a tour of the Publishing House. It was most interesting to see our church literature in the printing process. The trip back home may be summarized thus: We admired the scenery, saw more of Memphis, discovered how expensive it is to eat in the diner, and arrived in Shreveport twenty minutes late!

"We wish to thank the Louisiana Young People for the privilege of being their representatives. For both of us the entire trip was one of the most wonderful experience we have ever had. We wished many times that every other young person could have been with us to share the inspiration, information, and fellowship which we enjoyed.

"With best wishes for a Merry, Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

PEARL HATTIC.

We find it necessary on account of limited space to hold Miss Turner's account of the proceedings of the Young People's meeting until next week. With Pearl's background account of the meeting, we know you will be looking forward to the actual proceedings of the meeting. One of the important parts of this report is the list of points of emphasis for the young people's unions. Don't fail to get them!

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE YOUNG PEOPLE'S NEWS

Young people of Mississippi Conference, it is now your time to shine. Let every one know you are alive and ready to bring a happy Christmas to everyone around you. Jackson District has already a big Christmas present given them by Leake County Union, for they have their charter, and that now makes four chartered unions in that district. And they have a brand new union, too—West Hinds Union, which includes Raymond, Bolton, Clinton, Edwards, and others. Miss Singleton Mills is their president. And these unions are wide-awake—and that is no joke. They have the grandest plans for their big annual District Fellowship Meeting, March 2 and 3, at Galloway Memorial. Watch out, other districts; these people are planning big things. At this Fellowship Meeting they will lay their plans for the Assembly, and that is what we all should be doing. This year, according to early reports from our president, H. T. Newell, Jr., the Assembly of 1934 will be the biggest and best Assembly we ever had, and we are right with him in everything he does.

Meridian is not asleep, either. Their union meetings are something to be proud of. Harry Weems is now their president, as the former president moved to another town. We know the new president's worth, and we are expecting great things from him and that Union.

The Thirty-fourth Avenue Young People and East End Intermediates, Meridian, Miss., were awarded the efficiency banner, with a grade of 95 and 100 per cent. Congratulations; we are proud of you. Keep the good work up.

Here is a Happy Christmas to you all, and let's plan for the most glorious year we ever had; and while we are wishing and planning, let's wish that every young person will be able to go to Assembly. Everyone who has been, can endorse that as a good Christmas wish, for they know the worth of an Assembly.

Good-bye, and I want to hear from you soon. I'm right here in Hattiesburg.

Feel Peppy—Do More Work—
Take Doctor's Advice

"My doctor recommended Kruschen to me which has not only regulated my digestion to practically normal but reduced my weight so substantially I'm now able to do more work and feel more peppy than ever." Daniel Fried (Editor), Cleveland, Ohio.

To lose fat surely and SAFELY, take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning—cut down on fatty meats and sweets.

But be sure to get Kruschen—your health comes first—a jar that will last you 4 weeks costs not more than 85 cents at any drug-store in the world—if not satisfied—money back.

Men: Get that Kruschen feeling—look younger and feel younger—lose unsightly fat and gain new ambition—be free from constipation, gas and acidity—one jar proves it.

WEIR ORGANIZES AN EPWORTH LEAGUE

Last Sunday afternoon, at 1 o'clock, about twenty-five young people met at the Methodist church and organized an Epworth League. After singing "There is Power in the Blood," Curtis Nabors read from Psalms and followed it with a short prayer. The members decided to adopt a new form for the League and the following officers were elected: Executive President, Agnes McGregor; Committee President, Curtis Nabors; Secretary, Lucille Mills; Treasurer, William Moncrief; Reporter, Gertrude Ray. The members decided to create the following committees: Bible, Social, Publicity, Law-making, Judicial; and the following sponsors were chosen: Miss Tate, Miss McArthur, Mr. McDonald, Miss Nabors and Miss Bryant. The acting chairman urged all of the members to realize their responsibilities, to help those who were in need, to give his life for Christ and to pledge a certain sum. The president was instructed to appoint five group captains. After other suitable remarks the members repeated the League benediction, and were asked to come to the next meeting.

REPORT OF REV. CHAS. ASSAF FOR THE YEAR 1933

To the Bishop and the Members of the Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren:

I have preached 170 times, and assisted the pastors with 12 revivals. New members received by profession of faith, 92; infants baptized, 29; one new church organized and built.

I gave away several Bibles and New Testaments during the year. I visited the Syrians and all foreigners where I found them.

I preached in the jail, I spoke in several high schools, and visited the sick in the hospitals.

During the service we had altar prayers, with people present for prayer and reconsecration in every service.

The Lord was with me and He helped me to do His work. I talked for my Lord everywhere I found anyone. I am willing to do the work for my Lord and our church, by the help of the Lord and the brethren.

Your brother in the Lord,
REV. CHAS. ASSAF,
Home Missionary.

STAR OF BETHLEHEM

By Alice Gorton Wynn

Their reverent faces toward the star
Which long had guided them,
Three kingly magi from afar
Rode into Bethlehem.
The grasping soul and the Pharisee
Were blind that holy night;
But shepherds, simple-hearted, free,
Discerned the Heavenly light.

And so, today, the hurrying crowd
Sees not the radiant glow
Of the divine; for bright and loud
Is lure of the passing show.
Though the Christmas Star has not grown dim.

The earthly turn away their eyes—
And those who truly worship Him
Are still the child-like and the wise.

✓ ODEN—SMITH

On the evening of December 9, 1933, at 8:30 o'clock, a very pretty wedding ceremony took place at the home of Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Doss, Jr., the contracting parties being Miss Mignon Smith, of Dubach, La., a daughter of Mrs. E. P. Smith, and Mr. Clarence Oden, retired lumberman of Laurel, Miss.

Mrs. Oden is a very attractive and accomplished young lady and was a member of the high school faculty of Dubach. Mr. Oden is a prominent worker in the Episcopal church of Laurel and is well known in the business world. The bride's costume was of brown woollen crepe, with all accessories to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Oden go to Laurel to make that city their home.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF GALLOWAY MEMORIAL METHODIST CHURCH, JACKSON, MISS.

With deep regret, the members of the Galloway Memorial Missionary Society learned of the early departure of Mrs. Alma G. Riley to another field of labor. In her going, the Missionary Society has lost a most valuable member, and in the retirement of Mrs. Riley as an official of the Methodist Orphanage, both the church and the Home have sustained a distinct loss. By her charming and tactful approach to the public, she has inspired interest and lent dignity to the work of the Home. By her untiring efforts, she has added greatly to the material welfare of this institution, particularly during the Octagon Campaign, but better still, she has been able to focus the interest of the entire state on the Home.

Her charming manner and influence over the girls in the cultural things of life have endeared her to all of us. Her business ability and resourcefulness in all emergencies have been invaluable to the institution, especially in assisting many of our older boys and girls in making satisfactory adjustments in the business and social world, giving them a feeling of security which they need.

Therefore be it resolved:

First: We deeply deplore the loss of Mrs. Riley to our Orphanage and Church, but are glad that such a splendid business opportunity has come to her, and we trust the greatest success will attend her every effort. We invoke God's richest blessing upon her. We extend congratulations to the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company in securing Mrs. Riley's services.

Second: If at any time the Orphanage is able to undertake a larger program of rehabilitation of the homes through the children, we can think of no one better suited than Mrs. Riley, by personality and training, to undertake such a piece of work for the church.

Third: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Mrs. Riley, incorporated in the minutes of this meeting and published in the Jackson Daily News, the Clarion-Ledger and the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

RESOLUTIONS UNANIMOUSLY ADOPTED BY THE FOURTH QUARTERLY CONFERENCE OF CARROLLTON AVE. METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, AT NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Whereas, our late Brother A. H. Ahten organized a Sunday school in this section of our city in 1883 which marked the beginning of Methodism in Carrollton and led up to the founding of Carrollton Avenue Church; and Whereas, for the past fifty (50) years he had labored in this church as Sunday school superintendent, steward and trustee; and

Whereas, Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, has removed from our midst an exemplary Christian and devoted member of our church in the person of Brother Ahten, and his passing on Thursday, October 26, 1933, is mourned by those who knew and loved him; therefore be it

Resolved, that the fourth quarterly conference and board of stewards tender our expression of profound sorrow and sympathy to his loved ones in their bereavement, and pray God's blessings for them in the comforting presence of the Holy Spirit; and be it further

Resolved, that these resolutions be entered upon the minutes of this fourth quarterly conference and upon the minutes of the board of stewards, and a copy be sent to the family and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"THE SOUTH'S OLDEST AND LARGEST DESIGNER AND BUILDER OF MEMORIALS"

521 CITY PARK AVENUE

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The erection of a Memorial to those who have departed should be man's proudest accomplishment. It is an important necessity because they are the oldest form of historical record. Through all the years, it will carry on, unchanging and unfading; keeping a name and a memory in the hearts of each new generation.

You owe it to yourself and the generations to come, to plan and select your Memorial today. It is just as important purchase as any other purchase made during your lifetime.

Let us help you. Write for illustrated designs and permit us to quote our low prices on memorials built of EVERLASTING granite.

AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY, 716 ST. CHARLES STREET, NEW ORLEANS

The distribution of the American Bible Society Sub Depository at 716 St. Charles St., New Orleans, from November the first 1932 to November the first 1933 has been: 2,196 Bibles, 4,214 Testaments, 70,888 Parts of the Bible. Total 77,292 volumes.

The distribution for eleven years in New Orleans has been: 27,993 Bibles, 57,184 Testaments, 942,585 Parts of the Bible. Total 1,027,762 volumes.

The distribution for the twenty years and nine months that I have been with the American Bible Society has been: 45,501 Bibles, 89,077 Testaments, 1,107,374 volumes in 13 states and 34 different languages.

We are grateful to God for this record, and thank our friends and co-laborers who have aided and shared the joy of the work, remembering that Christ said, "Without Me ye can do nothing."—John 15:5.

We are now suffering world-wide depression and economical unrest. We have departed from The Book. The Sermon on the Mount holds the solution to the whole matter.

Daniel Webster said, "As long as we abide by the principles taught in the Bible, our country will go on prospering; but if we in our prosperity neglect its instructions and authority, no man can tell how sudden a calamity may overwhelm us."

"For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world and lost his own soul?" Matt. 16:26.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

IS IT TO BE "just another year?"

The first watch-night service I attended impressed me very much. And I am always impressed with that service.

Of course the minutes around mid-night of December 31 are just about like all other minutes, I suppose. But the very fact that man has devised ways of reckoning time, such as sun dials, calendars, clocks, and so forth, indicates that he has at least two fairly well defined ideas about time, that indefinable something which is so much of life, notwithstanding the claim that we live not in years but in thoughts. We have to have time to think even when we say we think on the "spur of the moment."

One of those ideas is that time is quite important. The savage is not so particular about the passing of time. Certainly he knows nothing of a minute and less of a second. And he disdains to be bothered about them. The observance of the measurements of time, in a way, mark the degree of advancement in civilization. What one can crowd into an hour marks his stage of development. With aeroplanes darting through the air at the rate of hundreds of miles per hour even seconds become important.

Another idea is that certain occasions and periods of time may have greater significance than others. Events just had to happen at some time or other if they got into the scheme at all. So we have built monuments to men and events by dedicating days to them. Christmas, Easter, Thanksgiving, Fourth of July, and October 12, November 11, and the like. Look at that calendar up there on the wall. See those rings around certain dates? Well, that is to indicate that those days mark certain events and that certain events mark them.

So the watch-night service, the passing of the old year and the dawn of the new year, gives us opportunity to halt a minute or two and ask ourselves some questions about things. Are we making any progress, getting anywhere? Just what direction are we going? Are we going fast enough, too fast? Shouldn't something be left behind and left off before the clock strikes twelve? Should we not be sobered by the number of years we have lived and the shortening number left to us? Hadn't we better pull ourselves together for a better effort this year? And let it go beyond the feeling that, in a general and abstract and hazy sort of way we have resolved to be better in the new year. One reason our goodness amounts to so little is that we are so indefinite and abstract and general about it. We get nowhere because we start nowhere and stay on that road.

New Year Resolutions? Of course. The value of a New Year resolution is not in your ability to keep it perfectly from the first day of January. If you could keep it well from the beginning there was no occasion for your making it. You probably were already doing that well. If you can be fulfilling that resolution perfectly by the end of the year it will be a success and the enterprise will have paid for itself.

THE CALL TO ALEXANDRIA

The General Conference commission on Benevolences and the College of Bishops have designated Bishop A. J. Moore to direct the January campaign for Kingdom Extension.

The Louisiana Conference at its recent session authorized the Bishop in charge to call the Conference to assemble for one day on Friday, January 26, 1934, in the First Methodist Church of Alexandria, Louisiana, of which Dr. N. E. Joyner is the pastor.

This has been done for the purpose, if possible, of giving added emphasis to the importance of the meeting. All lay and clerical delegates of the Conference are expected to be in their places at the appointed time for the specific objective of uniting our energies and our efforts in behalf of a great Cause.

Bishop Moore announces that the program will be one of unusual power, and that similar meetings are to be held across the Continent—from Baltimore to Los Angeles.

The Church has its own plan and purpose of rehabilitation, and has thus far demonstrated wisdom and strength in its ways and means of procedure. President Franklin D. Roosevelt has recently said that the success of the Churches in this effort has challenged the admiration of the nation.

With a deep consciousness of the needs of this hour, with the desire to do all in our power to meet divine obligations, and with the authorization of the Louisiana Conference, I am calling upon the Methodism of this State, as I have done in Arkansas, to rally at Alexandria on January 26, in the First Methodist Church for these compelling hours of the new year. We must act. We must act unitedly. We must act without delay.

Let us set our feet once more upon the foundations of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Let us look into the faces of His people with faith and determination. Let us kneel once more before the throne of Grace, and go forth to reap unprecedented harvests in His name.

HOYT M. DOBBS,
The Bishop's Rooms,
Shreveport, Louisiana.

So get out your pencil, before the old year goes, and put down in black and white your resolutions. Keep them close to your elbow and measure yourself by them from time to time during the year.

WHY NOT DO IT NOW?

First, make a little excursion down into the cellars of your soul. There is a lot of old rubbish down there that ought to be cleaned out. And let us go up into the attics of our minds and look about a little. Just look at those antiques. My, what a sight for good eyes!

We have praised the ability to "make up" one's mind. And it is a virtue. But we can make them up too well. We can get our heads so set that we make no more improvements in our ways of thinking and doing. That accounts for many of the men and women who are on the side tracks today. They just made up their minds too well. They ceased to be students. They got their "degrees;" they "finished" their education. Jesus called his class of twelve, disciples, which being interpreted, means students. And they did not "finish." No degrees were conferred and no diplomas granted. Peter had too far to go. And so have we.

Some rather strong minds, once upon a time, made themselves up to the end that the earth was flat and that everything moved around it. It became necessary to make some alterations in these conclusions. There are very few things about which our minds may be finally made up. And those things have to do with qualities and directions and outlooks mainly. We had better not draw our circle premature, heedless of far gain.

The ability of self-criticism departs from the mind that is finally "made up." Such a mind sees no need of self examination. You have heard of the "closed mind." There is a type of burial vault, a thick and durable steel box. The undertaker told me that when it was locked on the inside it was impossible to unlock it without destroying the vault. That may do very well for dead people, but it will never do for us to crawl into our minds and lock them on the inside. To open them pretty nearly means to destroy them. There may be a dead mind inside.

And we need to go through our religious luggage. Much of it has been carried too long. We get to identifying religion with our views of it a bit too much. Religion for our day is going to have to consider some new dimensions and directions. Antique shibboleths give way for ageless sacrifice and self-dedication.

Not only must we go into our own personal experiences in religion, we must measure our church against the greater issues of our time. Our General Conference meets this year. It will be great or small in proportion to the intelligence and courage with which it faces and deals with these major issues. We need to re-interpret Christ to the individual man and to lead the church to a dedication to definite objectives and specific issues. What are we going to do about the whole program of the church, not just foreign missions?

E. STANLEY JONES TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

By Harry Earl Woolever

The National Capital was visited by the United Foreign Missionary Conference December 10-12. The group came under the cooperative programs of eighty-four foreign mission boards and with a strong team headed by Dr. E. Stanley Jones, so that the anticipation of Washington's religious leaders was keen. In fact, the interest aroused among all the Protestant Churches has not been equaled in the memory of present Washington residents. All denominations took part in a spirit of Christian unity such as in itself would stir the hearts and hopes of those who seek a solid front in the Christ-led conquest.

More people crowded into Constitution Hall for the great mass meeting than were there a few nights previously, when the Chief Executive spoke. Even before the opening prayer was offered, the seats, the aisles, and the steps were so crowded that the management had to chain the doors closed. The people came to hear a message which was fired with the spirit of Christ and Christian missions. Those present heard a presentation that cleared away any fogs or doubts as to the value of effectiveness of missions which might have been planted by the survey, "Re-thinking Missions." Such uncertainties were pushed aside by a positive, vital presentation of the place of foreign missions in the program of Christ. The Savior of mankind was exalted and the auditors ascended the mountains, leaving behind the valleys of despair.

The series of meetings—over forty in number—were supported with an increasing enthusiasm and conviction. The closing occasion was a great banquet, taxing the capacity of the largest Washington hotel with over a thousand diners. It was presided over by the Hon. Huston Thompson, former United States Trade Commissioner. The principal address of the evening was made by Dr. Jones, who built up for his auditors a basis of foreign missions so firm and conclusive that there was no place to turn back. The very logic of it challenged every listener to honest effort in forwarding the Christianization of the world.

A Message to President Roosevelt

The most effective service rendered during the whole visit occurred on the last day of the Conference, December 12, a date which may have significance in altering the attitude between the Occident and the Orient. Arrangements were made for the President to receive the visiting missionary team and a few accompanying officials. At the last moment before entering the President's office, it was arranged that Dr. E. Stanley Jones of India, head of the team, should be permitted to address the President briefly in behalf of the visiting delegation. This final concession was made so late that Dr. Jones could not be given any time for preparation. After the President had received the company in his office—generously decorated with pictures of ships—Dr. Jones stepped to the front of the desk where the President was seated and addressed him. The substance of the statement follows.

The President was first assured of the support and prayers of the group in his office to better the conditions of humanity. Then Dr. Jones explained how the President and the missionaries might work together. In that while the Chief Executive is aiming toward the remaking of the outer organization of society, the Christian workers are remaking the spirit and soul of society, which must form the foundation and substance of any change to a better day.

Dr. Jones then in most earnest fashion stated that if the President is interested in what the missionaries and churches are doing, he can do two distinct things which would be of largest help. First, if the President during his administration would lead in removing the immigration ban against the peoples of Asia, it would prove of greatest significance. To put on the quota basis the Asiatics now completely barred would permit the coming to our shores of only 250 additional immigrants. This would create no economic problem, but it would restore to the United States her lost moral leadership in the East. Dr. Jones pointed out that such a course would be not only just and right, but also would restore respect and confidence between the peoples of the East and West.

The second point which Dr. Jones pressed home was that the Chief Executive should lead the United States to join with Germany, Russia, and the other countries now affiliated with the League of Nations in forming a reconstructed League of Nations severed from the Versailles Treaty and all the hatreds it had created, and thus, bind the world together in a renewed effort of mutual helpfulness. The missionary leader emphasized to the President that such a consummation would not only go down in history as one of the greatest accomplishments of his Administration, but it would also, he believed, be the means of settling serious disputes among the nations of the East and prevent the recurrence of war, which we now see coming unless some such effort is made to prevent it. These two things Dr. Jones urged the President to consider earnestly.

None other we know could have used this opportunity so effectively and we believe it was the most significant event of the whole United Missionary Conference. The President thanked the speaker for bringing the message that he did. He expressed an interest in the work of the missionaries and stated that after he has completed his present job he hopes to visit the Far East. He further explained that his purpose, as soon as the domestic problems are bettered, is to give further evidence to other nations of our desire to be a good neighbor.

This interview was an event in which five minutes were freighted with destiny and the Christian message was pressed home. It recalled a somewhat similar event when the then Bishop Frederick B. Fisher of India sat in that same room with only three present and pressed home almost the same identical message to the late President Coolidge. The President's reply on that occasion still sounds clearly: "I agree with you and I should like to change the conditions which are unjust to the people of the East, but no matter what a President may want to do he can go only as far as the people will go with him." This significant truth respecting governmental leadership needs to be borne in mind today if the Christian program is to become more effective. The people can retard the President or help him to move forward in the bettering of the world.

This was not the only opportunity which Dr. Jones used in a personal way while in Washington, to further Christ's Kingdom. As guests at a diplomatic occasion he put to the chief foreign representative in attendance, a man who has represented a great people in this and other nations, the question of his personal acceptance of Jesus Christ. Thus the missionary was among us, not simply as an exhorter or expert advisor, but also as one who worked and sought disciples for the Master. The quest is on and our prayer is that it may spread from the Capital—the center of the Nation—through every avenue and community to the utmost circumference of these United States of America.

EDUCATION AND PEACE

KEEP HATE OUT OF TEXTBOOKS—TRAIN YOUTH IN UNDERSTANDING AND GOOD-WILL—AND WORLD PEACE WILL BE A GENERATION NEARER

By Dr. Augustus O. Thomas,
Secretary-General of the World Federation of Educational Associations

Long ago Huboldt said, "What you would have a nation become you must first put into the school." An enthusiast in the art and subtleties of music said, "Let me write the songs of a nation and I care not who writes its laws."

Many nations today put into their textbooks the loyalties and the hates which they wish to inculcate in the minds of this generation. Examine the textbooks of many countries and you will find much of the cause for misunderstanding among nations.

One textbook speaking of its national neighbors says, "The two greatest enemies of our country are (names two countries); the former (people) are the more redoubtable and cruel. One shudders at reading in our history the crimes and atrocities of these monsters who dare to call themselves Christians."

One of these two countries, writing for its youth, says of this national neighbor: "If he lacks power, he will resort to strategy, deception, lies—to anything in fact, only to achieve his purpose. He is astute. When weak, he prays to you on his knees; when he is strong, he is cruel."

These examples of national propaganda to incite distrust and fear could be extended almost without end. Nations under such instruction cannot develop the understanding and sympathy necessary for cooperation. Our first victory is to drive hate out of our lives.

All nations are guilty of some form of nationalistic inculcation in their schools. Take Russia, for example. If Russia is able to maintain her communistic form of government until the children and youth are old enough to take over control, it will last for another great historic period, for the children are taught that theirs is the only form of government that will bring social justice. It is claimed by many that the war spirit is inherent in mankind. True, it has been long in vogue, but it is cultural, it has been taught; it is a part of the preparedness of nations, soldiers fight best when there is vengeance. It is much easier to stir up patriotism and the war spirit with the sound of drums and marching columns than it is to build the spirit of peace in the quiet of home, church, and school.

Education of the intellect alone will make a successful crook and add to his cunning. A young man may come out of his college with the rules of mathematics on his finger tips, he may know all the theories of an Einstein, he may know high-pressure salesmanship, but unless he has those underlying spiritual values which cause him to understand human justice and that there is a higher power than himself, he is not educated, he is only informed.

Let me write the textbooks of the nations and "big berthas," TNT, poison gas, and the "death tank" will find lodgment on the scrap heap.

Fifteen years have fled since that dramatic incident when the vanquished with grim visages signed on the dotted line; yet in the minds of our people, the events are as clear as yesterday. We recall how the bells rang, the whistles screamed, flags flung out to the breeze, men shouted until they were hoarse and women wept for joy, for our boys and our girls long at the front were now to return home.

If there should be such joy at the close of one war, what should be the emotions if it were known that the four horsemen were banished forever from the nations and there should be no more war!

The World Federation, which numbers over two hundred organizations in its membership, and entirely encircles the globe, has a five-point program of education:

1. The holding of general biennial meetings with regional conferences between for the purpose of developing the spirit of cooperation among the leaders of the young.

2. The improvement of textbooks materials by relieving them of extraneous materials which engender mistrust and fear.

3. The completion of the Raphael Herman-David Starr Jordan plan of education for understanding, good-will and peace.

4. The development of the international relations of youth, bringing them into wholesome cooperation with each other.

5. Preparing teachers in the materials of instruction and the approach to the subject of good-will and peace.

If the youth of the world can be working on some of the same projects and materials, it will do much to bring sympathy and understanding.—New York Christian Advocate.

A NEW GOLD FIELD

A new gold field has just been discovered—not in the frozen north of Alaska or in the far away Africa, but right in the heart of Southern Methodism, and a modern version of the old-fashioned "gold rush" occurred in Nashville, Tenn., September 21 and 22, when hundreds of valuable articles that had been sent in during the Treasure Hunt sponsored by the Board of Missions were offered for sale at Mission headquarters for the price of the precious metal contained therein. Many of the articles received were deemed too valuable to be melted down; therefore, they were saved and offered for sale as antiques, and people literally fell over each other in their eagerness to purchase some of those relics of by-gone days that had come from all over the denomination's territory, from Maryland to California, as free-will offerings and self-denial gifts to help re-finance the Missionary coffers of the Church. Even before the doors of the "old gold" room were opened at nine o'clock in the morning, crowds of people were waiting in line, and they continued to come until long after the evening shadows fell. And for a whole week after the sale was over not a day passed that did not see two, three, or a dozen people moving up and down the corridors of the headquarters building, looking for the old gold room.

The committee room at Mission headquarters was turned into a veritable antique shop, and the long tables against the walls and down the center of the room were covered with a collection of rare and antique objects—massive silver water pitchers, old communion goblets donated by churches that had acquired individual sets, thin old spoons made from coins in Revolutionary days, quaint pieces of jewelry, pendants, chains, bracelets, ornaments of all kinds—valuable heirlooms and sentimentally cherished keepsakes that had been brought to light from attics and trunks and drawers and boxes and sent to do their bit toward keeping the missionaries at the front.

The first article to be sold was an ancient soup ladle of solid silver that had been a wedding present back in 1856. It had once been the property of a foreign missionary and had seen service on several mission fields. It was bought by members of the Board of Missions staff and presented to Scarritt College, that its missionary tradition might go on unbroken down the years.

The Missionary Treasure Hunt was inaugurated in May, and since that time approximately 2,000 packages have poured into the old gold room, containing practically every imaginable object of value. Gold spectacles probably head the list and not less than a barrel of gold spectacle frames are ready for the smelter. Rings, ancient and modern! Probably 500 wedding rings, those heavy gold bands of days gone by, have been donated by children and grandchildren because "mother would have wished it." And medals of all sorts from Phi Beta Kappa key to a tiny bit of gold testifying to perfect Sunday school attendance by little Mary Smith back in 1881. There are thimbles of gold and silver, babies' christening mugs, old umbrella handles, and watches galore—more than a thousand of them, not to mention old teeth which are said to contain the purest of gold—all those things are on their way to the smelter to be transmitted into missionary dollars that will help to hold the line until better days.

The old gold room will remain open to receive gifts as long as they continue to come in. Although the Treasure Hunt may not bring in a vast amount in dollars and cents, for many of the articles donated have small smelter value, it has brought in something more valuable than money, says Dr. W. G. Cram, General Secretary of the Board of Missions, "for it has proved that Methodists of the South, even if broke, have hearts of gold."

GOALS FOR THE LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT FOR THE YEAR 1933-34

The Pastors, District Stewards and Charge Lay Leaders of the Lake Charles District, in session at Lake Charles, December 12, unanimously adopted the following as a set of goals for the year. The group present represented nearly 7,000 members within this district and in fixing these goals the thought was that they would constitute a minimum of achievement and not a maximum. Through the enthusiastic cooperation of the entire membership every goal set can easily be reached and passed. Let us rely not upon our own strength or wisdom, but upon the wisdom of God and the leadership of the Holy Spirit.

Evangelism

- A genuine revival in every church.
- A Pre-Easter evangelistic campaign in every church school.
- A Personal Work Committee in every church.
- Five hundred or more additions on profession of faith.
- Five hundred or more additions by certificates.
- A deepening and enrichment of the spiritual lives of all our people.

Christian Education

- Every church organized as far as possible in accordance with the program of the General Board of Christian Education.
- At least two Standard Training Schools in the district.
- Ten Cokesbury Schools.
- Standard Training classes wherever possible.
- Sunday School Day to be observed by every church school with as large an offering as possible.
- Observance of Young People's Day in every school or church with an offering.
- A District-wide Stewardship Campaign. Time to be fixed later.
- Enthusiastic support of our church periodicals with special attention being given to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, The Missionary Outlook and the Methodist Layman.
- Twenty-five per cent increase in Sunday school enrollment and attendance. The observance of College Day with an appropriate program.

Kingdom Extension

- Two District Institutes: one at De Ridder, January 11, and one at Rayne, January 12; pastors, lay leaders, Sunday school superintendents, presidents of Missionary Societies, presidents of Young People's Divisions, members of Missionary Committees, chairmen of Boards of Stewards, and other workers to attend one of these meetings.
- The Cultivation Period to be observed in every church.
- The offering of Kingdom Extension to be taken the fourth of February.

Easter Sunday to be observed as Orphanage Day in every church and Sunday school.

Every Church School to observe the fourth Sunday in each month as Missionary Sunday, and the offering to go to the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise of the Church, the date to be fixed by the pastor.

The establishment of new preaching places wherever there is a need and opportunity.

Missionary Societies

The organization of Missionary Society in every church where one does not already exist, if possible.

A twenty-five per cent increase in the membership of all Auxiliaries.

Salaries, Benevolences and Lay Activities

Benevolent apportionments to be paid in full if possible.

Salaries of pastors to be paid monthly and in full.

An Every-member canvass to be made to secure the entire budget of each church.

One-third of the Benevolent Apportionment to be raised by May 1.

Laymen's Day to be observed in every church.

INTERESTING LAYMEN IN THE LOCAL CHURCH

By R. L. Taylor

The success of any church depends largely upon the interest the men of the church take in its activities.

One of the greatest problems we have had in our church, and I feel sure that most churches have this same problem, is in getting the men interested.

The natural place to start work in overcoming this obstacle is through a Laymen's Organization. Every church has its Lay Leader elected regularly every fourth quarterly conference, but a great many do not have active Laymen's organizations. It is through an organization of this kind that you can bring together not only all of the male members of the church, but also a great many others who do not belong to any church, but have a Methodist preference.

The mere bringing of all of these men together is beneficial in itself as it promotes a better relationship and a friendlier attitude among the men of the community towards each other, and it creates enthusiasm.

Having gotten the men together may be good in itself, but you cannot hold these men unless you give them something to do. We are all familiar with an expression used earlier in the Depression, that is, "Spread the Work." And that is just what we need in our church activities.

The responsibility of running the church should not rest entirely upon the pastor and the Board of Stewards. There is too much to be done, and there is a lot of good talent in any church that is not represented on the Board of Stewards. In fact, there are probably some laymen in the church that can go out and contact a man and bring him to Sunday school and church that an official member cannot reach. We have had that occur here in our church recently by having one of our laymen, who had not gone to church himself for 11 years previously, going out and bringing to Sunday school and church a man of this town whom I had never seen in our church and who I did not even know was of Methodist belief.

Try to give every man something to do, appoint him on a Committee, assign him a job, make him have a feeling that it is his church and not just the Methodist Church of Arcadia or of some other town.

Have the meetings of your Laymen's Organization regularly and prepare an interesting program. Put a little clean fun in it. Men are only boys grown up, you know. And vary the program so that they will not get bored and lose interest.

This is the program that we have instituted in our church and the way it has worked has been a revelation to me in the four months it has been organized and I would just like to tell you some of the things we have accomplished.

Our two men's Bible classes have been reorganized and the attendance has more than doubled. We have now an attendance of 50% of the highest possible enrollment and have set 100% as our goal for the year. The attendance of men at the Sunday morning services has increased considerably. More men are attending prayer meetings. The Board of Stewards themselves, long inactive and only partially attending to their duties, are now priding themselves on having raised all the church obligations in full for the first time since 1929 and upon the rate they are getting pledges signed for this year's budget. Had it not been for the interest stimulated by the Laymen's organization I do not believe that we could have possibly paid our budget in full.

And yet we find that we have only started doing things. The further we go the more we find we can do towards building and bettering our church. And now we are hoping that before the year is out a number of these men, whom we have interested in our laymen's work and who are not members of our church, will join the church.

I believe that a Laymen's Organization is possible and practical in every church in this district, and that it will have the effect of interesting the men in the activities of the church and that their experience will be the same as ours has been.

THE ROCKEFELLER LIQUOR REPORT.

"Toward Liquor Control," by Raymond B. Fossdick and Albert L. Scott, with a foreword by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is the most pretentious effort yet made to provide an alternative to national prohibition. The fact that this proposal bears the imprimatur of so important a personage as Mr. Rockefeller will incline many citizens to support the proposal without subjecting it to that critical analysis which it would otherwise have to undergo. There are indications that the report has already influenced state commissions seeking a solution to the liquor problem. Under the circumstances the drys feel that certain facts in the report should be pointed out and given careful consideration.

1. The report breaks squarely with prohibition as a method of solving the liquor problem. It would divest the federal government of all control over the traffic, except that which can be exercised through taxation. It believes that statewide prohibition will be subject to all the evils alleged against national prohibition. It allows local option, but destroys the force of the method by insisting upon a wide variety of options in each election.

2. The report apparently regards the moderate use of liquor, especially of liquors of moderate alcoholic content, as harmless, if not socially desirable; at any rate, as inevitable. It advocates the "frank acceptance and treatment of beer of not more than 3.2 per cent of alcohol as a non-intoxicating beverage." For purposes of distinction between "intoxicating" and "non-intoxicating" it proposes "the natural and convenient division between fermented beverages and distilled liquors." Such a proposal ignores all scientific data upon the subject and would legalize with little restriction 96 per cent of the pre-prohibition liquor trade.

3. The report proposes a "State Alcohol Control Authority," to monopolize the retail distribution of liquor within the state. It would be empowered to operate retail stores, warehouses, blending and processing plants and such other facilities as might be needed. It would have complete authority to regulate the business, even to subpoenaing of witnesses and making binding decisions. Its operation would require a sizeable corps of executives and employees.

4. The chief merit claimed for the plan is that it removes private profit from the liquor business. It should be noted that the Authority Plan relates only to the heavier liquors, so that beers and wines up to 12 per cent alcoholic content would be exempted from control and left to private exploitation. Nor does the report indicate that the manufacture of the heavier beverages shall come under this provision. Applied to the pre-prohibition liquor traffic, averaging about 2,000,000,000 gallons annually, this plan would have taken the private profit out of the retail sale of less than 2,000,000,000 gallons of distilled liquors and heavier wines.

Without discounting the excellent intention of Mr. Rockefeller, this reviewer is unable to accept its underlying philosophy or to agree to the solution it proposes.

CONCERNING LOUISIANA CONFERENCE MINUTES

Attention is called to the third of the resolutions which the Louisiana Conference adopted in reference to the publication of the Annual of the Conference. It reads: "That all pastors be urged to send in orders for the number of copies needed in their respective charges and remit the sum of 25c per copy for the same." The receipts on assessments for several years have not been sufficient to meet the cost of publishing the Annual. But if the members of the Conference will cooperate in keeping with the resolution given above, it will be possible to get out the Annual this year without incurring an indebtedness. Please let the Editor of the Annual hear from you.

Editorial

We shall need to do both thinking and re-thinking. We should get our eyes set on definite goals and our feet steadily turned that way.

Just what is the church going to say and do about the question of intoxicating liquors? What is it going to do about industrial and other social relations? Will it take any definite action toward world peace and the ending of war? What will be the direction in education? What about the country church and the others? What about co-operative effort with other communions?

OF THE ONE MILLION and three wrong ways of doing things, even things that need to be done, the anonymous communication comes in with banners and bells to take a place near the front. Periodically they seem to return, being resorted to even by civilized people at times. And the particular circles in which they appear indicate the degree of the culpability of the offense.

Let it be granted that there are conditions that need to be corrected or improved. And no one would be so daring as to say that even the church is above criticism. All the more important therefore that right methods should be employed. But even in economics, politics and international relations, open methods are increasingly demanded and secret diplomacy is regarded with greater and greater disfavor and underhanded machinations discounted.

But see how the anonymous letter irresponsibly takes the liberty of stating the real or supposed grievances. Introducing colorings that may distort and confuse the issues involved, but makes no provision for discussion for all concerned. So it may develop that the conditions that might have required correction are but aggravated and the friends of improvement alienated.

Note also how this method exhibits an interesting combination of egotism and cowardice. The writer observes what he regards as a bad condition, something requiring a remedy, so he thinks. Go to. It is important that it be corrected. But he declines to assume any responsibility in the remedy he offers showing bad faith in what he himself might recommend. Behind the mask he labors in his disguise consuming time and energy worthy of a better cause and better character. At no time does he take a look into the mirror as he toils. Then when his masterpiece is complete he neglects to do the thing that would cost least time and effort and would save most for him and make his document worth most. He is ashamed of his own handiwork. He neglects to sign his name. Be it remembered that a man's name stands for the man.

And let not the heartless stab at brotherhood be overlooked. The message, after plans with confederates and comrades of the same spirit, is sent out to be mailed. As soon as it is received inevitably suspicions are aroused and an innocent person may have fixed upon him for a lifetime the responsibility for a deed he was too great to consider. So Mr. A. Nony Mous not only forfeits his own self respect but injures another and robs him of the confidence that he deserves.

Finally, note how the writer of the anonymous letter and his confederates unite in a secret and unholy alliance. The secret is kept, for cowardice is a sin that we do not willingly confess to men or God. It is sometimes mistaken for courage. But always thereafter when the writer signs his name he must recall that there was one time when he willfully and cowardly neglected to do so and that forever thereafter it must have less meaning than it had when his father passed it on to him. He has robbed it and blurred it, even though it be written with the same number of letters and penmanship. Too cowardly to acknowledge his wrong he passes a name with a blur on to his children. From time to time he recalls the occasion, the place and the feelings incident to the making of the unsigned document. With a cheap grin and a hollow laugh with some confederate he takes a peep at the barrenness of his personality and poverty of soul. Even after reading this editorial he will go out to continue his journey to the grave and to the time and place when every knee shall bow and every tongue confess. And the confession then will be signed.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

January is "Self Denial" month for our church at Lake Charles, La.

Miss Ethel Porter, Route 2, Ellisville, Miss., writes a much appreciated word commending the Advocate.

Millsaps College's mixed chorus of more than sixty voices recently gave a program of Christmas carols. Later they appeared for a program in Meridian.

The Adoration pageant with White Gifts for the King were features of the Christmas program at First Church, Lake Charles.

On Tuesday evening at the district parsonage in New Orleans the new pastors of our churches in the city were given a most gracious reception by Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Duren.

Rev. J. C. Rousseaux, pastor at Jackson, La., reports a generous reception on the charge, punctuated and emphasized with a pounding. This old Methodist custom has much to commend it.

"Dr. B. F. Rogers, new presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, is looking after the Advocate," writes Mr. A. M. Mayo, superintendent of our Sunday school at First Church, Lake Charles.

"A very cordial welcome was given on our return for the third year," writes Rev. Alonzo Early, pastor at Elizabeth, La. A generous pounding made the welcome more emphatic, convincing and satisfactory.

Baptist pastors of northwest Louisiana assembled at the Mansfield Church, December 18. This pastors' school has been meeting in annual session for a number of years. Great good is accomplished by its sessions.

Rev. William Schuhle, pastor at Plaquemine, La., was seen on the streets of New Orleans the other day. His smile, his encouraging words and his vigorous hand-shake, left a permanent contribution on the editor.

The work at Franklin, La., under the efficient leadership of the pastor, Rev. C. C. Wier, is getting under way for the new year. The church bulletin, "The Silent Preacher," says many things as to the prosperity and progress of the work.

"Laborers Together with God" was the subject of the sermon by Rev. B. F. Rogers, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, recently preached at First Church, Lake Charles. That sounds like a good way to begin, continue and end the year.

Rev. H. W. Jordan, formerly a pastor in the Louisiana Conference, now at Fort Stockton, Texas, in the New Mexico Conference, renews for the Advocate. Brother Jordan speaks encouragingly of the health of his family and the quality of his people.

Dr. M. E. Dodd, pastor First Baptist Church, Shreveport, and President of the Southern Baptist Convention, appears among the speakers on the program of Founder's Day at Moody Bible Institute, according to announcement of Dr. J. M. Gray, President.

Rev. Irvin B. Manly, member of the Texas Conference, is ready to help in revival work. He has had years of training. Address him at 401 Cosmos St., Houston, Texas. Rev. M. C. Manly, an uncle of Brother Manly, was for 30 years a member of the Louisiana Conference.

"We are going to do better by the Advocate this year," says Rev. Henry H. Wallace, pastor at Moorehead, Miss. And we believe it. He started by sending four subscriptions. He reports improvement on the charge and brightening prospects for the year.

Dr. D. L. Coale, one of our general evangelists, was a guest at First Church, New Orleans, last Sunday. Dr. Coale is now located at his Southern headquarters, P. O. Box 1405, Birmingham, Ala. Those desiring to connect with him for meetings may get him at that address.

Zone Four of the Woman's Missionary Society, recently met at Roxie, Miss. A total of forty-two was present. Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, conference president, presented matters of importance to the meeting, urging attention to those matters that make for better life and work among the members.

An informal New Year's reception is set for the parsonage of Central Church, Meridian, Miss. The pastor, Dr. L. L. Cowen, and his wife, will be assisted by Rev. and Mrs. Otto Porter, the Board of Stewards and the Woman's Missionary Society. All members and friends of the church are invited.

Rev. S. N. Young, our newly-appointed pastor of the Oak Ridge charge, Mississippi Conference, has been most cordially received by the good people of that place, and all indications point to a happy and successful year's work with great accomplishments as a result of the combined efforts of pastor and people.

Dr. W. Angle Smith, pastor First Church, Shreveport, has been invited by Bishop Arthur J. Moore and the General Commission on Benevolences to visit the Western North Carolina Conference during the month of January to speak in each of the districts on the program of the Kingdom Extension Institutes. This is one of our greatest conferences and is doing much for methodism.

"While Mrs. Boykin and I were out visiting one evening this week, some parties broke into the parsonage, and up to the present writing, we have not ascertained who the parties were or the extent of the damages done; but from the great number of things to eat that were left, there must have been a great number involved. In all my ministry I have not seen such a pounding." —Rev. J. M. Boykin, Greenwood, La.

"I was at Haynesville, La., when the people gave their new pastor (Rev. Watt H. Royall) a 'Royal' reception, and came back to my work, Rayne, La., to receive a 'dry' reception, though a very cordial one," says Rev. S. A. Seegers, pastor. When Brother Seegers installed his board of fourteen stewards only one was absent. And with reference to the reception we might observe that a Methodist preacher's reception had better be "dry."

Rev. M. H. McCormack, Jr., pastor at Friars Point, Miss., gives some timely advice about care in printing material sent in for columns of the Advocate. He seems to have suffered much at the hands of a local paper which reported one of his sermons. Said the paper, "The pastor delivered the weakly message in a very gripping manner." He does not seem to have objected upon the grounds of the veracity of the statement, but rather upon the grounds of typographical errors and spelling.

"We have completed a church at Golden Meadows, Lafourche parish," writes Rev. J. W. Booth, pastor at Houma, La. Rev. A. M. Martin has received nearly sixty members at this place. Brother Booth wants to know if someone has a piano they would like to donate to this very fine new congregation. It will be of very great help to them. Write Brother Booth and tell him about the piano you will send. This will be recalled as our French Mission territory. Let us all give a good push.

"The prospect for a real year's work of successful achievements is much brighter by far on the Eunice charge than any of the three years I have been here," writes Rev. Jas. A. Knight, the pastor. Among the goals set by this church in Louisiana for the new year are the following: 40% to 100% increase in Sunday schools, 25% to 50% increase in church membership, 100% increase in church benevolences, and at least twenty new subscribers to the Advocate. That looks like a real program and we pray its success.

MOSS—ROBERTS

On Tuesday, December 12, 1933, in the First Methodist Church, Franklin, La., Miss Laura Mae Moss and Mr. Peter Luther Roberts were united in marriage, the Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor of the Church, officiating. The bride has been one of the efficient and popular teachers of the faculty of the Franklin Public School and is a daughter of CENTENARY COLLEGE BROADCASTS FOR YOUNG PEOPLE—LISTEN!

We are planning a series of broadcasts for January over KWKH at 9:30 each Monday evening. These programs are to be dedicated to the young people of the Louisiana Conference and we are asking that all the pastors request their young people to tune in. The speakers are to be Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, Dr. George S. Sexton, President Pierce Cline, Dr. Walter Towler (tentative), and a special program arranged by Mrs. R. E. Smith in which three five-minute talks will be given on the subject: "Youth Looks at the Church." The speakers will be Miss Pearl Hattie, Centenary Sophomore; Miss Anna Pharr Turner, a recent graduate of Centenary, and Mr. Manning Smith, president of the student body and prominent athlete of Centenary. Each Monday evening at 9:30 a special program of appropriate music is being arranged by Prof. LeRoy Carlson of the Centenary School of Music.

Sincerely yours,
WM. G. PHELPS.

CHRIST AND THE SALOON

If he were to come today he would wipe out of existence every business institution whose business is dishonest or immoral. Down would go the saloon. There are at present nearly three hundred thousand legalized liquor shops in the United States. The liquor dealers get the eighty million people to spend every year $1,500,000,000 for strong drink. They keep a standing army of six hundred thousand staggering drunkards. The direct fruit of this drunken army annually is: Three thousand murdered wives; five thousand suicides; seven thousand murders; forty thousand widowed mothers; sixty thousand fallen girls; one thousand orphan children; one hundred thousand insane; one hundred thousand drunkards who die; one hundred thousand boys who take their place; three hundred and fifty thousand criminals; four hundred thousand paupers; two million sufferers. We are horror stricken when a hundred children are caught in a fire-trap of a school building and consumed in the flames, and immediately the mayor orders an investigation of our own school buildings. This we commend him for. But in this city more than half a thousand children go into the vortex of destruction through the saloon, but no one is exercised. I tell you the God of heaven is looking for blood. And all of it to satisfy the greed of men.—Evangelist.

SOUTHERN METHODIST UNIVERSITY NEWS

By S. L. Dubberly

Mr. Paul Harris, Jr., director of the Youth Movement for world recovery, a young peace movement which is sponsored by the National Council for Prevention of War, visited the campus Thursday, December 14. He addressed the students at the regular Thursday morning chapel at seven o'clock; conferred with various groups of students throughout most of the afternoon; attended a dinner at 10:30 p.m. in his honor given by the Council of Church Relations composed of students of the various religious groups represented on the campus, after which he spoke for an hour and a half. The interest was so keen as to necessitate a final session from 9:00 to 10:00 p.m.

Student interest in these sessions reached high tide. Mr. Harris is touring the Southern states under the sponsorship of the Y. M. C. A.

The Museum of Southern Methodist University has been given the diploma of the late Milton Ragsdale. This is one of the two diplomas ever issued by McKenzie College, at one time located near Clarksville, Texas. Mr. Ragsdale was the father of Miss Belle G. Ragsdale who, together with her brothers, S. E. Ragsdale and A. K. Ragsdale, presented this historic certificate to the University. Henry Orr—the only other person who received one of these diplomas—died in the Army of the Confederacy, and it is believed that Milton Ragsdale's is the only McKenzie diploma in existence. This McKenzie school was founded in 1841 by Rev. J. P. McKenzie who, because of ill health, left the pastorate for education work. From modest beginnings this school grew into the college rank, enrolling some three thousand students during its thirty years of existence, and made a lasting contribution to Texas and to Texas Methodism. Its work and atmosphere were always distinctively religious. Its influence for good still abides.

International good-will was the keynote of an address by Dr. A. C. Zumbrennen, dean of men at Southern Methodist University, at the annual banquet Wednesday night, December 13, of Blue Key, honorary men's society. This organization is devoted to fostering intellectual, spiritual and social progress on the campus.

Honorees were the following students from seven foreign countries: Shominath Shastry, India; Tatsuo Kuribayashi, Japan; John Chatley, Cuba; Perinsula Hahn, Korea; Paul Gomez, Mexico; Simon Weller, Palestine; and Fong Kwei Yeh, China.

TWITTERINGS OF TIMOTHY TWIG

By R. H. Bennett

Female Hangman Needed?

When the official executioner of Vienna died some years ago, scores of applications were received for the gruesome job. The most curious was that of a pretty young woman. She sent her photograph and this letter: "I am eighteen years old and possess great physical strength. My sex, and above all my beauty, fit me for the employment I solicit. The fact is that the last person on whom the condemned man fixes his gaze is the executioner, who nine times out of ten is repulsively homely. How much more consoling it would be for a criminal before entering eternity to have the knot adjusted by the soft hands of a woman, whose bewitching glances would cause him to forget for an instant the terrors of an agony worse than death."

In Fifty Years

A statistician estimates that a man fifty years old has worked 6,500 days, has slept 6,000, has amused himself 4,000, has walked 12,000 miles (no item given of the hundreds of thousands of miles autoed), been ill 500 days, has swallowed 36,000 meals, eaten 16,000 pounds of meat and 4,000 pounds of fish, eggs and vegetables, and drunk 7,000 gallons of fluid.

Who said anything about depression or a shortage of food?

Could you give him an epitaph I once saw of a man, "He has eaten up his eats and drunk up his drinks and gone to bed?"

Friendship Wrecked on the Dictionary

She was a lovely girl. Her complexion was perfect, her skin "one you love to touch," her hair luminous and abundant. He was from a foreign land and struggling with the English language. They were good friends. His confidence in his vocabulary rose one day to the height of his erotic fervor. He could hold in no longer. He resolved to lay at her feet his linguistic attainments. What he said in accents of adoration was, "O Stella, you have such a beautiful mane and hide!" Their friendship ceased.

The Gloomy Dean

Dear Inge, not always "the gloomy dean," tells of one of his school boys who wrote, "The Pharisees were a mean and stingy lot. One of them brought a penny to our Lord and when he had looked at it he said, 'whose miserable subscription is this?' And they said, 'Caesar's.' And he said, 'Return it to Caesar.'"

A Full Answer, But Failed

My friends will not let up on Sandy. Here's their latest: A Scotch urchin had just come from a painful interview with "the meenister" to whom he had said in answer to a question that there were one hundred commandments. Meeting his friend, Jamie, on his way to the minister's, he asked, "An' if he asks you how many commandments there are, what will you say?"

"Say?" said Jamie, "why ten, of course."

"Ten?" said Sandy in scorn. "Ten? Ye wull try him wi' ten? Mon, I tried him wi' a hundred and he was na satisfied."

Epository Note

When John Wesley heard that one of his preachers was in destitute circumstances he sent him the following letter: "Dear Tommy, Trust in the Lord and do good, so shalt thou dwell in the land and verily thou shalt be fed. He enclosed in the letter a five pound note. When Tommy 'returned thanks,' his reply greatly pleased Wesley. It said, 'Reverend and dear sir: I have often been struck with the beauty of the passage you quote, and I am bound to say that I have never found such a useful expository note on it before.'

RINGGOLD METHODISM ON THE MARCH

Dear Editor: Just a bit of news. Ringgold Methodism is again on the march. At Ringgold, La., the loyal Methodists thought no better thing could be done than clear their church of a debt that had kept them sluggish for several years.

On December 22, 1933, this little congregation banded themselves together and raised $1258.09 and paid the last dime of debt on their church.

This church was erected under the leadership of Rev. T. J. Holladay. It is a beautiful church, and a credit to any town of this size. We are proud of these people, and we are ready now to celebrate Christmas in a real way.

The people have received us in a great way. As many of you know, this is our second term here, having had four very successful years here, 1916, '17, '18, '19. We are looking to God and His great Spirit to lead us on to a great and victorious year.

Pray for us.

Respectfully,

J. F. DRING, Pastor.

Ringgold, La.

TWELVE RULES FOR SAFE DRIVING

The National Safety Council has issued a number of safe-driving hints which every driver will do well to consider. These follow:

1. Watch your speed. The greater the congestion, the greater the danger from speed.
2. When driving in large cities, you must be on the inner lane of traffic if you want to make a left turn. This practice varies however in some sections of the country. Right turns should be made from the extreme right lane.
3. Signal when starting, turning or stopping.
4. Obey all traffic signals. They are for your protection. Remember that STOP means stop and SLOW means slow.
5. Don't try to "beat the gun" when the lights change.
6. Always stop at boulevard stops. Look carefully before driving onto a through street.
7. Keep your brakes in good repair and check your headlights regularly.
8. Watch out for skids on wet or greasy pavement.
9. Never insist on the right of way. It isn't worth fighting for.
10. Be on the alert at railway grade crossings. If there is any doubt as to the possibility that a train might be coming, come to a full stop before proceeding across the tracks.
11. Let your passengers do the sightseeing while you are at the wheel. A moment's inattention may be costly.
12. Give the pedestrian every consideration. You may be entitled to the right of way, but he is always entitled to his personal safety.—National Safety Council.

Doctors Give Creosote

For Chest Colds

For many years our best doctors have prescribed creosote in some form for coughs, colds and bronchitis, knowing how dangerous it is to let them hang on. Creomulsion with creosote and six other highly important medicinal elements, quickly and effectively stops coughs and colds that otherwise might lead to serious trouble. Creomulsion is powerful in the treatment of colds and coughs, yet it is absolutely harmless and is pleasant and easy to take. Your own druggist guarantees Creomulsion by refunding your money if you are not relieved after taking Creomulsion as directed. Beware the cough or cold that hangs on. Always keep Creomulsion on hand for instant use. (Adv.)

Mothers, Mix This at Home for a Bad Cough

Needs No Cooking! Big Saving!

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough. It's no trouble to mix, and costs but a trifle, yet it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water for a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, put it into a pint bottle, and fill up with your sugar syrup. The pint thus made gives you four times as much cough remedy for your money, yet it is far more effective than ready-made medicine. Keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and clears the air passages. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, famous as a healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

REVIVAL IN JONESBORO, LA.

I just know the readers of the New Orleans Christian Advocate want to rejoice with us over the gracious revival we have had in Jonesboro. I am making a brief report of it. The full report would be hard to do.

The meeting began on the fourth Sunday in November and lasted two and a half weeks. We had with us as a helper the Rev. E. H. Grant of Grayson, La. He came in the fullness of the gospel and in all humility he preached to us the unsearchable riches of Christ. While Brother Grant is rather a young man, a graduate of Asbury College of the class of '29, he is one of the finest preachers I have ever heard and one of the sanest and most fruitful evangelists I have ever known. The pastor has had rather large experience in this field, having been an evangelist a part of his time, and an evangelistic pastor all the time, and having heard the best in the field and having had the most outstanding in meetings; but he places none ahead of Rev. E. H. Grant, either as a preacher or revivalist. Jonesboro was under the power of his ministry.

The number of professions at the altar we made no effort to count. The whole church came in to higher things. We had no friction in the meeting nor since. The largest congregation which has ever been known on a regular Sunday morning service has been since the meeting; the largest Sunday school we have had for many years; and we have had one communion service since the meeting closed and for the first time ever the glasses ran out.

Twenty-two came into the church, taking in all ages, from seven to seventy-five, and all classes represented in this parish seat. I am back for the fourth year with this delightful people. The whole church extended to Brother Grant an invitation to help in the next meeting. So we are looking forward to this with joyful anticipation.

To any of my brethren, I recommend Rev. E. H. Grant for revival work. I have never known such praying as he got the people to do. If your own heart or the hearts of your people need warning, call him and stand by him in prayer and cooperation and this will surely come to pass.

MACDONELL SCHOOL TO DEDICATE NEW BUILDING

The new building at MacDonell School, Houma, La., a dormitory for girls, which is a result of the Week of Prayer offering of last year, is now completed and ready for use. It is a beautiful building, comfortable and convenient, and will be a blessing to the work for many years to come.

Thursday, January 4, is set as the day for the dedication. Mrs. J. V. Downs, Secretary of the Woman's Work, Home Department of the Board of Missions, is to be the principal speaker. Other distinguished guests will participate in the service. All friends of the school are invited to be present on this happy occasion.

THE WAY OF LIFE

By a Layman

Rest

"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

This very familiar passage, it is believed, has been misinterpreted by many on account of the double meaning of rest. The most common interpretation of the passage is, that Jesus promises to give continuous rest and peace to those who come to Him.

When people come to Him or try to come to Him and fail to find this rest they naturally conclude that either they have not been accepted or that the promise is without meaning.

The word translated "rest" here does not mean continuous rest. It does not mean a state of continuous bliss. The Greek word "anapauso," from which the translation is made, means to permit anyone to cease from movement of labor in order to recover and collect his strength. The word denotes a temporary rest such as soldiers are compelled to take from time to time when on a long, strenuous march.

Jesus here promises to give refreshment to those who accept Him along the narrow, rough, steep road that the Christian must travel in this world. He does not promise to take them off the road nor to make the road smooth and easy and joyous. Such an interpretation is foreign to the real meaning of the word. But He does promise to refresh the Christian when he becomes tired and exhausted, to heal his wound, nourish his soul, inspire his heart and send him on the journey with new hope, new life and renewed faith.

The promise to all loyal Christians is that they will find good camping grounds all along the road into which they may drive and have all their needs supplied from an unseen hand. —Southern Agriculturist.

DR. T. W. LEWIS VERY HEALTHY

Dear Brother Raulins: I am beginning my twenty-fourth year and sixth pastoral charge in the Memphis Conference. During that time I have received about 5,000 people into the Church. I now have a small church in a beautiful suburb of Memphis, and am happy in the work. My doctor says my health is perfect. I understand the report was circulated at the recent Conference session that my health was gone, but Dr. Herman of Jackson, who has been my doctor for five years, rode sixty miles to correct the report.

T. W. LEWIS.

Here's something worth learning. You will probably want to do something about it, too!

Did you know that there is a sufficient number of subscribers who have overlooked renewing their Advocate subscriptions to entirely wipe out our existing deficit should they forward the renewal price of $1.00 by the first of the year? Come on all you good Methodists—let's start the New Year off with a clean slate—forward that renewal immediately! Thank you.
